BLUE-BONNETS BLUE

By Leela Christie Barnes

Blue-bonnets blue, I'm thinking of you;
Down in the fairy dell where you grew.
Your beauty took my breath away;
Your fragrance fills my soul to-day.
Little velvet bonnets, the color of the sky,
I cannot describe you, no matter how I try;
In the early morning, all sparkling with dew---
Sunbeams danced before you, little Blue-bonnets blue.

You blossom for Texas, little Blue-bonnets blue,
In the glory gleaming color, that's always true.
Oh blossom beautiful, how we all adore you;
Flag of the Lone Star State floats so proudly o'er you,
The skies of Heaven seem to shed a brighter hue.
When your blossoms bless us, little Blue-bonnets blue.

Band Giving Excellent Entertainment

Show Improvement During Winter Evening Practices

For the past two weeks, the Municipal Band, has been playing on Monday and Friday evenings of each week in front of the Queen Theatre. The public is thoroughly enjoying these concerts and is looking forward to the entertainment during the coming long summer evenings.

The boys have through the courtesy of the merchants and with the unflinching efforts of the director, Will Mills, bought a quantity of new music, this past winter, met regularly and have done some splendid practicing.

Each merchant who has so generously contributed to the band fund, even though the money was unusually scarce, will be rewarded with the realization that he has invested in a worthwhile project. Mr. Mills also deserves his share of the credit and praise as the progress and stability of the organization is largely the result of his tact, loyalty and ability.

You are invited to the revival.

Revival Meeting at Baptist Church To Start Sunday

Spring and Fall Revival Planned By Baptists

Members of Other Congregations Especially Invited to Co-operate

It was decided in Conference last Sunday to begin our Spring Revival Sunday April 19, with local forces doing the work. We are planning now to have a late spring revival and a fall revival sometime in November, rather than the annual revival in July.

I am writing this word relative to the meeting for the information of all people in and around Santa Anna. First, I want to say that the reason for starting this meeting at this time is a deep conviction of a great spiritual need and a hungering for a special visitation from the Father by the congregation, or at least a part of the congregation. Secondly, I want to say, that we hope this meeting will be a blessing to all the people and we hereby invite those of all faiths and no faiths. Come to the service with a desire to be blessed of God and surely you will. We long to see a great revival which will burn all the dross and little sins and differences out of the hearts of the people and spread brotherly love throughout the community.

Especially do we invite the Christian people of other denominations to make this meeting. We are now making a call for all praying people who want to see an old time Holy Spirit, God-sending, sin-renewing, thorough-going revival, to come to the help of the Lord against the mighty forces of the devil.

If you have a heavy heart we want to help you find the comforter; if you have a sin depressed heart, we want to help you find the Christ, the sin-bearer; if you have a backslidden heart; we want to help you to hear the loving voice of the Heavenly Father as He calls to the prodigal. Above all else, we want to help the people with their problems, heart aches and discouragements to see the Light of Life. We invite you to come.

CITY ELECTION

Two city elections were held recently. One to elect three members of the school board and the other the Mayor and Commissioners.

W. H. Ragsdale and Stafford Baxter were elected to succeed themselves on the school board and J. Frank Turner was elected to succeed I. O. Shield who recently resigned.

W. E. Baxter, was re-elected Mayor as were J. Ed Bartlett and J. B. Lowe for Commissioners.

Science Victim

Professor Albert A. Michaelson, 79, noted astronomer of Chicago, is critically ill as a result of hardships entailed by latest experiments in measuring speed of light.

RED & WHITE GROCERY MERCHANTS HOLD MEETING IN COLEMAN

Tuesday night April 14th 19 interested merchants met at the H. O. Wooten Grocery Co. building in Coleman to finish organization of the Red & White Stores for the Coleman unit, sponsored by the Wooten firm.

In the next two or three weeks there will be opened in the Wooten district Red & White Stores in San Angelo, Lubbock, Abilene and Wichita Falls. After the opening of these units they will be followed quickly by Coleman and Stamford units.

The Red & White System is a Co-operative buying and selling plan of independent home owned retail grocery stores affiliated in this district with the H. O. Wooten Grocery Co. as a jobber and the manufacture of the Red & White labeled merchandise, there are 200 jobbers in the United States and some 20,000 independent merchants affiliated in the Red & White system.

