Local Students Included In Who's Who Among American High School Students

A total of three students from Santa Anna High School are included in the 31st annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1996-97.

Who's Who, published by Educational Communications, Inc., Lake Forest, Illinois, is the largest high school recognition publication in the country. Students are nominated by high school principals and guidance counselors, national youth groups, churches and educational organizations based upon students' academic achievement and involvement in extracurricular activities. Traditionally, 99% of Who's Who students have a grade point average of "B" or better and 97% are college bound.

The 31st annual edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students, 1996-97, published in 18 regional volumes, features over 700,000 students or just 5% of the nation's 14,000,000 high school students. They represent approximately 18,000 of the 22,000 public, private and parochial high schools in the country.

Who's Who students also compete for $200,000 in scholarship awards and participate in the publication's Annual Survey of High Achievers, an annual opinion poll of teen attitudes. The book is distributed to up to 15,000 high schools, colleges, universities and public libraries throughout the country.

Local students selected include:

Chris Cheaney, son of Rob and Sharon Cheaney and a freshman at Angelo State University.

Devin Brand, son of Karen and James Morris, and a freshman at South Plains College in Levelland.

Chris Boyet, son of Mac and Debra Boyet, and a junior at Santa Anna High School.

E+ Club Formed At Santa Anna Elementary

The Santa Anna Elementary recognized 11 students for perfect responsibility folders. These folders are kept with the students during the six week period for the purpose of teaching responsibility and calculating a conduct grade. Students pictured above who were recently awarded an E+ (excellence plus) for the second six week period are (not listed in order) Sierra Herrod, Bianca Dean, Heather McMillan, Shasta Bacon, Priscilla Guerrero, Laken Herrod, Adelaida Dean, Kristina Martin, Morgan Lacy, and John Frausto. Not pictured is Sierra Guerrero. These students were awarded an ice cream party for their accomplishments. The following students also won prizes in the six week drawing: Crystal Camacho—A/B Honor Roll—$10 cash; Angel DeLeon—responsibility folder—touch-tone phone; Shasta Bacon—perfect attendance—35mm camera; and Amber Squyres—A honor roll—stereo headphones. The sixth grade class is responsible for organizing the six week assembly and handing out awards to the winners. They also do the prize drawings for the four award area.

Karthausers Make Return Visit To Africa

By David and Margaret Karthaus

As soon as we cleared customs we were greeted by Abdul, our favorite Kenya driver, and Charles representing the Wildlife Safari office. Charles took all of our baggage that we would not need until at least Saturday to the Serena Hotel in Nairobi where it would be checked and waiting for us when we arrived there Saturday. Abdul helped us load our luggage into the land rover that was ready for our trip to Amboseli. Since there was just the four of us, we were quickly underway. Margaret did stop in a money changing place and converted some traveler's checks into Kenya shillings so she would be able to shop in case an opportunity presented itself before we got to the hotel in Amboseli.

We drove straight south for about one and a half hours on the main road to Tanzania. We took a left turn and followed the border east-bound. From here we would be driving on dirt roads the rest of the way. After about one hour, we drove onto an old lake bed that reminded David of the Bonneville Salt Flats that are used for his speed auto races. The lake used to be very shallow as the bottom is very flat. The lake bed provided the smoothest of the roads we had been on in Kenya. As soon as we hit the lake bed, we started seeing wild game. Most of the occupants had one eye peeled for wild animals and one eye for Mt. Kilimanjaro. We would be stopping just north of this fabulous mountain. The mountain was across the border between Kenya and Tanzania and our accommodations were about 25 miles north of the mountain. We did see a few glimpses of mountains through the heavy clouds around its peak. We arrived at Serena Amboseli Lodge in time for a late lunch.

Now that we had arrived at the Lodge our decision to drive straight here rather than rest in Nairobi seemed by far to be the best choice. Even though lunch was a little late, and we were somewhat tired from the traveling, we were extremely happy to be here. David could hardly eat in that he kept on running to the window to see if the clouds had moved away from Mt. Kilimanjaro. We hurriedly moved into our luxurious accommodations and got ready for our afternoon game run. All the Serena facilities that we had been in so far had excellent accommodations and it appeared they have very good chefs!

All four of us were very eager to get started and we were out at the land rover about fifteen minutes early. Abdul, our driver, has a good sense about reading both animals and people and he was at the land rover to greet us. The top had now been opened so that we could really see things. We quickly got into the vans with Jeannie and David picking their favorite safari places leaving Margaret and Mary to choose from the remaining spots. Jeannie likes to get the front left spot and David likes to have the whole rear seat. Margaret prefers the front right. This left the whole middle part for Mary. Mary was evidently in very bad company as she is very quiet and agreeable. The other three people are very much self assertive. Mary seemed to have a wonderful time but she was so quiet we couldn't tell whether she had nothing to say or didn't want to say what she thought. We thought she was having such a good time that she was very much like us last year almost overwhelmed with the beauty.

