

T. E. L. CELEBRATES DAY IN COUNTRY HOME

The T. E. L. Class of the Baptist Sunday School met with Mrs. Walter Ferguson, but kept no rule. Each member invited had to take a dish. They all brought chicken; not a single fish. There were salads, sandwiches, watermelons galore. We ate and ate until we could eat no more. This was rather an informal meeting. No one felt timid about their eating. After the most sumptuous lunch, we met on the porch all in a bunch. The things that were done, the things that were said, kept me laughing so much, had to hold my head. They sounded at times like a bunch of bees. Talking about children, chicken, and trees. They also discussed topics of the day. Yet anything harmful they failed to say. After talking a while they chose two sides. And several contests their wits they tried. If you were not there, didn't see it done. It's hard to tell just which side won. The final outcome, each side of the team. Put on a program simply a scream. The pig tail quartett was given by one. Full of surprise as well as much fun. Then young Lochinvar came riding his steed; All who were present didn't fail to heed. Mrs. Sue Kelley is a charming rider. If you doubt this statement ask the writer. For young Lochinvar she chanced to be.

Who came riding to his court; his bride to see.

These numbers were given in an amateurish way. But made it instructive as well as play. Then came the business part of the meeting. Not so much fun as was the eating. The co-operation and response they gave. Gave an inspiration they knew to behave. I'm sure you won't wonder at this when I say: Mrs. Burgess Weaver is their teacher today. The above mentioned meeting was held last Thursday and was a most enjoyable occasion. Everyone seemed to have such a good time. There were ten children, ten visitors and seventeen members of the class present. Those present were: Mesdames Burgess Weaver, Oscar Williamson, Howard Kingsbury, J. Edd Bartlett, D. J. Barnes, Jesse Hunter, Arthur Turner, J. J. Gregg, J. L. McCoughan, R. L. Newman, Lee Hunter, Nora Goen, J. L. Boggus, Dennis Kelley, Peggy Bishop, Seybold Rowe, J. W. Byrd, C. H. Todd, Bush Aldridge, Miriam Prickett, D. W. Keeter, Emory Brown, John Brown, and Misses Lily Hoch, Lillian Byrd and hostess, Mrs. Walter Ferguson.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NOTICE

James Brown will deliver the address at the morning hour. Sunday evening at 8:15, Miss Lena Boyd will deliver a lecture on the customs of the people of India, which will be very interesting. Everybody invited to attend. It is now feared that bobbing may cause baldness. It is certain to make the hair shorter, at any rate. Less motor haste—longer life.

Smiles

Faces are built for smiles, not tears. Why even nature herself balks at tears, shows her utter disapproval. She leaves familiar and unbeautiful evidence so that the world may see red lids, smarting, vision difficulty and discomfort. Even gloom and frowns, old school fellows to tears, are heartily condemned. Nature implants a furrow for the frown, and a drooping mouth for the expression of a perpetual gloom. But a smile, the most it leaves, is little laughter wrinkles, which aren't really wrinkles at all, only ennobling meshes that have learned the trick of catching the sun. Everybody likes the sunshine. Count the number of pedestrians on a cloudy day; count the number when it's sunny. And while man has no direct control over the elements of wind, rain, and clouds, yet man isn't as helpless as he could have himself believe. He can smile. And smiles are man-made sunshine.

DEPENDABILITY

"Ability" is an excellent thing. But it means very little unless it is accompanied by "dependability." To be dependable means this: When people depend on you to do something, you will not accept any excuses for yourself for not doing it. And you won't offer excuses either. It is the one thing that is better than being able to do a thing. If we can also be depended on to do it—and to keep on doing it! Automatic traffic signals are hardly a success. They cannot express an opinion of the driver who disregards them. Don't be old, let others be that.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee, Oklahoma

William Templeman, editor of the Guelph (Ontario) Mercury, says:

THAT time is limited and it's too valuable to waste.

THE spirit of the age is for speed. A man wants to take the shortest route between two points. He wants the summation of all the best news of the world in as few words as possible.

WITHOUT the newspapers as known today, this would be an absolute impossibility. What once required weeks and months to discover from the other side of the earth may be known now within an hour and the doings of our ambassadors in China time allowances considered, we know hours before they happen.

WHEN the first steamboat crossed the ocean we thought it the greatest wonder of the world, now we want to fly over within the space of one day.

WITHOUT the use of the modern newspaper we would be as ignorant of world affairs as the Dodo.

TODAY the newspaper makes the whole world next door neighbors, makes the lives of Kings and Presidents as intimate as those in the same back yard. Their private as well as public affairs show them to be as human as ourselves.

THE better acquainted you are with your own locality the better you are able to interpet another, and if you boost your own town, patronize your own merchants, and give the best you have to it, you won't have a knock left in your whole system.

IF you want to know what you ought to know you have to read the newspapers.

The North Star

A sense of direction is an important faculty to any motorist, especially if he is traveling at night. The ancients were adept at determining direction from the heavenly bodies, and it is upon them that the modern motor traveler must rely when in the open country.

