"Gabriel Over The White House" Opens At Ritz Today

Anonymous Author Knew His Politics

Walter Huston Plays Role Of President In Daring New Picture

These who look for motion picture entertainment permeated with the tense, authentic melodrama of actual headlines in today's news will find "Gabriel Over the White House," new Cosmopolitan-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production opening today at the Ritz Theatre, one of the outstanding talkie events of the year.

This picture was adapted from the most daring expose of Washington ever written. Its anonymous author knew his politics and at the same time weaved into his story of a United States President who steps out and does something about current problems an unusually gripping human theme.

Walter Huston Heads Cast Headed by Walter Huston as the President who overnight is transformed from an insincere, back-slapping politician to a man of iron, the distinguished cast of "Gabriel Over the White House" includes Karen Morley, last seen opposite Wallace Beery in "Flesh"; the Broadway stage star, Franchot Toner; Arthur Byron, Dickie Moore, C. Henry Gordon, David Landau, Samuel Hinds, William Wray, Jean Parker and Claire Dubrey. The drama, laid in the historic background of the national capital with authentic scenes of the executive mansion, the two legislative houses and various other Washington locales, starts with the inauguration of the simple, backcountry man, Jud Hammond, who becomes the Hon. Judson Hammond, President of the United States. His first press conference shows him to be a typical politician, jovial, insincere, evasive, unwilling to cope courageously with national problems. He is injured in an accident and on his return to work following a long period of illness which has given him time to think things over, he becomes a new Judson Hammond, hard faced, instead of soft, decisive instead of vacillating.

He fires the Secretary of War and asks for the resignation of his entire cabinet when they hesitate to support his moves to relieve the unemployment army. He demands that Congress give him the powers of a dictator. He fights directly with the "king" of the racketeers and through a federal police force wipes him out. He forces an International Debt Congress, not behind closed doors but on the deck of a yacht where a graphic demonstration of how quickly airplanes lead to debt payment via sums saved in disarmament.

Has Stirring Climax The story is brought to a stirring and logical conclusion after a sensational peace conference with Judson Hammond leaving his mark on history as one of the greatest Presidents to rule at the White House. Carey Wilson adapted the anonymous novel to the screen with additional dialogue by Bertram Bloch and a musical score by Dr. William Axt. The picture was directed by Gregory La Cava, known for his fine work on "Symphony of Six Million."

"Ideal starting team" is what the theatrical and screen world said when it was announced that Sylvia Sidney, wistful, dark-eyed star of "City Streets," "Ladies of the Big House," "An American Tragedy" and "Madame Butterfly"; and George Raft, smooth, slightly sinister star of "Night After Night," "Undercover Man," and "If I Had a Million," were to play together in a picture.

The film is "Pick Up" an adaptation of Vina Delmar's Red Book story, a B. P. Schulberg production, which comes to the Ritz Theatre today and Saturday.

Both players hail from New York City; both share many characteristics of background and temperament in common; both emigrated to Hollywood from the New York City. Miss Sidney's specialty in roles—that of the deeply-in-love woman ready to sacrifice everything for her man—is regarded as ideally suited opposite Raft's specialty—the reticent male with a deadly effect on woman in general and one woman in particular.

"Pick Up" centers around the two, who meet under strange circumstances. Miss Sidney, freed from prison after being "framed" by her husband, who still remains behind the bars, finds herself destitute in the city. Cold and soaking wet on a rainy night, she takes refuge in a cab. Raft, the driver, is soon as deeply in love with her as she is with him. Their purchase of a garage in the suburbs sets them well on the road to prosperity. But when Raft begins paying attention to a wealthy socialite who is flattered by his charm, Sylvia rushes to a lawyer; finds she can easily secure an annulment of her marriage to her convict-husband. But the very day the paper comes through, her husband appears on the scene, fresh from a jail break in which he has killed a guard, and feverish in his determination to get revenge not only on Sylvia, but on Raft.

The picture comes to a breathless climax in Sylvia's attempt to save the life of the man she loves. Dave Christian's race horses are expected today via truck from Agua Caliente, Mexico, where they have been racing during the winter season.

Lyon In Lead Of Ritz Cast

Star Is Full-Fledged Army Pilot; Picture Shows Friday-Saturday

When Los Angeles and environs crines its neck to watch the dangerous sky maneuvers of army squadrons, little do they realize that Ben Lyon is piloting one of the planes.

The fact that Ben Lyon is a full-fledged army pilot and holds a reserve commission as a second lieutenant is a comparatively unknown fact. He is registered in the 47th Squadron of the 32nd Pursuit Group located at Long Beach, California, and has about 500 hours of flight credit.

Of all his large income as one of the best-liked male stars on the screen today, no bit of it is more cherished by him than the salary of $140 he receives every year for the two weeks' encampment that the government demands of its reserve officers. He has framed every check he has received since he undertook flying three years ago.

Lyon began flying during the making of "Hell's Angels" when he played a dashing pilot in the overseas service. He didn't fly himself in that picture, but the contact with planes fascinated him, so he immediately took lessons and later enlisted in the reserve.

With more than 500 hours in the air to his credit, Lyon has never been scared in the air but once, when he was confronted with death in a manner that even few aviators who are constantly exposed to the danger of quick extinction, experience. His awe-inspiring mission demanded that he fly out over the Pacific Ocean with the ashes of a Lieutenant of Police in Los Angeles, whose body had been cremated.

