WASHINGTON
By George Durso

Republican leaders are predicting privately that NRA is going to fail.

When the great social and economic experiment was launched, they shook their heads but withheld judgment. Developments of the past week have led them to believe President Roosevelt tore off a bigger bite than he can chew.

Carrying their prognostications further, the G. O. P. chiefs anticipate a move toward more open and complete White House dictatorship than now exists as a direct result of the Blue Eagle's predicted tailspin.

If things work out as they expect, and in the interests of the nation it is to be hoped they are wrong, the Republican battle-line with Democratic incumbents already is drawn. One Republican whose high position in the Party entitles him to speak for it summed up what he and his colleagues look for in January when Congress reassembles by saying:

"The Republicans are preparing to fight for maintenance of a stable government. It is going to be the old battle between conservatism and radicalism."

G. O. P. heads contend that by General Hugh Johnson's own gauge the attempted regimentation of industry is a failure. Johnson, they point out, said 6,000,000 men would be back at work by September 1. Unless there is a terrific spurt in reemployment in the next nine days NRA will fall far short of this goal.

They also look for the steel and coal industries to carry the National Industrial Recovery Act to the courts the first time an issue arises under their enforced codes.

Crystal-Gazing

When Congress reassembles you may expect to hear Republican orators attacking what they term the inconsistencies of the Roosevelt administration.

They will point to Secretary of State Hull and his constant championing of lower tariffs on the one hand. On the other they confidently expect to be able to cite increased tariffs and even embargoes which they say must go arm in arm with operation of NRA.

To illustrate the Republicans are now looking into the crystal and foreseeing what will happen in connection with the oil industry. The code imposed on oil, involving control of production and price-fixing, is based on domestic consumption. There will be no market for foreign oil if American fields are to be fully protected.

Therefore, say leaders of the minority party, President Roosevelt will be forced to place an embargo on foreign importations.

Fees

Although the clause has had little publicity there is a provision in NRA that specifically empowers the President to raise tariffs at will or shut off imports entirely. No limit is placed on the extent of tariff boosts, which the law adroitly calls "fees."

The act further instructs the President to raise tariffs whenever an industry proves that its compliance with a Blue Eagle code makes competition with foreign goods impossible without protection.

Republicans are positive that Mr. Roosevelt will be called upon very shortly to carry out this clause.

Moulder

Rather paradoxically, the G. O. P. also is preparing to take up cudgels for the consumer. Heretofore always a champion of big business and high prices the Elephant is going to trumpet about "unwarranted gouging of the public."

And finally, the old war cry against "government in business" is to be raised again.

All this is rather unpleasant reporting at a time when everyone is supposedly putting a shoulder to the wheel.

Yet it reflects accurately what outstanding men of the Republican Party are saying in the privacy of their offices.

One moulder of Party policy, writing in to headquarters, referred to NRA as "No Relief Again."

Out

Robert P. Lamont, Secretary of Commerce under Herbert Hoover, is on his way out as president of the Iron and Steel Institute if steel magnates recently here are to be believed.

Lamont, so the whispered story goes, was picked for the $75,000 job by higher-ups of U. S. Steel on the LUMBERTON, N. C. (AP)—Seven Lenoir county farmers were killed and three critically injured Tuesday when their tobacco truck crashed into the side of a Seaboard airline passenger train.

Bodies of three of those killed were strewn along the track for three hundred yards.

Haywood Smith, driving the truck, apparently did not see the train approaching the station here.

Bond Posted In Hijacking

Sanders Released On Bail Bruce Held For Grand Jury Action

Herman Sanders Sunday posted $5,000 bond and was released on robbery charges pending action of the 70th district court grand jury.

Capture of Sanders and Oliver Bruce after robbery of a bulk station manager was brought about by the constable department which made important arrests, then turned the case over to the sheriff's department.

Bruce was unable to make a similar bond.

National Code Is Studied By Cafe Men

Cafe men meeting Monday evening to review their recently drafted code let their original agreement stand unaltered except for a request for one minor modification.

They felt dish washers, in view of conditions of this section, should not be paid the minimum prescribed in the national code. All other wage minimums and conditions laid down in the "blanket" code were accepted.

Restaurant owners, it developed in the meeting are meeting difficulties in weeding out unfair competition. Some eating houses have refused to fall in line, they declare.

C. E. Hailcock, chairman of a steering committee, said safe men would probably meet at a later date to strengthen and perfect their organization.

Automobile Injuries Garden City Woman

Mrs. Will Hanson, elderly resident of Garden City, was resting well Tuesday in a Big Spring hospital after having been struck down by an automobile at 1400 Scurry street Monday afternoon.

