Man Shot To Death Near Here Sunday Another Death Near Voss Also Being Investigated

The Coleman County Sheriff's Department is investigating the deaths of two people who died Sunday night in separate incidents. Autopsies have been ordered in both cases.

Beverly Micars Rhodes was found dead in bed by her boyfriend, Earl Burleson, Jr. at a residence three miles southwest of Voss. A 911 call was received at 9:30 and according to Sheriff Wade Turner, deputy Ken Brixie responded to the call and investigated the death scene. Turner said the cause of death is unknown pending the results of an autopsy, "but there seemed to be no indication of foul play."

Ms. Rhodes was pronounced dead at the scene at 11:30 p.m. by Peace Justice Nance Campbell, who ordered the autopsy.

Shortly after the first call came from Voss, Deputy James Morris, Santa Anna Police Chief Carlos Torres and Game Wardens Steve Vail and James Nixon were dispatched to a rural residence about two miles east of Santa Anna and about one-half miles north of U.S. Highway 67.

They found 26-year-old Charles Norman Streat of Dallas lying in the front yard of the W.E. Swan home, shot.

According to officials, Swan allegedly shot the victim in the chest with a handgun.

According to Sheriff Turner, Mr.

and Mrs. Swan had first spotted the man in his vehicle parked near the entrance to their place when they drove into town for a purchase. Upon arriving home they found the man in their yard and ordered him to leave. Turner said Mr. Swan later decided he may have spoken too harshly and decided to drive back to see if the individual's vehicle was still parked on the highway and try to talk with him. When Swan spoke Streat refused to respond.

Sheriff Turner said after returning to his residence, Mr. Swan was in the house when the couple's dog began barking in the front yard. Swan took his handgun and went to see what was disturbing the dog. According to Turner, Swan found Streat coming over a locked chain link fence and once again ordered him to leave. Turner alleged that when the man continued to approach, Swan shot him in the chest.

Pearce Helps Cubans Prepare For Life In The Free World

To John Pearce of Santa Anna, helping in a world trouble spot is nothing new. This time his helping hand was extended at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba where he spent the past three months helping organize and support the operation of a school for Cuban adults detained there while seeking asylum in other countries.

Pearce, a Sgt. 1st Class in the U.S. Army Reserve, based in Abilene, is a Civil Affairs NCO and periodically asks for assignments such as he has just been involved with the U.S. Military Task Force Operation Sea Signal/Safe Haven. He reluctantly returned home from Cuba at the end of last week. We say reluctantly because, although he is pleased to be back here with his family, he feels such a great need to assist these people in trying to make a new life for themselves and was seeing progress made when his government assignment time was up.

He says death came to many trying to escape on small rafts, but also held out hope for the babies born while parents wait out their time in the camp.

In the school that was established at Guantanamo the Cubans were able to study such subjects as English, carpentry, computers, art, sewing, and American History which would be a great help to those hoping to come to the U.S. The school was conducted with the barest of supplies and tools. "After all," Pearce said, "we were working with people who have made do so long with so little that it is a way of life with them."

Classes were conducted in "hardback" tents for which Pearce helped to oversee the construction. "Hardbacks", he explained, "are wooden frame structures with canvass tent roofs."

Among the detained Cubans themselves were college professors, computer experts, physicists and others related to other fields who helped teach the classes to their fellow freedom seekers, about 60% of whom, according to Sgt. Pearce, are high school graduates and about 15% had "some college or higher degree".

Pearce said all walks of life, "from the criminal to the family next door", were included in those seeking a way out of Cuba, and he holds the belief that if allowed asylum they would become productive, supportive citizens of whichever country they ultimately settle in.

OOPS!

In a recent article about her son, Doug being in Russia for a V-E Day celebration, we mentioned that Louise Moore, a former resident of Santa Anna, now lives in Utah. Can't explain how we made that mistake, since Louise receives the paper and we know she is a resident of Washington, Iowa. She has lived there since leaving here a number of years ago but says home, to her, "will always be Santa Anna." We apologize to Louise and any friends who may have thought she had moved.

