Ferguson, husband of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, governor-elect was joined in the complaint by Bailey Hardy and John Chamberlain, ethey alleging that the commission had already contracted to pay in excess of available funds for the fiscal year ending next August 31.

Cureton Statement

C. M. Cureton, chief justice of the supreme court, in rendering a decision from the bench on the application for a restraining order, after previously conferring in chambers with attorneys on both sides of the case, said the court was without jurisdiction, that the matter would have to come before it in the regular way, on application for writ of error.

Rehearing Motion

Under the law the plaintiffs would have fifteen days in which to file a motion for a rehearing in the civil appeals court and thirty days from that time to perfect an application for a writ of error, should the rehearing be denied.

Associate Justice Thomas B. Greenwood of the supreme court did not sit in deciding the application to file a petition for a restraining order, because, Chief Justice Cureton announced, he ascertained he was related to Hardy, one of the plaintiffs in the district court.

Can Execute Contracts

Allred had informed the commission immediately after the third court of civil appeals dissolved the district court injunction last Tuesday that, in his opinion, it was free to execute the contracts.

WHIRLIGIG

The inside fact is that Republican Leader Snell promised to deliver 125 votes for the Garner resolution. He shortchanged Garner by 22 votes.

Church

Bishop Cannon is around trying to stir up the religious issue on prohibition. He figures the Democratic victory in November was the coming of the pope. If he could get the fight down to his level the days would have a better chance of winning. The trouble is no one here will believe him.

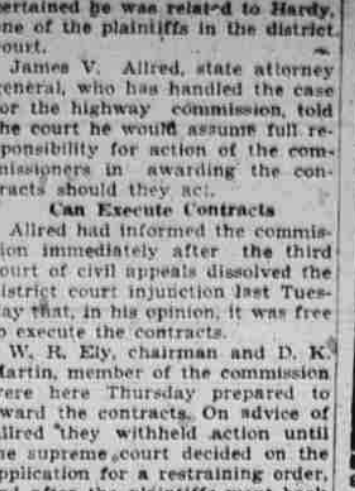

Soviet

Even the hottest Reds confidentially turned against the Hunger Marchers.
A certain Soviet agent in Washington is known to have received directions from Moscow to avoid that name. He was furthermore urged to do all in his power to prevent the American public from getting the idea that the Soviets were behind the move.

Notes

Stories about Republican Leader Snell jockeying Garner into the vote on repeal are pure Republican propaganda. Garner chose his own medicine for a good reason. He knew beer could not get anywhere if first up because Mr. Hoover was going to veto it. The police wanted to use their clubs on the Hunger Marchers. The invaders had kept the entire force on ably for training of teachers. Grant that it is a fundamental duty of the state to train school teachers, you still can not reconcile such a system with the fact that we have only one school or one department in one school operated to supply the scores of other important professions.

Budget

This budget business is locally rated the primary job of the Lame Duck congress but no one expects an authentic balance. Progress to the extent of getting income and expense half a billion dollars closer together would be hailed with relief.

Banks

The ancient feud between the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and its brother banks in other districts—and also between local commercial banks and their country cousins—is simmering to a boil. The highly advertised pressure of excess reserves has failed to push additional credit dollars over the counter.

Notes

Even in New York itself there is anything but harmony of policy among the big lawyers. Some are for whole-hearted cooperation with the federal reserve—others will fight it out on ultra-conservative lines if it takes five years.

Inflation

A large New York bank with close contacts in Washington hears that the senate banking and currency committee has a heavy majority in favor of inflation and that several dozen schemes for production of money are being prepared.

CHAPTER XXII
"You shouldn't have done that," Bowen objected. "Now how'll you get home?"

"I'm not going home just yet," Mary said. "You're going back to my room, and get that fingerprint you can. Where are the ones you got off the gun?"

"In my hotel room?" Bowen asked. "You mean the ones you took from the man who shot at you?"

"Yes, those. They're the ones I want. They're the ones that will tell me who shot at me. They're the ones that will tell me who shot at me."

carefully by the neck. "Sorry to be so long," he explained, "but I had to buy some more of those thumbprints. I got a pretty good thumbprint, I think, but the rest are not so good. I want to wait here a little longer until I go up and develop this. I'll hurry."

"What's the bottle for?" Mary asked bewildered. "Don't touch it!" He dies it away from her pointing finger. "It's the FV's. He drinks a special brand. Mike sneaked it for me while Jack's back was turned. Let me get upstairs with it, quick, before some thing happens to it. He was, I'm sure, under strong excitement. Can you imagine it? I had to carry it down the street like this. I'm afraid to wrap it up around the print. Wonder I wasn't pinched!" He started off, and Mary followed.