Attendants at the hospital said she suffered six fractured ribs and painful bruises.

Lem Hilburn, employed by a concern near Midland, was driving the car when it collided with Mrs. Hanson. He reported immediately to the sheriff's department and remained in Big Spring Tuesday to await developments.

He is the son of A. J. Hilburn, long-time resident of this city.

R.F.C. Workers On City Jobs To Pick Own Gang Foremen

R.F.C. labor working on projects furnished by the city will draft one from their own ranks to act as foreman.

He will be responsible to R.F.C. officers solely for the amount of work done.

Foreman of the laborers will receive instructions from the city superintendent and will boss his gang on the job.

Practically all projects will be of the pick and shovel type.

Shortage Of Milk Looming In Big Spring

Big Spring now is consuming practically all milk being produced in the vicinity and unless rain occurs to improve conditions among dairy herds the city likely will be faced with a milk shortage, H. E. Howie, local manager of the Dairyland Creamery, declared Tuesday.

Mr. Howie said several dairymen, that is producers of milk in commercial quantities had gone out of business recently due to dry weather and lowered production of their herds.

The same situation exists at Midland, he said.

Members of the Ice Cream Manufacturers Association of the state, including Dairyland here, raised prices of vanilla ice cream 15 cents per gallon and that of fruit and flavored cream 20 cents per gallon Tuesday, Howie said.

Funeral Held In Dallas For Father Of Max S. Jacobs

Mr. and Mrs. Max S. Jacobs returned Tuesday morning from Dallas, where they were called by the death of Mr. Jacobs' father, I. Jacobs, which occurred Saturday night. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from the family residence in Dallas, with burial in Sareth Israel cemetery, Dallas, with Rabbi David Lefkowitz and Rabbi Brunawich conducting the services.

Mr. Jacobs suffered a stroke of paralysis early last Saturday and never regained consciousness. Death came Saturday evening about 7:30 o'clock.

I. Jacobs was born in Poland in April, 1857. He came to the United States in 1889, later locating in Wolfe City, Texas, where he entered the general mercantile business. As the years passed Mr. Jacobs' business grew, and expanded into several Texas towns. He retired from active business about twenty years ago.

Surviving are six children, three sons and three daughters, as follows: J. L. Jacobs, Plainview; Max Jacobs, Big Spring; A. H. Jacobs, Dallas; Mrs. Eli Karchman, Dallas; Mrs. Sam Aranson, Dallas; and Miss Bertha Jacobs, Dallas.

Miss Allyn Bunker and Mrs. Walter Hightower spent the week-end in Christoval.

Refinery At Pecos Damaged By Fire

PECOS—Fire believed to have started from leaking gas about the pipe stills did damage estimated at more than $10,000 to the refinery of the West Texas Refining company Sunday. Only the fact that there was an east wind prevented the fire from spreading throughout the million dollar plant.

Work of refinery employees kept the damage confined to one unit. No one was hurt in the blaze.

Style Pageant And Stage Show To Be Brought Here September 8

Friday evening, Sept. 8, promises to be the date of one of the foremost events of the fall season here. A Style Pageant with a brilliant stage show, "Heads Up", will be given at the Municipal Auditorium under auspices of the Big Spring Daily Herald with six leading merchants cooperating.

The stage show "Heads Up" featuring well known radio artists and orchestra will be presented as a supporting unit of the "Century of Fashion Revue" in which more than 30 living models will appear in more than 100 costumes.

Presenting the last word in early fall and winter fashions, The Hollywood Show, La Mode, Mellinger's, Albert M. Fisher Co., J. C. Penney Co. and Robertson's Men's Wear Shop are to cooperate with The Daily Herald in the revue.

Early Bird Leader Director With Jimmie Jefferies, the "round razer" of the Early Birds as master of ceremonies "Heads Up" swings immediately into a drama of fashion. Period costumes interpreting the mode of every decade from 1853 to 1933 will be shown on living models. Costumes are authentic reproductions taken from Vogue, Harper's Bazaar and Butterick. NRA Opposes Higher Prices For Jobbers

Cheaters Will Have Blue Eagle Taken Off Windows, Says Chief

WASHINGTON (AP)—A request from Hugh Johnson to prevent price increases by jobbers was put before the nation's retailers Tuesday at the opening of the formal hearing on their wage-lifting and work-shortening code.

The administrator said there would be no man-hunting connected with Blue Eagle provisions, but that if the recovery administration found cheaters it would "take the Blue Eagle right off their windows."

The retail code, embracing virtually all stores and shops in towns and cities in the country, except drug and food stores, affects more employers and employes than any other major business.