"The vision I received of death is one I never want again," said Lyon. "Major Walkup of the Los Angeles Police Department was riding with me. When he opened the tiny can that contained the policeman's ashes, the wind caught them and brushed them away like steam, with a rasping swirl that could be heard over the roar of the motor."

"It was so sudden and so definite—that sharp, knife-like thrust of the wind driving into atoms the gray dust that was once a human being—that it sent shivers up my spine. I surely was glad to get back on the ground that day!"

Debonair, gay Ben Lyon dramatically is confining himself for the time being to the excitement of a fast express train hurtling

This Columbia feature, which today and Wednesday at the Queen theatre, is a mystery drama in which Ben Lyon is supported by Barbara Weeks, Nat Pendleton, Helene Millard, Dwight Dyer, William Halligan, Kenneth Thomson, William V. Mong, Ethel Kenyon, Dolores Ray and Tom Dugan.

Ken Maynard At The Queen During Week

"Dynamite Ranch" To Show Friday And Saturday As Feature

To Ken Maynard many of the roles in the western pictures he has made so famous are not merely roles, but slices of drama from his own life.

Maynard, whose latest picture, "Dynamite Ranch," will come on Friday and Saturday to the Queen Theatre, was born in Mission, Texas, during the colorful days of the west.

Ken's father, a rancher, trained his son to follow in his footsteps, and put him into a saddle as soon as he was able to walk. During these early days on the ranch Ken saw and absorbed much of the drama and romance of the old west, and was familiar with the colorful cowboy characters who have helped to make the west famous.

His interest in adventure, coupled with knowledge and understanding of horses, led Ken to run away when he was fourteen years old and join a travelling circus. From this time on his career was meteoric. From circus riding to winning the world's championship cowboy contest in Chicago in 1920, and from there to the famous motion picture cowboy star was one swift ascent.

Today Maynard has one of the finest collections of western regalia to be found west of the Mississippi. He is also the owner of some of the finest horses in California, which he keeps on a magnificent ranch in San Fernando Valley. The ranch, also, provides for the hangar, with its several airplanes, which represent the only other hobby Maynard has.

Warren William Has New Type Of Role; Shows Here Three Days

Warren William, who has previously been cast in serious and heroic roles, proves his versatility by enacting a dynamic characterization in the first National picture, "Mind Reader," which comes to the Queen theatre on today, Monday and Tuesday.

As Chandra, the Great Magician, he plays the part of a blustering, although altogether likable rascal. A dyed-in-the-wool fraud who starts his career as a patent medicine man, Chandra winds up as a home wrecker by telling wives their husbands' secret love affairs and vice versa. He is not only hoodwinked the public, but the asset

Rub and Ferike Boros, "Humanity" comes to the Queen Theatre beginning Wednesday and Thursday for an engagement of two days. John Francis Dillon, who directed "Clara Bow in 'Call Her Savage,' transferred the story to the screen.

The story embraces the elements of romance and sacrifice as it depicts the adventures of a young doctor who is blind to the ideals of his physician father and who follows the lures of money because of his infatuation of a luxury-loving woman.

Kirkland and Miss Mallory divert the romantic interest and Morgan enacts the role of the father who, with the girl attempts to guide aright the faltering footsteps of the boy.

Miss Mallory's previous success was "Handle With Care," in which she shared leading honors with James Dunn. Kirkland was widely acclaimed for his recent performance in "Strange Interlude," in which Morgan also played an important role.

Miss Ware who, like Miss Mallory, came from the New York stage, made her picture debut in "Chandu The Magician" and more recently appeared with Warner Ware, Noel Madison, Christian Bexter in "Six Hours to Live."

Kay Francis And George Brent In "The Keyhole" So Successful New Joint Roles Are Sought For Them

Domination Of Currency System Seen In Orders

The opening of the Warner Bros. picture, "The Keyhole," at the Ritz Theatre on Thursday next, marks the advent of a brand new screen couple in the persons of Kay Francis and George Brent.

Although both have been playing leading roles in the Warner Bros. studios for more than a year this is the first time in which they have played in the same picture, being co-featured in this production.

The two make an unusually strong combination, both being among the finest featured players in Hollywood, and both having the background of successful stage careers before entering pictures. They are unusually well matched physically as well as in theatrical ability. They are the tallest couple playing together in serious drama.

Miss Francis being five feet seven inches tall and Brent six feet tall. Both are very dark brunettes. Miss Francis having a touch of Spanish blood. Her hair is glossy blue black and her eyes a very dark green. Mr. Brent, being Irish, has hazel eyes but his hair is almost as dark as Miss Francis', as is also his complexion.

They make such an attractive couple in "The Keyhole" that Warner Bros. are now casting about for new stories in which to pair them again. In "The Keyhole" Miss Francis has the role of a beautiful dancer who has married a wealthy society man, and is trying to escape from the clutches of a former dancing partner bent on blackmailing her. Brent is a spy hired by her jealous husband to watch her. He does his job so well that the two fall in love which leads to a series of unusual complications.