In a picture caption last week we referred to Dalia DeLeon who, of course, is Dalia DeLeon Wetsel. Sorry, Dalia. Guess old habits die hard. We knew you by your maiden name for quite a while.

Medicare Pays For Mammograms Every Two Years

The Breast Cancer Awareness program of the Abilene YWCA has announced a new program aimed at informing women over 65 years. Statistics show that only three percent of eligible women take advantage of the Medicare mammography benefit because they are unaware of its existence.

Medicare pays for one screening mammogram every two years for women age 65 or older. A woman can self-refer by calling an accredited mammography facility nearest her to make an appointment. To find the closest FDA-accredited facility, call 1-800-4-CANCER. The only requirement is that the woman has met the annual deductible.

On the alternate years, the Breast Cancer Awareness program of the YWCA can provide the clinical breast exam and the mammogram at no cost. The combination of the Medicare benefit and the BCAP benefit means that any woman over 65 can have a mammogram annually, the guideline recommended by American Cancer Society.

Funds from the Texas Cancer Council, administered through the YWCA's Breast Cancer Awareness program, is making this project possible. The YWCA program has provides women in this area clinical breast exams, mammograms, and other diagnostic procedures since 1991. During the four years, over 2,000 procedures have been provided. Sixteen malignancies have been detected.

A woman's best protection against breast cancer is to do a monthly breast self-examination, have an annual clinical examination and mammograms. The American Cancer Society recommends that a woman have a baseline mammogram between the ages of 35 and 40. Between 40 and 50 she should have a mammogram every two years. Above 50, an annual mammogram is recommended.

Call the YWCA, 915-677-5321, to inquire about eligibility guidelines, for information about a mammogram on the years that Medicare does not provide or with your questions about general breast health.

Questions Answered Regarding Oil Recycling Center

A question had arisen of late as to whether people outside the city limits of Santa Anna could recycle used motor oil at the Oil Recycling Center which is located in the City of Santa Anna warehouse yard.

According to Superintendent of Operations Tommy Jackson, due to an overrun of recyclers from out of town when the program was first initiated, it was subsequently limited to Santa Anna Citizens only (those who pay a water bill in Santa Anna).

"However," he said last week, "if someone within our trade area wants to recycle, they will not be turned away."

Those wishing to deposit used motor oil at the Oil Recycle Center should first go by the City Hall where arrangements will be made for entry to the recycling container. Hours are 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday thru Friday, with exception of holidays.

In checking with the oil recycling program in Coleman, we were told that anyone from within Coleman County wishing to participate may go by the City of Coleman maintenance department and sign a paper for admittance to the recycling area. No more than five gallons may be deposited by any individual at any one time.

You are reminded that motor oil only is accepted at either recycling site.

A Big Help

According to a recent survey, 71 percent of newspaper readers agreed with the statement: "The paper helps me to decide where to shop and buy." Newspapers have always ranked first or second in believability as an advertising medium.

Children May Not Be Getting Enough Fiber

HOUSTON—Many children may not be getting enough dietary fiber. The average diet is highly refined, and overprocessing removes much of the natural fiber that children and adults need, said Janice Stuff, a registered dietitian at the USDA's Children's Nutrition Research Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.
Stuff said that a 40-pound child needs 10 grams of fiber daily compared to 15-20 for teens and 25-35 for adults.
A child can get 10 grams of fiber each day by eating a whole-wheat bread sandwich, a medium apple or pear, a half-cup of vegetables and a half-cup of beans or lentils, said Stuff.
To be sure a child is getting enough fiber, Stuff suggests:
• Adding raisins or berries to whole-grain cereals.
• Adding whole-grain flour to pancake mix.
• Adding vegetables to pizza toppings and spaghetti sauces.
• Serving popcorn as a snack.