CHAPTER 46

Opening Foster's mail the next morning, Mary glanced through a letter that so attracted her attention that she read it again more carefully. She frowned, thoughtfully. It informed her that Roth, Mabry and company were offering a new stock to the public on March 15 at fifty dollars per share. Mary was accustomed to reading such statements; in fact, she had known of the new issue for a week. Roth-Mabry was a sound company, in good standing. There was, even now, a wide demand for the stock, before the issue date. It was already on the market on a when issue basis.

One idea flashed across her mind. Why might not this be a solution to the problem—Bonnie's problem. She had always wanted to try buying stock—but never dared. She had nothing to lose, at least, she couldn't lose the little she had managed to save.

But necessity is often a hard mistress. It compels people to do absurd and regrettable things, sometimes. Mary never would have thought of doing so hazardous a thing for herself. But Bonnie's happiness was in the balance. Even in her desperation for her sister, she had resolutely dismissed the thought of appealing to Martin for help. That would involve obligations to him which she could not assume.

This temptation mocked her, challenged her sportsmanship as well as her need. She could place her order for some of the stock now and hold it until the issue date without paying out a cent. From her experience and deductions she was pretty confident that with the popularity and demand of the stock, the price would surely rise to fifty-three or more by the fifteenth of the month. She could sell out before she had to pay for it, at some profit, anyway.

There was even a chance of a big profit. Many others did it—why couldn't she? Even if the stock advanced only one or two points, it would be that much more added to what she already had to help Bonnie. For once she would be a good sport. The chances were decidedly in her favor.

She picked up the morning paper, opened to the stock reports. Yes, there it was, "Wellmade Products—fifty dollars a share." The paper trembled in her fingers at the mere thought of the venture. Her next consideration was, how many shares would she buy? No use to take a timid few. That would do her no good. She made some rapid calculations on a pad and gasped at her own audacity.

Two hundred shares with a three-point profit would give her six hundred dollars. That, added to her four hundred would make a thousand for Bonnie. A five point rise would make that much on the stock, alone—no use to estimate higher. It was possible, but not probable. Her excitement mounted.

Two thousand shares at fifty dollars each would cost ten thousand dollars. Ah! that was a different matter. On March 15 she would own ten thousand dollars that she didn't have in the world.

But Wellmade Products was sure to rise at least a point by that time, and the demand for stock would be so great that she would have no difficulty in disposing of it. Hadn't she seen that happen over and over? She always had thought that if she ever had the money to back her in such a venture, she would be ready to risk the chance. So, why wait until she had the money—which might never be? She could make something now and let Bonnie have it. Then when Bonnie repaid her, she would have a nice nest egg with which to begin some real investing. She had a hunch that this was her chance. She could accomplish two results with one sporting gesture. Men played the market on hunches—well, she could, too.

She lifted the telephone from its cradle and dialed the number. Her voice quivered with excitement as she spoke her order. She felt like an adventurer starting out to sail the seven seas in a vessel that might sink at any moment—and she knew actually, that she was just as unwise.

Mary was somewhat reassured, however, when Foster arrived in town later and upon reaching the office, asked her to call several of his best clients and advise them to invest in Wellmade Products. Frasier was one of these. He placed his order for a thousand shares and made Mary feel as if her venture on two hundred shares was very conservative. The difference was that on March 15, Frasier would have the fifty thousand dollars to pay for his stock, while Mary would have only four hundred against her obligation of ten thou-and dollar. The following day was Saturday, and Bonnie insisted upon Mary coming out to Washoe for the week-end. That was because she wanted to know what Mary was doing to help her in her impasse—not prompted by any particular sympathy. She would just go to the office to talk with Mary when her husband was in town, for any unusual set of hers might arouse his suspicions.

The family had been to the Foster mansion once for dinner, but as Mom declared to Mary afterward, "It don't seem as if anyone could see that much space just to live in. I wouldn't feel at home at all in such a house." So it was not often that she saw her younger daughter these days.

Mary had been amused at the twins' behavior upon that occasion. For once, no disciplinary admonitions were necessary. The house, the servants, the dinner service and Ronald Foster, all eyed them to cherubig behavior. They didn't know quite what it was all about—that Bonnie had left their own home to stay in such a strange place, but it must be all right if Mom and Mary thought so. They were just too grateful that they were privileged to return to the cramped, cheery place where they could shout and whistle, romp and leap over bothersome staircases if they chose.

Bonnie sat her car for Mary on Saturday at noon and the butler ushered the guest to her suite of rooms. Mary had attended none of Bonnie's many parties, for she preferred not to interfere with her sister's social connections. She couldn't afford to live up to her pace and saw no reason for meeting those who did. Instead of grasping at the slightest pretense to claim a right to her wealthy sister's favor and hospitality, Mary shunned the two very natural claims that were hers.

