The Southeast offset to the Jennings discovery well No. 2 is much better than well No. 1. While the south offset is now drilling in the sand and is ready to drill in. It is expected to be a good producer.

The North offset to Moody well No. 1 on the C. A. Crump farm is now down to a thousand feet and work is being pushed on as fast as possible.

The Byrd and Golston on the M. G. Cheaney is also progressing nicely and is now drilling at about 1,000 feet.

The well on the Vance farm of the Texas Company is being finished as a good well.

Feulcher is now setting a rig on the Southwest corner of the Vance farm and is about ready to spud in.

Weitcher has established a new location which is about 2,000 feet southwest of the Moody wells.

Brady Man Hatches Incubator Turkeys; Proves Safe Method

D. B. Williams, well known breeder of Bourbon Red turkeys, is successfully hatching his 1928 crop of turkeys in an incubator and also finds that the artificial brooder is a far better and safer method in brooding and caring for young turkeys than the turkey hen.

Williams hatched 101 young turkeys from the first setting of 125 eggs placed into the incubator. The poult hatched by him in the incubator and cared for by artificial brooders have proven to be more vigorous than those raised by the turkey hens. After several weeks of growth the artificially hatched poult are at least one-third larger in size than those raised by their natural mother.

Retired Governor Of Kansas To Visit Coleman

Expressing views of Oriental travel, touching briefly upon politics, banking and farming, J. Z. Miller, Jr. retired governor of the Kansas City Reserve Bank, railroad executive and extensive land owner, in various parts of the country, visited in Coleman conferring with his brother, W. A. Miller and inspected his 30,000 to 40,000 acre ranch in the southwestern part of the county where considerable oil exploration is now in progress.

Mr. Miller talked freely on his experiences in traveling in Egypt, giving an insight as to the peculiarities of those people taking their families, donkeys, camels, goats and sheep to their small 2, 3 and 4 acre tracts in the Nile valley each morning and returning to communities of thatch houses each evening after the day's work. The processions from the settlements in the morning and back at night reminded one of Turkish hours in a mezzanine.

The dance is in charge of a committee composed of the presidents of the Senior class. The committee has fixed a price of admission at $1.50 per couple. Theo Weiss, president of the Men's Academic class, will lead the grand march. Henry L. Land, president of the engineers graduates, will lead the cotillon. A precedent will be set this year in having the president of the largest class lead the grand march, and in having the leadership of the cotillon alternate among the Senior class presidents among the engineering, and business administration schools.

"In reviving the Senior Prom of former years, the Assembly realized the need of an annual social function for those leaving Texas University. Every effort is being made to foster a successful affair," Elkel stated.

The dance is for seniors and their friends. Tickets may be secured from class officers, and will also be on sale in the Main Building in connection with the sale of invitations. Bids may also be secured at the door on the night of the dance.

Miss Grace Cross who has just closed her school at Rule, is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Breedlove. She will return the latter part of the week and will visit in Mineral Wells and other points, expecting to reach Lubbock by June first, where she will enter Lubbock Tech for the summer term.

What Shall Be Remembered

A Memorial Day Message

To remember the good and forget the bad is good philosophy, but such reasoning alone will not be enough to advance the cause of humanity. Something more must be done than merely forget the bad. Steps to eliminate all forms of evil is necessary to complete the mission of mankind.

Memorial Day is an annual event that calls attention to the records of those who have gone before. To admit that all was good, all was as it should have been, all was beautiful and perfect, and thus pass tearfully over the past is a sweet sentiment, but it doesn't turn the wheels of progress; nor usher in universal peace, nor quite satisfy our ambitions for future development.

It is right that we should bow down in respect for valor; that we should commemorate events that have been turning points in history; that we should lay aside the cares of the present in retrospective sympathy of those who long before have worked and played, laughed and cried, built and destroyed, sacrificed and enjoyed. They too, looked back upon a sorrowful past, and so on—to the beginnings of civilization.

No example of the past can be fruitful except as it may serve as a lesson for tomorrow. The present is always a turning point between yesterday and tomorrow. If yesterday's knowledge, wealth, experience, emotions, characters and joys could remain intact and be endowed upon each of us now, there would be little room for growth, small ambition to prosper, meagre incentive to learn more fully or live more abundantly. Some trails have been blazed, some facts inherited, a few records open, but in the higher and greater experiences of life we must have lived and experienced them and have acquired them thru our own tests in order that they may become a part of us. Aside from the cramming of facts and the bits of poetry that have been left to present posterity in song, story, painting, monuments and architecture, about all people can do is REMEMBER. And that is why Memorial Day means so much to those who are accustomed to its observance in the springtime. Love springs eternal in memory.

Ghost Ship Said to Roam the North Sea

The North sea has a living Dutchman of its own—a sort of ghost ship whose appearance is superstitiously regarded by sailors as an omen of ill fortune, if not of death, to the beholder. It was first reported by a British war convoy that left a Norwegian port in November, 1917. Lieutenant Commander Fox of the Mary Rose counted twelve ships as they passed out of sight of land. Later an enemy raider attacked the convoy. When Commander Fox counted the convoy again there were thirteen.

