DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XI

Angie Gillis, yellow-haired, petite and winnowed, put her hand on Bill O'Dare's shoulder. "He's nice, Bill," she begged. "Don't be that way!"

He frowned at her. A tall young man with the dark eyes of the O'Dares; the crest of dark brown hair, he was good to look upon. He had discarded the blue jeans of his daytime calling for a neat dark gray suit. His white shirt and polka-dotted tie were correct even if he had not been able to eradicate the traces of grime from his fingernails.

"You said," Bill reminded Angie, "It was all off between you and Stan. That he was going to see about the divorce when he went up to Cleveland."

Angie made her ready little voice sound plaintive. "I know I did, she lied. I meant it, too. But Stan hasn't got the money. It costs money to get a divorce."

Bill scowled, pushing the white china saltcellar back and forth across the shiny white table-top. Angie lifted a thick white cup and drank her coffee, without interest. It was hot. It was very hot. Files buzzed annoyingly around the restaurant door. The heat of a June afternoon shimmered over the street outside where one or two shabby cars were parked. "Let's get out of this dump," Bill muttered. "Let's get going."

Angie stared at him, affronted. "You were the one who wanted a bite to eat," she reminded him. "I didn't pick the place."

"I know. I know." Gruffly Bill demanded his check from the limp waitress. His strong jaw looked set as he paid it. The set of his shoulders was sullen. Angie, rousing her jutting mouth, pretended not to see.

They got into the rattletap car she had driven into Belvedere the day of Bill's arrest a month ago. Angie put one ridiculously small foot on "the starter. There was a clank of gears and the absurd vehicle chugged away in a cloud of dust.

"We should've taken a lunch and gone in swimming," Angie regretted, tooting her chariot along the road by the river. "We were saps not to think of it."

They passed the country club where two or three men in white linen with caps worn hind-side-foremost played golf. Beyond lay the pool, red and blue caps bobbing on the surface. A tall girl in a pale green suit did a swim dive.

Angie stopped the car. "Swill," she observed. "Wish I could do that," she peered across through the heat haze. "That's the Lawrence girl," she observed with relish. "But she brought that suit from Paris. She sure has swell clothes." Angie sounded envious. Bill wriggled uncomfortably.

"What's the matter? Don't you like it here?" Angie lifted an eyebrow in his direction. "It's nice and cool. Best place I've been today."

Bill was plainly out of sorts. He grunted, "Can't hang around here staring like kids outside a candy shop. People'll think we're crazy."

"Guess you don't like any of your friends to see you with me, that's what?" the girl said with-out rancor, starting the engine.

Bill's laugh sounded faintly disagreeable. "My friends! All the country club? There's a laugh!"

Angie said, "My Aunt Mollie told me the other day your father ran with all the big bugs when he was young. Said by rights your family belonged with that crowd without having it in the town paper. Monnie's got lots of friends. Dan Cardigan's only one of them."

"Sure I know. Give me one," Angie demanded, reaching over and taking the cigarette from his lax fingers. "Stingy!"

Bill looked at her piquet profile. "You're cute, do you know it?" he demanded. "You're a lot better tempered than most of those girls in that country club gang, even though they—"

"Finish it, big boy. Say they think I'm dirt and something to wipe your feet on. It's no news to me."

"I didn't mean that," Bill said awkwardly.

Angie's laugh hadn't a trace of malice in it. "I know all about them," she said. "When they come into the shop they don't know I'm there. It's all right with me. I'm not sensitive. I wrap up their chocolate nougat and give them the ice just like they do me. Specially that Lawrence girl. She sure thinks she's the cat!"

"Why don't you like her?" Bill inquired idly.

Angie considered this. "I don't know—exactly," she said slowly.

"Guess maybe it's because she's just a fake. What I mean, she butters everybody up and makes the person she's with think he's the cat, too. Then she gets her claws going and oh, kitty, kitty, meow she scratches!"

"She's been friends with Monnie for some time. Monnie likes her—I guess," Bill said.

"She must have a reason then," Angie decided. "Friend of mine works at their house. Maybe I mentioned her—"

Bill winced. He was no snob but it was a little galling occasionally to realize that the girl he loved and whom he intended to marry consort with the servants of the people he'd once known as equals.

Angie caught the expression in the fall of her eyes and realized instantly what it meant.