Mary did not share Mom's opinions about Bonnie's house. It was exactly the kind of home that she would like and appreciate. Her tastes would have differed from Bonnie's, somewhat, but the luxury and beauty of it appealed to her innate instincts. Looking about the handsomely appointed rooms to which she had been shown, Mary could scarcely believe that she had just taken a ridiculous chance with her life and honor to provide the owner of all this luxury with a paltry thousand dollars. It was as absurd as some impossible fairy tale. Hand-carved Spanish-period furniture, brocaded hangings, deep-plum carpet—a suite of rooms almost as big as the Vaughn house, for the use of one guest.

She had removed her hat and coat when Bonnie fluttered in, all sweet concern for her sister's comfort. She wore gold-brocaded pajamas with wide, flapping trousers and a sleeveless coat.

"Hello, old dear," she kissed her perfunctorily. "Have a nice trip out? Now make yourself at home won't you? I guess you have everything to make you comfortable." Then, changing her amiable tone to one of anxiety, "Have you done anything, Mary?"

"Yes, honey, I think we can manage it all right, if luck is with us at all."

"What do you mean?"

"Never mind how I am going to manage. But I think I can get enough together by the fifteenth to tide you over until the first. Promise me, Bonnie, that you will stop this foolishness and get even on your accounts. There is really no reason why you should be in debt and waiting a month ahead for your allowance."

"Of course, you wouldn't understand," Bonnie complained, but she did not advise Mary to "attend to her own little peanut stand," this time.

Bristow Starts Grid Training

Candidates Start Drills

New Suits Issued To Large Group Of Hefty But Green Men

High school football players, some of whom already have been working out, started preliminary exercises under direction of Coach Obie Bristow Monday afternoon on the old work-out field in Washington Place.

Kickers, passers and center candidates get the call, but the drills are open to all. About a dozen hunkies rallied around their pilot yesterday for the initial light drill. Bristow arrived Monday morning and several dozen ambitious youngsters are expected to crop up as the news goes the round.

Brand new black and gold suits have been unpacked and are being dished out at a rapid rate every day. The line will not be a major worry for the time being at least, as a group of hefty reserves will make a formidable wall. Bob Flowers will fill the pivot position in the place of the veteran Dyer who will boost the Baylor Bears.

There are a number of likely prospects for the backfield positions, such as Cooks, Haro, Woods, Cagle, Jones, Thurman and Neal. However, all of the material is green. The best pick for the back field now would place "Bucket" Hare, Clinton Jones, Barney Thurman and George Neal.

George Brown will return to coach the line which will average better than six feet in height and around 170 pounds. Ollie Cordill and Jack Dean will hold down the end positions. If present plans mature Jack will tackle on the defense and keep his end position on the offense to snag passes. The Steer mentor is working hard for passing perfection.

Tether will return to tackle "the other tackle" position still doubtful. Waggoner, Thomas, Felton Smith and Good Graves are slated for guard duty. Sam Flowers will be an understudy to his brother Bob in the center section.

WHIRLIGIG—

possibility Mr. Hoover would be elected. Since the New Deal arrived the industry seems to have decided the Chicago millionaire doesn't speak their language any more.

One of the hardest-boiled codersigners from another industry ran into Lamont the other day. The first gentienna had won General Johnson's admiration when he profanely rose to refute, with facts, aspersions on his alleged laxity in whipping a code into shape.

"Why," queried the new Blue Eagle of Lamont, "don't you tell me blankety-blank-blank-blank?"

"I don't use that kind of language," responded our erstwhile Commerce Secretary.

"Well, you ought to," was the parting reply.

Disparity—
Shipping men have served private notice on General Johnson they will withdraw from the code if something isn't done about the disparity in working hours between private plants and Navy Yards.

The shipbuilders agreed to a 32-hour week. The navy is working its men 40 hours.

Private builders say their men won't stay with them if they can get eight more hours of pay week.

Notes—

Prof. Rex Tutwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, is in the Middle West inspecting the wheat fields. At the time he left Washington he was complaining of the climate here because of his hay fever. He probably will come back thoroughly sold on rigid control of wheat production. The city desk of a local paper got a thrill the other night when a voice came over the "phone offering" details of the NRA shooting. No reporters were dispatched to General Johnson's office, however. It seems NRA in this instance stood for National Rifle Association. The marksmen have called themselves NRA since 1871. A reporter covering National Recovery Administration summed the current situation up neatly when he said: "Things have now reached the objecting, squawking, chiseling stage."