Other officers of the Mary Rose confirmed the number. No one had seen the thirteenth ship join the convoy. One moment there was blue sea sparkling behind the twelfth ship; the next the stranger was speeding along with the rest. A somewhat rusty craft whose name has been so obliterated by long service at sea that it could not be made out.

When the raider's attack began the stranger was still with the convoy. In what direction he had been driven off the stranger had vanished as mysteriously as she had appeared. The Mary Rose was lost in the skirmish.

The North sea phantom has appeared, according to his growing legend, several times since then. Each time as the pursuer of ill fortune to the beholder. She is said to be a small warship or again a rusty freighter, a battleship or a small sea-warrior liner. But however she is reported, North sea salloemen believe she bodens no good.

Ink Blot Spelt Ruin for Engineering Firm

A big British engineering firm put in a bid for building a great bridge for a foreign government. The head of the business spent six months in getting out plans. His bid was accepted, the material bought in great quantities, men engaged on machinery built. A time limit was set for the commencement and finish of the bridge, and one day the chief was sitting at his desk perfecting his plans and making sure of the smallest details, when he accidentally upset an inkpot and dropped his most important papers in a black sea.

In a fever of anxiety he tried to reconstruct his plans from stray notes. It was impossible, and he then cabled the foreign government begging for more time. This was refused and the contract repudiated. The loss drove the firm into bankruptcy.

Gas From Oil Wells
Vapor that rises from oil wells and which has hitherto gone to waste is now being bottled and sold as fuel. This vapor is obtained from wells that are in production or from wells that have been pumped out, and burns with an odorless gas flame after it has gone through various processes.

It is first refined and compressed until it becomes a low-pressure liquid that reassumes its gaseous form on being released from the steel bottles in which it is stored. These bottles are attached to heating appliances by pipes and tubes. When the valve of the jet is turned on the pressure of the gas forces it through an air mixer similar to that of any gas range.

Keep the opening date and the place in mind—Saturday, May 26th, at "The Hub," Coleman, Texas.

The Realtors

By Wm. A. Black, San Antonio, Texas

Every business has social obligations, some far greater than others. Dealers in luxuries may be giventa rather free hand. Competition looks after those who supply our every-day needs. The real estate dealer holds an especially responsible place because he traffics in the one prime necessity of life. The ownership of land is a basic monopoly. The supply is limited by nature and all must perforce use land, hence the exceptionally great social responsibility of the realtors.

Mr. W. A. Thomas, President of the Texas Association of Real Estate Board recognized this responsibility in his opening speech at the recent convention. He is quoted as saying that "the marriage act in the past, few years has risen from five to ten years above the old average. This comment was made in relation to the difficulties in the way of home ownership and the responsibilities that face the young starting in married life. 'Everywhere I go I find subdivisions being developed by conscientious, unscrupulous speculators who have no other aim than to get as much for their products as they can. They have no interest in the quality of the material nor the quality of the workmanship. Often I find loans placed against the prosperity of more than it is worth.'

He tells us that it is time for the realtors to look into the problem and to encourage every agency that will make it easier for our young people to establish homes. He is quoted as referring to taxation. What he said is not reported. He might have told these "live wires" that as land is a prime necessity and a basic monopoly, taxing it heavily would make holding for speculative purposes difficult. He should also have told these realtors that less capital invested in lots would also leave more money to invest in improvements. Untaxing improvements would also encourage better building. This in turn would leave more money, for wages and a better automatic distribution of wealth. The time is not far off when more men like President Thomas will see the evil of present real estate methods and will take the lead in promoting just and honest method of taxation and thus give real help to industry as well as home owning.

Hildegarde's Candy Business

By CYNTHIA BLAIR

"I'VE JUST MADE THE most delicious candy I ever tasted," Hildegarde exclaimed as she handed her sister and mother and her cousin boxes just prepared. They were going to Europe now. "You and I have to stay right here in this city till we get home and never get involved or see any thing."

"But Hildegarde," her sister began, then stopped abruptly. Hildegarde, instead of talking, went up to her own room and took out of her drawer a pile of two letters and folders with bright-colored covers. E. R. and G. H. Columbus, Manila, China, Japan—their names fairly shone forth from the pages.

"She sat down, looking them over, picturing just what she would do if she had the money. It was hard to decide between the Canadian furs and a trip to New York for the Grand Canyon. They came in ones, round the world and six months of delightful roaming about Europe. It wasn't wasted time, that day dreaming for after a few moments of it Hildegarde put on her hat and coat and hurried briskly down to the corner grocery.

"What did you buy all those things for?" demanded Irma, curiously, following her into the kitchen. "We had them all." "Yes, I know, but you going into business?" Hildegarde asked. "And I want to use my own money, what I have of it. I'm going to make some candy and see if I can't sell it."

