Allison Defends Title in Houston Tennis Tourney

HOUSTON, (UP)—A colorful field of racquet talent including several players of national repute opened Monday in the third annual Houston invitation tennis tournament. The play will be held on the River Oaks Country Club courts. Defending his tournament championship will be Wilmer Allison, Austin, former Texas University star and Davis Cup team member. Allison won the title last year against a field that included Ellsworth Vines, Jr., Pasadena, Calif., national amateur champion. Vines failed to enter this year's tournament. Other nationally known stars participating included Clifford Sutter, New Orleans, national intercollegiate champion; George M. Lott, doubles player from Philadelphia; Lester Stouffer, Los Angeles; Frank X. Shields, New York; and Frankie Parker, Milwaukee. Jake Hess, Jr., former Rice Institute tennis captain and runner-up in last year's tournament, headed the local contingent. At least 25 Texas players were entered from Austin, San Antonio, Dallas, Fort Worth, Tyler, and smaller towns. A University of Texas group of entrants included Karl Kaurath, Hal Surface, Sterling Williams and Martin Buxby. Other entrants: Jean Pfeiffer, Frost Carvel, Gilbert Deussen, George Dulling and Paschal Walthall, San Antonio; Ted Hackney, Jack Smith and John McDermid, Fort Worth; Jimmie Quick, John C. Carr, George Pauney and Jerry Thalheimer, Dallas; and Ernest Funkhauser, Tyler. Four prominent players from the Pacific coast were entered: the women's division; Bennie Miller, Los Angeles; Jane Sharp, Pasadena, Canadian girls' champion; Ruby Bishop, Pasadena, United States girls' champion; and Frances Herren, Los Angeles, Pacific coast women's champion.

TODAY and TOMORROW Ghosts From the Past

SANTA MONICA, Calif., March 30. Nearly fifteen years have passed since the Armistice and during that time the hatreds of the war have subsided. In the countries that fought against Germany men have gradually washed out of their minds the things they once believed. They have come to recognize that the anti-German propaganda was grossly exaggerated when it was not maliciously untrue, and they have come to realize the grave injustices which were done to Germany in the peace treaties. So complete has been the revolution in opinion since 1918 that up to a month ago the great majority of men now living would have been inclined to doubt that there had ever been any reality in what the war generation used to call the menace of German militarism. The overthrow of the military caste has achieved what Wilson and the other Allied leaders had promised it would achieve. The menace which had aroused the greater part of the world against Germany was so completely obliterated that men could hardly believe it had ever existed. So thoroughly had it disappeared from view that those who had once taken it seriously and had believed it must be resisted found themselves suspected by their own people of having been the victims of a terrible hallucination. The return to power of the class that was defeated in the war and overthrown at the end of it has brought the world an appalling reminder that the menace of the reactionary caste in Germany was no mere invention of Allied propagandists and no mere product of a war psychosis. The propagandists exaggerated. They lied. The mob spirit became imbecile in its credulity. But the events since the restoration of the reactionary party have offered discouraging but inescapable evidence that the fundamental thesis of the war—that the German reactionaries have a mentality which is a danger to civilization—has unhappily been forced once again onto the consciousness of the world. A generation which had forgotten the war has been forcibly reminded of the things which the men who fought the war believed when they fought it. What comes back to one these days is a realization that the mental emotional pattern of the German reactionaries is really what we used to think it was. There is, in their actions, the fatal tendency to repeat the very things which brought them to such terrible isolation in the opinion of mankind. Most particularly they seem unable to escape from the fixed idea that frightfulness is a useful instrument of public policy. All wars and all revolutions are violent and cruel, but a resort to systematic and purposeful cruelty is a wholly different thing. Civilized men accept and condone the violence of disorder and the cruelty of passionate men. But cold, calculated, intelligent cruelty they do not accept and they do not condone. When they see the whole Jewish population of Germany subjected to planned, organized and centrally directed terrorism they remember that it was the same breed of men who invented the systematic bombing of civilian populations and the unrestricted sinking of merchant ships. It is appalling to be reminded of these things, and civilized men will pray that they may have the wisdom not to be captured by their indignation and unbalanced in their judgment. Above all they must remember how greatly Germany has suffered, how much the Ger-