Almost every one is familiar with the constellation known as the Big Dipper, and is able to locate it on a clear night. Few, however, are astronomically versed enough to locate the myriads of little stars. This latter constellation plays an important part in determining direction for the end of the handle of the Little Dipper is the North Star.

A line drawn through the end of the handle of the Big Dipper will strike the North Star, which is comparatively small and often hardly discernable. Facing the North Star, east is to the traveler's right and west is to the left, while his back is to the south. Ex.

The Geography of Campaigning

The Chicago Tribune, which as the chief proponent of the Republican campaign and the Republican ticket, finds difficulty in aligning its wetness with the hypothetical dryness of the ticket, extracts somewhat of comfort from the indefiniteness of Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech pronounced on prohibition. Phillip Kinsley, political correspondent of the Tribune, finds a medium of comfort for the wets in the candidate's seeming emphasis upon the distinction as between a statutory definition of "intoxicating liquor" and what in "intoxicating in fact." He reports that both wets and dries were called into counsel on this part of the speech, and intimates that both were satisfied. He recalls a letter which Mr. Hoover is said to have written when he was Food Administrator in which the man who is now the Republican candidate asserted that 2.75 percent beer was not intoxicating in fact, and says:

"The key to possible modification or liberalization of the enforcement act under a Hoover administration lies in his plan for a fact-finding commission. Under it the American people would be told just what is the matter with the Volstead Law. Then the suggestion that a new law be framed in accordance with these facts would be in order."

This says Mr. Kinsley, is an inference to be read into the Hoover statement, on account of its careful ambiguity and on account of the known position of the candidate. So far as actual statement goes, Mr. Kinsley points out, Mr. Hoover said only two things concerning prohibition. One was that the Eighteenth Amendment should not be repealed, and the other was that the law should be enforced. "In these points," the correspondent adds, "he agrees with Governor Smith."

To Southerners and others to whom it may appear peculiar that Republican apologists should be taking pains to show a similarity between the prohibition stand of their candidate and that of the Democratic candidate, a study of geography should be recommended. As a revelation that the Republican party and the Republican ticket is a sorry refuge for the bone-dry, the testimony of Mr. Kinsley and the Chicago Tribune is priceless. The Republican high command, desiring to capture the dry votes of the South and the West as well as the wet votes of the East, is attempting the time-honored but perilous tactics of being all things to all people. In the North and East, and especially in the large cities, the effort will be to make Hoover's prohibition attitude as promising of modification of the Volstead Act as it that of Governor Smith in the eyes of the workers who want a mild and healthful beer in the place of the poison they are now getting. In the South and in the rural districts the effort will be to keep alive the wholly erroneous characterization, on the one hand, of Governor Smith as the sinister plotter for a return of the saloon, and on the other hand, of Mr. Hoover as the plumed knight of bone dryness.

In the same issue in which Mr. Kinsley's ingenious interpretation appears, the Chicago Tribune comments thus editorially on the prohibition section of Mr. Hoover's address:

"This statement on prohibition is, of course, radically unsatisfactory to the large body of Americans which either on grounds of principle or public expediency or both is opposed to prohibition and its present method of enforcement. Mr. Hoover is doubtless justified by the limits of his address in not discussing the profound issues which the Eighteenth Amendment raises, issues of constitutional law, issues of political science, issues of moral law. He goes, at least for this occasion, perhaps as far as could be expected in putting himself unequivocally upon record as opposed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, giving it a blessing as a great social and economic experiment. But in respect to its enforcement, Mr. Hoover is confronted with the fact, first, the American people, contrary to his assertion, do countenance nullification, and second, that the logic of his position will require of him not only enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment but of the Fourteenth (racial equality amendment) also. It is equally also, of consideration that nullification of these fundamental provisions of our constitutional system is not only condoned but enforced by the very elements of the Nation which are most vociferously protesting against nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Thus it will be observed, the Tribune reflects the determination of a certain body of opinion in the North and East to force the issue of "nullification" of the racial equality amendment upon those Southerners who are so vociferous against "nullification" of the Eighteenth Amendment.

All in all, the Tribune is not well pleased with its candidate. It continues:

"Mr. Hoover's statement on prohibition and its enforcement does not reach its basis issue or offer much hope of a practicable solution of our present denotable predicament. Also, we would say candidly that, while we realize Mr. Hoover can not with good grace criticize the Administration of which he was a part, his reference to grave abuse in prohibition enforcement would be more satisfactory if it were accompanied by an unequivocal pledge at least to correct the outrageous and criminal abuse of the Volstead enforcement division of the Treasury Department."—Ft. Worth Star-Telegram

Change

It is human nature to get into a rut; it is Nature that continually changes, dragging us either out of the rut or to death.

The seasons change not only one following the other but each showing changes year after year. Nature never stands still and we who refuse to constantly adapt ourselves to her changes are thrown into the discard as unfit.