"Sell candy—with such a lot of regular store candy on sale?" Irma exclaimed. "Why, who's going to buy candy from a kid?" "I don't know who's going to buy it," replied Hildegarde, serenely, as she tied on a big apron. "That's what I'm going to find out."

"She made her candy carefully, and two hours later the kitchen table was covered with plates on which it was placed. "When it was quite hard she tied up small packages of it, in different sized boxes, made of bright colored cardboard, and fastened with colored tape. Then she went to the biggest box, opened it and found she had only one box left. She opened one box and stared at the manager of the candy.

"Looks good," he commented. "I've been wishing there was some where in this town that I could get fresh home-made candy. I'll buy this box for a starter. I'll buy this box for a starter."

"He went out to the candy counter with her and introduced her to the girl who was in charge. Hildegarde left the candy and went home, hardly daring to hope that the girl would buy candy.

It was not long before she was able to keep from planning what she would do if she found a regular market for it. She went to the hotel again two days later. The candy was gone. Hildegarde might say she had sold it, but she had not. She added other kinds of candy to the boxes. The sugar sodies she had made at first, and attempted little novelties. "Five dollars profit," she said, at the end of the first week, when Hildegarde had to take the candy to open accounts, accordingly, that's hardly anything.

"It's a whole lot," Hildegarde answered promptly. "It's a start."

"Business was always good; sometimes the candy wasn't sold promptly enough, and she had to take back one or two boxes that got stale, one of the big candy companies put out a new brand and swamped her for a while. But she had an inspiration and made some popcorn balls that sold so fast that she didn't have to take any back. She telephoned her and asked if she wouldn't bring some more of these. From that time on Hildegarde had been in business for nearly two months.

White Children Who Were Captives Among The Indians

Clinton L. Smith and his brother, Jeff, of Hackberry, Texas were captured 20 miles out of San Antonio, by the Comanche Indians, Sunday morning, March 3, 1869. The two brothers had been herding sheep and saw the redskins skulking toward them when they attempted to make their escape.
Clint and Jeff remained captives with the savages for more than four years.

Texas and Texans

By Will H. Mays

It is too much to expect that a man will register enthusiasm after having had experience with a dull thud.

A normal conscience is one that has sufficient tact to keep its mouth shut until after you take the profit.

Men are creatures who cut down great trees to make room for a city, and then plant little saplings to beautify it.

It doesn't take a man with perfect vision and oversized mental powers to observe the real progressive attitude now typical in this city. New buildings are springing up, and considerable preparations are being made for others. The new City Hall is now in service and is a credit to any town, even several times the size of Santa Anna. That new school building, often referred to, is a monument to the district, and indicates the earmarks of a progressive citizenship. Many homes have been built this year and several good rent houses have also been built. Dr. T. M. Hays is having another substantial brick business house erected in the east part of town, and several others are in prospect. There has never been a mushroom growth in Santa Anna, and it is better for the town that she has never experienced such. It is just a good town built on a solid foundation, and most all business failures are a result of wild speculation or selling goods on a credit, either of which is sufficient to ruin anything. The merchant who does a legitimate business, and adds only a reasonable profit and attends to business most always succeeds, and the same principal works in all lines of business. Santa Anna is not through growing yet.

That mountain over in the Black Hills which was named after President Coolidge, will never develop into a volcano.

Green is always suitable for decorations because one can always find so many guests who fit into the color scheme.

Texas last year produced a wheat crop of 17,945,000 bushels valued at $21,713,000.

So long as the people permit politics to enter government, they may expect government to dabble a little into politics.

There is no substitute for prosperity.

Hurting The Profession

The unscrupulous in any profession or calling tear down the prestige and standing of the particular craft affected. The same reasoning applies to aviation. Head-lines bearing sad tales of tragedy in aviation are principally concerning amateurs, or planes that have not been properly constructed or kept in proper shape. These points have been brought out before the laymen by prominent officials in aeronautics and well known pilots and flyers.

Accidents are expected of course, in all callings were hazards are plentiful. But skilled pilots know that the majority of airplane crashes are not among their own kind. Some "air-bug" gets into his head an idea that he can build his own plane. Instead he makes a plane. Another will take up a plane without first seeing that it is in proper condition. Still another will take a chance which no sensible pilot would think of taking, or which an experienced pilot would overcome.

Towns don't just happen they are built. That's an old saying that bears repetition. If you don't think so, imagine Santa Anna without any civic organizations working for the common good, without any government to enforce justice and equality, without any schools building for the future citizenship, without any churches fostering for the morality, without any land or business producing services and the wealth, without any transportation facilities and roads bringing people to Santa Anna, without individuals giving their time and money and counsel for the general welfare and progress. Then one can realize what co-operation, money, brains, and community spirit means in the development of Santa Anna's economic, social and spiritual resources. It is the combined effort of all of these factors and more that build up a community, and nobody would say that these forces just "happen." They are the result of individuals working together.