The supporting cast includes Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Monroe Owsley, Helen Ware and Henry Kolker. The direction is by Michael Curtiz.

girl he marries. But Chandra has his redeeming quality as will be seen in the picture which is filled with comedy situations and snappy dialogue as well as drama and romance.

Warren handles the comedy situations with all the deftness he put into his more serious roles such as in "Employees Entrance," "The Match King," and "Three on a Match." The swash-buckling angle of the role is not entirely new to him, however, as he is something of the fourth flusher as the lawyer in "The Mouthpiece" and as the high pressure promoter in "The Dark Horse."

Constance Cummings supplies the romance as the innocent girl he hoodwinks into marriage, with Allen Jenkins as the comical assistant to the Great Chandra. Donald Dillaway has the juvenile role and others in the cast include Natalie Moorhead, Clara Blandick, Mayo Methot, Harry Beresford, Clarence Muse, Harry Stubbs, Robert Greig, Earle Foxe and Ruthvena Stevens.

Roy Del Ruth directed the screen play based on the stage production by Vivian Cobay and adapted to the screen by Wilson Mizner and Robert Lord.

Mrs. J. C. Douglas and J. C. Junior left Friday evening for Lubbock to visit Miss Frances who is attending Texas Tech.

Domination Of Currency System Seen In Orders

By RICHARD L. GRIDLEY United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (UP)—Complete domination of the country's banking and currency system with a view toward possible widespread reforms and protection against stocks is believed to be the purpose of the administration's latest move to "corner" gold.

Already controlling more than three-quarters of the country's $4,272,000,000 gold, the government is threatening hoarders with fines and imprisonment in an attempt to gather in much of the remainder, estimated at $1,000,000,000.

Through this means the country's monetary gold reserves will be preserved as a basis for currency backing for a common good. The integrity of the American dollar will be maintained; foreigners will be prevented from depleting money reserves by drawing out of gold; and the government will gain further control over the banking system.

The $1,000,000,000 in gold money outstanding and not under direct control of the government through the treasury or the Federal Reserve Banks represents small hoards of citizens or money in circulation. Much of it has been sent to Europe in recent years and rests in hoards of many foreign individuals.

By persuasion, the government has induced the public and banks to return $600,000,000 since the banking holiday. With this method losing force, threats of action against gold hoarders are being made.

Bright Spots In Business

NEW YORK (UP)—More than seasonal advances in general business was reported today in the weekly trade review of Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., which said prospects in many lines are brighter than in months.

NEW YORK — Columbia Pictures Corp. reported for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1932, net profit of $373,785, or $2.07 a share, against $276,000, or $1.49 a share, in the six months ended Dec. 31, 1931.

PHILADELPHIA—The Reading company reported revenue freight loadings for March amounted to 102,164 cars, an increase of 8,000 cars over February, when 94,164 cars were handled. The March loadings compared with 123,415 cars for the corresponding month in 1932.

Yankees Favorites In American With Dependable Pitching Linked To Tremendous Power Of Batsmen

By STUART CAMERON United Press Sports Editor NEW YORK (UP)—Dependable pitching and tremendous power at bat make the New York Yankees favorites to repeat as American League pennant winners and possible world champions.

Only those who play hunches or fans whose judgment is flipped off line by pure partisanship, can fail, at this stage, to see Ruth, Gomez, Gehrig and the rest of the Yankee boys galloping home in front. The Yankees may not win by such a margin as last year—13 games—but its inconceivable that the Philadelphia Athletics, Washington or Cleveland clubs can entirely erase such an advantage.

The Athletics will be an interesting club to watch. Sale of Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes to the Chicago White Sox certainly must have weakened the team.

The Maeks still have those three pitching aces, Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw and Rube Walberg; a great catcher, Mickey Cochran, and that heavy-hitting first baseman, Jimmy Foss.

The Cleveland Indians have made only two real changes. Bill Knickerbocker, shortstop, was brought up from Toledo and Catcher Roy Spentzer was obtained from Washington.

The Great white hope of the Indians is pitcher Wes Ferrell, who has won 20 or more games each season for the past four years.

Teacher Who Wrote General Criticizing Uniforms Quits Job

SAN ANTONIO, (UP)—Miss Mildred Harrigan, grade school teacher who wrote an army general the United States soldiers' uniform reminded her of "dung," resigned to accept a position where she is "free to talk."

The letter was written to Brig. Gen. Halstead Dorsey, commanding officer of Fort Sam Houston, near here. She suggested he have his men march in the annual Battle of Flowers parade here without arms wearing civilian clothes.

When organizations are able to contrive that house members are "anointed under" with telegrams and letters urging them to a particular course, even the amateur and semi-pro-lobbyists are entitled to serious consideration.

A mass-pressure bloc beat the pari-mutuel racing bill. If the beer bills are beaten, another mass-pressure bloc will be responsible.

Most lobbyists are more anxious to kill legislation than to pass it. Time works in their favor. Pretty soon you will hear the cry that the legislature ought to "quit and go home," or "pass the appropriation bills and go home," or "quit wasting the people's money in useless debate."

That's the voice of the big business lobby speaking, in great part. The sooner the legislature dies, the larger the proportion of legislation that will die with it.

Detective Indicted For Assault Upon Gangster

CHICAGO, (UP)—The Cook County grand jury returned an indictment charging a detective with assaulting an alleged gangster.