"You don't like that," she said shrilly. "You don't like having me know Hietty Link who's the Lawrence girl's maid."

"It's nothing to me," Bill assured her crossly. "It's none of my dog-gone business."

"Well, she's a funny kid," Angie pursued. "She's got a case on the Lawrence's chauffeur. Jib Hewitt—guess you know him. She goes to the movies a lot and tries a Garbo or a Jinx. Now she's she's on earth, hardly. Now she's got some nutty idea that the girl friend is trying to vamp Jim and she's all hot and bothered about it."

"You mean Candara?" Bill asked incredulously.

Angie nodded.

"Might not be far off," she said. "Jimmy's pretty swell looking in that trick suit with the brass buttons. Anyhow Hietty thinks he is and that makes it so. She's a one-side girl. If Miss Lawrence is smart, she'll lay off. Hietty might go funny on them and it wouldn't be so good."

She interrupted herself to say swiftly, "Look, Bill, you better let me drop you by the station. Stan's coming over tonight to talk about things. Maybe we'll get something settled."

"You've known that all afternoon and you only just sprang it on me now," Bill accused, black as a thunder cloud. As Angie slowed the car he jumped out and stood beside her, very tall and grim and angry, above her white beret and flying yellow curls.

"Sure I did but you had such a grouch I didn't dare," she informed him with insouciance. She was pretty in a candy-box way, this girl with the stary eyes and preposterously plucked eyebrows. She had a gleam, a sly appeal in spite of the cheap sycery of her outfit.

"All right," Bill growled. "If that's the way you feel about it, Nobody's going to two time me and get away with it."

He lifted his hat. Without another word he strode away in the direction of the station. The afternoon train was just pulling in. As Angie watched he jumped casually aboard.

She sat there, a small, ingenious looking creature in summer white, staring after him. Angie swallowed hard. Once. Twice. "Oh, Bill," she wailed under her breath. "Why did you do that?"

"Never again such a Bargain"

NO NEVER AGAIN!

Any time you let a ridiculously low price or big promise induce you to buy some packaged product which you have never used or even heard about, you run the risk of disappointment.

Even though you are told the product is "just as good" as the one you like and always ask for, it pays to be careful. Many unfamiliar packages urged upon you today contain cheap merchandise!

Not all manufacturers are guilty of producing it. The blame rests on a few, who, in an over-ambitious attempt to make your dollars buy more quantity, have sacrificed quality in their goods.

But in spite of today's bewildering array of "would-be" bargains, it is still easy to buy wisely and get your money's worth.

Now, as always, you'll find the real bargains among the brands you know—by your experience, through their advertising, or by the reputation of their makers. Many manufacturers of these dependable brands have recently announced worthwhile price reductions—honest reductions based on lower manufacturing costs, not on lower quality.

EVILS OF WAR
 First Place—Ruth Mellinger
 War! A monstrous, omnivorous bird hovering over civilization, dreadful claws distended, hungry insatiable mouth dripping with gore, blood-shot eyes, alert, all-seeing, waiting inexorably to swoop down upon his prey, devour it, leaving nothing but devastation, utter, incalculable ruin in his wake.
 There can be nothing good, nothing beautiful about this monster—no demands millions of lives, billions of dollars, an insatiable sum of materials and ideals to satiate his hunger, who pays for them with destruction, agony, misery.

 Voltaire, French philosopher, has said, "War is the greatest of all crimes. It is forbidden to kill; therefore all murderers are punished unless they kill in large numbers and to the sound of trumpets."
 Those sacrificed on the field of battle are not the only victims of the monster. Women and children denied death must live without fathers, husbands or brothers to provide a livelihood.
 Those men spared at the front are otherwise impaired. There is not one man among the millions who take up arms in defense of their country who is not disaster-only, but also permanently, incurably affected by war, physically, mentally, physically.