Those who attended the meeting were: J. F. Henderson, Jr.; C. R. Jeanes, W. W. Gober, Rushing Wells, A. D. Hunter, L. H. Griffith, C. O. Fleming, Jim Gober, C. F. Howard, W. C. Ratjen, Henry Gore, Mr. Steward of Echo Jim Boggus, Roscoe Hosch, R. Edens, Everett Evans, H. H. Martin, Grady Harrison and Boots Ewing. The first seven of the above men were elected the advisory committee of the Coleman unit. The Coleman unit covers Santa Anna, Coleman and all of Coleman county and parts of adjoining counties.

Mrs. Emmitt Owen's and daughter Miss Jewel and Miss Elinor Miller of Bangs were visitors here Thursday.

SCOUTS TO HOLD CHISHOLM TRAIL AREA MEET

Several Scouts From Santa Anna To Attend

Several Scouts from the local troops are planning to attend the Jamboree for the Chisholm Trail Area, May 8 and 9 at the camp site near Buffalo Gap, where scouts from seven counties will gather to compete for honors in 32 different activities which include troop and individual events.

A swimming pool is badly needed at the camp site and the following article sent from the Council headquarters touches on the subject:

A Monument For Sale, was the heading of a recent editorial in aoinshrtain emfwtmf bgktg th the Abilene Reporter and the editorial was based upon the plea for some wealthy citizen of West Texas to build a lasting memorial in the nature of a great swimming pool, mess hall etc., for the Boy Scouts of the Chisholm Trail Council at the new camp site of fifty-three acres located near Buffalo Gap.

There are over one thousand scouts in the Chisholm Trail Council of seven counties: Haskell, Jones, Shackleford, Taylor, Callahan, Runnels, Coleman.

The camp site has been approved by the officials of the Chisholm Trail Council because it is practically in the center of the Council, beautifully shaded and on gravel roads from all directions.

A summer camp must be provided for the Scouts of the Chisholm Trail Council. The Buffalo Gap site is the most shaded of any spot found in the seven counties. It is located a distance from any city so that Scouts may be away from civilization.

A concrete swimming pool must be built. The cost of the pool would be approximately $7,500. The Chisholm Trail Council officials believe if the swimming pool is started immediately that funds for the other necessary buildings will be raised soon.

A campaign for the raising of Camp Funds will be formulated March 30th when representatives from every city in the Chisholm Trail Council will gather at Abilene. One plan that may be followed is that of a seven county wide $1.00 per citizen campaign, giving those who can and desire, a chance to contribute liberally.

There are many in the seven counties of this Boy Scout Area that could contribute hundreds of dollars, quite a few thousands.

Santa Anna Man Ships Load of Registered Herefords

Purchaser Visits Some Of The Largest Herds Of Country Before Buying

One of the recent movements of cattle from the Santa Anna territory was a shipment of a load of registered Polled Hereford bulls and heifers from the Gill Ranch, Whon, Texas to the Jones Estate, Rule, Texas. In addition to a thriving mercantile business this estate controls a vast farming and ranching business. The business is managed by L. W. Jones, Rule, Texas and Jess Jones of Colorado, Texas. For the last twenty years they have been using nothing but the best registered horned Hereford bulls and have built up one of the best herds of commercial cattle in their section. Before making the decision to use Polled bulls they visited some of the large Polled herds of the country and were convinced that they could breed the horns off of their cattle without sacrificing any of the quality that they had gained by years of careful work.

L. W. Jones is a close student making his selections was partial to the blood of the best sires of the Gill herd. He especially favored the get of Foundation 51st. This great bull was bred by the Renner Stock Farm, Hartford City, Ind. He was sired by the National Grand Champion Foundation 25th, and out of a dam sired by the Grand Champion Bullion Garfield.

You are invited to the revival.

No Time to Gamble!

A SAFE farm schedule is the need for the year—

More important than all else is FOOD—then FEED—then CASH.

Raise a year's supply of food and feed, then consider the money crop.

The safest farming plan includes an increase in production of Vegetables, Eggs, Poultry Meat and Milk.

QUEEN THEATRE

"SCARLET PAGES" MARKS RETURN OF ELSIE FERGUSON

Elsie Ferguson makes her return to the screen in her first talking picture role in "Scarlet Pages," to be shown next week at Queen Theatre.