The detective Harry Lang, a member of the late Mayor Anton J. Cermak's personal detail, was accused in the indictment of criminal responsibility in the shooting of Frank Nitti, lieutenant of the Capone gang.

Thus the tables were completely turned in the space of 24 hours in a criminal case almost without precedent in Chicago's heterogeneous police annals. Originally Nitti was the accused and Lang the accuser.

During the trial, however, the detective suddenly changed his story and said he was uncertain whether Nitti shot him. Other witnesses believed the detective shot Nitti and then wounded himself.

Allison Only Hope Of America In Davis Cup Series Tilden Believes

DALLAS, (UP)—America's only hope to regain the Davis Cup is Wilmer Allison, youthful team tennis star, William T. Tilden said here.

But that hope is futile if Tilden's further forecast holds true for he predicts Henri Cochet of France will defeat the lanky Texan and Ellsworth Vines, American National champion in the singles matches.

"Allison plays his best tennis in Europe," said Tilden. "He knows conditions there and despite the fact I think Cochet, in perfect condition, will be too good for him, Allison is America's sole bet to bring the Davis Cup back to these shores."

"If Allison defeats Cochet we'll stand an excellent chance of regaining possession of the Davis Cup."

Mrs. J. Al Boykin returned Wednesday from a trip to Ft. Worth to visit relatives.

Child Training Is Given A Test

A little less than a year ago a group of New York psychologists got the chance to take over the training of two newly born twin brothers.

They set out to give all their elaborate theories of child-training a test. One of the lads, named Johnny, was put through a stiff course of sprouts from the very start—daily courses of exercise, systematic instruction in the use of his limbs, and so on. Jimmie, the other youngster, was pretty much let alone to develop in his own way. He got the same food and general care that Johnny got, but he was allowed to spend most of his time in his crib, playing with his toys, gurgling and conversing with himself in blissful solitude.

The other day the assembled psychologists got the children out and put them through their paces to see which one had developed the more.

Johnny, who had had all the training, outshone his brother all the way through. He excelled at climbing stairs, at padding about in a pool, at manipulating little brass-testing gadgets and at other feats of skill and strength. Jimmie, as a racing fan would say, finished nowhere.

But the most interesting thing about the whole business was this: Jimmie, badly outclassed in every test, was nevertheless the happier of the two.

Expert Johnny wore a premature frown most of the time. His responsibilities seemed to rest heavily on his wee shoulders. He was serious, very much in earnest.

Garner Slows Down To Pace Set By Senate Tradition After Few Cracks Of Whip Over That Body

By United Press
WASHINGTON (UP)—Vice-President Garner, after occasional attempts to crack the whip over the senate as he had been accustomed to do with the house when speaker there, is slowing down to the deliberate pace which is part of senate tradition.

But he still clings to his habit of getting to work at 7:30 a. m. and going to bed early at 7:30 a. m., and never probably has refused more social invitations in a month than predecessors in a year. On one day this week he turned down eight of them.

Mrs. Garner, who was his secretary during his years in congress and even while he was speaker, accompanies him occasionally to the office but is not as active as when he held his other positions. One reason is that there is little for her to do. Garner himself can concentrate pretty well on reading the papers in the morning without fear of many interruptions before the senate convenes.

Garner is keeping up his political contacts, however, and already has handed two good patronage jobs. One was in the appointment of Maj. A. V. Dalrymple as prohibition director; the other was the earlier appointment of Silliman Evans as fourth assistant postmaster general. Garner advocated both selections.

Garner's whip-cracking exploits met with scant appreciation from senators who are used to taking their time. He passed the Cope-land medicinal liquor bill before most of those on the floor knew what had happened. He nearly put through the District of Columbia beer bill immediately after its reading and without discussion. Majority Leader Robinson, who is not on exactly the best of terms with Garner, stopped the beer bill effort.

On some occasions Garner's irkings on division votes have been questioned. Yesterday, before passage of the Black short work week bill, he declared an amendment defeated after it appeared to have been approved.

Many had expected Garner would continue to dominate the house as quite engrossed by all his cares. And Jimmie, unskilled and unworried, kept wearing a cheerful grin. He was no great shakes as an infant prodigy and he didn't care. His failures depressed him not at all. He was in short, a perfectly happy child.

Just how much importance ought to be attached to this fascinating experiment isn't clear. Probably the psychologists themselves don't know. But any parent who shares the old feeling that a flock of laughs and a long stretch of utterly carefree happiness are among childhood's most invaluable possessions will feel the old-fashioned, unscientific regime emerges from their test with the greater part of the laurels.

"I want my telephone put back, please"

HARDLY a day passes but that some person who gave up his telephone service in recent months orders it restored. In many cases, people feel that it is false economy to be without a telephone... that the small cost of the service is repaid many times each month in convenience, in time and actually in money saved.

Some miss the close and personal contact with friends that telephone service makes possible.

Others mention the loss of many pleasant, impromptu social "get-togethers" when their friends are unable to reach them by telephone.

It is all true... what these customer friends of ours say. Telephone service costs so little and its value is so great that in most instances it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.

If you are missing your telephone... just get in touch with our business office. We'll send a man out with a telephone in a hurry. Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Sports Parade

By Henry McLemore
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (UP)—"I wanta make that trip once more, and I wanta make it on a horse I trained."