As part of our preparation for the trip we watched a special on PBS that talked of Cynthia Moss and her twenty+ years of research on the elephants in the Amboseli Game Preserve. She has been tracking and recording the almost twelve hundred elephants that visit or live in the park. The special that we had watched concerned one small family unit that was led by the matriarch named Echo. Echo had very unusual tasks that seemed to touch due to a large bend in one of them. The special had a large segment in it about Echo's offspring named Ely. Ely was so large that his legs were cramped during gestation and for two or three days after birth, it looked like he might die since he was unable to stand erect even to nurse. He fortunately was able to overcome this condition and was able to keep up with the herd.

As we left the lodge, Abdul took us on a course that took us very near Cynthia Moss' camp in Amboseli. As we approached the site, we saw more than a hundred elephants emerging from the trees onto the grassy plain. Of course, Abdul parked the rover in a very advantageous spot and the cameras started clicking away. Up till this time including the three days in England, David had carried the camcorder with him. It wasn't until after we got home and replayed the tape that he realized that the first time he had recorded anything was when Abdul stopped the rover for the elephants. Within the first five minutes you can hear David's low voice on the tape saying "There's Echo, and she has a new baby." Of course, the skeptics in the land rover thought it was wishful thinking on David's part and did not stop their picture taking to see. One of the short sequences on the video almost looks like a similar scene from the PBS program, showing Echo and her young calf leading her group.

As we review the video that we took, we see that we saw a larger number of a great variety of animals in Amboseli but we were so intent on seeing elephants that we seemed to forget what a wide variety there were. The Serena Lodge is on the very edge of a large swamp. The swamp is caused by the rains and snows from Kilimanjaro traveling some twenty-five miles underground and surfacing in this place. The builders chose a very good place to build their facility. From the verandah on the south side of the facility, you can see great distances into the swamp. All day you can see elephants and all other forms of wildlife coming to the swamp for food, water and a mud bath if the species is so inclined. Some species are not into wallowing in mud. To the extreme north of the eastern side of the verandah, there was a little stream and all through the day you could see the Masai young men bringing their cattle, sheep and goats to their stretch of water. The animals our drink their fill and frequently you could see the herders washing their single piece of cloth that served as their clothing. They usually waited for their only piece of cloth to dry before putting it back on. Evidently there are a large number of Masai using this facility as there was a constant stream of herds throughout the daylight hours.

Serena Amboseli Lodge will probably be our favorite place to visit because you can sit on the verandah twenty-four hours a day and see wild animals. The main attraction of game runs is that the land rovers get much closer to the animals.

Before and after a wonderful dinner at the Lodge we sat and watched the animals in the swamp. We did not stay up too long in that most of us were very tired from our all night flight last night. We made arrangements to meet at 6:30 the next morning which would be before sunup. The most interesting thing that we remember about the game run is that we saw over two hundred elephants before breakfast. The most interesting elephants that we saw this day was a male elephant in rut approaching a family group of females and young ones. We spotted these elephants just as we left the Lodge property. We did not observe these elephants very long as we were just getting started. Another group that was interesting we spied just before it was time to return for breakfast. There were two very old males that were probably beyond the age of mating. We watched the two fighting for dominance. It appeared that both of them remembered how but both were too feeble to do much more than go through the motions. It was almost as if you were watching the two bulls fights in slow motion. We watched for long time before they grew tired and walked off on their separate ways. We were very nearly late for breakfast but fortunately most of the facilities keep things ready for you no matter how late you are.

After breakfast we went on another game run that lasted until it was almost lunch time. We got back a little earlier than usual because Shadrach, the Lodge manager, was going to assist us in planting acacia trees. Shadrach feels that the loss of most of the trees in this area is due to the over population of elephants rather than all the other theories that are being circulated. Each of us planted a tree, having our picture taken while the planting was in progress and we all left a sizable donation to help care for and water the trees until they were able to survive on their own. Shadrach's business card had a small statement at the bottom of the card. It said, "The man with the green vision." Considering how well the trees were doing that were planted in the last 5 years, I think his theory appears to be the correct one. It is very nice to see that there are many people in this world, including business men, who are trying to conserve earth's resources. Other than watering, the extra help that Shadrach gives the trees is that he has constructed an electrified fence around the trees to keep the elephants and other animals from interfering with their growth in the early years.

That afternoon we left early on our game run. Our promised visit with Cynthia Moss was to start at 3 o'clock. We hurriedly ate lunch and Margaret bought all of Cynthia's books out of the hotel gift shop. We hoped that we could get her to autograph them if we really did see her. Abdul drove us to the place where we had seen the large group of elephants on our first game run and instead of taking a road that went around the edge of the trees he selected a trail that went straight into the forest. As we approached the edge of trees, we saw a sign saying "Private Road, Keep Out." Abdul never slowed the vehicle but wound his way through the trees and finally stopped at a tented camp site. We were in a very nice clearing right in the center of the dense forest.