A few years ago, Miss Ferguson was one of the leading actresses of silent films. During the past several years, she has been a prominent footlight star both in New York and other leading theatrical centers.

In "Scarlet Pages" Elsie Ferguson enacts a brilliant woman lawyer who takes the case of a girl charged with the murder of the man she believes to be her father. One of the most sensational screen trials is filmed and recored in this dramatic story of a woman who sacrificed her career to save her daughter from disgrace.

Marlon Nixon enacts the girl while the all star cast includes Grant Withers, John Halliday, Neely Edwards, DeWitt Jennings and others. Ray Enright directed "Scarlet Pages" which is based on the successful stage play by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer.

Another Hollywood Paradox Conrad Nagel is Hollywood's paradox; for instance, he goes church sings in the choir, is a noted philanthropist prominent in all charitable work—and plays some of the best "crook roles" on the screen!

Nagel, at his best, is featured with Bernice Claire and Raymond Hackett at the head of an all star cast in First National's "Numbered Men" Mervyn Le-

MRS. N. R. WATKINS BELOVED LOTT LADY BURIED THURSDAY

Mrs. N. R. Watkins, age 85 died at her home in Lott Wednesday morning about eleven o'clock after several months illness.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church at three o'clock Thursday afternoon, Rev. B. T. Goodwin, former pastor of the Lott Baptist church, officiating. Interment following in the Clover Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Watkins was a widow, and is survived by several children.

Mrs. Watkins had a host of relatives and friends who regret to learn of her death and extend sympathy to the bereaved.—Lott Post.

Her son Earl Watkins and grandson Fred Watkins of Santa Anna, were at her bedside for 2 weeks previous to her death.

Mrs. Ruth Chambers and Miss Lucile Cartwright accompanied Mrs. A. E. Chambers to Brownwood, Sunday Mrs. Chambers will visit with her mother Walter Early.

Roy directed this highly dramatic Vitaphone picture, which is coming to the Queen Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

"Numbered men" is based on Dwight Taylor's famous stage play, and like the play gives a true picture of person life and startling one. The prison background, inside the grim walls, out on the road with the gangs, and at the convict farms, constitute the entire background for the plot, and tis an intensely interesting one.

Against that background a fascinating love story and drama with plenty of punch and action is enacted.

Test To Prove Pupils Learning Seniors Must Pass Exam

Graduating Seniors now have a strict examination to pass before diplomas are granted.

The following are samples of questions taken from each department:

- 1 math: If two times two is eight, how much is six times eight?
- 2 If a dog has four legs, how many legs does a car load of cows have?

Physics: If light travels 186,000 miles a second, how long will it take an automobile to go from Santa Anna to Coleman?

- 2. What color is blue litmus paper?

Geography: 1. Why is the Red River, red? 2. In what direction is north Carolina from South Carolina?

History: 1. Who was buried in Grant's tomb? 2. When was the war of 1812 fought? 3. Where did Washington make his famous crossing at Valley Forge?

English: What Longfellow was born at an early age in Cambridge, Mass?

2. Who wrote Kipling's "If"?

According to the principal, at least 50 per cent of the above examination must be answered correctly and handed in two nights before graduation. Dust the cobwebs off your brains, Seniors, and proceed to think (if possible.)

S-A-H-S MEASUREMENTS

Measurements were taken last week for the Senior caps and gowns. Of course, we were all thrilled at that, being so near the close of school.

Senior Reporter S-A-H-S THE WEATHER

Just when everyone had decided that Spring is here—beginning to agree with the fellow who said "Spring has come," a regular December blizzard comes and knocks the idea entirely out of our heads. High school students are undecided whether to wear short sleeves or overcoats tennis shoes or snow shoes. One day we play tennis and baseball the next day, watch it sleet and snow. Now you'll have to admit that the "weather man" has some very queer ideas. Wonder whether we'll have a freezing or "boiling" temperature in June? We can't realize that this is the first of April. Perhaps the man who said, "April showers bring May flowers," really meant, "April breezes bring May freezes."