Great Britain To Be Driest After April 7

HARDER TO SATISFY THIRST IN LONDON THAN IN NEW YORK LATELY LONDON (UP)—When beer returns to America on April 7, Great Britain will become the world's foremost prohibition nation. It is a paradoxical fact that in recent years it has become harder to satisfy a good, robust thirst in London than in New York and Chicago. Draconic taxation and innumerable legal restrictions have combined to make prohibition more of a reality in Britain than the dry laws have in the United States. A survey shows that for an average of more than 17 hours out of the daily 24, the greater part of this nation is under strict prohibition. It is not prohibition in the American sense, with half a dozen speakeasies handy, it is prohibition rigidly and relentlessly enforced. That, however, is the least of the problem for most Britons. In the last two decades even the cheapest beer and ale have become so heavily taxed that four out of five men are no longer able to drink except rarely. The U. S. treasury will get $5 in revenue from every 31 gallon barrel of beer. The tax on an equivalent amount here amounts to $23.75. At 4 or 5 p. m., when Americans are shaking their first cocktails and the French are sipping aperitifs, British pubs are locked and bolted. At 11 p. m., when nocturnal conviviality is in full swing, here cocktail bars are darkened. In the provinces they have shut an hour earlier. The average British public-house is allowed to do business only for about three hours around lunch time and five hours in the evening. In Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland it is impossible to buy a drink on Sunday, but here you may buy one from noon to 2 p. m., or from 7 to 10 p. m. British beer and whisky are considerably weaker than that of the United States has been accustomed to, both before and after prohibition. But Britain will have nothing to do with the sturdier foreign brews. Even the most famous are generally unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Ethredge of San Antonio, arrived Saturday for a visit with Mrs. F. F. Gary. Mr. Ethredge will make a short visit; Mrs. Ethredge and two children will remain here indefinitely. Perry Lee Adams, brother of Mrs. Ervin Daniels of Big Spring and Scout Sharp, both of Lubbock, returned Saturday to Lubbock after a few days' visit with Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel.

Mussolini, Peacemaker

It comes with something of a shock to discover that Europe, in its blind search for peace, has come to lean upon the former Bad Boy of the continent—none other than Benito Mussolini. Few people realize that the only stable government in the whole of Europe is that of the dictator of Italy. It alone has given the force of a good example to the rest of the continent—if by good we mean a stable government which has the upper hand and has displayed ability and genius in governing a people heretofore considered rather unruly. Mussolini in the role of peacemaker is something new. He has for years been a preacher of the gospel of might. He has made dictatorship pay dividends in the form of national solidarity. Today he is the only of all rulers in Europe who can count upon the solid backing of his people. Thus it comes about that Mussolini is the author of Europe's new

THE opportunities, to which we refer, are the daily bargains to be found in every shopping area. Some people find them quite by chance . . . stumble over them blindly . . . and acquire them with astonishment. Others never seem to be in the right store at the right time; If there's a 25% marked-down sale of shoes at Smith's, they are buying at Brown & Co. . . . If a grocer three blocks away is clearing out his canned goods at half price, they are at the corner store making routine purchases.

But—there are some people who always find these opportunities. Their money buys them more—and better—merchandise than their neighbors'. Why? Not through good luck, you may be sure; but simply because these people read the advertisements in their daily newspapers.