Texas Mineral Production

Texas ranks fourth among the States in Mineral production, according to the latest report of the United States Department of Commerce. Pennsylvania, with its tremendous output of coal and smaller outputs of cement, clay products and natural gas, leads all the States with a total of $1,055,766,000. Oklahoma ranks next, with its big petroleum and coal production, with California a close third. These States produce minerals to the amount of $569,519,000 and $523,353,000, respectively. Petroleum, sulphur and natural gas are leading factors in swelling Texas' mineral resources to $420,887,000.

When Texas' potash and lignite are developed as they should be, and they doubtless will be in the next few years, this State will exceed Oklahoma and California in mineral production and rank next to Pennsylvania.

Texas Port Development

There is nothing more significant than the fast development of Texas and the Southwest than the rapid improvements of Texas gulf ports by the United States Government. Port Arthur, Galveston, Houston, Port Arkansas and Point Isabel are all receiving large appropriations from the work of necessary harbor improvements, and much work is being done and planned for intermediate gulf harbors. This means that increased shipping is foreseen to justify the outlay and portends an era of vast prosperity for all Texas, radiating, not from one, but from numerous ports along the great stretch of Mexican Gulf Coast line.

Any doubt that may exist as to the early development of Point Isabel has been removed by the recommendation for that port and the late announcement from the development company there that a $500,000 modern hotel will be started right away to care for the large business that is sure to follow.

Mercedes Beautification

The Professional and Business Women's Club of Mercedes, which has taken as its major work the beautification of the city, recently attracted much favorable attention to itself and the city by getting out a 40 page edition of the Mercedes Tribune almost wholly devoted to the beautification work already accomplished and in prospect. Perhaps no other organization in the State has accomplished so much in the way of civic improvement or has gone so whole heartedly into the task of arousing in every citizen a spirit of home and city pride.

One of the number of projects of the club has been a yard beautification contest, covering a period of several months in which several hundred contestants have been entered for prizes of approximately $1,000. Landscape artists and other specialists have from time to time visited the city on invitation of the club to help in creating a greater interest in civic beauty.

Fredricksburg Fair

Fredricksburg has attained more than a local reputation for its county fair. This has been due largely to the fact that it takes time by the forelock in its preparations. Other places may still be doing dreams about their next fairs, but Fredricksburg is already building a spacious exhibit hall for commercial exhibits, trade displays, agricultural exhibits and a woman's department. The fairs that wait until late summer to start their plans should remember that too often "delays have dangerous ends."

Humor and Grammar

Deskins Wells, who edits the splendid paper, the Wellington Leader, says that he can't understand why so many so-called humorists seem to think it necessary to use bad English and misspelled words to make their writings funny, nor can he understand why the papers impose such writing on the public in the name of humor. The papers use such copy in the belief that readers like it and "humorists" write it to cover their ignorance. There is nothing funny about it, but it enables writers who can't construct a correct English sentence to sell their stuff. The best writers make enough mistakes; deliberately to palm off poor English and misspelling for humor is an imposition on readers, and the press should quit tolerating it.

Peanut Prices Better

The Weatherford Democrat would encourage farmers to grow more peanuts and to use better methods in preparing the land and cultivating the crop. Prices are gradually increasing and the demand is good. Peanuts are largely drought resisting, they are not subject to insect pests, they are soil builders, they are as sure as any crop to make good yields. Peanut growing may not be a quick way to wealth, but no section that has ever grown peanuts as assiduously as cotton is grown has ever been impoverished thereby.

Weimar's Lily Garden

A few years ago Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Weimar, started with one little lily bulb in their garden, which now contains several thousand blossoms to repay their care and attention, and to attract several hundred visitors to admire the beautiful sight. Due to careful cultivation the stalks are over four feet high and produce from 12 to 24 blossoms each.

Chicago to Texas

Hans Hanson, a young truck and citrus farmer near Alfurrias, thinks there is little excuse for holding down a grocery clerk job in crowded and cold Chicago, when a person can live on his own farm in sunny Texas, and raise vegetables and fruits. He came to Texas six years ago and bought 10 acres near Alfurrias. He first tried dairying, but could not milk. He then tried cotton, but couldn't make any progress picking cotton. He next began specializing in tomatoes, watermelons, and other truck crops, and now has ten ten acres planted to oranges, grapefruit, and other fruits and berries, and rents a 25 acre tract on which he continues to grow vegetables. He has a wife and four small children, who have been cared for in comfort from the little place. This just shows what can be done almost anywhere in Texas if one only has the pluck to try. Hans has no desire to return to Chicago, and who would?

Elected Forty Times

For forty consecutive times Henry Miller of Weatherford, has been elected Grand Keeper of records and Seals of the Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias of Texas. While his is a secretarial position, he is more largely than any other person in charge of the business of the Pythians. No greater tribute could be paid a man than to be elected to such a responsible position for so long a time, but everyone knows this venerable Knight agrees that he fully deserves the great confidence so long placed in him.