S-A-H-S MAKING THE MOST OF ONES TIME

Making the most of one's time, as some are prone to think, does not mean never idle. It means working and cooperating with others for a common course or for some distinct, individual thing. The goal of one's life should not always be wrapped in a month of obscurity and be forever out of reach. If the most is made of one's time, each year should mark an upward step on the ladder of life. Marking the most of one's time merely means grasping the good opportunities which are neglected and allowed to pass by every year, and as recapitulated above. Let's grasp the good opportunities near us, and make the most of our time by making old S. A. H. S. proud of us.

S-A-H-S TRIALS OF A LIBRARIAN

As I sit and think of the life of a librarian, I know she must seem downcast and depressed at times. Her life is nothing but books, books, books all day long. She must know the author of almost every book in the library and must know something of the story in each book. She is called upon for books she has never heard of and must scramble and search and at last inform the person with some difficulty that the book does not appear on the shelf.

It seems that some people never know the date. She must change the date on the slip time and again, because everything must be done correctly. When the date, the initials of the librarian, the author, the title of the book, the volume number the person who receives the book, and the period it was issued are neatly written on the slip, it is carefully filed away under the proper letter until the book is returned and the slip is again signed by the librarian.

Trying, is the time when a book is returned and no slip is filed away showing that the book has been issued. Some librarians had failed in her duty. Often the slip has been filed under the wrong letter and she must search and search until at last the slip is recovered. These hardships on one librarian are caused by the carelessness of another. Some pupils fondle away their time and cause worry to the librarian by asking her for books they know are not in. She overcomes many trials daily and must account for many things for which she is not responsible.

S-A-H-S OWED TO THE SENIORS By a Junior

The Seniors are a dandy lot! So dignified and cool! They're just like us, and yet They seem funnier, too. They'll graduate not long from now. But no matter where they're put In college or the business world, They'll be a freshie or tender-foot.

WARN FARMERS TO HOLD DOWN LINT ACREAGE

Federal Farm Board and Cooperatives Urge Business Like Cut in Production

By Victor H. Schoffelmayer
 Agricultural Editor of The Dallas News.

Cotton planting time in most of Texas is nearly at hand and the question uppermost is whether farmers have learned anything from last year's 8c price and will reduce the acreage substantially to guard against another large crop. Price of cotton is always affected by prospective acreage. A drastic cut in acres planted should influence price favorably. The same acreage as last season, 46,191,000 in the South and 47,536,000 in Texas may result in about the same crop (14,243,000 bales) or perhaps larger depending upon the weather conditions and insects.

Piling up huge surpluses of cotton will never get Southern farmers anywhere. Small crops always sell for more money. The ever-recurring cotton problem is before the Texas farmer, landlord and banker who supply credit. The outlook is one of the gravest in history, as may be gathered from reading the twenty-nine pages of the latest booklet published by the American Cotton Co-operation Association entitled "The Existing Cotton Emergency," from the pen of C. O. Moser, vice president and secretary. After citing present factors affecting the cotton situation and price slump the pamphlet concludes with this statement:

"Without the co-operation of Southern farmers and business leaders, efforts of the Federal Farm Board can result in little success, because the most important factors must be performed by the farmers themselves; that is, adjustment of supply to demand as to quantity and quality the same as every other industry; and second, the effective merchandising of the products so as to move them into consumption in an orderly and businesslike way."

Warns Cotton Growers.

A further warning is set forth as follows:
 "We must come to an intelligent realization that the purpose of all production is consumption and that nothing can be sold at a profitable price which is continually produced in excess of consumer demand. We must realize that only within reasonable limits and for relatively short periods of time can there be any successful deviation from normal operations of the law of supply and demand. Hence, farmers should undertake to acquaint themselves with the factors which govern the operation of this law, thus co-operating with it rather than endeavoring to operate in opposition to it."

World carry-over of American cotton next July 31st expected to be near 9,000,000 bales. Last year it was 6,200,000 bales. That and a crop of 14,243,000 bales gave a total of 20,443,000 bales of American cotton, but consumption for the first eight months of the new year is only at the rate of about 11,000,000 bales a year, whereas last year it was at the rate of 13,100,000 bales and the year before 15,100,000, in 1927-28 15,407,000 bales and in 1926-27 a record consumption of 15,780,000 bales.