CHAPTER XXIV

The maid in the smart gray uniform who opened the door said, "Yes, Mrs. Curtis is expecting you. Won't you come in?" Janet was ushered into a sunlit living room and then the maid disappeared. It was a large room with green walls hung with a great many pictures. The heavy, wine-colored curtains at the windows drooped to the floor and the sunlight, falling on the carpet, gave it a pattern of light and shadow. There seemed to be a good deal of furniture and yet somehow the room was not crowded. There were bookshelves between the windows and there was a fireplace with a mirror above the mantle. It was a pleasant room. Cheerful. Comfortable. Janet sank into a chair to wait. She had never seen a room like this before. She had never been in such a large, imposing house, either. Janet sat up very straight, feeling a trifle self-conscious. Then she heard footsteps and a woman with gray hair appeared in the doorway. "I am Mrs. Curtis," she said. "And you are Miss Hill? How do you do?" Mrs. Curtis moved forward. She was slightly less than medium height, a stout little woman with the pink and white complexion that often goes with stoutness. She had a round face and a double chin. Impossible to imagine anyone more in contrast to Bruce Hamilton's spare, rangy figure and yet there was something that was alike about them. Janet arose. "Yes, I'm Miss Hill," she said. "Mr. Hamilton told me you're looking for a secretary." The woman motioned Janet back into her chair and sank into one facing it. "Yes," she said, nodding. "It's my brother's idea. I've never had a secretary but since my daughter was married I've been alone here. Perhaps too much alone! My brother tells me you're very efficient."

Hamilton seemed pleased when she reported this to him. The other girls at the office asked questions about Janet's past experience. She didn't even say definitely that Janet was hired for the position but seemed to assume that was understood. "When would you want me to come to work?" the girl asked. "Is next Monday too soon?" No, Janet said, it wasn't too soon. Hamilton had arranged that she was to be free at the end of the week. "About the salary—" Janet began hesitantly. Mrs. Curtis gave a little exclamation. "I'd forgotten all about that!" she said. "Dear me! Dear me! Well, of course, you're to live here in the house and there'll be no expenses of any sort. Would $30 a week be satisfactory to begin with?" Janet computed rapidly. Thirty dollars a week with no living expenses was considerable more than she had been earning at the Every Home office. Why, it was almost equal to $50! "That will be satisfactory," she said. "And I'll be ready to go to work Monday morning."

Mollie Lambert was more outspoken. Millie was frankly envious when Janet told her about the beautiful home in which she was to live. "Goah, that's a break!" she exclaimed. "But I guess you deserve it. Maybe you'll invite me out some time, will you?" "Why, of course I will!" Mollie eyed the other girl. "That'll be swell. You know what I bet, Janet? I bet you'll meet some rich fellow out there and he'll fall in love with you. That's what'll happen. He'll fall in love with you and you'll get married—" "Mollie!" Janet exclaimed. "Don't be silly! Why how could anything like that happen?" "Why couldn't it, I'd like to know?" "Just because it couldn't. I'm going to Mrs. Curtis to work! I'm not going to meet any young men, rich or otherwise."

All at once Buster interrupted this conversation. Slowly he strode forward and brushed against Janet's knee. He said, "Me-over!" It didn't seem particularly wonderful to Janet but it did seem to settle one thing. Since Buster had accepted her there was no doubt but that Janet was hired as Mrs. Curtis' social secretary. When she left the house a few minutes later it was with the understanding that on the following Monday she would return.

Radio fans and others of Big Spring who have listened to Jimmy Jefferies and his Early Birds over WFAA, Dallas, will be afforded a chance to see these radio entertainers in person when they come to Big Spring to be presented in the Early Bird Revue Friday evening, April 7, at eight o'clock at the Municipal Auditorium. This program is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club at Big Spring, an all profits derived therefrom will be used to furnish milk to under-nourished children and to take care of crippled children in this district. The price was set at 40c in order that everyone possible could see this excellent performance. The show features Carl Lamberts and the twelve-piece WFAA Early Bird orchestra and eight acts of vaudeville with Jimmy Jefferies as master of ceremonies. These acts include Fred Lowery, whistler; Maxine Gray, blues singer; Russell Koch, xylophonist, who is a former Big Spring boy and who started his career in one of the local theatres managed by Mr. Robb; Professor Zisch, inventor; Virginia Self, dancer; Gus Lavins, from Palestine; and the Bumble Bee, novelty trio with impersonations of the Mills Brothers. The first part of the program will represent a typical morning broadcast of the Early Birds. The stage will be wired with a special Western Electric sound amplifying system so that every one in the auditorium can hear distinctly. It might be well during this coming week to ask the Early Birds to play certain numbers and notify them that you are from Big Spring, as this will give them a chance to advertise our city over the radio.