The stage coach is gone; the hoop skirt has disappeared; most of the morals of yesterday are today in the flux of change. We who have grown to maturity under the influence of yesterday are prone to look askance at the developing influences of today.

We fret about the flapper instead of letting her flap; we forget her prototype is the grand-mother of today, and a darn good grandmother, too.

We wonder when we realize our children of tender years have knowledge that we did not acquire until a much later period, we fear that it will make them top-heavy and unstable.

Change—it is out of the question for us to prevent it, but with careful study and thought we are permitted to direct it. Instead of accepting it as one of the laws of life, we let our spirits ourselves in the position of one "dead though alive," and be unable to contribute to the progress of our race.

Life without change would be death; let us welcome change and help it be a constructive force rather than a destructive force.

Passing of An Institution

The country store is passing. It is going to join the covered wagon, the town pumps and the ox team. Thousands of them still keep their old estate, but in other thousands glittering fixtures, plate glass showcases, gift cash registers and steam heat have supplanted the wood stove, the upended nail kegs, the crackler barrel and the dry goods box handy for the whittier's blade.

With its mingled smells of new soap, kerosene, yellow soap, coffee, cheese, plug cut and calico the country store is an institution as American as greener corn and apple pie. If it is the will of the ruthless gods of commerce to destroy this institution it will be to the great loss and with the great regret of the vast rural population of this nation.

What the department store is to the city the cross-roads general store has been to the country. It has the compendiums of the wants of man. It has been even more than that, for through it the farmer and his good wife were able to convert butter and eggs into shoes and sewing wax.

What the club is to the city the general store has been to the country. The country store has been the forum and intellectual arena of a large area of this broad country. These countless centers for rustic gathering have been the fountainheads of those rivulets of politics and opinion that joined themselves into irresistible floods of national opinion.

Rural America is in process of transformation and every step in that process brings nearer to obsolescence the country store of song and story, of the lester's fling and the cartoonist's pencil.

The hot-dog stand, roadside garage and tea house are aiding in the extermination but never can take the place of this pioneer institution.

Miss Saloma Llewellyn of Marlin is visiting this week in the home of her cousin, Mrs. H. O. Blair and aunt, Mrs. C. V. Bull.

About Dead-Beats

Every person who has conducted a business in which the extending of credit is practiced must be impressed with the large number of people in the world who appear to be born dead-beats.

There are a few in every community who makes pretensions to business and social standing, yet were never known to pay a bill when it was due and seldom pay one at all, excepting as a result of hounding or legal action.

Morally there is no difference between one who fails to pay an honest debt when he can pay it and one who robs a till or cracks a safe. In fact, if there be any decency in either it appears to be on the side of the common criminal, who at least does not abuse confidence and friendship.

Credit bureaus are gradually making the path of the dead-beat a little more thorny, but still he flourishes to an extent that is a serious handicap to honest citizens.

Texas now has 6,200 miles of electric transmission lines and 9,000 miles of local distribution lines.

Man works hard to establish a credit and then frequently finds it too good for his good.

Texas produces large quantities of limestone. The annual value of the product is about $2,500,000.

NAILED!
Campaign Falsehoods Against R. Q. Lee

Following the utter collapse of the railroad charges brought against R. Q. Lee and after Mr. Lee had literally run Oscar Callaway and his henchman Homer Shanks off the stump in a joint debate at Abilene, the Callaway forces, grasping at straws, have caused to be circulated by hand bill and newspaper advertising other libelous charges equally as false. These falsehoods are hereby "nailed" and "nailed" hard and fast. READ THEM.

CALLAWAY CHARGES that Mr. Lee sent emissaries to see Pat Williams of Mineral Wells to offer money to T. P. Perkins, defeated candidate in the July primary for runoff. (This was Callaway's answer to a affidavit which Lee produced in the Abilene debate proving that Homer Shanks offered to sell his support to Lee for one thousand dollars. Lee refused flatly to buy votes, and charged that Callaway has never denied the charge.) Callaway referred the audience at Abilene to J. Pat Williams of Mineral Wells for verification of his statement.

READ WILLIAMS ANSWER. Mineral Wells, Texas Aug. 14, 1928.

To-D J. MOSS, Cisco, Texas.

I have at no time stated to any person that you or J. M. Williams of Cisco offered twenty-five hundred dollars or any other amount or anything in order to obtain the support of T. P. Perkins of this city for Mr. Lee in the runoff election for congress. I have never met Mr. Williams and I state positively that you and I never discussed such a thing.

J. PAT WILLIAMS Callaway stated on the platform at Abilene that he had the support of Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas C. of C.

READ WADE'S ANSWER. Fredericksburg, Texas August 15, 1928.

To COL. R. Q. LEE, CISCO.

Replying to your telegram fourteenth, beg leave to advise West Texas Chamber of Commerce is now and never has supported any candidate for office. No man is justified in making any statement to the contrary. By virtue of my position in organization and with a view of protection this policy I have refrained from supporting any candidate for office and will not do so.

