CHICK CHATS —
Prevent Disease
By Vaccination

Outright prevention of disease is a sure way for poultrymen to ward off profit losses and disappointment later on.

Not many poultry diseases can be effectively prevented by vaccination but some of those that can are very destructive if allowed to break out. It doesn't pay to forget this important management step.

Newcastle is one of the foremost poultry diseases preventable by vaccination. Poultry raisers who have knowledge that this disease has occurred in their area should be sure to vaccinate.

Excellent immunity against Newcastle can be gained with an extremely mild virus administered by the intranasal method. Immunity develops rapidly and chicks are protected in 10-14 days.

Mild Strain
With the mild strain of virus, chicks can be vaccinated at any time. It is preferable, however, to vaccinate intranasally at 5-10 days of age since immunity response is better at that time. It is wise to revaccinate pullets shortly before they begin laying.

Another type of vaccine used against Newcastle disease is called wing-web. This vaccine, from a different strain of virus, is recommended for use on birds between 4 and 16 weeks of age.

Fowl pox is another disease that succumbs to vaccination. If there is a previous record of fowl pox in your area, it is advisable to vaccinate. This is ordiarily done most successfully when birds are 8 to 12 weeks old. Reliable fowl pox vaccine provides nearly 100 percent protection for growing birds. Use the wing-stab method.

Bronchitis Vaccine
Infectious bronchitis has been added recently to the list of serious poultry diseases that are preventable by vaccination. Vaccinated flocks exhibit a mild distress that occurs any time from 24 hours to 10 days after vaccination. This condition lasts for a period of 5 to 10 days. Healthy birds of any age, except those in production, can be vaccinated intranasally for protection against infectious bronchitis.

Vaccination against fowl laryngotracheitis is recommended in areas where the disease is common. This vaccination is done by the vent method with birds usually at 6 to 12 weeks of age.

Chickens suffering from worm infections, lice infestations or other diseases may react unfavorably to vaccines. Therefore, vaccinate only healthy birds.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lusk of Coleman, were Sunday visitors with her brother, W. H. Pittard and wife.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LESSON-SERMON

Man's real spiritual status as the perfect image and likeness of God, not subject to sin or other weakness, will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday.

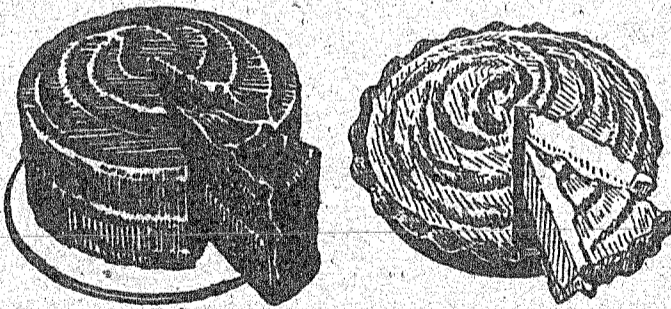

The Lesson-Sermon entitled, "Adam and Fallen Man" includes the following passages from the Bible: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. . . So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him:

male and female created he them" (Genesis 1:26 to 27).

The following selection will be among those read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spiritually to understand that there is but one creator. Challenge to Evil

Lesson for May 9, 1954

IF YOU have never read the story of Elijah and the prophets of Baal, you have missed one of the most dramatic stories of the world's literature. And yet however you take it, you may be left with the feeling that this tale does not belong in the twentieth century. Nobody believes in Baal anymore, and miracles like fire from heaven that will in one instant burn up animals, wood, stones and deep trenches full of water—such "miracles" just don't happen any more. But this is more than a wonder-tale out of the far past. Like all of the Bible, it has something to say to us today as to men of all times and places.

Dr. Foreman

When Evils Are Idols

Every age has its Baals. Idols are not always made of stone or wood. They may not be in any physical shape at all, an idol may be an idea, a "spirit of the times." It can be a desire or a dream. All idols are bad because they are always in place of the true God; but the worst idols are evils which are so popular that they are taken for granted. The Baal against whom Elijah fought his brave battle single-handed was the god of the royal family; and it was so nearly the god of all the nation that Elijah had the impression that he and he alone could see the hollowness of this cruel god. The truth was that the worship of Baal was not a theological heresy; Baal was not simply a wrong name for God. Baalism involved crimes in Baal's name; no true worshipper of Baal could be pure or kind of heart. Baalism was worse than a national religion; it was a national cancer and the end of it would be national death. Elijah knew it; but nobody else knew it; and so when he attacked Baal the authorities marked him down as a bad character. So, far from thanking him for challenging a great evil, he was run out of the country like an ordinary criminal.