It was Earl Sande talking and he was talking about that trip to the judges' stand after a Kentucky derby that trip when the winner, with the roar of the crowd breaking about him, minces back to have the floral horseshoe thrown about his neck.

It was at Belmont Park that we talked with Sande. Sande and two negro swipes busied themselves with resurrection and St. Stephens, the little jockey's hopes for the derby.

Somehow it wasn't a particularly cheerful picture—this man who not so long ago was king of the riders and whose ears have heard the plaudits of millions—working out there alone in a little shack on a cold, misty morning.

But if Sande felt as was a come-down from the elden, golden days he didn't show it. "I've ridden three of 'em," he said, "Sir Barton, Zev and Gallant Fox. That puts me in a tie with Isaac Murphy, and I'd like to break that tie this year. It's be swell if I could do it on a horse I trained myself. And maybe I will. Come in here and take a good look at my horses."

"This is Resurrection," he said slapping a nicely set-up brown colt on the flank. "He's the best of the two. He started eight times last year and finished second twice. The other six times he was out of the money. St. Stephens over there never has started, so I really don't know what he can do. I'll get a line on both of 'em soon, though, for H. M. Howard of Kentucky, who owns 'em—wants me to ship 'em to Maryland next Monday for the races at Havre De Grace."

Sande is down to 312 pounds, and plenty strong, he said. Asked who he thought was the best 2-year-old last year, Sande said: "There can't be much argument over there never has started, so I really don't know what he can do. I'll get a line on both of 'em soon, though, for H. M. Howard of Kentucky, who owns 'em—wants me to ship 'em to Maryland next Monday for the races at Havre De Grace."

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Mr. MacDonal's Visit

always arrived at.

Since it is certain that such a meeting can bring about no decision or agreement which will not become public before it is effective, it is greatly to be wished that Mr. Roosevelt be allowed to talk without being called upon to prove either that they have settled every question or that neither of them has sold out his country to the foreigner, or has been hornswoggled by the other.

The general intent of the meeting must be plain to any one who has followed the course of recent events.

Ever since the summer of 1931, when the depression developed into an international financial crisis, the whole world has been subjected not merely to the normal liquidation of inflated values but to a vicious and uncontrolled deflation which has been ruining values that by any reasonable standard represent prudent and necessary investment. This uncontrolled deflation has no natural end except universal bankruptcy; it has been more completely out of hand and much more nearly universal than any frenzied inflation which the world has witnessed in modern times. The consequences have been unemployment of fantastic dimensions, destitution on a scale beyond anything known in this era, and the gradual destruction of faith and credit, of social order and communal feeling. It has long been evident to clear-headed men in all parts of the world that a nation could by its own action alone arrest the deflation or insulate itself against its effects. It has been equally evident that no international action could possibly be taken effectively unless preceded and then accompanied by radical measures of domestic reorganization and readjustment. The quarrel as to whether salvation must be national or international has been an empty argument. For the truth has been that the two approaches to the problem are inextricably connected.

At no time has it been possible to resolve the crisis by any one measure. Balancing the budget would not do it because the budget will not balance when deflation continues. Settling the war debts would not do it because war debts are only one part of the debt burden that its deflationary. Great programs of public works would not do it because no conceivable amount of domestic expenditure could increase employment as fast as the world deflation was destroying employment.

A genuine attack on the evil has, therefore, required concerted and simultaneous action in a whole range of matters. If you could balance the budget, and expand credit, and open channels of trade, and initiate public works, and stabilize currencies, and control export surpluses and do all of these things not merely in one country but in the principal commercial nations at about the same time, then a good result would certainly follow. The problem has been to make controlling public opinion see that the problem is not single but plural, that the remedy is in doing many organically related things together.

This understanding, at least for domestic affairs, the American people arrived at about a month ago. They made their understanding effective by a concentration of authority in the hands of Mr. Roosevelt, and today, I think, even those who were least favorable to the idea of such a concentration will admit that it has worked exceedingly well. But it can not work well enough to lift this country to a decent standard of life. Since the deflationary forces are international, it is necessary to deal with them also by international action. This means that essentially the same philosophy which we are applying at home has to be applied to that complex of issues which can be met only by the common action of the several leading nations.

It follows that the governments of Great Britain, France and the United States—since they represent the predominant financial power of the world—need to be armed by their people with authority to take simultaneous action on a multitude of separate questions. The problem is not how to settle the debt, or how to reduce tariffs, or how to stabilize currencies. Or how to expand credit and promote capital investment. The problem is how to get all of these things, and many more besides, done together and promptly and in an atmosphere of confidence and good will.

This can be done only if there is an international public opinion convinced that they need to be done and prepared to support the governments in doing them. These questions that have to be settled together, since no one of them is worth selling alone, seem insuperably difficult only because men have fallen into the habit of thinking they are insoluble. They are no more difficult than it has been to abolish the veterans' extravagance or to bring prohibition to its end. An awakening of public opinion, leaders wise enough to be bold and the thing can and will be done.