"Oh don't leave me here! One more black mark on my reputation won't hurt. I'm going up with you." In the elevator she asked bitterly, "Do you know what was in that magazine you gave me?"

When they were out of hearing, of an excited-looking couple who went up in the elevator with them, she told him. Bowen did not seem impressed.

"Oh who reads that long little sheet anyway? A handful of boys with more money than brains who know it anyhow, and about a million repressed schoolteachers who won't understand it after they read it. Forget it!"

"Emily Ann Ruyter reads it," Mary said. "I saw her in the middle of a pink fit. I saw her in the middle of a pink fit. I saw her in the middle of a pink fit."

"Forget it," Bowen said. "We'll have Emily Ann begin your paroxysm on his knee before we're through."

He propped the door of his room open with a book and laid his purchases out on the table, the precious bottle occupying an open space all its own. After that, they did not bother to talk. Bowen set to work and Mary watched, absorbing the truth print came up clearly. The other were, as he had said, too faint to be of much good.

Presently he raised a flushed perspiration and said dramatically, "Now!" He laid on the table the sheet of paper, containing the fingerprints obtained from the gun. Besides it he placed a fingerprint chart and a magnifying glass. Occupying the place of honor stood the whisky-bottle, erect, its powder-blackened sides showing a variety of finger-prints.

"He sent his eye to the magnifying glass, moving it from one to the other, back and forth. "I'm an expert," he said at last, "but if those thumbprints aren't identical, I'll eat 'em. I'll get an expert's opinion on it. If you want it, The boys in the identification bureau will do it for me."

"Do it, will you?" he asked eagerly. "I accept your word, but we must be absolutely certain." "Right. Tomorrow without fail. Well, Miss Sherlock Holmes, let's get up to bed for tonight."

He removed a pile of clean shirts from a dresser drawer, laid his empty trousers, tucked it and they went out.

"It's late in the evening," he whispered in the elevator. "You'll be home and in bed by ten in an hour. What could be better? And don't worry, your boy-friend will come around all right. Keep a stiff upper lip and remember you've got now to knock some into him with that whisky bottle!"

She didn't want to hear him talk about it. She was more grateful than she could ever say for the way he had just given her. I made her course clear, but personally he had become faintly repulsive to her.

That declaration, however, placed it early in the afternoon. Bowen was in Dixie and Dixie only. Bowen and Dixie were in Dixie and Dixie only. Bowen and Dixie were in Dixie and Dixie only.

"Not touch!" she confessed and followed him, almost sobbing with faintness and weariness to the will, which was empty except for the couple they had seen in the elevator. Mary recognized them without more than a brief glance. The eyes of the woman's oriental perfume was overpowering. The man with her was a-looking, too-foreign, apparently. Such of their talk as drifted to her ears was in French, and his clothes sloppily worn, his hair thick and long below his large black felt hat. He wore a small waxed moustache.

Mary began to feel a peculiar uneasiness. She had been unconventional in going to that room, if anyone chose to be priggish about it. She would not have given it a second thought if it had not been for these exotic-looking people. Ordinarily of that type always made her such for safety to the ideals of her Puritan ancestors.

She sank her coffee gratefully. Bowen did not talk much. "I was supposed to cover a Red lot in Jersey City tonight," he observed. And added complacently, "The hell with it." After that he did not talk at all.

The couple passed out of the room just ahead of them, pausing in the doorway to kiss passionately. "Au revoir, my darling," muttered the man in a guttural voice with a marked accent. "Must you go?" "I must," he said. He took himself from her arms, and hurried out.

Mary and Bowen made amazed glances at each other. In the doorway they gave an exaggerated imitation of that passing, all but the lips. And bowed with laughter.

MARCHERS FIND LIFE DIFFICULT IN CAPITAL

CRACKING THE PARTY WHIPS

WORLD LEADERS OCCUPIED BY WAR DEBT PROBLEM

Bottled up on a bleak highway under the watchful eyes of bluecoats, hard benches for beds and not very much food made the nation-wide jobless and communist motorized "march" on Washington anything but a picnic. Above is a general view of the spot picked by police for their stay. An emergency police telephone set up near the camp is shown lower left. Picture lower right shows a couple of demonstrators after they had "turned in." (Associated Press Photos)

Rep. John McDuffie (left), party whip of the democrats, and Rep. Carl G. Bachmann, republican whip, are lining up their party members for a vote on prohibition repeal when congress meets December 5. Note in recent times have the whips been heard calling the membership for business—the first day of a session. (Associated Press Photos)

PRIMA DONNA AT TWENTY-THREE

Rose Bampton of Buffalo, N. Y., celebrated her debut in grand opera and her twenty-third birthday all on the same day—and it was a grand success. The audience at the Metropolitan opera house, New York, showered her with praise. None was more proud of the young prima donna than her teacher, Madame Queensa Mario, who is shown congratulating her during the performance. (Associated Press Photo)