 What man can live a sane, ordered life in an insane, disordered country, disrupted by war, himself likewise affected? No man who has experienced the nightmare of war, who has seen the blood of kinsmen, friends spilled carelessly, who has seen death reaching out for him, can embrace life naturally again, with its platitudes. "When those who must do the fighting have the right to decide between war and peace, history," no longer be written in blood," says Will Durant.
 Herbert Spencer, English philosopher once said, "War is merely wholesale cannibalism; and there is no reason why it should not be classed with cannibalism and unequivocally denounced. Until war is outlawed and overcome, civilization is a precarious interlude between catastrophes; the possibility of a high social state fundamentally depends on cessation of war."
 "As foreign war diminishes, domestic brutality decreases; monogamy replaces polygamy because the life-tenure of men becomes almost equal to that of women; the status of women rises, and the emancipation of women becomes a matter of course."
 "His name to be dominated by war, a thousand centers of economic development arise, and power is beneficently spread over a large portion of the members of the group."
 "Peace at home becomes the first need of prosperity, and as capital becomes international, and a thousand investments cross every frontier, international peace becomes a necessity as well."
 The present world-wide economic depression, a condition inevitably succeeding war, traces its origin to the World War. Just so long as there continues to be war, world-wide, stable prosperity will be utterly impossible.
 No nation can truthfully be called civilized until it has irrevocably banished war.

Token Presented "Mother" Zinn At Methodist Church
 At the morning service of the First Methodist church a special Mother's Day program was carried out. Members of the Rainbow Girls, accompanied by their fathers, were special visitors at the service, which was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. Richard Spann, whose subject was "Mothers, New and Old." Special Mother's Day music also was featured.
 "Mother" R. E. Zinn, nearly 87 years old, oldest charter member of the First Methodist church, was honored at the morning service. She was presented with a beautiful hydrangea as a token from the church for her untiring devotion as a member and worker of the church. Rev. Spann made the presentation, while A. G. Hall, chairman of the usher committee, delivered the flower to Mrs. Zinn.
 "Mother" Zinn, also was an attendant at the Men's Bible class at 9:45 o'clock, which was attended by many mothers of members. Each was introduced.

TRUE AMERICANISM
 Second Place
 Jewell Gifford, Vinson, Texas
 We call ourselves Americans, the people of cultivation, scattered over an immense territory, communicating with each other by numerous methods, brought together under the same government and same feeling of patriotism. How can we call ourselves Americans when our fathers and our mothers were Scotch, Irish, Dutch, and English? New laws, a new mode of living, and a new social standard has regenerated us and made us true Americans and whatever our forefathers may have been does not concern us at all in the present.
 Here in this great land of ours man is free and equal, each enjoying the same rights in a nation that practically feeds the world. The privileges of equity causes every one to realize his responsibilities toward his government. It is this capacity for sympathy and mutual understanding, which must lie at the basis of all really successful movements for a better government and better standards of living. With our freedom dangers from religious antipathy is dead. This is one reason our forefathers came to America; that they might be free to worship as they wished. It will remain the same way on down through the ages. People do not wish to worship in a way in which they have no faith or belief.
 The knowledge of the language and love of kindred and friends as well as protection of the government has caused the average American to be loyal to his country. Having the knowledge that he can secure work whereby to provide for his family and use the protection of his government for his life, liberty, and prosperity, he is more than willing to answer the call of his country. If there should be a war and he is called to the front to fight for his country a true American is willing to answer that call. He is loyal to his government in all respects, and never betrays the secrets of the nation.
 The true American typifies the very qualities of self-reliance, self-command, hardihood, capacity for work, power of initiative, power of obedience, patriotism, and good citizenship. Without these traits he would hardly be called a true American. With the absence of these traits would be found selfishness, laziness, and disobedience resulting in a crude form of government.
 Therefore the true American is really a new man who acts under new principles. He must entertain new ideas and also form new opinions. He has passed from idleness, servile dependence, and useless labor to toils of a different nature which is rewarded by ample subsistence. All of these qualities goes into the making of a true American.

EVILS OF WAR
 Third Place—Lucille Carroll
 War is not a calamity like a tornado or an earthquake but an evil for which man is responsible and which it is his duty to prevent.
 To kill an individual is murder. Is it not murder to kill in mass? War is murder!
 With the exception of vice, nothing in the world is as wasteful as war and the preparation for it. The world war cost three hundred and thirty-seven billion dollars in addition to the terrific loss of twenty-six million soldiers and civilians dead from violence, disease, and starvation. Seventy-two cents of every dollar of federal tax goes to wars, past and future!
 All governments claim that they want peace, but if their comparative expenditures in preparation for peace and for war may be taken as an index of their desire, they want war six hundred times more.
 Organized slaughter, we realize, does not settle a dispute; it merely silences an argument. Couldn't there be an easier way to settle an argument? Why not settle by arbitration?
 War is like a great dark cloud which comes over us when we are most unware. It steals away the youth of our land, destroys our sosidious propaganda sheet for whatever government happens to be out at the time. They set forth facts only to color them for their own purpose.