HOMER D. WADE, Mgr.

CALLAWAY CHARGES that R. Q. Lee was president of the Bankhead Poultry Association for one year and got the affairs of the Association in bad condition.

READ THE FACTS. Mr. Lee was never at any time president of this association and had nothing to do with the management of the company and handled no funds of the organization.

POE'S STATEMENT. My attention has been called to a circular being sent out by Oscar Callaway from which the following is quoted: "It is, also a fact, is it not, that you were the president of Bankhead Poultry Association for a year or more during which time you run the association in debt over $1,700.00 which was paid off by the town of Eastland after they rescued the Association from your hands."

I was president of the Bankhead Poultry Association continuously for two and one-half years prior to the time its headquarters was moved to Eastland and I personally know that Mr. R. Q. Lee was never president of the Bankhead Poultry Association and while he was on the board of directors most of the time, other duties prevented him from being active in the affairs of the Association.

The inference of the question above asked, is misleading and amounts to a falsehood.

Subscribed and sworn to, before me the undersigned authority, a Notary Public, on this 13th day of August, 1928.

C. H. FLEMING,
Notary Public in and for Eastland County, Texas.

READ THE FACTS. Mr. Lee is still president of the Cisco Banking Co. which Callaway evidently did not know is a private bank. He has been president continuously since 1918. No assessment of any kind has been collected from the stockholders of the bank.

DABNEY'S STATEMENT. I have before me a circular sent out by Oscar Callaway containing this question asked of Mr. Lee:

"It is a fact, is it not, that you were president of the Cisco Banking Co. for one year, and during that year all stockholders were assessed one hundred cents on the dollar to save said institution, and at the end of that year you went out as president?"

The inference carried with this question is false and without foundation in fact. I have been connected with the Cisco Banking Company since 1910 and have been thoroughly familiar with all of its affairs and its financial condition since that time. I have been active vice-president since January of 1921. Mr. R. Q. Lee is now president of Cisco Banking Company, and has been continuously since 1918, and has never at any time gone out as president. No assessment has ever been paid by any stockholder or director.

GUY DABNEY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this 18th day of August, A. D. 1928.

F. D. WRIGHT,
Notary Public, Eastland County, Texas.

Callaway charged that A. J. Olson brought suit against Mr. Lee for $2,500 on a business deal and that Lee made a settlement with him to have the suit withdrawn.

THE FACTS. A. J. Olson never brought suit against Lee for any amount in his life, and Lee never paid him one cent to compromise any claim of any character against him. We hold a certificate from the district clerk at Eastland, Texas, that no suit of any kind has been filed against R. Q. Lee by A. J. Olson. Callaway although repeatedly challenged on this has never presented any document to back up his assertion and cannot do so.

Callaway charged that Mr. Lee was a Republican postmaster and was never a Democrat in politics.

THE FACTS. Lee formerly operated a country store at Caddo and there being no Republicans in town nor any other store suitable for post office needs, he gave space in his store without rent and served as country postmaster as a service to his customers. He continued in this capacity until he moved from Caddo. He is a life long Democrat. Never scratched a Democrat ticket in his life, and was an ardent supporter of Woodrow Wilson in his elections in 1912 and 1916 and during the World War when Callaway was one of the "Little Group of Willful Men" who fought and blockaded Wilson's every move and hounded the greatest of American presidents to an early grave.

Callaway and his henchmen will no doubt bring other charges and let afloat last minute falsehoods against Mr. Lee.

BUT REMEMBER, VOTERS, R. Q. Lee has been a well known citizen of West Texas nearly forty years. He is a respected citizen of Eastland county. He was for twenty-two years a citizen of Stephens county. He carried both of these counties by a huge vote and in Stephens county carried every box in the county. In Eastland county he carried every box not carried by another highly respected citizen of Eastland county who was also a candidate. His home folks speak for him and they have spoken in no uncertain terms.

No charges of any kind have ever been heard against the good name of R. Q. Lee until this campaign. REMEMBER the same man who is now besmearing his is the four time defeated candidate for congress who slandered the good name of Woodrow Wilson. This man was sent to congress, for the old Twelfth District and made such a bad record that they had to take him out. He has backed up his charges with no evidence of any description. He has based his campaign strictly upon untruthful lines and he is using ammunition in this campaign that is loaded with nothing more than unclean mud. CAN YOU SUPPORT SUCH A MAN?

AN EX-SOLDIER SAYS:

"Before I could cast a vote for Oscar Callaway, I would first go and spit upon the American Flag. Then I would trample into the dirt the uniform I wore in France, and after doing this I might reach a frame of mind so unpatriotic that I might consider casting a vote for such a man."—Judge E. V. Hardwick First Post Commander of the Stamford American Legion, an officer of the First Division in the Great War, and present County Attorney of Jones County in a speech delivered August 15, 1928.

ROME FELL, BUT WILL WE?