As we were getting out of the van, the woman from the PBS special, Cynthia Moss, walked up to us and greeted us. When she saw that there was just the four of us she invited us to join her for tea in a tent covered open air sitting room. The four of us and a couple from Belgium (who were friends of Cynthia Moss) gathered around in a circle, sitting in camp chairs and stools and listened to Cynthia for the next two hours as she described the past, current and future studies that she and her colleagues have or were conducting. She graciously autographed all of the books that we had bought and explained to us how we could either name an elephant or adopt a family. Near the beginning of a question and answer session David asked about the possibility of seeing Echo and Ely yesterday. Cynthia assured us that Echo and her new calf had left her campsite about 5 p.m. yesterday afternoon and walked in the direction that would take them to cross our path. Now everybody believed that David had really seen Echo and her new calf. We had undoubtedly seen Ely but since he has just an extremely large 5 year old and he was normal in every way, we were not able to pick him out of the group.

From the center of Cynthia's camp you can see Kilimanjaro. As we were sitting there, the clouds dissipated and we got our first real good view of the snows. For the rest of our stay in Amboseli, Kilimanjaro was out of its cloud cover and David spent a lot of time oohing and aahing over its snow capped peaks. We were so elated from our visit with Cynthia that our game run that evening was somewhat of a blur. I'm sure we saw many animals but it was very difficult to separate the PBS special and our wonderful conversation with Cynthia Moss.

At dinner that night the four of us exchanged our impressions of our visit with Cynthia. It had exceeded all of our individual expectations. We spent a lot of time discussing the research foundation that the work it is involved and how we could possibly assist in the research. For a sizable donation, you could even give a name to one of the young calves or adopt a family similar to Echo's. It appears from Cynthia's research that elephants do have almost human emotion and further research projects are going to study elephant language. It appears from preliminary results that elephants do recognize one another by their voices rather than just the quality of the sound. Studies show that a call by the wrong elephant was not answered.

Dear Editor

Editor's Note: Our pictures of the Sealy hospital has stirred up interested in years gone by. One reader contributed this letter which appeared in the Santa Anna News in June 1984 as a reminder of what Santa Anna once was.

I am not a writer but I do have a good memory, although I could not get myself organized and get them on paper.

No offense to anyone. I love my old home town and its people after 55 years there.

At some point, dirt roads went along the railroad in Santa Anna.

The Depot was a favorite place to see the trains go by and marvel at the power of the Iron Horse.

The Baptists built a new church with meetings held in the summer under the tabernacle which was on ground where the grade school building now occupies. Horse drawn wagons and buggies brought people to worship. There were few cars.

The mountain has been a landmark and the sand pit furnished employment for some and money for owners. I recall one fatal accident up there.

The hospital was founded by Dr. T. Richard Sealy and was something for the town to be proud of. In due time it served a wide area.

Other Doctors I recall were Dr. Hays, Holland, Tyson, Strozier and Lovelady.

Our dentist was Dr. L. O. Garrett over the bank.

The drug stores were operated by Phillips and Hunter.

Mr. Sparks had a small dairy. Jim Robin dressed a beef often, and peddled it over town. Housewives appreciated that service.

Grocers were Roundtree, Marshall and sons, Kelly's, Hunter Mercantile Discerin, Boggus and Roscoe Hosch. Joe Harvey delivered for all stores.

The town water supt. was Mr. Scott. The town sanitation supt. was a Mr. McMerdoe.

Mr. Hicks and daughter, Mrs. Routh, had a cafe.

Near the cafe, a Mr. Hill had a barber shop. On to Main Street, Miss Mide had a ladies hat shop. Mrs. Harrod had the hotel upstairs, so was the Opera House.

The mercantile was Adams and Childers, and the Donham Cafe was in the block with C. K. Hunter Drug Store. Some I have forgotten in this block.

Joe Matthews and Bill Ford owned garages.

The Johnsons owned the telephone system. It was over the National Bank.

On Main Street were many small businesses, a few I can name, barber shops, variety store, offices for the cotton buyers, I. O. Shield I remember. The Post Office was moved on Main also.

There were bales of cotton coming in to the Simpson and Turners frequently.

D. R. Hill had a store in this block.

On the north side of Main I remember the Theatre and State Bank, with Parker Bond, Leman Brown on hand.

Across the street east was an First National Bank with B. Weaver, U. L. Grady, Clinton Lowe. By chance I have some old papers regarding the sale of the lot for this bank. They are dated 1902-1906.

Ragsdale Bakery, Loyd Burris' Men's Store, Phillips Drug, Mercantile and Kelly's furnished that block.

The Mobil station is the old location for a frame building where Dr. Tyson officed awhile. Next door was a Leather Shoe Shop operated by a Mr. Close then Jack Wilson Cafe.

The corner occupied by Ira Pump served Dr. Jim and Roscoe for a while in groceries. Next was Don Ewing Shoe Shop, Evans and West with a gas station, Jones Marshall Shop, Blacksmiths, Ed Jones Produce and Potter Produce, back to