This Week the Editor is Missing

This week the editor is missing a real treat. The Texas Press Association is in session in Texarkana, in joint session with the Arkansas Press. Most all the editors in the two states are there, and expect following the business sessions to make side trips, through the Ozark Mountains, with stops at Hot Springs and Little Rock. A real trip is in store for those who are fortunate enough to attend, but due to the purchasing of new machinery and a lot of work in the office, and not enough dough to make the trip as we would like to make it, renders us unable to go. Well, country editors miss many good things in life, still it is worth living, and but few ever kick off at their own hands. Finding good things to say about others, furnishing good reading of an elevating nature to place in the homes over the country, being sociable and doing other deeds of service is too much pleasure for one to want to pass up, even tho, most of the better things in the way in entertainment are out of reach. Wonder if people who have plenty of money and don't have to work get as much out of life as us poor devils whose chances are limited and who have to work seven days and nights out of a week to make a living.

P. S. I've changed my mind and will be in Arkansas by the time you read this.

POULTRY HINTS And Suggestions

A good many people are always looking for an easy way of doing things, rather than the best way. These have resorted to round about ways of killing such vermin as lice, mites and blue bugs. Thousands of bottles of "some dope" to kill lice and mites; by adding it to drinking water or feed has been sold in Texas. To say that a million bottles of this "stuff" has been sold in Texas alone, is no exaggeration. Let us see what the U. S. Department of Agriculture has to say about it. The following is a quotation from Technical Bulletin No. 60, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"There is a general impression among farmers, poultrymen and stockmen that certain chemicals, administered internally, will protect animals from external parasites. The prevailing idea is that the material is taken up by the blood and excreted on the surface of the body or on the body coverings. It is commonly believed that when parasites come in contact with such portions they are poisoned or repelled by the chemical.

As this impression has been commercialized to the extent of several million dollars during the last few years, and as several of the proprietary remedies have been tested for fowls and found ineffective, it was deemed advisable to make controlled tests of some of the chemicals most generally used."

Quoting further from this Bulletin:—The experiments given show that none of the preparations tested was of any value against the insects used. Not one of the preparations here considered, when given in food or drinking water, showed any indication of value against the parasites used in these experiments. Tests conducted with nux vomica, to kill lice, also was proven to be worthless.

Accordingly millions of dollars have been wasted on patent remedies for internal use to kill poultry vermin, which have been found utterly worthless. Once and for all let us remember that internal remedies to be given in food or drinking water to kill lice, mites, blue bugs, fleas and other similar parasites, are made to sell but won't do the work and have been officially branded as worthless.

Often have I heard people claim feeding nux vomica will run the lice and mites off or kill them. Carefully conducted tests prove that mites and lice grow fat on hens fed nux vomica. One after the other, these old time ideas, founded upon the imagination are knocked into a cocked hat. We will bet however that thousands of people will still keep on wasting money on these easy cure cures for many years to come. These same people would hesitate to spend money for good feed or housing, but they like the idea of allowing the hens to roost in the trees, to pick up their living around the barn lot and other places, and when it is about time to kill lice and mites, they invest one dollar in a bottle of colored water, place a few drops in the drinking water and lo and behold the lice and mites leave or die. Beautiful idea but it won't work.

Learn To Curb That Jealous Feeling

Is jealousy robbing you of much of the pleasure you might get out of life?

When you hear that friend or acquaintance has met with good fortune how does it affect you?

Do you compare what he has gained with what you have failed to procure?

And thereby create unhappiness for yourself?

Usually one has so many friends who are successful or fortunate in one way or another that a jealous disposition can make one uncomfortable most of the time.

Jealous persons are in a chronic state of irritation.

The least thing tips the scales enough to make them miserable.

How much more you would get out of life if you could be glad that this one or that are favorably noticed?

But no, you must always make a comparison.

You cannot get full enjoyment out of what you have because you keep making unfavorable comparisons at each new story of another's climb and so you spoil your looks as well as your disposition and lose those who would like to be your friends.—Houston Chronicle.

"The cry of the day is for leadership," says Dr. Nichols Murray Butler. Yeah, but the cry is drowned by the claims of the would-be leaders.

Wanted Each Other Back

By JOHN SAUNDERS

LILLIAN JAFFREYS came out of the gates which gave entrance to the grounds surrounding her father's country house and waved her hand at Tom Coleman, who was in his liver. Lillian was dressed as became the daughter of a "millionaire." She smiled a bewitching, careless smile at Tom as she waved her little hand in his direction. But her whole expression changed when the driver had passed. A perplexed frown wrinkled her brow and her eyes took on a pensive gaze.

The young man to whom she had waved had answered her greeting with a polite, but formally bow, and when she had been some distance in his look and manner as if he said: "No, I thank you, once bitten, twice shy. All your pretty ways cannot lure me back again. I am quite satisfied to have learned my lesson and will not let it be distinguished as if she had heard him say it in so many words.

For there was no denying that Lillian had given every encouragement to Tom and had thrown him over her shoulder. Yes, Lillian had done all this and now she was sorry for it. She tried to tell herself that there was no use crying over spilled milk, but even the venerable saying did not seem to fill the bill. What she wanted out of the past was not a proverb but Tom.