Will this country ever fall like Rome? Will we become so engrossed or engaged in our own lassitude, in languor and debility that, lapsing in our own luxury we disintegrate as a nation and as a people? This question, or inquiry or similar impost, has been asked so many times, and predictions in support of the affirmative theory have so often been introduced, a little investigation on the negative side would not be amiss.

The Anglo-Saxon strain of our civilization, so much lauded, has not been over-rated. We are not likely to fall as a people because the history of our people is of advancement and not of turning back or retrogression. The danger to the institution of free government and of fairly distributed wealth is not in the fact of conveniences enjoyed, but in the uses to which even a reasonable degree of prosperity and luxury are put.

As individuals we are too eager to accumulate to stagnate, and we are also participating more and more in the things about us. Rome fell when 20,000 fat, sleek banquet-eating Romans sat on their rugs and watched two Gaulic gladiators battle to death in the arena.

The muscles of the Romans became flabby and they lost the arts of achievement and accomplishment. They failed to make use of their powers and abilities. Their luxuries became individual burdens and even curses, which were naturally reflected in their national or racial well-being.

Our country will fall only when and if its people quit striving for more power for good, more wealth legitimately earned, more education freely disseminated, more government efficiency administered and more spirituality effectively experienced. There will never be a cessation, we hope, of these ambitious programs of progress.

When any race of people or any set of individuals simply stop and say they have had enough of the good things of life, enough of travel and research, enough of business, enough of religion, enough of agricultural development, enough of industrial manufacture, enough of friends and social contracts and enough of home and family circles, there will be danger of a slip if not a fall.

Under our present opportunities, civilization will not be content to watch somebody else in the arena of life. Life is too full of possibilities to let somebody else perform its obligations, assume its responsibilities and participate in its benefits. One invention or discovery becomes only a taste for a greater.

It is this spirit of progress that will keep us alert and strong. Ambition of the right sort—the sort that has been an example of freedom and of development to all the world—is the guide-post that points the way to national security.

Lessons of Life

Every person should go to the cemetery at least twice in life. Once at the end of life, and first early in life to reflect on the brevity of life and the insufficiency of worldly goods. There is no place like a quiet churchyard for meditation and there is room in every life for more serious thought.

The tombstones hold a moral for all living. There is inscribed the human virtues, but among the inscription there is no record of estates left behind, fortunes made and spent and worldly fame attained. The magnitude and sculpture of the stone of the vault alone remain to remind the world of "the boast of heraldry and the pomp of power."

Why should human beings worry and struggle through life's fleet span in pursuit of wealth, fame, luxuries, vanities and all those other evanescent things we choose to call riches? The poor are distressed by too little money, the moderately wealthy by the thought that others possess more wealth than they, and the rich by too much money.

The Garden of Paradise was paradise only so long as Adam and Eve entertained no thought of worldly things. There were no pestering bank accounts, troublesome servants, expensive automobiles, business worries and social and fashion detractions in Paradise.

Few people have learned the secret of living well. Most of us measure contentment in terms of dollars and social position. The number is negligible which views life as a golden opportunity to work and think and be joyful.

TO THE VOTERS OF PRECINCT No. 7

I wish to announce that if I have failed to see any of you in person and solicit your vote in the run-off primary next Saturday, it was due to oversight and not neglect, as I have made a special effort to see you all, and if I have not seen you, will you accept this as my personal appeal to you for your vote next Saturday. I assure you that no one will appreciate your support more than myself. Thanking you for the kindness, J. B. Flores, candidate for Public Weigher Precinct, No. 7.

Texas and Texans

By Will H. Mays

Bridling The Tongue

Harm and only harm results from intolerance, whether it be religious or political intolerance, whether it be merely local in character. Texas is in the throes of the most intense political campaign the State has experienced in many years and already many things are being said that should be left unsaid. No possible good can come from ugly denunciations of those who may hold views that are different from yours or from imputing bad motives to those who may not think as you do. The election will be over in November, but animosities created by intolerant speech will live for years to divide the people of the State and even of the same localities in matters of state and local development and in which unity of effort is so much needed. The person whose religious or political motives you impugn in public utterances is not left in a good state of mind to be approached by you in matters where co-operation is needed. Bitter words create diversions that can't be healed by saying, "Let's forget it," when a contest is over. They live and can't be crowded from the mind. More than anything else just now Texas needs to be a united people in all things for the State's good, and Texans should not allow themselves to become intolerant in speech.

Texas Greatest Need

Of far more importance to Texas than the success or failure of any nominee is the industrial development of the State to sustain its agricultural growth and possibilities. Agriculture has almost reached the high point of production unless it can be further stimulated by manufacturing industries of a kind to consume the products of the farm. Texas is woefully short in manufacturing and, therefore, just as short in the consumption of Texas products. Instead of making efforts along lines calculated to create antagonisms, Texans should be making strong concerted campaigns for building up needed industries. If only half the interest could be created in manufacturing that is shown in politics, Texas would soon become noted as the great industrial State of the union, whereas now it holds a minor position.

