397 Agents In 297 Counties Serve Texas

By Victor II. Schoffermaver, Agricultural Editor of the Dallas News

Texas counties this year wil have the services of 397 county and home demonstration agents and assistants in 237 countles, an increase of fifty-slx county agents and one assistant, and three home demonstration ag-July, and if you cannot possibly ents and seven negro agents

Only twenty-one countles will not have the services of county property tax in order to pay agents. Fourteen countles will be served by agents from adjoining or near-by counties. Other Government in an effort to reduce surpluses and restore higher prices to farmers.

For the county agents it means a new lease of life a new field of activity added to the long-established program of efficient crop production. When the depression reached its peak in Texas last year many counties planned to get along without county agents. Commissioners' Part Five —Georgia Frances Courts in various sections of Texas were hard put to find the necessary funds out of which county agents are to be paid (leaving aside the Federal funds ing hard and only time will tell since appropriated for extension

At that critical moment in the life of the extension service ments came in this week just in came the new deal of President time to get their names in the Roosevelt's agricultural policies. column and their announce. That these were revolutionary ments in the reading columns, goes without saying, but that they have been of direct help ment. Probably we will muster everyone in Texas knows by this time. Then came the further proviso by the Federal crop adjusters that since the county agents were to be the duly qualified leader-managers of the Government's farm adjustment program in each county, it would be just too bad for any county which did not have a county agent if it expected to get direct benefits from such Federal adjustments .Counties which for some years were without county agents got busy. They wanted some of these Federal benefits which were bringing hundreds of thousands of thousands of cash to farmers in adjoining counties. They got in touch with extension forces and somehow the money was provided and county agents began to be asigned. Result—the ablest extension service machine possibly ever put into the field, all fired with new responsibility and new vision of their field of work which has broadeded enormously.

This army of county agents is now busily at work signing up cotton farmers for the 1934 acreage reduction program. Similar work for wheat acreage reduction was carried out last fall and the corn-hog reduction campaign will get under way speedily.

The county agent, who in the past has been a crop advisor or has given personal service in such matters as culling flocks of chickens or immunizing hogs today finds his work doubled and trebled. He has become an administrator and direct representative among farmers for the Federal Government's policies as to land usage, the final word and authority on allotted acreage and how it is to be planted, and last but not least, on the all important per acre payment the farmer is to receive from the Government.

In short the county agent sits on the lid. He must keep the county farm machine running smoothly so that the grtatest possible good will result. He must prevent abuses and mistakes as far as possible and in a crisis he is expected to make the decision of a Solomon. Let it be said that these county agents are tackling their new jobs with vim and appreciation of the responsibility involved. As a whole they are pretty well trained and the experience gained last season will greatly help them this year. So will the nuclei of locals organized in the various counties.