It was not because her parents had objected to her marrying Tom that Lillian had rejected him. He was not wealthy, to be sure, but he came of a good family, was an excellent and rising young man and Lillian would have been a Mr. and Mrs. Jaffreys, and only that their daughter would be happy in her marriage and considered that Tom was the very one to make her happy. But when they found that Lillian had rejected him they took it for granted that she knew best and let her be.

If there had been a little opposition to their marrying, had their joking and running along in such quiet times, so many of making everything for granted, it is likely that Lillian would have yielded a little and Tom would have been when Tom asked her to be his wife, it is always the things around the corner that interest us most, the things which are constantly in our sight lose their interest after a while, and so it had been with Lillian's regards to Tom. But now that he was decidedly "around the corner," as far as she was concerned, she found that she wanted him back more than anything else in the world.

When she had realized this she had thought: "Oh, well, he is in love with me and all I have to do is just to show him that I really did not mean it when I said No. I can write him back all right."

That day when she had stroked out of her father's gates to see Tom and his father, her sweetest smile answered by him in that unresponsive manner, Lillian, after a fit of deep despondency, resolved on drastic measures. She would write a letter to Tom in which she would acknowledge her mistake, tell him she had never loved him, beg his pardon for her thoughtless conduct and after that a "yes" if he would take it. Of course, if it were true that he had ceased to love her, this would place her in a most humiliating position and she could not see how she would break her heart. But she didn't care; she could not stand things going on in this way any longer. So she went home and wrote a letter upon the lines indicated, and sent it to the post office.

Tom would not get it until the next morning, she thought she knew he seldom went to the post office in the neighborhood village for the evening mail. And she passed a most miserable night. Then the thought occurred to her that perhaps Tom would go for his evening mail and get her letter.

Right after breakfast next morning she was in her little room, preparing down to the village post office. As she entered the room she and Tom almost collided.

"Did you get my letter?" she faltered with a blush.

"No," replied Tom, "did you get mine?"

"Why no? Did you write?" she cried and hastened to her letter box. Tom's face glowed as he saw in a couple of minutes they had an other narrow escape from collision in front of the delivery window.

"Oh, Tom, I am so glad," said Lillian.

"And 'Oh, Lillian, what a jewel of a girl you are,'" said Tom.

"You know what Lillian had written. Tom had written that he could stand it no longer; that he had tried to be indifferent and couldn't manage it. Would not Lillian reconsider?"

The Thinning Roll

This year Memorial Day will find the pensioned veterans of the Civil War reduced to fewer than 80,000. In March 1, 283 of them died and April began with the rapidly thinning rank reduced to 79,300.

There is now no Civil War veteran on the pension roll under the age of 80 years, so the nation must be reconciled to the loss of most of these venerable and revered survivors during the next decade. From now on the grim reaper will double his efforts. Each year the Memorial Day roll call of those who have passed away since the preceding year grows longer.

It was not until 1889 that the pension roll reached its peak with 745,322 pensioners. Due to added benefits the peak in pension payments—$141,377,515—was not reached until 1923, since then the decline has been rapid.

Pension figures for the Civil War gives the nation some idea what the World War will cost it through the veteran's bureau. The government is already spending many millions for the care and treatment for disabled veterans, and if history repeats itself, as it is likely to do, the peak of this expenditure will not be reached for two or three decades.

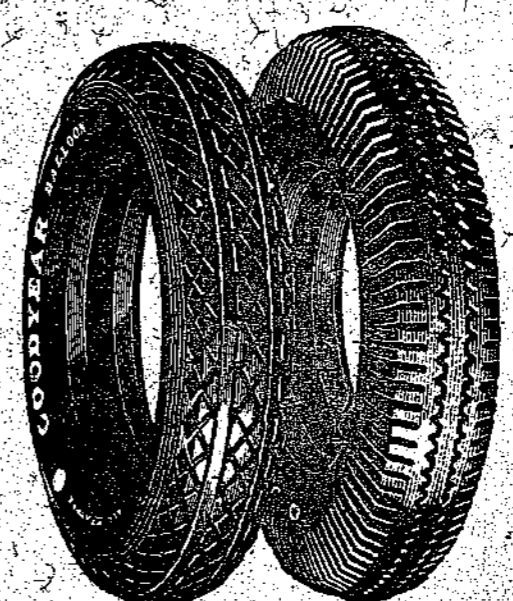

The peak pension list of the Civil War did not come until more than thirty years after the war, and the peak pension payment did not come until twenty-five years later. The last survivor of the Revolutionary War died April 5, 1863. On May 13, 1905, the last survivor of the War of 1812 died. There are five living veterans of the war with Mexico. Some who served overseas in 1917 and 1918 may outlive the twentieth century.

The average girl thinks if you are true to her you are a fool, and if you are untrue to her your friendship is not to be cultivated. ### What Is Love?