 What means Mr. Roosevelt's tariff policy for one thing will get no breaks in South America now.
European
 Nobody has brought out that these screams from Europe about us defaulting on gold payments for Liberty Bond interest are typical European, debt propaganda. Even Britannia has raised her voice about it. Her press and public recommend default of her June 15 war debt payment because we refuse to pay foreign holders of our Liberty bonds the current quarter's interest in gold as against domestic payments in dollars.
 The truth is that not more than $50,000 interest is due all our foreign bond holders. That is a careful estimate by our Treasury officials. They have no way of knowing exactly but they figure that about eight million of Liberty Bonds are held abroad. Roughly the annual interest would be around $200,000.
 We shall pay that interest in current dollars. That means about a 20 per cent reduction from gold at a maximum. Yet we have already offered to accept a 28 per cent reduction on June 15 debt payments if made in silver at the prevailing market price.
 Also our amount due Britishers alone for this quarter can not be more than $30,000. They owe us seventy-five million June 15.
 Thus our exchange difference of possibly $4,000 is being urged as an excuse for defaulting on seventy-five million.
Britain
 The reason the British had a sudden change of heart on the tariff truce "as they were becoming alarmed about the feeling of our officials here" by showing their big boys said nothing about it openly but the British heard by sub-terranean diplomatic channels that we felt as if we had been sold down the river by MacDonald.
 With that feeling prevalent high up here they had a good chance of getting treated as roughly as possible on war debts.
Cuba
 The sweetest sugar sources have been tipped that the Tariff Commission row was straightened out a few days ago. The report coming shortly to the President is supposed to be based on the allotment idea. Cuba would be restricted to certain importations for the next few years, probably three. She would be required to take the differential, the tariff would not be lowered on raw, but adjusted on refined.
 That is supposed to be accompanied by a private understanding between Mr. Roosevelt and President Machado of Cuba that he will order a free election within six months and not become a candidate himself.
Warburg
 The man who has access to the inner chamber of Mr. Roosevelt's ear on international financial matters is James Warburg. He is head of the International Acceptance Bank, New York, and knows his pounds, francs and yen.
 He did most of the inside advising about going off the gold standard. Those he knows rate him as one of the closest financial advisers of the Administration. His father was the late Paul M. Warburg, the only man who called the turn on the depression.—Well at least one of the few.
 He supplements the theories of Prof. Moley with practical knowledge.
Notes
 The Cornell boys are scrapping about dollar devaluation. Two who helped work on the government policy are Professors Warren and Pearsons of the Ithaca university. Now comes another member of the same faculty, Prof. O. J. Wheatley howling about what that policy will do to the farmers.
 It only goes to show that even the fellows who teach this stuff do not know what it is all

Scientists Labor In Many Laboratories To Put Life Into Dead Tissues Of Man
 Cleveland Authority Succeeds In Causing Fibres To 'Grow', And Auto-Synthetic Cells To Appear Under Microscope
 NEW YORK (UP)—Scientists patiently scrutinizing tiny bits of living matter beneath their microscopes in widely scattered laboratories are trying to piece together scraps of knowledge into a pattern of creation.
 Their goal, probably never to be realized in their own generation, are two—the creation of life; the perpetuation of life. Day by day, with infinite and wearisome repetition, they are conducting experiments in New York in Cleveland, in Moscow, with living tissue and with dead tissue mysteriously revived by their salts and solutions.
 Their methods vary but their experiments are headed in one direction—to create or keep alive the pulsations of cells, spelling life.
 Although, in cold scientific phraseology, "no recent results from experiments with Auto-Synthetic cells warrant new deductions," the work of Dr. George Crile and his assistants in Cleveland hold a front place in the work.
 Dr. Crile has produced cells regarded as a step midway between living and non-living matter. A solution of salts is placed in a tiny dish beneath a microscope. To this is added a bit of fat tissue, the two react. Tiny fibres "grow". Proteins are added to the solution and the Auto-Synthetic cells appear. They resemble real cells, but are much simpler. They behave like living cells. They grow by absorbing chemicals. When they reach a certain size, they split in parts, like the Amoeba and other simple-celled animals.
 This is not, of course, creating life. But it is an approach.
 In New York, a fragment of tissue cut from the heart of a chicken embryo was placed in a test tube several years ago and constantly nourished. Since that day it has doubled its volume each 48 hours—only to be cut down by the scientists.
 Dr. Alexis Carrel, the scientist conducting this experiment, has concluded the only thing that keeps men from living forever is the possession of a brain and nervous system.