Why Reformers Are Hated

You can divide all citizens into two kinds. One (whether realizing it or not) takes for its motto "Whatever is, is right." The other kind sees that some things that are, ought not to be. And a few of this other kind begin to agitate and talk about changes that must be made. They are sometimes called reformers; but they are usually called worse names. One hundred years ago and more, there was a book written by a man named Helper, which pointed out in detail the bad economic effects of slavery in the states that practiced and legalized it. The book was not answered; it was banned. In at least one state it was a legal offense to own a copy of it. Helper himself was attacked in newspapers and in pulpits. For he had dared to challenge the Baal of slavery. In those days, in the north as well as in the south, to be an "abolitionist" was to be low-rated as a crack-pot or a liar, or worse. Nowadays, two of our Baals are war and the liquor traffic. What happens to persons who say a word against that great temple of the Pentagon? What happens to people who come out with the truth about the effects of liquor and propose even to limit liquor advertising? They too are called crackpots, liars and worse.

The Tide of Tomorrow

Elijah was mightily discouraged at one time. It looked to him as if the whole country was against him. God had to explain to him that there were seven thousand good people still in his country, even if he was the only man who had the courage to speak out. It is always that way. For one person was has the nerve to challenge evil in a loud clear voice, there are thousands who believe as he does, only with their mouths shut. But the important thing was not that Elijah had some sympathizers. The important fact was that he was on the side of God. Little David never looks as if he had a chance against Goliath; but the real reason why David is stronger is that God is for him and against Goliath. Those who are against God, no matter how popular they may be, are pushing against the tides of the universe; the Elijahs, ridiculed and outlawed though they be, when they challenge the destroyers of man, in the name of God, know that God at last always wins.

Martin L. Autrey Arrives In Korea

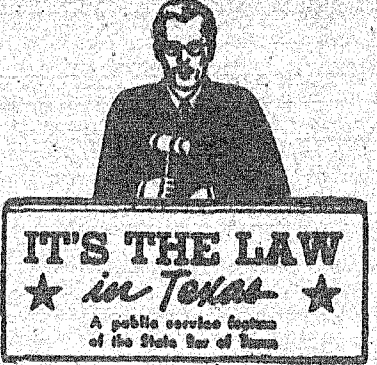

25th Division, Korea — Pfc Martin L. Autrey, whose wife lives at 279 S. Seventh E. 304, Salt Lake City, Utah, recently arrived in Korea for duty with the 25th Infantry Division.

Rushed to Korea during the early days of the conflict, the "Tropic Lightening" division took part in some of the most bitter fighting on the peninsula.

It is now undergoing intensive post-truce training.

Autrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl D. Autrey, Santa Anna, entered the Army in February 1953 and completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Mrs. A. L. Oder visited from Wednesday until Friday of last week with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Oder and children, Lee Beth and Paul Stephen, in Abilene.

CONSTITUTION PROTECTS AGAINST TRIAL BY ORDEAL

One of the most important basic rights of the individual in this country is the privilege against self-incrimination. The Fifth Amendment of our Federal Constitution provides that "no person shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." The early American statesmen insisted that this guarantee become a part of our law for excellent reasons.

The doctrine against self-incrimination is most probably an outgrowth of "trial by ordeal" practiced in the ancient days of England. A person accused of a criminal offense had to plead either "guilty" or "not guilty" at the time he was arraigned for trial, and still does today. However, in those days the accused had neither the benefit of council nor the right to testify in his own defense, and either plea ultimately amounted to just about the same thing.

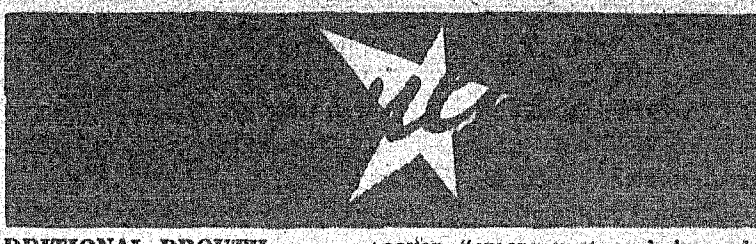

If the accused pleaded "guilty" he was hung a little sooner than was the case if he pleaded "not guilty". This situation, understandably enough, caused many persons charged with crime to stand silent on arraignment and not plead either way. When that happened, the accused was subjected to torture to induce him to plead one way or the other.