What is love?
Love is—what have you?
There is a false impression that love is an identical experience for all those who pass thru it, with definite symptoms like the measles, or mumps. That is not love. Love is never the same for any two people. True love is not the commonest experience in life—it is the rarest.

La Rochefoucauld once said that many people would never have fallen in love if they hadn't happened to hear about it. That is true.

Love is the name of an experience which has played such a large part in human history that we all think we must undergo it. But many of us never get beyond the name. And often that name covers impulses and attitudes which are anything but love.

Your love is as great as your spiritual capacity.

It is as true as your desires.

Love is the most misused term on earth. It is our favorite alibi for selfishness, bullheadedness, greed, silliness, laziness and general crossness.

The thing we call love may be merely a desire to bully which we can't satisfy with our immediate relations.

It may be simply the ferment of youth, no more significant than a baby's colic—

Or a greeting to possess—

Or plain curiosity.

Or the thrifty desire for a meal ticket or a housekeeper.

Or the demand of an egotist for an audience.

Or a vague peevishness with our present environment and a longing for a change.

Or an emotional habit we've acquired which has long since lost its meaning, but which we're too lazy or cowardly to change.

Love may be all these contemptible things or it may be the noblest unfolding of the spirit that can come to man.

For love is what you are, love is—what have you?

What have you of generosity, imagination, humor, tenderness, fairness, loyalty, unselfishness, humility, honesty, patience and good sense?

From such stuff is real love made. Without these qualities there can be no real love.

You may "fall" fiercely for some other person, but unless you have the essentials of fine human conduct in your spirit, the experience will be no nobler than any other passing tantrum.

You can't live like a weasel and love like an eagle.

That is why we hear of so many "love failures".

Love doesn't fall us.

We fall love.

We are not great enough for love.—Elsie Robinson in Houston Chronicle.

Hen Profitable Factor In Brady Section Prosperity

The hen is proving to be a profitable factor in the prosperity of the Brady trade territory, producing a weekly payroll of more than $10,000, to Eastern markets.

The better poultry movement was started here about four years ago, and today there is hardly a farm yard without a flock of chickens. Most of the flocks in this county have been carefully culled each year and a remarkable improvement was also made in the housing conditions.

Thousands of additional pure-bred baby chicks and pullets are annually added to the already existing flocks and within a few years Brady will, no doubt, achieve its goal of shipping one or more carloads of fresh eggs to Eastern markets daily.

THE WICKED HUSBANDMEN
LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:1-12:13: 1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jehovah knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Some Wicked People Punished.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Wicked Husbandmen.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Playing Fair With God.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Attitude of National Privilege.

1. Demanding the Fruit of His Vineyard (Mk. 12:1-12).
The man (v. 1).
The certain man who planted the vineyard is God Himself.
2. The Vineyard (v. 2).
This means Israel (See Isa. 5:1-7, Jer. 2:21, Ps. 80:8).
The Lord wants to particular pains to make His nation separate, He bestowed peculiar favors upon it.
3. The Husbandmen (v. 3).
These were the rulers and teachers of Israel, every member of the Sanhedrin. They were the spiritual guides of the people.
4. Servants sent for the fruit of the vineyard (v. 5).
These were the various prophets whom God sent to the nation. The maltreatment and rejection of the prophets are set forth in the Scriptures. They were beaten and killed.
5. The well-beloved son sent (v. 6, 7).
The son here is the Lord Jesus Christ, God's only and beloved son. He came into the world. They knew Him to be the Son, but they would not receive His message, nor bow to His authority, so they cast Him out of the vineyard and slew Him.
6. Their punishment (v. 8, 9).
Jesus had asked them for their own verdict upon such villainous ingratitude. He took the place of a judge and pronounced judgment upon them on the basis of their own verdict. They instantly rejected the kingdom, but the Son was King; therefore the Kingdom was taken from them and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

7. The Son of Man Coming in Glory (Mk. 13:37).
This is part of the well-known Olivet discourse. It gives a prophetic view of the course of time from its utterance just before the crucifixion to the second advent of Christ. Two great facts are before us in this prophetic utterance: the destruction of Jerusalem and the second coming of Christ. The one was near, having taken place within forty years of the crucifixion of Christ; the other is still future. The brief of events are outlined as follows:

1. Moral condition of the world during Christ's absence (vv. 1-13).
This pictures the present age and the result of preaching the gospel. In this age many shall come saying, "I am Christ, and shall deceive many." There shall be wars and rumors of wars. Nations shall be pitted against nations and kingdoms against kingdoms, with earthquakes in divers places, accompanied with famine and pestilence. The witnesses of Christ shall be persecuted and arraigned before rulers and kings. Brother shall betray brother to death and the father the son. Children will rise up against their parents and cause them to be put to death. The teachers of the gospel shall be hated for Christ's sake.