Textile Industry Report

For years the textile industry in New England has been in a bad way and it is constantly getting worse. Many factories have moved to Southern States and others are seeking locations. A group of New Englanders visited Texas in April as guests of the Texas Industrial Commission. They have issued a printed report of their investigations, and findings. The conclusion reached is that "Soundly organized, well run plants, having quality and low costs as their prime objective together with sound distribution and careful attention to fabric selections, may well be assured of success and prosperity. There is no section of the United States which at present has so many advantages favorable to cotton mill development as the State of Texas."

These shrewd business men of New England would hardly make a report so favorable to Texas and by comparison antagonistic to New England unless they felt impelled to do so from what they learned

Texas Citizenship

Being a Texan I can't refrain from repeating here a complimentary statement of these New Englanders in that report. "It was well worth the visit to Texas to meet the many representative citizens, and to find that, rich as the State is in material resources, it has greater reason for pride in its citizenship. To those interested in industrial Texas no less than to those interested in the political association a Texas attorney holds true, 'Texas will not stand for any man or woman who is ethically wrong.' It is good at times to know what others think of us."

Austin Cheese Factory

There is a cheese factory at Round Rock, twenty miles north of Austin and another at Buda, fifteen miles south, and both are prospering enterprises. Having watched the success of these young industries, business men at Austin have started investigations looking to the establishment of a cheese factory in that city. Although it has been running only a short while the Buda plant is paying out nearly $2,000 a week for milk, that much being added to the wealth of the surrounding country. To this new enterprise, more than anything else, is attributed the opening of a bank at Buda, the bank here having liquidated and closed several months ago.

Marble Falls Factory

The building erected some time ago at Marble Falls to be occupied by a cheese factory has been sold to satisfy a debt for its construction, the cheese plant never having been put in. Marble Falls also has an immense building standing ready for a cotton mill that has not been installed. For some reason the outside capital backing the cotton mill enterprise has been holding up installation of machinery, and the town people are in no way responsible for the delay. But little money, however, is required for a cheese factory at Marble Falls should get busy and keep up its good name by putting in the necessary funds. It is bad for a town's reputation to have unfinished enterprises.

Newspaper Purchase

The purchase of the Hall County Herald by the Memphis Democrat is in line with the present tendency toward chain ownership of newspapers. Wells & Wells are owners of the Memphis Democrat and the Wellington Leader, two of the most creditable country papers in Texas, and are likely to still further extend their newspaper ownership as favorable opportunity presents. The merger with the Hall County Herald will result in economy of operation and increase of newspaper efficiency. The Herald is one of the oldest and best papers of North Texas, was operated for many years by W. A. Johnson, who served the State as senator and lieutenant governor, and since his death has been conducted by his widow and his son, Earl Johnson. The Wells papers are regular users of the "Texas and Texans" feature

Three Million Rats
As the result of organized rat killing campaigns in 34 counties in Texas, 3,690,523 rats have been killed, or more than 10,000 in each county. This represents an estimated annual saving of $5,535,792 to Texas. As the fight on rats was carried on in 34 counties, perhaps not more than one-tenth of the rat population of the State was killed, and the remaining nine-tenths are left to continue their depredations and to repopulate the rats in the counties that paid for their extermination. Texas needs an organized state-wide rat extermination campaign.

WHEN LION AND MOUSE WENT BEGGING

"The Lion and the Mouse," Warner Bros. Extended Run Production, with an all-star cast is headed by May McAvoy and Lionel Barrymore, is a brilliant screen revival of one of the most astonishingly successful plays of the past generation. Yet this play went the way of so many good plays, being hawked from producer to Broadway, until the lucky man took a chance. Frank Bacon's "Lightnin'" and Anise Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose" are other examples of the long rejected, which finally won out. "The Lion and the Mouse" will be at the Queen Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, 29th and 30th. See this big special!

Comanche Round-up Expected to Draw Big Crowds

Comanche will hold its first annual round-up August 31 and September 1, and plans for the celebration, which is expected to attract one of the largest crowds ever gathered there, are nearing completion.

This round-up is sponsored by the Lions Club of Comanche. Under the management of an able rodeo man, the round-up will be put on in real showmanship style. It will mark the 70th anniversary of the founding of Comanche, and will also be in the nature of a homecoming.

Thirty Full blooded Comanche Indians will have their village in the park, and even these might be called old citizens of the town as they are part of raiding parties that fought white settlers there 70 years ago.

Calf roping, Bronco riding, Bull-dogging, relay races and other wild west features will compose the rodeo program. Over $2,000 in prizes will be offered and well known performers like Booger Red, Jr., Lema Prichard, Vergil Cooper, Marion Stanley will be in attendance.

One of the features will be the big Boxing exhibition on Saturday night September 1. Johnnie Rivers meets Bill Miller at 120 pounds. They will go the 10 round route which will be full of pep if it goes the limit. A good semi-windup of a 6 round battle royal, preliminaries, etc., will be added to the round out of a real fight program.