MARCHERS HAVE-TITLED VISITOR

IT'S MARSHAL MARY PICKFORD

Mary Pickford will be the first woman ever to serve as grand marshal of the Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day. D. E. McDanel (left), president of the tournament association, and Dorothy Edwards (center), queen of the tourney, extended the invitation. (Associated Press Photo)

Europe's war debts to America continue to occupy the attention of every nation concerned. To Ramsay MacDonald (upper right) fell the task of preparing a second note by which Great Britain hoped to convince the United States that postponement of the $95,550,000 payment due December 15 is essential to the economic well-being of the world. His adviser was Neville Chamberlain (lower right), chancellor of the exchequer. Premier Herriot of France also prepared a new note for Washington asking postponement of the $20,000,000 payment from France. President Hoover and Secretary Stimson (lower left) held securely to the position that Europe has failed to produce facts which justify postponement of the debt payments. (Associated Press Photos)

Mock Filet Mignon for Economy

By JANE ROGERS

In these days, when less expensive meat dishes are sometimes a necessity, one nevertheless wishes to preserve the attractiveness of the main course. For instance, hamburger steak, which contains the rich body-building properties of an expensive tenderloin, can be a dignified and delightful part of the menu. In the role of mock filet mignon, it is quite a different proposition from the plain meat ball, both in looks and in flavor.

It is used in this recipe and heightens the mingled savor of beef and bacon.

Mock Filet Mignon

Mix 1-1/2 pounds of finely ground chuck of rump steak with one tablespoon ground suet, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar, 1-4 teaspoon of pepper and paprika to taste. Mix well, make into flat cakes one inch thick, twist a thin slice of bacon around each cake and fasten with a toothpick. Broil or pan broil 15 to 20 minutes. As the meat cooks, the bacon strips shrink and fit snugly around the cake, looking very much like the membrane which surrounds a real filet.

Houston Nurse Tells Of Performing Illegal Operations On Girls

HOUSTON (UP)—A young nurse went before the Harris county grand jury and told the jurors she performed illegal operations upon two high school girls and advised others.

Following her 50 minutes of testimony, which was not revealed by the grand jury, the body adjourned until Wednesday its investigation into vice and immorality among high school boys and girls.

Assistant District Attorney Frank Willford indicated the grand jury would not indict the 27-year-old nurse. He said there was a possibility she might be summoned to appear again.

The nurse was weeping when she testified from the grand jury room. Willford said she admitted performing illegal operations upon two high school girls, one 14 years old and the other 17 years old, and sending "advanced" cases to a certain physician.

Houston's registry of graduate nurses does not carry her name.

The investigation will be resumed when Chief Probation Officer J. W. Mills presents additional evidence concerning the operation of disorderly houses frequented by youths of both sexes.

Two Games Of Interscholastic Race Set Today

CORSICANA—The Greenville and Corsicana high school football teams went through final workouts here Thursday in preparation for their quarter-final interscholastic football game Friday.

The Greenville squad arrived early in the afternoon and had their drill first. Neither Coach Henry Friska of Greenville nor Coach John Pierre of Corsicana would name a starting lineup.

A large delegation of Greenville rooters was expected by special train by game time.

CORPUS CHRISTI—The Corpus Christi high school Buccaneers, victors in ten consecutive games this season, meet the John Reagan Bulldogs of Houston here Friday for the football championship of region 4 of the interscholastic league.

The Bulldogs arrived Thursday afternoon and held a short workout. It was said they would be without the services of Frank Tackie, who was injured in an auto crash last week. The Buccaneers were in excellent condition.

The winner of the game will meet the winner of the Corsicana-Greenville contest.

curbed your youthful rashness that you would get some of the "cagala" out of your sports writing, but if anything it seems to have become more so "cagala".

HOW TO RECAPTURE BEAUTY

Good looks are often a matter of good health. Sparkling eyes and a smooth complexion are outward signs of an abundant vitality.

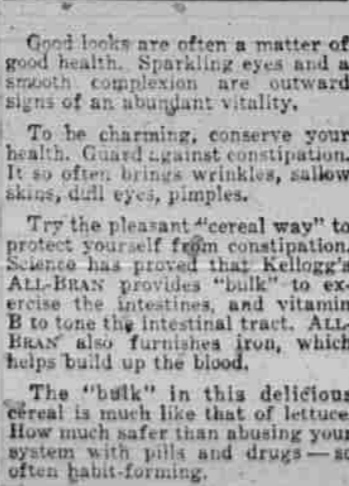

To be charming, conserve your health. Guard against constipation. It so often brings wrinkles, sallow skins, dull eyes, pimples.

Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science has proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which helps build up the blood.

The "bulk" in this delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than abusing your system with pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Two tablespoons daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved, this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

furnished by the Surgeon General which show that the death rate this year is somewhat lower than at the height of the boom. These statistics, as Mr. Hoover interprets them, are so contrary to common sense that the public will not believe them. It will be hard to persuade the American people that destitution and anxiety are not detrimental to health, and what purpose is served by attempting to promote complacency when there is need of sensitiveness and sympathy and deep concern I do not know.

Mr. Hoover still feels, also, that the emergency measures begun last winter are promoting recovery, and that except for a reduction of government expenditures and the reorganization of our banking system, nothing else of a large nature needs to be done at home. His theory is that "our major difficulties find their origins in the economic weakness of foreign nations." Mr. Hoover has not yet become willing to admit that the post-war policies and their consequences in the inflated debt structure of the "new era" need to be revised. We are to go in for "vigorous and whole-souled co-operation with other governments in the economic field" but it is not suggested that such co-operation involves the revision of policies or domestic readjustments to make co-operation effective. Mr. Hoover stands at the end where he stood at the beginning; he hopes that prices will rise again and make it unnecessary to liquidate, reorganize, and revise what remains of the post-war era.

Not on the Perfect Bureaucrat

If the Associated Press has reported the incident correctly, the American Consul General at Berlin, Mr. George S. Messersmith, has probably managed to achieve lasting recognition. For in future histories of the manners and customs of old times at least a footnote will be devoted to Mr. Messersmith. He will be remembered as the man who summoned into his presence one of the great thinkers of all times and solemnly asked him to prove that his entry into the United States would not endanger our institutions. Mr. Messersmith has made himself famous by the mere effort to do his duty in connection with Albert Einstein's visit to the United States. If ever the law was an ass, it was when Mr. Messersmith undertook to administer the law. For his benefit and for bureaucrats like him all future laws of Congress should contain a clause saying that "this act is to be administered by men possessing at least ordinary intelligence and a grain of common sense."

BRAND WHITLOCK III. CANNES, France—Two specialists were in close attendance upon Brand Whitlock, United States ambassador to Belgium during the world war, who is gravely ill with a serious case of shingles. There was no improvement in his condition early today.

'Round 'Bout Town With St. Nick

This snow was all Santa Claus needed to make his downtown headquarters festive. It has heightened the Christmas greens and the red crepe paper in the show windows and made the silver stars shine more brightly. Tonight it will reflect the red and green street lights and burn the word upside down into a topsy-turvy land as he witching as a child's dream of fairy land.

The merchants on Main street have done their best this year with curtailed supplies to keep up the illusion. Albert M. Fisher has his string of colored lights ending in the biggest and shiniest star of the season and his show windows enticed with the kind of practical and impractical garments that make Christmas a thing for grown-up to scheme over.

Dudley's and Wackers both resemble stuffed stockings. Mellingers has an unusually appealing collection of accessories from handknitted bed jackets, so much the rage today and dancing slippers on up to afternoon frocks. J. L. Woods' jewelry store has captured the spirit in a quiet but pervasive manner.

The drug store, Cunningham and Phillips and J. D. Biles are just describing themselves—knowing, most likely that they are going to be popular as—Biles has several shops on Main street window.

As for St. Nick himself, the old fellow has been captured as usual by the Big Spring Hardware Co. There in the midst of dolls and horns and all the articles of his domain he rules with the same old tug at the heart strings as of yore. Depressions may come and depressions may go but Santa Claus will remain the same—so long as there is a child in the world and a nickel to spend for Christmas.

Equity, New Texas Magazine To Be On Stands In January

National politicians who hang around Washington and dry-goods-box peddlers who gather around the friendliest spittoon are both agreed that the U. S. A. must not go socialistic and has gone very well capitalistic. Few of them have had a policy to suggest.

The new magazine, Equity, which Texas can claim the credit of conceiving, announces that the country needs a paternalistic form of government and that this is the only thing that will prevent a revolution if times continue bad. Paternalism is the protection of the weak by the strong. The family is its ideal. This editorial policy is too detailed to explain in one newspaper article; subscribers of the magazine are buying it to learn the safe and sure way out of the present dilemma, reports the editor.

The serialization of Billie Mayfield's novel "1950" is the fiction feature for the first numbers, in addition to a few other exceptionally interesting stories. "1950" is a tale of a whole of a depression and is expected to sweep the country, and be a story that everybody will be talking about next year.

The editorial policy of "Equity," says Walter Harbin the editor, a newspaper man of long experience, is aimed at the great mass of people who desire a change and will recognize what they want when they see it. It is not a class magazine, he says; it is intended to make thinking people feel and feeling people think. The first issue will come out in January.