In another booklet published by the American Cotton Co-operation Association recently, entitled "Community Prosperity Largely Dependent Upon Banker-Farmer Partnership," also written by Mr. Moser, a cut of at least 10,000,000 acres in cotton this season is urged. Bankers and land owners of the South are called on to bring this about unless they desire another bad year. They are asked to advocate a "live-at-home program above everything else."

It will be remembered that last spring the Federal Farm Board and its cotton co-operatives waged a campaign to reduce acreage, but the final cut was only 2.7 per cent, which did not reduce the size of the crop materially. The warning of the Farm Board went unheeded and growers took a heavy loss and all business suffered. Will they ## heed the lesson this year?

Mr. Legge Speaks Out
 Alexander Legge, former chairman of the Federal Farm Board but now a private citizen and not at present in the employ of any corporation or individual, recently delivered an address at San Antonio, in which he told farmers some plain truths. Speaking as a private citizen, he said any criticisms should be directed against him and not against the Government. After reviewing American agriculture back in the days when farming was largely a mode of living and was independent and self-containing because everything that was needed was grown and utilized at home, Mr. Legge showed how times have changed, where by farmers today try to buy their living from the money derived from their products. Launching into the cotton problem, Mr. Legge said this:

"The question whether your next crop of cotton will sell for 5c a pound or 15c will be determined almost wholly by what quantities you produce this year. In reaching your decision as to what you will produce bear in mind that three bales of cotton at 5c a pound will only bring you a return of $75, while two bales at 15c a pound will bring twice that amount of money. While this spread of price seems extreme yet under existing conditions such differential seems easily possible."

"Looking back we find that in 1923 the South raised slightly more than 10,000,000 bales of cotton and sold it for $1,600,000,000. Three years later your production was increased to 18,000,000 bales, which brought less than $1,000,000,000 and you paid $600,000,000 for the privilege of raising so large a crop. Our critics say that the Lord or the weather man regulates what you produce. Every record of the past refutes that statement. It is true that production varies with climate conditions, but production per acre runs extremely uniform when you consider the country as a whole. We have heavy yields in one section, crop failures in another, but on the average, the acreage planted in any of our staple crops pretty definitely measures the quantity produced."

Mr. Legge concluded his address with the following:
 "Either collective action on the part of producers will work out the solution without distress to anybody, or it will be worked out by the old law of survival of the fittest, and if it is your desire to work it out that way perhaps the sooner you get down to 5c per pound, the better it will be for all of you. At least for all of those who may survive."

Lowers All Values

A low price of cotton, possible because of planting too large an acreage, disrupts the whole structure of business in Texas and the South. Land values have fallen to the lowest point in years, due largely to low priced cotton. Stability will return when farming is balanced, when growers will diversify year after year, raise a living at home first and make cotton a surplus crop. That is an old story and has been stated so often that farmers doubtless are tired of hearing it, but it offers a way out.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT
Learning that the "nesters" plan to draw the Poole riders into a trap, the kid informs Garner, telling him at the same time he had learned it was the latter's shot that killed Wheeler and not his own. Garner is grateful and gets the boy a job riding range for the Poole outfit.

Now Go on With the Story
The kid stered for two seconds longer and took the field glasses from his eyes.

Instantly that grim gathering in the coulee receded into the slight movement of vague dots three miles and more away. The scene was gone, wiped out by the distance. Instead, the kid was staring down off the hill at a wagon that came rattling down a long slope directly toward him. The driver was standing up, lashing the horses into a run, with the long ends of the lines which he swung like a flail upon their backs. The wagon was jouncing along over hummocks and a woman with her bunnet off and her hair flying straight out behind her like the tail of a running horse, was hanging to the seat like grim death.

A man on horseback came tearing up over the top of the little ridge. He started shooting, but he didn't hit anything at first and the team came on, leaving the road at the first turn and galloping straight down the slope.

The horseman spurred closer, still shooting, and at the third shot the driver made a sudden dive down on one of the horses, rolled off onto the ground and lay still. The team shied violently aside and snagged the front wheels in a big clump of buckbrush which they tried to straddle. The girl jumped out and started running for the hill, the man taking after her, yelling at her to stop. But she didn't do it, though.

She was a girl, alright. The kid knew that as soon as she jumped out and started running. She didn't run like a woman. This one legged it for the hill like a boy, her hair loose and waving out behind her like a yellow flag.