Poker—

The government added a large leaf to its laurels at poker last week.

The occasion was the collapse of the grain market to the maximum limit allowed as soon as prices were unpegged on August 18th. It took a bid for the home team. "Val Street's" prophets of war were in full cry. Currency inflationists nearly wore out their tonals that day yelling for their remedy.

Next morning prices again dropped to the limit at the opening. The gloom deepened. But soon buying orders came in. Grain prices rocketed up nearly to their top limit. Stocks followed suit amid scenes of joy in customers' rooms. Life in Wall Street again became worth living. A mysterious pool which had saved the day.

There wasn't any pool. It was much simpler than that.

You see, the millers haven't liked the way things were going. They got no thrill at all out of dollar wheat.

So they organized a sort of informal buyers' strike—aided by speculators for the short side. Driving up of this normal source of buying of course made prices drop, which was what they wanted.

But just when things seemed to be getting out of hand Secretary Wallace made it known—that if any grain fanfare of publicity—without any grain prices kept on "ropping" the processing tax would be jacked up. The millers thought that over—it didn't take them long—and decided it was time to buy. The record is history.

One Wall Streeter commented "it just doesn't pay to try to bluff those birds in Washington. Not only do they know their poker but they have the most ace."

Sideights—

The -utcha were puzzled for awhile by an unprecedented influx of Germans who came to Holland and opened garages. It turns out they are Nazi agents. They can watch the roads and reach travelers with propaganda. The Dutch don't like it. Chicago certainly isn't the bright light from Wall Street while the grain excitement was on. No trader here dared breathe without learning the latest from Chicago. New York is pessimistic about the cotton price outlook. Says the only thing for Washington to do is breed bigger and better boll weevils.

Police Chief Bitten While Rescuing Woman From Dog At Arlington

ARLINGTON (UP)—Lentle Lovell, former chief of police, was bitten by a dog, believed rabid, here Monday when he attempted to rescue a 70-year-old neighbor from the animal.

Hearing Mrs. Joss Coke's screams, Lovell rushed to her back yard where the dog was "ting her on the arm. When Lovell started for the dog it turned on him.

Without weapons, he choked the dog to death but before it had bitten him on the cheek. A passer-by, who ran to Lovell's aid was bitten on the leg. His name was not learned.

The dog had bitten a six-year-old boy the afternoon before police said. They investigated, they said, and although the dog did not appear to be rabid at the time, its owner promised to keep it tied.

In measuring the worth of your telephone, don't overlook incoming calls

When your telephone rings, someone may have a message of vital importance to you.

In measuring the worth of telephone service, consider the importance of incoming calls, as well as the ones you make. An employer may wish to notify an unemployed member of your family that a job is open... it may be the druggist saying that he now has the dye you wanted... a friend who will be unable to meet you at the time and place agreed upon.

Incoming calls alone often justify the few cents a day that your telephone costs.

SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

Pool—

A huge pool to support the commodity markets was in fact discussed last week. It was to be a sort of commodity investment trust. The idea had backing in both New York and Chicago.

The Investment Trust angle would have run afoul of the Securities Act, which requires twenty days' notice. Some of the boys thought the emergency could be met by a sort of gentlemen's agreement for the participants all to purchase at the same time. It might have worked if all the parties had been gentlemen. Secretary Wallace's intervention made it unnecessary to put them to the test.

Dollar—

At the same time that grain prices were pulling an about-face there was a little selling of the dollar from inspired sources. Of course it was very unofficial and the amount involved was small. But the exchange market is so thin that it doesn't take much volume to move it. Result: the dollar began to slip again in terms of the pound and the franc.

This delicate maneuver neatly took the wind out of inflationists' sails. What more could they ask than rising prices and a falling dollar?

Inflation—

Inside New York leads that definite plans have been laid to make the hollowness of inflation talk apparent in a short time. They say that when inflation comes it won't come in connection with conservation. Publicity for the real article is no part of the picture. Some local observers go even farther. They predict that inflation will be here two months before the dollar.

THE HIDDEN QUART

STAYS UP IN YOUR MOTOR AND NEVER DRAINS AWAY

CONOCO

You may at times forget to add a needed quart. This slip of memory may be forgiven, if you use Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, for the "Hidden Quart" extends its protection to cover the lapse, and gives extra miles to safely reach the next Red Triangle Station.

This exceptional lubrication is brought about by the Germ Process—exclusively Conoco's patented formula. By adding extra oiliness and penetrativeness to the very highest quality motor oil, complete protection is achieved.

With all these qualities, the total cost of this oil is low... five miles for a penny.