Incredible methods of making a person talk were used with almost total success. In some cases the accused was placed in close confinement with a bit of bread to eat one day, a sip of water the next, and so on from day to day until he consented to plead or died of starvation.

On occasions heavy weights were placed on his chest above the heart and attendants stood on the weights, or he might have been forced to recline on a bed of sharpened stakes. Investigations in those days arose primarily because of alleged dereliction from the rules of the Church.

With memories of such atrocities, it is plain to see why the colonists from England made sure that such practices would be prohibited by their fundamental laws.

The privilege against self-incrimination is not only incorporated in the Federal Bill of Rights, but is also granted under the constitution of all but two of the 48 states. Our Texas Con-

ADDITIONAL DROUTH AID REQUESTED

Despite recent rains, many more millions of relief dollars may have to be plowed into our agricultural economy before the disastrous effects of the drouth are nullified.

The situation remains serious enough to warrant the district attention of the president of the United States for the second straight year. The problem still remains unsolved.

Governors from five states, including Texas, met in Washington recently to place their recommendations before the national administration. Their initial plan was for a grant of $15 million to combat dust and wind problems in disaster areas. This amount would be in addition to the $195 million already earmarked for the agricultural conservation subsidy program this year.

The $15 million figure is not an unreasonable sum. It would go a long way in relieving the strain imposed by the three-year dry spell. However, the request was not accompanied by any concrete recommendations as to how the money should be used.

The governors frankly admitted they had made no attempt to find any long-range solution to the dust bowl threat and added that the requested sum would cover "emergency and immediate" problems for the next two months, only. It was not stipulated whether this would be by direct relief grants or on a loan basis.

Rains over the state during April were an encouraging factor in the present optimism for good crop production this year. Row crop farmers have a good chance of recovery without much additional drouth aid. But many areas are still far below normal in rainfall and much of our pastureland is in extremely poor shape. Here is where the money must be spent, if any becomes available.

Two supplemental recommendations were made to the federal government. They were:

1. That loan and credit facilities of the federal government be used to give "maximum benefits on a long-range basis" to farmers in the drouth-stricken area.
2. That farmers and ranchers in the five states be "encouraged and helped" in the proper use of land.

It is in the second recommendation that the true solution to our problem lies — conservation and proper use of our land. To this we might also add the need to conserve our water.

The State of Texas, alone, is not prepared to assume the full burden of responsibility at this time. Help is needed from the federal authorities. But in the long run, Texas must prepare to

Here Are "Keys" To Range Recovery

College Station — Supplemental pastures and continued feeding the major "keys" to the recovery of low producing, drought ravaged grasslands.

Livestock raisers in areas of recent rains can put their moisture to work two ways, says A. H. Walker, extension range specialist. Under favorable moisture condition, supplemental pastures of rapid growing grasses like Sudan will furnish abundant grazing. And, while livestock are on the supplemental grazing, permanent ranges are idle, allowing them to recover at the fastest rate possible.

Range plants must have top growth before they can put down roots, Walker says. When it rains plants may grow quickly, but unless livestock are held off and grasses given a chance to re-establish their root systems, they may be worse off than before.

Just which pasture should be rested first? The one in best condition, Walker replies, since these make more progress toward recovery in less time. Poorest grasslands, which will take two to five years to recover, should be rested later.

Many producers may be tempted to jump back and "grab a quick buck", but the specialist advises these raisers to "breed back rather than buy back into the livestock business."

County agents have a handy bulletin on the subject, C-320, Range Management vs. Drouth, which contains helpful information on range care during and after drouth.

If you're an average WTU customer, you are now using almost twice as much electric service as you did ten years ago. Naturally, your electric service bills are larger today because you are using so much electricity. But—the average cost of a kilowatt-hour of electric service for home use is actually twenty-two per cent LESS than it was in 1944. Ten years isn't so very long, and think how other costs, including the costs of providing your electric service, have risen since then. Now think of the many ways your electric service helps you today — think of the comforts and conveniences your modern electric appliances give. Isn't it a fact that for MODERN LIVING your ELECTRIC SERVICE is today's BIGGEST BARGAIN?

West Texas Utilities Company

Austin — All the questions having been resolved concerning who is going to run for what, the big political season is now under way.

Ralph Yarborough of Austin, who announced that he would be a candidate against Allan Shivers for governor, declared himself against breaking the two-term tradition in the chief executive's office.

Yarborough contends that Shivers actually is seeking a fourth term; the incumbent has served two terms in office, plus the unexpired term of the late Beauford Jester.

Machine politics and one-man domination of the state government were also charged by Yarborough as he put his name on the ticket.