The fellow after the girl was trying to catch her before she got in among the rocks where he couldn't ride. It kinda looked as if she might make it all right, especially when she went over that wash in one long jump like a deer and the fellow's horse balked and reared back on the edge. The man yelled again, pulled down his gun and sent a bullet kicking up the dust right in front of her. That scared her so she stopped, not knowing which way to turn. The fellow didn't shoot again, but took down his rope and jumped off his horse.

The kid was waiting, with his blue left eye squinted nearly shut and his yellow right eye open and staring like a tiger. They kept coming closer and closer, and the kid's gun barrel jabbed forward and spat.

The man was widening his loop as he ran, but he dropped it as his arm jerked down to his side. He wore two guns, though. He started to draw a second gun with his left hand, but the kid fired another shot. The man gave a lurch and almost fell. Suddenly he sat down right where he was and leaned over sideways, acting kinda sick.

When the kid took another look at the girl, she was lying on the ground all in a heap, like she had fainted or had been shot or something. He watched her for a minute and saw she didn't move, so he went jumping down the bluff like a loosened boulder.

He was plumb sorry for her and he hoped she wasn't hurt, but he hung back and didn't want to touch her or turn her over to see if she was dead. Her hair was all down over her face, and it was the longest, yellowest hair he had ever seen in his life. She gave a deep, gasping sigh and he stepped back a little farther. She had just fainted. She'd be coming to in a little, and she wouldn't thank him for standing there gawping at her that-a-way.

The kid walked over and stood looking down at the fellow on the ground. The man glared at him like a trapped wolf. Both ears were swollen and red, a puckery round hole showing in the outstanding shell of each.

"When I plugged them eahs," he drawled contemptuously, "I shoah thought yo'all was just plain skunk. I wisht I'd known then yo'all was half skunk and half Sidewindah!"

Old man all right. Her old pappy, shot without a chance in the world to help himself. Did not even have a gun on him. Old farmer, by the look of him. Bald-headed and little and old.

The kid investigated his head injury. Didn't seem to be any crack in the skull, but still you couldn't tell, with an old man like him.

The kid got up and looked in the wagon. A sack of flour was there, and a box of groceries, all tumbled together and a demojohn lying on its side. The kid hoped it held whiskey and reached a long arm for it. Shoah enough-old pappy liked his eye opener when he got up in the morning, and was taking home a jugful. The kid gave him an eye opener now, holding the old man's head up and tilting the jug to the ashy lips pinched together in the long beard. Then he poured a little in his palm and rubbed it on the blue lump in the thin gray hair, and after that he trickled a pungen, little stream on the bullet wound, in front and back. The man's faded blue eyes opened and he stared vaguely up into the kid's face.

"Reckon yo'll feelin' some bettah, suh," the kid said slyly. "Right smart crack on the head, but the whiskey'll keep down the swellin'." And when the old eyes still questioned, the kid offered further encouragement. Bullet dug its' a trail in yo'all's side, but it ain't deep, no how."

The old man opened his mouth and moved his jaws uncertainly trying to speak. His eyes never left the kid's face.

"Where's Nellie?" The old man was still dazed, but at least he could speak once more. The kid gave a sigh of relief.

"Why, suh, she—" he turned and looked back toward the hill—"she's comin'. She'll be heah directly, suh."

The drink revived the old man a little, but he seemed to have only a vague idea of what had taken place.

"Team run away," he mumbled. "Threwed me out. Where's Nellie? She was in the wagon when the team run away."

She came, her long yellow hair pulled forward over her left shoulder. Her face was pale and her mouth drooped at the corners and her eyes were glassy with terror, but the kid thought she was beautiful and he blushed a dark red as he tipped his hat to her.

"You hurt, Pa?" The girl sank on her knees beside the old man.

"Pete? Pete who? The horses run away. Guess they throwed me out. Where was we goin', Nellie? Wasn't we goin some place?"

"We were going home, Pa." She was kneeling there looking at the blue lump on her father's head, and from there her staring eyes turned to the bullet wound in his side, which the kid had left uncovered ready for further ablutions of raw whiskey.

"Don't you remember when Pete Gorham took in after us, after Nate Wheeler's funeral, and you remembered you never got your gun back from the bartender before you left town?"