Gold
 The inside tip is that the government will try to the effect of publicly on a few prominent gold hoarders before attempting legal action. Some lawyers still think they can block government efforts to penalize their clients directly but are a little uneasy about reactions from a published blacklist.
 The situation calls for showdown. There are rumblings of discontent from those who turned in their gold and the rumblings will become a hasty howl unless action is taken soon. The Treasury situation can not afford to lie down on the job.
Utilities
 Utility interests are secretly pleased with what their emissaries put over in Congress. The Muscle Shoals bill as it came from the House is marked with the handwriting of the government would be compelled to buy or condemn private transmission lines before building its own, which opens a chink for endless litigation.
 The lobby men report doubt of accomplishing much in the senate. Senator Norris is in a position to tell the world what's what. In that case the main objective will be to lock an agreement between senate and house conferees.
 The Washington utility lobby also sneaked over a moral victory on the change in the electricity tax. The idea was to shift the whole three per cent from the consumer to the producing companies but some far- inside maneuvering left the consumer with one per cent still to pay. In Pennsylvania all extra utility taxes will be legally the consumer's affair. Lobbying does pay. National and state.

Investigation
 Renewal efforts are being made to induce the senate committee to take on certain aspects of the investigation on the ground that it would shake public confidence to find out how nearly broke some erstwhile financial giant are. The advice may be taken as regards organization. It is not likely to be as regards individuals.
 The general drift of the investigation will be to put are the public mind or permanent change in the financial set-up by showing clearly how the money wizards have made just as bad mistakes as anyone else.
 Kuhn, Loeb & Co. will reveal the set-up of their business to the senate committee if they are asked. Most of their capital is in the form of trust funds established by former and present partners for members of their families. Some of these trusts date back four gen-

Meat, Potatoes and Gravy

MANY a meal is built around these three standbys—meat, potatoes and gravy. Invariably they are the first dishes that come to your mind as you plan your dinner. But in spite of their hunger-satisfying and nourishing qualities, this time-honored triumvirate can become monotonous unless it is supplemented by other dishes. However, it is often a problem to find these "side dishes" in your own head. Of course you can quiz your neighbor, or ask the members of your family what they would like. But even this source of information is often lacking in ideas.

The thing to do is read the advertisements in your newspaper. Every day your local markets display their foodstuffs on those printed pages. You'll read of new vegetables and fruits that have "just arrived." Your appetite will be aroused by the tasty creations of national food manufacturers. With pencil and paper you can make your market list and menus before you step out of the house.

Speaking of monotony, consider this. There are 11 different cuts of beef, 9 cuts of veal, 7 of lamb, 10 of pork; there are at least 20 different breakfast cereals sold in every store, 16 different canned vegetables, 6 canned fruits, a dozen or more canned meats and fish, numberless varieties of cakes and crackers. Why should there be monotony in meals with such a variety of foods available at your store and so many of them advertised in your paper?

Zelma Chadd Is Wed To Phil Berry

Couple Now On Honey-moon In Colorado, To Live In Stanton

Of interest to Oklahoma and Texas friends was the marriage of Miss Zelma Chadd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Chadd, 829 W. Symmes street, Norman, Oklahoma, and Phil A. Berry, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Berry, Cisco, Texas.

The ceremony was solemnized in the home of the bride's parents in Norman, Okla., Saturday morning, May 13, at 9:30. The couple stood before an improvised altar of white wedding gates entwined with maiden hair fern and pink and white rose buds. The house was decorated throughout with May baskets of roses.

Miss Mary Allgood sang "O Promise Me," accompanied by Mrs. A. N. Evans, who played "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin for the professional, and "To A Wild Rose" during the ceremony. The vows were read by Dr. A. Norman Evans, pastor of the McFarlin Memorial Church of Norman.

The bride was attractively gowned in a dress of white mousseline de soie. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held for the guests. The bride's table was centered with a wedding cake flanked with small baskets of pink roses.