The reunion of two old friends of 74 years ago, (Uncle Mart) M. V. Flemming of Comanche and Hokoapitty, sub-chief of the Comanche tribe, from Oklahoma, will be one of the most interesting and historic events featured.

Uncle Mart Flemming was born August 27, 1838, near Granite Mountain, Georgia. He was only a child when he, with his parents migrated to Texas. His parents located where Uncle Mart now lives.

Uncle Mart is the last survivor of Green Davidson's Company of the Texas Rangers, and Company G, First Cavalry Troop, during the Civil War. He states that his family and the Indians were always fast friends, even when the other white neighbors were having trouble with them in '58.

Uncle Mart and Chief Hokoapitty were boy chums together. Uncle Mart plans to take him down to the old swimming hole, so they'll probably not enjoy a swim as Uncle Mart, due to a recent accident isn't able to leave his room without assistance.

Uncle Mart says he'll have the boys drive him to the old swimming hole. The boys spoken of are Jim Cunningham, Joel Nabers, and Jack Wright, the latter being 95 years of age.

The Chief will be taken to the Flemming's home on his arrival where the reunion of the two old friends will be celebrated. After the introduction, Uncle Mart and the Chief will be driven to the banks of Indian Creek, there, he states, he will sit on one side and have the chief sit on the opposite, while they talk of yesteryears.

Fleming will invite the Indian to take a swim, perhaps he may, as he says, "You No Can Tell."

A MODERN KING

Ramon Novarro, who played the melancholy prince in "The Student Prince," which was shown at the Queen this week, approaches the portrayal of royalty from another angle in "Forbidden Hours," his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer success, which comes to the Queen Theatre next Friday 31st. He appears as a modern European king in a modern European kingdom in the new story, a vivid romance of court intrigue and love, with Renee and a notable cast directed by Harry Beaumont.

Genuine Farm Relief

(By Wm. A. Black, San Antonio) They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree, and none shall make them afraid. Reason and history confirm the Prophet's ideal as the correct one. The downfall of every civilization has been accompanied by congested cities and tenanted farmers. It is time that we take notice of these facts and look for the cause of the present trend in that same direction in this most favored country of all the world.

Swivel chair editors of the big dailies, agriculture experts and industrial engineers are persistently telling us that the only solution of agriculture is to "industrialize" the farm; that we are living in a mechanical age in which machinery must displace man power; that we must meet world competition in farm production. Nothing is said of the human element involved. The 100,000 acre wheat farm of Montana is used as a dramatic appeal to our imagination of what can be done on a large scale. When we are told that this great field is cultivated and harvested at the cost of 82 cents an acre we are impressed to fail to realize the social alternative. If this same big wheat field should become the rule and not the exception.

Instead of one owner and operator of 100,000 acres cultivated by machinery with the aid of a few hired hands, let us picture a thousand families owning and using that land, every family independent and free of mortgage debt. They would have their schools and churches and prosperous contented villages. There would be a patriotic citizenship to guard and defend our traditional liberties.

Place the 100,000-acre wheat field alongside of the thousand independent farm owners and you will have no trouble to decide which is the more desirable.

Of course, there is more work to take care of a thousand homes than is required on the one great field but along with the additional work required we are developing men and women of the quietest and highest type and there will be gone to make them afraid.

All the measures of farm relief so far proposed favor the land owner and overlook the working farmer. We hail with approval every measure that advances farm land values overlooking the simple fact that every such advance makes farm owning more difficult. A protective tariff on wool and mohair has practically doubled the selling price of ranch lands so that in a few short years the sheep and goat raisers will be clamoring for relief. We are shifting taxes from the land onto business thus making it easier to hold land and more difficult to use it. We are piling the load on the backs of the producers and so flatter ourselves that we are making the big fellows carry the load when as a matter of fact he rides in his limousine while the poor producers are becoming poorer.

Ultra Wisdom

The Training of Children of Today

The parents who spend a good deal of time in various amusements would claim that they take all the time necessary to train their children. But they can't establish certain hours in the week, and say in those hours, "Now, children, come here, I am going to train you." The training has to be given by direction. Good training is best given when parents carry on various activities in company with their children. The old time parents trained their children while they worked with them in the garden or in a work shop, or while they were doing their house work together. Also good training was done while parents and children were on camping trips and excursions together. The youngsters, while having these good times with their parents, would listen to their ideas.

The parents must expect to give a lot of time to actual association in common activities with their children, if they expect to shape their ideas and conduct.—Giddings News.

ENTHUSIASM!
"I've got them!"
This was the way Richard Dick burst into the office of Arch Reeves, Paramount publicity manager at the West Coast studio when he received the first report on "Sporting Goods."
"I've got the first report on 'Sporting Goods' and the great follow-up for it, 'Easy Come Easy Go.' I've wanted to do stories like these all my life."
And with this enthusiastic reception, the filming of "Easy Come Easy Go," the new Dix farce comedy from the play by Owen Davis, was begun. See it at the Queen Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, 27th and 28.