Methodist Men's Enrollment Ahead Of Its Easter Goal

Sunday morning the Men's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church expect to reach their Easter goal of a hundred men one week ahead of time. Ninety-seven days ago, when the Men's Bible Class was running around twenty to twenty-five, a small group had faith to work and believe that a hundred men could be secured within a hundred days, which would be Easter Sunday. The class has had a continuous growth since then until last Sunday there were nine-one present. D. F. Bigony, President of the class, and Morris Burns, secretary of the class, have every reason to believe that their expectations will be more than fulfilled. Rev. J. Richard Spain, teacher of the Men's class, will speak Sunday morning on "The Meaning of the Transfiguration," which is a part of the series of lessons on the life of Christ as given in Mark's Gospel. Mr. God Young will be the class soloist Sunday morning. Marriage License Tom Mitchell and Lillian Jeffcoat of Ackerly.

One I Love

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

CHAPTER XXIX

Janet took the letter. Her heart was beating so that she thought the other woman must surely hear it. "I'll go over here where the light is better," she said, moving toward the window.

The handwriting on the envelope was scrawled rather carelessly. Janet drew out the folded sheets and read in a clear, low voice:

"Dearest Mother: There's just time to get this written before we go down to dinner. I've been meaning to write every day but you know how the times goes."

"Everything here is so perfect. Mother, I feel as though I never want to leave! That doesn't mean I don't want to come back to see you. I do, of course, but I know you won't mind if we stay a little longer than we'd expected."

"Roll is— Janet read the two words and stopped. There was a pause, a moment of hesitation and then she began again:

"Roll is the most wonderful husband in the world. When you know him better I know you'll agree with me. We've been invited to six parties this week and gone to every one, so you can see we're having a grand time."

"Maria Latham and her mother are here. They just got back from Paris a few weeks ago and Maria has the most beautiful clothes! I think before we come back to Lancaster we ought to run up to New York so that I can do some shopping, don't you? It isn't as though I'd had time to plan a real trousseau."

"We've been out on the golf course every day except twice when it rained. The weather has been marvelous and I'm getting a nice tan already. Roll is tanned, too, and it's so becoming."

"Well, I'll have to dash now. Be sure to write me the news. Be sure to write me the news although I don't suppose there's very much happening at home. Roll and I both send our love."

Betty. "I'm so glad she's having such a lovely time," she said. "Will you put the letter here on the table, Miss Hill? Perhaps I'll be able to answer it tomorrow."

Janet put down the letter. She said, "I'll be back in a moment" and fled.

Since the shades in the bedroom had been lowered to protect the patient from the light neither Mrs. Curtis nor Lucy, the maid, noticed when Janet returned that her eyes looked unwholesomely swollen. After Lucy had taken away the luncheon tray Janet opened the book she had been reading aloud and began a new chapter. The letter lay on the table close to the bedside and remained there all day. Mrs. Curtis was feeling so much better next morning that the doctor said she might sit up for an hour or two. And on the following day she was so much stronger that she issued definite orders to Janet.

"You've been cooped up in this house all week, child," she said, "and it's not good for you. I want you to take the afternoon and go somewhere. Anywhere you like but don't come back until dinner time! Lucy will be here to get anything I want."

"You're sure you won't need me?" "Certainly not!"

So Janet left the house immediately after luncheon, walked two blocks and took the bus down town. There was three weeks' salary in her purse and in her heart the pleasant sense of expectation every girl feels when she sets out to buy new spring clothes.

Newspapers were advertising spring sales. Besides Janet needed something more presentable to wear. She had been conscious of the fact ever since she had begun her new duties. Mrs. Curtis expected everyone around her to look nice. Lucy and Bertha both wore trim uniforms and the chauffeur's conservatively cut suit was excellently tailored.

She went directly to Marsh's department store and asked to see the suits.

"Here's something very special today," the saleswoman told her. "This little novelty pattern with the squirrel cuffs. It's reduced from $49.50 to $35."

The little novelty pattern was not what Janet wanted. She asked to see something simpler and of better quality. The saleswoman obligingly brought forth other suits. It was several minutes before Janet saw the gray one and when she did she exclaimed, "Oh—I think I like that one!"

"It's very smart," the saleswoman assured her. "Very new, too, and I think it will fit you."

The gray suit fitted Janet as though it had been made for her. It was a young-looking suit. It molded Janet's slimmness and it gave width where width was desirable. It had simplicity without severity. Looking at herself in the full-length mirror, Janet's eyes widened. The suit gave her style and distinction. She felt like another person.

"With your black hat—" the saleswoman was suggesting but Janet interrupted.

"I think I'd like a colored hat for a change," she said. "I think I'd like a—green one!"

For three-quarters of an hour more the shopping continued. Janet could scarcely remember how long it had been since she had bought an entire costume all at once. She bought a little green hat that looked like nothing at all until it was perched on her head and then had surprising jauntiness. She bought two soft white blouses and a pair of black pumps and hose and gloves. Then just before she left they showed her a green and white printed frock that was too much of a bargain to pass by. It looked well with the green hat, too, and Janet bought it.

"You'll want the things sent, won't you?" the saleswoman asked.

Janet shook her head. "No"—and she had had no idea that she was to say that a moment before—"you can send the dress but I think I'll wear the suit."

She felt a pleasant elation as she stepped out into the street 15 minutes later. Ridiculous to put on all her new finery the moment after she's bought it and yet it was fun. She caught a glimpse of herself in a show window mirror and the color in her cheeks deepened. Oh, but it was fun to feel slim and smart and well-dressed!