Assisting the bride in the dining room were her sisters, Mrs. Leo Smith, Mrs. Mack McGee, and Mrs. Chas. Doolittle.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Berry left for a motor trip to points in Colorado. For travel, the bride wore a navy suit with white accessories.

Mrs. Berry is a graduate of East Central Teachers College, Ada, Okla., where she was a member of Pi Kappa Delta. She has been employed in the public schools of Big Spring for several years.

Mr. Berry is a graduate of Rice Institute, Houston, and is a prominent lumberman of Stanton, Texas, where the couple will make their home.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Mack McGee, Holdenville, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Berry, Cisco; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Doolittle, McAlester, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Smith, Ada, Okla.; and Al Houston, Stanton.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Burning of the Books

The bonfires lighted in Germany by the Nazis have not of course, destroyed all the books that displease the Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment. They have merely destroyed a few samples of those books. The invention of printing press has made it forever impossible that any government, no matter how thoroughgoing, or that any new barbarian invasion, however destructive, should again extirpate any part of the intellectual heritage of mankind. There is no longer any danger that the body of learning will be mutilated as so much of the learning of the ancient world has been through fires and earthquake and carelessness and fanatic zeal. Of each work too many copies exist and they are too widely distributed.

The bonfires are, as the Nazis have carefully informed the world, meant to be symbolic. No one will doubt it. They are indeed highly symbolic. They symbolize the moral and intellectual character of the Nazi regime. For these bonfires are not the work of schoolboys or mobs but of the present German government acting through its Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment.

And what is it that they symbolize? The Nazis are, as the Nazis have carefully informed the world, meant to be symbolic. No one will doubt it. They are indeed highly symbolic. They symbolize the moral and intellectual character of the Nazi regime. For these bonfires are not the work of schoolboys or mobs but of the present German government acting through its Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment.

must conquer somebody, and the cupidity of those Nazis who want jobs, is a kind of lightning rod which protects Europe. It may serve as a temporary substitute for the glorious victories over all of Germany's foes that Herr Hitler has promised his followers.

That the situation is highly charged with danger is clear. For even if one believes, as I am hopeful enough to believe, that international war is not imminent, the fact has to be faced that Hitler's Germany is preparing for war in the future. How that war is to be prevented is the problem that confronts the world. The French and the Poles know that the Nazis intend to retrieve the lost territories, that they mean to re-arm, that they are putting the youth of Germany under military discipline, and that they are seeking to extirpate all traces of the will to ham & Philips, Druggists—adv.

That Hitler does not desire and will not provoke a European war in the near future we may very well believe. A war would destroy him. His army is no match for the armies of the French the Poles and the Czechs. His Nazi battalions are fit only to overpower the unarmed and defenseless opposition within Germany. To fight a war Hitler would have to put arms into the hands of the millions of German workmen, and that is something which unless he can win their loyalty, would be an act of suicidal lunacy. Hitler's Germany is utterly isolated. It would get no help from Italy. It has so deeply outraged the sentiment of the British people that it has thoroughly estranged them.

Though the situation is one in which by every sane calculation the Nazis are powerless except within their own frontiers, it is not possible to feel entirely certain that the peace will be preserved. The danger that hangs over Europe lies in the fact that the most energetic of the Nazi leaders are in a mood of mystic exaltation and feel that they are invincible and infallible. When men are in such a mood they often do not know that two and two makes four. They are unable to see the realities. There is the danger, to put it plainly, that under the influence of mob feeling and the fumes of their own rhetoric, they will go mad and attack someone who has power to strike back.

How great this danger is no one can be certain, for no one can be quite certain as to just how far the hysteria will run. The hope that it will not run to the point of an explosion on the frontiers would seem to rest on two things; the strength of the French army, and the persecution of the Jews. The French army will, for the time being, restrain all those in Germany who have not taken complete leave of their senses. The persecution of the Jews by satisfying the lust of the Nazis who feel they

Drapes To Be Hung Soon In Girl Scout Hut In City Park

The furnishing of the Girl Scout hut at the City Park is slowly progressing says Mrs. Charles Koberg. The drapery committee, composed of Misses R. M. Smith, Fred Stephens and Koberg, have the drapes ready to hang but the hut lacks other furnishings, except benches and tables.

Mrs. Koberg asks again that anyone with some furniture to donate get in touch with any of the Girl Scout leaders, because the room is large and requires a good deal to make it comfortable.