PICKER'S TOPICS

By Thos. E. Pickereil

Anyhow, states' right might correct some of the states' wrongs.

Some of the Republicans are a little worried about the "many" in Tammany.

After all, the main issue with the candidates is whether Al Smith or Herbert Hoover will be elected.

If television ever does become practical maybe a lot of us will get to see how many bars there are in the voting booths.

It takes a lot of effort nowadays to remember that Joe Robinson and Charlie Curtis are also going to save the country by remote control.

About the only doubtful vote this year is the one of the bootleggers. And we can imagine any ensiable candidate refusing to accept their ballots.

The middle-west is in pretty good shape this year. But we can't understand why it always rains plentifully the years the Democrats want in on a platform of farm relief.

Hold up your head, Florida. There'll be a lot of things storm this country besides winds of the variety you had from now until November.

Never deplore the fact that people don't stay at home as much as they used to. They don't put in as much time at family quarrelling when they're out.

SAN ANGELO BABY NAMED FOR HOOVER; MEETS CANDIDATE

Herbert Hoover Brown, 9 months old, journeyed with his parents all the way from San Angelo, Texas, 672 miles, to see the man for whom he was named and shook hands with the Republican presidential nominee when the Hoover Special train stopped there Monday.

The parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Brown of San Angelo.

Chaffin's Story Is An Inspiration

"I employ nine grown men. I have a monthly payroll of over $1,200. Several families get their life and living from my efforts. And, when I tell you I was broke and in debt when I entered Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas, I am putting it mildly—I had a wife and young son who were dependent upon me.

"When I left T. C. C., I obtained a position in the lumber business and have been in this business exclusively since. In April of 1917, I resigned as secretary-treasurer of another company—a position that was paying me $12,000 a year—to engage in business for myself.

"I feel very deeply in debt to Tyler Commercial College for whatever success I have had or will attain, as it was that school that, in a brief three or four months, prepared me for my start."

These are the life words in which Owen Chaffin, another Tyler Commercial College success, briefly and unassumingly tells the story of the period in his life that led him from complete failure to a big success.

Owen Chaffin was not merely financially insolvent—he had the responsibility of a wife and child and was without a training to give him a chance to master his situation. But he WAS master of the situation—after all, because the conclusion he reached indicated logical thinking—he decided that to get any place he had to be trained. And he enrolled at Tyler.

Owen Chaffin's story shows what a Tyler training plus a determination to succeed is worth. It should be an inspiration to every young man and woman reading it. It indicates what is possible of accomplishment if the right start is made.

So regardless of your circumstances, a Tyler Commercial College course will help you. If you really want to make your mark in the world, you simply must read the marvelous book, "Achieving Success in Business," published by Tyler Commercial College. In the book are scores of success stories of young men and women who were once handicapped by insufficient training. Clip and mail the coupon now to America's largest business training school—Tyler Commercial College. No obligations, of course. The book is free. (We have no branch schools. We lead; others follow.) Youth and Advertising

Fifty years ago boys and girls were adept at weaving rugs, knitting, quilts, carding wool, spinning-homespun and stretching carpets. Today boys and girls know the entire abc of the automobile, the electric household utensils, the steam heat system, the aeroplane and the radio. But the youth of today knows little of what constituted the store of knowledge of the youth of yesterday.

The omniscience of youth in every era is ever amazing, but that of today would be inexplicable but for one thing more than all others. That is advertising. In the newspapers, magazines and poster boards children are finding a vast storehouse of practical and useful information and instruction. The value of this incidentally acquired knowledge can not be measured in classroom hours. The youth of America is finding that advertising pays it.

Psychologists have expounded the theory that truths are sometimes observed first by the adolescent. In the case of advertising it may truthfully be said that there are some of mature age who have not yet learned the value of advertising. Advertisers do not buy newspaper, magazine and billboard space for the education of the public, either juvenile or adult, but they recognize the children of today are not only a potent factor in the business of today but the deciding factors in the business of tomorrow.

Pure Rye From Canada

It is related that various gentlemen in St. Louis have received during the past few weeks letters reading as follows:

"I am sending you under separate cover a half-pint bottle of pure Canadian rye, C. O. D., for which you will please pay $1.50. This is not moonshine, but pure Canadian rye from the Saskatchewan district. I hope to make you a steady customer at corresponding prices."

The Chronicle does not give the number of hopeful citizens who paid $1.50 each for their packages when they arrived, but it states the fact that many of them did and that what they found when they opened said packages was indeed pure Canadian rye, which likely enough came from Saskatchewan, but it was rye in its original state, an excellent grain which may be purchased at any market by the bushel at a lower price than they had paid for a half-pint, and it is said that postal inspectors doubt if the wretch who thus cleverly marketed an ordinary grain at $182 a bushel can be prosecuted for using the mails to defraud. For his announcement was entirely truthful in every respect.

There may be a moral in this yarn but there is no need of digging it out. Observing readers