LEGAL MATTERS

BY ATTORNEY GENERAL DAN MORALES

HOUSE HUNTING: BEWARE BEFORE YOU BUY

For many Texans, the purchase of a home is the largest investment they ever make. Many consumers buy a new home with little or no knowledge about the real estate process. Unfortunately, they are prime targets to get taken.

Finding the right home at the right price takes careful research and good judgment. Consider the following advice when shopping for a home. However, we encourage you to do more research to minimize problems when buying your dream house.

Expert advice

Because most consumers are unaware of the basic concepts and rules in buying and selling real estate, a small investment in wise counsel can save a bundle in the long run. Take the time to ask friends and relatives to recommend an honest, competent real estate agent, mortgage broker, and attorney to help you through unfamiliar waters.

You can check up on their recommendations by contacting your local Better Business Bureau, Attorney General Consumer Protection Office, and relevant professional organization. Remember that even the best professional will not look after your interests as you will. So stay involved, and don't be afraid to ask questions.

Resolve credit disputes up front

Most Texans have to borrow money to buy a home. When you apply for a home loan, a reputable mortgage lender will run a credit check to make sure you are a good risk. If there is a problem with your credit report and the bank finds out about it first, you may lose the home you are trying to purchase while trying to work on your credit, or you may not be able to get a mortgage at all.

To help prevent possible problems, get your credit reports early. That way you can clear up any mistakes or explain any problems the reports may show. The following are the three major national credit report services: Equifax (800-685-1111), Trans Union (800-851-2674) and TRW (800-392-1122).

Get it in writing

The law provides that an oral agreement for the sale of real estate is not enforceable. You should therefore make sure that any agreements you reach when buying a house are made in writing. For example, if the home needs any repairs, improvements, or any other work, you should list those in writing on your contract.

Types of contract

Most home purchases are conducted pursuant to a general warranty deed in which the seller warrants (guarantees) that the seller's title to the property is good. If it later turns out that the seller's title was not good, the buyer (or subsequent buyer) may sue the seller for economic loss resulting from the title defect. If the seller is unreachable or without funds to pay a successful lawsuit, the buyer could still be protected under a title insurance policy.

Although there are other types of deeds that are sometimes used in special situations, most residential real estate transactions involve a general warranty deed.

Unless you know real estate thoroughly, ask your lawyer for an explanation if a general warranty deed is not being used when you purchase your home.

You should be especially leery of a contract for deed, which, unlike a general warranty deed, does not transfer title to the buyer until the house has been totally paid off. The seller can take the property back if the buyer does not meet any of a wide range of preconditions, such as failing to pay taxes, insurance, monthly payments or not keeping the house in good condition.

Worse yet, if the seller forfeits the house (because of bankruptcy, for example), the buyer with a contract for deed has no equity — and may have no claim whatsoever — on the property in question. In other words, under a 30-year, contract-for-deed agreement, you could conceivably make payments for 29 years and 11 months, miss the last payment, and lose everything.

Some people choose a contract for deed because it allows the buyer to move into the house without paying closing costs or a substantial down payment. However, this type of deed often ends up being nothing more than a long-term rental agreement.

U.S. SENATOR
KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Welfare Reform Plan Must Include the Growth Factor

None ever said fixing our abysmally flawed welfare system would be easy. While the 104th Congress has made historic progress on this repair project, the finishing touches remain to be drawn. I am convinced that the block-grant approach, which both the House and Senate have approved in principle, offers the best hope of accomplishing what we've set out to do. It is designed to provide states with the flexibility to create programs that meet their individual needs — programs which will encourage their welfare recipients to make responsible choices.

But there remains to be settled an issue of basic equity. Simply put, there is no reason why the federal government should subsidize poor children in fast-growing states less than those in slow-growth states. The block grant funding formulas, as now written, do not take into account the needs of fast-growing states such as Texas.

The current reform plans would freeze Texas welfare funding at the current level over the next five years despite the fact that Texas is expected to witness a population increase of nearly 20 percent over that same period of time.