She walked more briskly, turned a corner and all at once halted. "Hello, Mollie!" she exclaimed.

Mollie Lambert smiled broadly. "Janet—gee, I'm glad to see you! And say, aren't you looking like a million dollars! That's a swell suit you're wearing—"

Janet laughed. "I'm glad you like it," she said. "I just bought it. I've wanted to see you, Mollie. How's everybody at Mrs. Snyder's? I've been meaning to telephone only I've been pretty busy."

"I know. Listen, let's duck in some place for a soda. I've got a lot to tell you and I want to hear about your new job, too."

They entered a candy shop farther down the street and sat down at one of the little tables along the wall.

"Well, Mollie wanted to know 'have you met a lot of rich young fellows?'"

"There's the chauffeur," Janet said, "only he's not rich and not particularly young." She smiled. "No, I'm afraid you'll have to revise your romantic notions. Being a social secretary isn't the way they picture it in the movies at all. At least what I've seen of it, isn't."

"I guess I am romantic," Mollie agreed, giggling. "I guess I got a reason to be." She turned her hand and Janet saw the diamond twinkling on the ring finger.

"Oh, is it from Al?" she asked. Mollie nodded. "I've had it since Sunday. It's not so big but I like it."

"It's beautiful!" Janet assured her. "It's a lovely ring."

"Al and I are going to take our vacations at the same time next month. We're going to get married and go to Atlantic City. We haven't decided exactly about the wedding yet but I want you to come to it."

"I hope I can. I'm so glad for you, Mollie! And I like Al, too. I know you'll be happy!"

"Oh, I guess we'll get along," Mollie nodded. "Al isn't perfect but then neither am I. We have squabbles but we always make them up. I'm going to keep on working. For a year or two. Al doesn't mind and we're going to start saving so we can buy a place of our own some day."

They talked for half an hour longer and then Janet said good-bye. She had some other errands and when these were finished she boarded a bus and rode home.

The sun was sinking behind the trees when she reached the brick house. Janet had forgotten about the new suit she was wearing and she was thinking of Mollie's how Miss Mollie was to grasp her happiness when it was offered!

Janet let herself into the house. No one was in sight and she hurried up the stairs. The door of Mrs. Curtis' bedroom was partly open and from within came voices. Two voices, raised and angry.

Springtime Air Adds Charm To S. S. Class Party

The members of the Susannah Wesley Sunday School Class of the First Methodist Church met in the church parlor Friday afternoon for a class social and business session.

When the members arrived they found the parlor transformed into a spring scene. Bowls of wild flowers and spring foliage and baskets of luscious blossoms lent beauty and fragrance to the scene. The springtime motif was further carried out by the songs of many canaries whose cages had been carried into the rooms.

Mrs. Debridge gave the devotional and Mrs. Morris the opening prayer. A beautiful paper on the meaning of Easter, and the resurrection in the lives of men, was read by Mrs. Debridge. Several enjoyable numbers followed, including a duet by Mrs. Umery and Mrs. Fiewellen with Mrs. Morris at the piano and a reading by Myrtle Brierley.

The business session was devoted to reports, which showed that 195 visits were made during the month and 19 trays given away.

The members drew raffles for the coming three months.

At the refreshment hour, the hostesses who were Mrs. Debridge, J. L. Hudson, Fred Primm, and J. H. Williamson, passed unusually beautiful dessert course. It was a individual angel food cake covered with whipped cream. On the top in a nest made of cocoanuts were candy Easter eggs, a small chick sat on the nest of each cake. This was served with a delicious punch.

The members present were: Mrs. W. J. Riggs, Gus Pickle, Arthur Pickle, C. E. Rhive, V. H. Fiewellen, Charles Morris, J. M. Manuel, J. B. Dalton, J. C. Wata, Herring, Brown, F. E. Eudy, W. D. Easter Time Is Flower Time

Easter time is a joyous time, a hopeful, happy, looking-forward-to-better-things time, and when people are joyful, they want to surround themselves with the more beautiful things of life, like flowers.

Yes, flowers and Easter go together like children and laughter or love and a song. And by the country ever so poor, it will find a mile to spend for its flowers at Easter-time.

What flowers are available at this season? How should they be arranged in the home? What type of care will make them last longer? These are questions in which thousands of Easter flower buyers will be interested.

Blooming Plants Favorites
Easter is the great season of blooming plants. And of these, the lily is perhaps the ruling favorite, partly because the lily is woven in tradition as the special flower of Easter, but more because of its stately beauty of form, exquisite purity of color and delicacy of perfume.

However, the azalea, hydrangea, begonia, rose plant and spring flowering plants, such as the hyacinth, tulip, daffodil (to name only a few) are also prime Easter favorites both for home decorating and gifts.

Among the cut flowers, the pastel shades of golden jonquils, rainbow tinted snapdragons, multicolored tulips, pastel white narcissus and freesias are examples of glorious spring flowers available by the dozen or as mixed bouquets.

Then there are the stately roses, spicy carnations, glowing calendulas and the smaller perfumed cornage flowers, such as violets, sweet peas, lily of the valley, gardenias and orchids.