"Pete Gorham! Who's he? I don't remember any—"

The kid's hand left its slow stroking of the horse's sweaty jaw. He walked over and stood beside the kneeling girl, bashful but determined.

"Scuse me," he said diffidently, gun hand to his hat brim when she looked up. "Did yo'all say Nate Wheeler's funeral taken place yest' day?"

"Why, of course it was—" she checked herself abruptly, one swift, roublid glance going to her father on the ground. "You must be a stranger in the valley if you don't know—" She cast a swift suddenly enlightened glance upward. "Are you one of them Poole rim riders?"

"I happened to be up theah when Pete Gorham shot yoh papp he said, with slow meaning. "I took it upon myself to stop Pete befoah he could carry out his plan."

"Well, wasn't you rim riding on the valley?"

"I just happened to be theah at the time."

"You're a Poole rider, ain't you?"

"Poole! Poole rider!" The old man scrambled to a sitting posture, his face working furiously as memory came back with a rush. "One of them Texas killers, I betcha! Was it you dry gulched my son, Ed? Where's my gun?" He clawed futilely at his hip, where no gun was hostered.

"No, suh, it wasn't me."

The girl gave an involuntary shudder and closed her eyes for a second.

"Even if he's a Poole rider, Pa, he—did us a big favor," she said a little color staining her cheeks. "We've got to be grateful for that."

"Are you the fellow that shot Pete in the ears? They were talking about that yesterday at Nate Wheeler's fune—" she caught herself up, biting her lip.

"Nate Wheeler's funeral," the kid finished softly. "Yes'm I had the pleasure of eah-mahkin' Pete the othah evenin'."

"Then you're one of those Texas killers. They said it was a Texas killer done it. Pa, ain't you able to get in the wagon? I can drive, if you can sit and ride."

She was in a hurry to get away from him, even though he had saved her from Pete Gorham. Saved her and her pappy's life, and this was all the thanks he got. The kid swung on his heel and gave all his attention to backing the wagon off the buckbush so the team could be turned around.

He worked swiftly, surely, his capable hands never wasting a motion, never uncertain of the things they should accomplish. The team was restless, wanting to go home, and the kid turned to the girl.

"If yo'all would be so accomo-datin' as to come hold these horses a minute," he said stiffly. "I'd shoah be pleased to tote yoh pap ovah and lay him in the wagon."

"I kin walk, dang ye!" the old fellow cried pettishly. But he couldn't, except with the help of the kid's arm under his shoulders, taking all the weight off the wobbly old legs.

"We're much obliged," the girl said constrainedly, after he had lifted the old man into the wagon. "Even if you are a rider for the Poole, I want to thank you for all you've done."

Then she looked at Pete Gorham, who sat cursing beside a sage-bush, took her foot down off the hub, and came over to where the kid stood stroking the nose of the horse he was holding by the bridle.

"If you don't kill Pete Gorham he'll kill you," she said in a fierce undertone.

"Reckon it'll be a right smart while befo' he's able." The kid did not look at her.

She glanced again toward the querulous murmur of her dad's voice. "You better quit the Poole and get outa the country," she said hurriedly. "The valley folks will kill you—"

She seemed to think that was saying more than she dared, for she turned sharply away and drove off.

He went over to Pete Gorham lifted him to his feet and faced him toward the valley.

"Go hunt yo'sef a coyote den and crawl into it," he advised harshly, and started back up the hill, climbing like one in a great hurry.

The kid's lips thinned and straightened when he remembered that girl running for the hill. Pete after her with his rope. Any other man would have shot to kill. But somehow this thing of killing—it was plumb easy to do, but yo'all never could put the life back in a man once you'd shot it out.

Funny about the nesters being wise to Poole rim riders.

That funeral was another strange thing. They buried Nate Wheeler yesterday, she said. Then what did they want to carry out a coffin and start another procession to-day for? The kid couldn't see any sense to that.

The kid turned his glasses on the now-distant wagon and looked for Pete. Might as well make shoah he wasn't trying to rail the girl. No, Pete was going on straight across the flat, making a beeline for Becker's coulee, as nearly as the kid could judge. Satisfied, he turned the glasses again upon the wagon.

Shoah was a pretty girl. The kid never had seen such yellow hair in his life. Wasn't much like that darned stuck-up girl back home that had made fun of his yellow eye. This girl, Nellie, never noticed his eye.