Meanwhile, states with stagnant or negative population growth would receive, in effect, more funding for each child on public assistance than would states that are growing.

The Senate has not yet finalized its welfare block-grant formulas. But under the House-approved bill, Texas' allocation for family assistance would equal current federal welfare spending in Texas — about $440 million annually. That amount would increase by only $11 million over the five-year period of the program.

It is unfair to force Texas or any other state to bear the burden of disproportionate population growth. The needs of high-growth states must be part of the equation.

One way we see to achieve this would be for the Congress to set aside, out of the overall welfare block-grant pie, supplemental grants to high-growth states.

And I've been working with other senators from high-growth states to develop a better basic formula, one which includes credit for state's growth rates and the number of children they have living in poverty. We have succeeded in getting the Senate Finance Committee to adopt a formula that increases Texas basic block grant from $440 million to $507 million — an increase of $67 million a year.

We must not lose sight of the fact, however, that the underlying objective of welfare reform is to reduce long-term welfare dependency and bring about lower rates of growth in the programs.

Eventually, our overhaul should make the welfare system shrink — successful reform by anyone's definition.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — State Comptroller John Sharp warns that Texas stands to lose up to $12 billion over the next seven years if the budget-slashing Congress adopts a block-grant method in its effort to revamp the 30-year-old Medicaid program which provides health care for indigents.
Last week, as adoption of grants looked increasingly likely, Sharp predicted the need for a special session of the Texas Legislature to pay for a projected shortfall of $750 million over the next two years in state Medicaid and other social programs. The tab for Medicaid alone over the next two years is $18.7 billion.
Under the proposed Medicaid block grants, Sharp said, states with shrinking populations would get more money, while states with increasing populations, like Texas, would get less, and suffer disproportionately.
Sharp estimated, for example, property taxes for the Harris County Hospital District would have to increase by 17 to 27 percent to make up for proposed federal cuts, the Houston Chronicle reported.
"Washington should abandon these failed formulas of the past and turn to a simple solution instead: Send the money where the people are," Sharp said at a Capitol news conference in Austin, before leaving for Washington, D.C., to lobby the Texas congressional delegation to support his funding formula, which is based on the number of qualified Medicaid recipients.
Texas would receive a lump sum under the proposed block-granting formula; under the present formula, the federal government pays about two-thirds of Texas' Medicaid costs.
School Districts Sue State
Nearly 200 Texas school districts are suing the state to recover hundreds of millions of dollars they say they've lost in the last 10 years due to an error in the funding formula for state education aid.
The dispute is scheduled to be tried July 3 before Austin state District Judge Scott McCown, who has presided through the state's seemingly endless school finance case.
State Comptroller John Sharp, whose agency each year determines property values used in the formula for calculating state aid to schools, is the defendant.
Representing the plaintiffs is Austin lawyer Buck Wood, who said though he believes the funding error was unintentional, the school districts have been unfairly penalized and will seek compensation.
Past losses of funding are being attributed to a miscalculation of the home values of citizens over age 65, whose taxes are frozen under the state constitution. For the past decade, The Dallas Morning News reported, the state has given only partial credit on the values lost through the property tax break for senior citizens.
Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, Sharp's predecessor, indicated that the state will come up with the money if the courts rule for the school districts.