Truly, nature is bountiful, even prodigal in her offering of flowers for Easter. At no other season will such a large selection be available for your pleasure. And here are a few hints, which, if followed, will preserve your Easter flowers and plants for a much longer time.

Care Of Plants
Blooming plants should be placed where they receive plenty of light, but never in direct sunshine. This causes the plant to mature too rapidly. Equal care should be exercised in placing your plant to avoid direct drafts from doors or windows. These chill and wilt the plant and are frequently fatal.

Care of Cut Flowers
Cut flowers, like blooming plants, should not be exposed to sunlight or drafts. Choose a container deep enough to submerge the stems at least half way in water and to keep the stems off the bottom.

Each day the water should be changed and a small portion (about one-half inch) cut or broken from the bottom of the stem to facilitate the absorption of water. This portion may be broken off where the stem is brittle, like in tulips. On tough stems, like those possessed by roses, they should be cut with a sharp knife (not scissors, as these tend to crush the stem). At night, it is an excellent

Superstitions
Irish peasants were superstitious about sudden swellings of the hands, believing that they were caused by the touch of a fairy. Now-a-days our physicians give us their expert diagnosis and we learn the concrete reasons for the swelling.

"MIKE FINK"
By Walter Blair and Franklin J. Meine (Henry Holt & Company)
The subtitle of this biography is "King of Mississippi Keelboatmen." It ought not to be necessary to tell Westerners who Mike Fink was, any more than to tell them who Paul Bunyan was. But since not all Westerners have hailed from the South, we'll tell 'em! Mike Fink was that half-horse and half-alligator of the Keelboat days of the Mississippi. Mr. Blair and Mr. Meine have run down the legends told about this famous character, who was a real person, and they have gathered them into a rare, rich and racy collection of tales. From the very start the conversation and characterization of the book has the flavor of the old frontier days. These yarns are the sort people never grow tired of hearing. The authors have taken the stand that their exaggeration with the passing of the years has played an important part, for it has preserved the flair of bygone days more than a faithful rendering of the man's deeds. The book does not detract from the legends, in spite of its faithfulness to fact of a past era. Nothing could be more exciting than how the King of the Keelboatmen routed the dangerous outlaws of Cave-in-Rock, a rendezvous of river pirates. There are unbelievable tales of marksmanship that stamp Mike Fink from the start as a man favored by the gods of the age in which he lived. We recommend it for all lovers of Western tales.

And fellows don't get nowhere herdin' sheep. But when the flocks go by me left or right Somehow I can't do nothin' till they pass: I climb the barn to watch them out of sight, And sniff the dusty sheep-smell in the grass. And when strays bleat at night from some hill-shelf I hate my plow, by God!—and hate myself.

Poppy Poster Contest To Be Held By Amer. Legion

Members of the local American Legion and the Auxiliary are eager to see local children enter the Poppy poster contest being sponsored by the national organization. The local unit of the Legion has decided to award a prize at the end of the contest. Mrs. Anderson, president of the local auxiliary, has the following to say about poppies, as aid to understanding the spirit of the posters: "The disabled veteran is paid by the American Legion Auxiliary for each Poppy he makes. The Auxiliary then takes these Poppies and sells them and returns every penny (collected from the sale to the disabled and his dependents) through the Rehabilitation Committee and the Child Welfare Committee. "A beautiful feature of the Poppy-making this past year was the loving charge of the World War disabled making Poppies for his comrades left sleeping 'Over There.' Each veteran making Poppies here made and gave large Poppies that might be placed on the graves of comrades buried in the battlefields of France." The rules for the contest are: The words "The American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary and World War Veterans" may be incorporated in the posters, but no poster using the word "Buddy" will be considered. The posters must measure 18 x 20 inches. National Headquarters of the American Legion Auxiliary offers $25.00 each, and the Department Headquarters offers $10.00 each to the student in the grade school and the student in high school submitting the best poster. Contest will close May 10th, so that the posters may be displayed in the local stores preceding the Poppy sale. The posters will be judged at the Department Convention and the National Convention in Chicago. The local unit to Wm. Frank Martin Post No. 185 will award a prize at the close of the contest.

Ginners Hear Tom F. Hunter

'Big Interest' Avoid Paying Just Share Of Taxes, He Declares

DALLAS (UP)—Tom F. Hunter, Wichita Falls lawyer who was candidate for governor at the last democratic primary, declared here in a speech before the Texas Cotton Ginners' Association that "big interests" are avoiding paying their just share of the taxes. The speaker presented tables of tax returns which he said he had gathered in preparation of his subject. He approximated the tax payments of public utilities, oil companies and other highly organized industrial interests as being two per cent of their net profits whereas the average taxpayer pays from 6 to 100 per cent. "For the past 15 to 20 years," he said, "while they have advised chambers of commerce and other service clubs to avoid discussion of political matter and economics necessarily associated with them, the allied industries have organized until they have become the most powerful political machine in the country." Citing instances of alleged under-tax payments, Hunter said: "One pipe line company of $50,000,000 capitalization reported last year a net profit of $20,157,000 and paid to all branches of government in Texas $477,000, or 2.3 per cent of their net profit." He said gas company properties paid an ad valorem tax of $441,000, one-ninth of one per cent of their sworn valuation of $338,900,000.