He sighed and gave another sweeping glance at the valley. Shoah was a funny thing about that funeral. Reckon they were just trying to fool him with it, like the girl hinted. Maybe they wanted to go all in a bunch some where and couldn't figure out any way to keep from being seen and maybe they just had a fake funeral to fool any Poole rim rider that happened to be keeping cases. Plumb foolish. Easiest way was to send somebody along over here to bushwhack him. The kid gave a sudden grunt of understanding. The nesters had sent somebody, all right. Or they thought they had. They'd sent Pete Gorham. And Pete had kinda got side-tracked, thinking he could kill off that old man and get the girl.

The kid's face darkened at the simplicity of the scheme. Pete had thought he could do it and lay it to the Poole. They'd blame the Poole, and they'd go running after them harder than ever. But Pete didn't make it stick. The kid had come along and fixed Pete good and plenty.

There was something in her voice that was like her hair. Something like gold. Of course, yo'all couldn't say a voice was yellow, or had a shiny sound, but yo'all could kinda imagine it was like gold. That girl down in Texas—her voice was like a tin pan. Funny about voices—they say more than words, sometimes. More than a person wants their voice to say. Hers did. Hers said she'd shoah hate to have anything happen to a rim rider.

The kid rode dreamily along, watching the wagon as it bumped over the dim trail in the grass. Watching just in case she might need help or something. Girl like that didn't belong with no nester outfit. She oughta have some big rich cattleman for a pappy and ride around on a nice gentle horse.

The wagon finally turned into a shallow depression and was seen no more from the rim. The kid marked the place where she lived; marked it with a special significance in his mind.

Now and then he swept the valley with a perfunctory glance but most of the time he was staring at the ridge which hid her home. A thin line of cottonwoods ran up along a creek there. There were places where the tops of the trees showed above the ridge. One place, where the ridge dipped a little, the kid thought he could make out a part of the roof of a building. Might be rocks, but it shoah did look like a roof.

The kid stirred uneasily and let the glasses drop from his eyes. A long oddly attenuated shadow was sliding stealthily down the rocks beside him, a big hat and a pair of shoulders growing longer as he looked. The kid sprang up like a startled deer, his gun in his hand and pointing straight at the man who stood looking at him. Then suddenly the kid smiled sheepishly and tucked the gun back in its holster.

"Come alive like a rattler, did yuh?" Babe Garner grinned. "You been asleep?"
"No I been watchin' the valley."
"Hunh!" Babe's tone sounded skeptical. "See anything?"
"Saw a funeral ovah to Nate Wheelah's place."
"You din't report it to the Poole," Babe charged grimly. "What was the matter? Paralyzed so you couldn't git to the pinnacle?"
"No suh, I was right busy soon afaah," he said mildly.
"Doin' what?"
"Shootin' a nestah!"
"Hell! Why didn't yuh say so?" Babe's tone had warmed amazingly. "Some one tryin' to dry-gulch yuh, Tiger Eye?"
"I reckon he was alimn' that-a-way, Babe."

Mr. Scarborough. (over phone) "You say that Jewel Hill has a bad cold and can't come to school today? Who is that speaking?"
Voice. (Hoarsely). "My father."

Visitor. "Are you troubled in this neighborhood very much by borrowing?"
Miss Hays. "Yes, my neighbors don't seem to have anything I want."

John Walker. "Here, hold my horse a minute."
Mr. Scarborough. "Sir, I'm the superintendent of the school!"
John W. "Never mind. You look honest. I'll take a chance."

Neal Oakes. "What do you mean by waking me out of a sound sleep?"
Mary Oakes. "Well, it was such a distressing sound."

Man. "Lady your daughter is spoiled isn't she?"
Mrs. Chambers. "Oh no, that is just perfume on her that you smell."

Fred. "Do you believe everything a fool tells you?"
Eppie. "Oh, no, but sometimes you sound so plausible."

The Undercrust
A crisp brown undercrust, even in a moist pie is easily made—if you know how. Just bake the crust first by lining one pan with the dough and placing another pan of same size on top to prevent shrinking during baking. The liquid filling may soak a little into undercrust during baking but crust will never be soggy. Try this for custard and pumpkin pies.

Beauty From the Kitchen