2. The day of the tribulation (vv. 14-23).
In this time the Antichrist will appear according to the prophecy of Daniel. He will be the persecutor that except the Lord shorten the days no flesh could be saved, but for the elect's sake the days shall be shortened.
3. The great advent (v. 24-31).
This shall be preceded by great physical disturbances in the world. The moon shall be darkened, the stars of heaven shall fall. Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory and He will gather His elect from the uttermost parts of the earth and heaven.

4. Instructions in view of the coming of the Lord (v. 32-34).
The day and the hour of His coming are unknown to man. In view of this uncertainty we should watch and pray for Christ as a man taking a far journey, who left his house and gave authority to his servants and to every man his work and commanded the porter to watch.

5. Warnings.
Running through the thirteenth chapter is the exhortation to take heed. In reaching the lesson it would be well to gather them up in their order.

1. Take heed against deceivers (v. 5).
2. Take heed to yourself (v. 9).
3. Take heed against the time of the Lord's coming (v. 33).
The "one command to all" is "watch."

Essay On Newspaper Men

(Palo Pinto County Star)

I don't know how newspaper men got into the world, and I don't think God does, for He ain't got no record of it recorded in the Bible. I think the editor is the Missing Link we have read of, and stayed in the bushes during the flood and then came out and wrote the thing up, and has been kept here ever since.

"If the editor makes mistakes, folks say he ought to be hung, but if the doctor makes mistakes he buries them because they can't read or write Latin. When the editor makes a mistake there is a big law suit and swearing, but if the doctor makes one there is a big funeral, cut flowers and perfect silence."

"A doctor can use a word a yard long without him or anybody else knowing anything about it. If the editor uses one he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit, but if the editor goes he gets a charge of buckshot."

"Any college can make doctors but editors have to be born."

Statistics show that one-half of the soldiers who are discharged, re-enlist. A similar percent prevails when men get married after being divorced, which shows that some people never get enough fighting.

The fellow who can't be a public benefactor will be the one who fixes things so that only one weed grows where two grew before.

A booster is all right so long as he sticks to his home town.

Money covers a multitude of sins—and also buys new automobiles.

We Must Know Our Community

Where your heart is, there are your thoughts also.

Where your heart is your pocketbook may generally be found open.

Where your heart is, you have nothing but an optimistic viewpoint.

The plain course for every joyful citizen, then, is to place his heart in his home community and work for it and boost for it with all of his energy and ability.

You can't be loyal to home and still think that some other place is a better place to live.

You can't be loyal to the interests of this community and have your heart elsewhere.

You must be convinced in your own mind that the place where you live is the best place on earth to live, else you will never be able to convince anyone else of the fact.

To be convinced of the superiority of the place you call home you must know all of its good points and all of its advantages.

Only well informed citizens are good citizens and you can't well place yourself in that class until you get all the knowledge that is possible to acquire about your county.

First get the facts. Then go out and tell others.

Announcement

We are glad indeed to be able to announce to the good people of Santa Anna that our son from Chicago has arrived, and will sing for us in our meeting at the Cumberland Presbyterian Church which will begin on Sunday, May 27, at the eleven o'clock hour. Our son has been in the Chicago Musical College for two years, and has studied voice with such eminent teachers as Herbert Winterspoon, and Graham Reed, and we consider ourselves fortunate indeed to be able to secure his services for the meeting. We have learned that the big hearted people of Texas are very fond of music—especially vocal music and we believe that they will very greatly enjoy and we believe that they will appreciate this feature of the meeting. So we are again, giving you a hearty invitation to attend these services.

Houston Builds For Convention

Houston, Texas is getting ready to entertain the first National convention of any major political party to be held in any former Confederate State since the Civil War, and the first ever to be held in the Southwest. The great convention hall will sit the 5,000 delegates, alternates and others having official connection with the convention, and in addition a changing crowd of 15,000 who will look at the sessions. It is thus even larger than New York's old Madison Square Garden, where the preceding National convention was held, and suggestive of the scale on which the welcome of Houston is to be pitched.

The above story will appear in the monthly magazine section of the Santa Anna News which will be issued June 1st.

The Greatest Story Ever Told

How long would it take a newspaper, published weekly, to print the entire Bible in installments?

The answer is 22 years and 3 months. The Parker New Era of a South Dakota town has just completed the publication of Holy Writ, running it by install-ments every week.

It was a happy thought to print the greatest story ever told, and no doubt the Parker New Era has found it distinctly worth while.

Remember our Big Sale is not a quit business sale, but a money "Money Raising" Sale. "The Hub" Coleman, Texas.

Bankers Played For Heavy Cotton Loans

San Antonio, May 2.—Criticism of Texas bankers for loaning so much money on prospective cotton crops was voiced at the annual State Bankers Association convention here today by John Fields of the Federal Land Bank of Wichita, Kansas, who asserted that over-production was chargeable, largely to bankers.

He advocated that bankers encouraged farmers to diversify their crops so that they will become self-sustaining.

According to official figures which I have collected, he said, "at least a half million Texas children living on farms in the state have almost forgotten what milk tastes like, and the reason for it is, cotton, which tempts the farmer to gamble everything on one crop."