Shivers had previously announced for an unprecedented third term for governor. He had stated prior to the announcement that there remain some things that need to be done, such as putting through a water conservation program.

No. 1 Problems

Governors of five Southwestern states attended a White House conference to talk about the drought.

"Agriculture and Livestock are our No. 1 problems," Shivers said at the conference, and "a permanent solution for them must be found. Past efforts over many years have not been more than

Close To Home

Prior to the Washington conference, Shivers had said that water conservation should begin at home, with towns and districts taking the lead in financing and supplementary money to come from the state.

In a session here, directors of the Texas Water Conservation Association echoed that opinion, calling for financing at the "lowest practical political subdivision level."

Urged by the directors was a constitutional amendment setting up a state fund to underwrite local communities in building dams.

Money so used by the state would be recovered from the sale of water and electricity.

J. E. Sturrock, general manager of the association, was doubtful that the state would ever solve the water problem.

Sturrock said he had opposed federal participation in the water conservation program. But he said the people who are suffering from drought don't care whether the water comes from a state tap or a federal tap.

"The governor's in Washington today asking for drought aid," Sturrock commented. "If we'd had water conservation in Texas, we wouldn't need drought aid."

Senator Lyndon Johnson spoke for action to combat drought and asked for a $15 million increase in soil conservation funds.

"This money," said Johnson, "would be used to fight the wind erosion that could so quickly turn one of the most fertile sections of our nation into a barren wasteland."

Big Crime Story

Texas is about to become known as the biggest and best place for criminals to work.

That being so, says John Ben Shepperd, we had better hire more police officers at higher pay, give them better equipment and rewrite the criminal code.

Shepperd was speaking at the fourth law enforcement conference in Waco.

Texas' crime rate is rising faster than the national average, Shepperd declared. "We will never bring crime in Texas down to a normal level if we continue trying to buy average, cut-rate law enforcement."

Most features of the Texas crime situation are narcotics, obscene literature, and Communism, Shepperd declared.

Texas police officers in general are doing a good job, but they are called upon for much duplication of effort, the speaker asserted.

He pointed out that more than half of the offenders arrested are repeaters who have been freed or who have made bond while awaiting trial.

More than half of Texas crimes, said the attorney general, are committed by persons who are under indictment and free on bail, free on appeal bond or fresh out of jail.

Duval County Suit

Before the Court of Criminal Appeals is a question as to whether District Judge A. S. Broadfoot was within his rights in discharging a Duval County grand jury commission.

Judge Broadfoot's attorney, Atwood McDonald of Fort Worth, argued that the suit is not properly before the court and should be thrown out.

E. B. Votaw of Beaumont, speaking for the jury commissioners, said they had been held up to scorn and ridicule. "They are reputable citizens. They're entitled to their civil rights," Votaw argued.

Paul Brown Dies

Paul H. Brown, state fire insurance commissioner, died in McCloskey Hospital at Temple. He had been in a coma for more than a year. Funeral services were held here.

A veteran of both wars, he was campaign manager for the late Beauford Jester's campaign for governor. Before becoming fire insurance commissioner, he had been secretary of state.

Honor For Terrell

C. V. Terrell was 93 years old Sunday, and the occasion was observed when many of his friends, including public officials, former governors and others gathered with him at a hotel here.

Terrell was long in the service of his state, last as a member of the railroad commission. He served four terms in the legislature.

Among those who served with him as a lawmaker were former Vice President John Nance Garner and House Minority Leader Sam Rayburn.

In view of his long affiliation with the party, Terrell is known as the dean of Texas Democrats.

Fulham Sworn In

C. E. Fulham of Lubbock was sworn in Saturday as Texas' new Secretary of State.

He previously was chairman of the temporary Texas Industrial Commission which conducted the investigation of Communist influence in three labor unions active in the state.

His commission also drafted the new anti-Communist law passed by the special legislative session.

Ass't Attorney General Resigns
Dean Capp, an assistant Attorney General for the past six years, left Austin on May 1 to accept a position with the legal department of Stanlind Oil and Gas Company in Houston.

Before joining the Attorney General's staff, Capp had a private law practice in New Braunfels, his home town. For the past two years he has been chief of the oil and gas division in the Attorney General's office, and participated in some of the major oil and gas litigation.

Just the Facts

Give people the truth about lawyers' work, William J. Jameson, president of the American Bar Association, said in a speech at the University of Texas.

"Legal service is available to all at a cost within their means," Jameson declared, adding that attorneys should show the public the importance of consulting counsel on legal problems.