Saving Money on Your Insurance

Texas Commissioner of Insurance

"Hail Storms and Insurance Claims"
TEXAS HAS HAD SO MANY hail storms that it sometimes seems our state has two kinds of people — those who have had hail damage and those who are going to.
It's always better to prevent an insurance claim than to have one. While you can't prevent hail damage to your house, you can protect your car from a pouring. It's amazing how many of us leave $15,000 cars in the driveway to make room in our garages for odds and ends worth a few hundred dollars.
Save yourself the hassle of a battered car by making room for it in your garage or carport. Storm warnings should be your signal to move your car under cover.
If hail damages your car, the repairs are covered by the "comprehensive" (physical damage other than collision) portion of your auto policy. Notify your agent or company as soon as possible to schedule a damage appraisal by an adjuster. Many companies provide easy-access, drive-in claims service where automobile damage appraisals are completed while you wait.
Don't be afraid to file a claim if hail damages your home or car. Texas law prohibits insurers from stopping your auto or homeowners coverage because of weather-related claims.
If a hailstorm damages your roof or breaks windows, make emergency repairs to prevent further water damage. Homeowners policies cover the cost of temporary repairs, so save receipts for materials and labor. Don't make permanent repairs before an adjuster can inspect the damage. This could cause denial of your claim.
If you had a hail storm but aren't sure it damaged your roof, contact your insurer anyway so an adjuster can check it out. Insurance companies know the Texas Department of Insurance expects them to handle your claim fairly.
For example, insurers know they cannot demand roof overlays instead of replacing damaged shingles.
The Department also has notified insurers that in nearly every instance they must pay for shingle removal down to the roof deck — even if a roof had two layers of shingles.
There are exceptions to this policy, however. Our policy's intent is not to let people collect for removing a damaged roof but then overlay it and pocket the difference. If an insurer paid to tear off and replace a damaged roof last year, we don't expect it to pay for removing two layers of shingles from the same roof this year.
After a major hail storm, some consumers complain that their insurers rejected their claims, even though neighbors all around them were getting new roofs.
In situations like this, the best course of action is to get another opinion. A joint inspection by the insurance company's adjuster and a roofing contractor could settle the issue. In some cases, hail damage can vary in a single block.
For more information on insurance claims, call the Department's 24-hour automated publications order line, 1-800-SHOP (7467), for our brochures, Homeowners Insurance: A Guide for Texas Consumers and Automobile Insurance: After the Accident...What Now? *

New Rabies Cases Reported In Coleman County

Contrary to some belief, the rabies epidemic in Coleman County continues to linger as three new cases were reported this past week.
Regional Zoonosis Veterinarian for the Texas Department of Health, Dr. James Wright, verified three cases of the Fox rabies strain found in a Boer goat cross, Spanish goat cross and a lamb, all located in the vicinity of Santa Anna Ave. in Coleman.
"The three animals were tested positive this past week," said Dr. Wright. "We continue to track cases in Coleman, Brown and Runnels counties. We want to urge citizens us use extreme caution when approaching animals exhibiting unusual behavior. You need to educate children that if they can touch a wild animal, they shouldn't do so. I definitely encourage pet owners to get their pets vaccinated. Saddle horses, show valves, goats, lambs should be considered in the vaccination process. Check with your veterinarian. Controlling strays through animal control officers should be practiced. By all means, do not drop off strays. It compounds the overall problem."
According to Dr. Wright, from Jan. 1 through June 6, (15) fifteen rabies cases in Coleman County are on file involving two cats, two dogs, two calves, three bobcats, two raccoons, two goats, a lamb and a fox. Wright's tracking territory includes north Central Texas from an area east of Dallas to west of Abilene. He mentioned the outbreak continues to track northwest and cases have been reported in Erath County recently.

Picnics and Sales Tax

If you are going on a picnic don't forget the hamburgers and hot dogs. You won't have to pay any sales tax on the meat or buns, but you will have to pay a sales tax on the canned or bottled drinks you take along.

If you purchase 100% pure juice then no sales tax is due. You not only avoid the sales tax but the juice is a more healthy choice.

Two-for One Dinners

If a picnic is not your style, how about dining out? With summertime here more people eat out.

One money saving idea when eating out is to use a coupon where you buy one meal and get the other for free. But what do you have to pay sales tax on? You will owe sales tax on only the amount you actually pay for the meals.

Don't forget your wait staff out there. The tip should be based on the full price of the meals before the discount is deducted.

Brownwood to WalMart shopping and out to eat then back to Ranger Park Nursing Home.

Ernie and Carolyn Covey of Georgetown are supposed to be in our part of the world sometime this week.
