BATTLE OF DOVE CREEK

FOUGHT IN 1863 BETWEEN 300 TEXANS AND 900 KICKAPOO INDIANS
By AUSTIN CALLAN

In 1863 the Kickapoo Indians numbered about nine hundred. They had been less hostile, perhaps, than any other savages west of the Mississippi River. Unlike the treacherous Comanches and Kiowas, the promises they made were usually lived up to and no trail of murder and devastation was left along the way they traveled from one favorite hunting ground to another.

During the winter of 1863 permission was granted this tribe by the United States Army Department to peacefully pass southward through Texas into Mexico. At that time the frontier was not very well protected, as most of the able-bodied men had been sent to the front to fight on the side of the South in the great Civil War. The citizens had organized, however, for home defense and such units of soldiers were under Brigadier-General James W. Throckmorton. The forty-sixth Texas cavalry, commanded by Col. James E. McCord, was most active in the western section of the State, where the cattle industry was just beginning to develop, and troops of this regiment were stationed at Camp Colorado, Runnels county, to repulse depredating savages over a wide area. There were also other forces of citizen soldiery giving protection to the country east of Camp Colorado.

Peaceful Kickapoos.

When word reached different commanding officers of the Confederate troops and the other soldiers assigned to looking after the frontier, that a large body of Indians had passed the Brazos river, headed in towards the Colorado and the Concho rivers, it was not known that they were peaceful Kickapoos. No official information had been sent out regarding the intention of this band to journey through Texas and down into Mexico without molesting the white folks along the way. Consequently no blame is attached to the troops who fought the disastrous battle of Dove Creek.

It was a fight which might properly be termed a victory for the savages. They really won, although they did not realize it and retreated when they might easily have scored a repetition of the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn, if they had only followed up their military advantage.

The day previously to the fight Lieut. Pete Callan, of Camp Colorado, with a troop of scouts sighted the Kickapoos. His guide was a half-breed Cherokee named Jim Mulkey and Jim reported the Indians as being friendly. He claimed that any trained guide could follow an Indian trail for a short distance and tell whether they were changing camp, on a hunt or going out for trouble. The scouts were not sure about Mulkey's theory being correct, some of them were persuaded that it was just an idea of his. But as there were only sixty of the white scouts and nine hundred of the Indians, they concluded it would be best not to attack the Indians.

Late one afternoon the tribe stopped near the G. W. Tankersley ranch. Mr. Tankersley was a pioneer of the west who seemed to get along with all Indians who passed his way and he swapped horses with one of the Kickapoo chiefs. This helped to precipitate the fight on the following day, as the Tankersley horse was recognized by Capt. Fossett who happened along with troops of Confederate soldiers, a part of the home reserve used for protecting the frontier. Fossett was joined by Capt. Totten, who commanded a force of three hundred men from several counties farther back east, and it was decided to give battle.

Indians Accept Challenge.

The Kickapoos, upon seeing that the whites meant to challenge their presence in that section of the country, made ready to defend themselves. There was a large, dense thicket lying between a deep ravine and a steep bank on Dove Creek, which was south of the Concho river. It offered splendid protection and the Indians took advantage of it. But few places were left open to attack.

Totten and Fossett held a consultation of war. It was agreed that Totten would charge the thicket with his three hundred men from the side on which the ravine was located, while Fossett would capture the horses and drive them back to the rear so that the Indians could not get to them when they commenced to retreat.

These plans were carried out so far as Fossett was concerned. He got several hundred head of the Kickapoo ponies, but Totten overmarched his force. When his men crawled out of the ravine and into the open space between it and the edge of the thicket the Indians poured forth a deadly fire at short range. Most of the men who were in the lead were instantly killed and the balance were thrown into wild confusion. It was a desperate situation; there was a chance for the whole band to be wiped out; a number of bloody, hand-to-hand fights took place and the odds were overwhelmingly against the pale faces.

Capt. Fossett, who was at some distance with the horses and saw what was taking place, immediately had his men turn the horses loose and charge the Indian camp. The men rode furiously among the wigwams and the women and children in order to draw the attention of the warriors from Totten's men. These wigwams were scattered for a quarter of a mile along the banks of Dove Creek and by the time the charge had extended from one end to the other of the Indian camp, all guns of the white men were empty and it was necessary to retreat. But the expected happened. The Indians rushed to the defense of their own and gave pursuit to the invaders. This gave Totten a chance to get away.

Fossett was pursued by the savages to the open prairie where the horses had been turned loose. A desperate encounter took place there and among the killed was Lieut. Gideon, a popular young officer known to many frontiersmen. At one time the little band of only a hundred and ten whites was threatened with extermination. Capt. Totten had been unable to rally his men and could not bring them back to Fossett's aid. They retreated for at least ten miles before stopping. But when it looked as if the Kickapoos were going to get their enemy into a deadly noose, Capt. Fossett stamped three hundred of the captured horses, drove them madly over the dismounted warriors and made a safe getaway, holding most of the animals as a prize of war.

Kickapoos Retreat.

That night the whites all camped together and a more vigorous and better arranged attack was planned for the next day. But it never took place for two reasons; first of all the most severe blizzard ever experienced south of the staked Plains swept down on the camp before morning, and in the next place the Kickapoos, believing that they had been whipped, retreated as fast as they could towards Mexico.

Fifty brave frontiersmen lost lives in the battle of Dove Creek about the same number of Indians were killed. The attack was undoubtedly a mistake, but those who participated in it are not to be blamed. They had long suffered from Indian depredations; their cattle and horses had been stolen time and time again and their neighbors cruelly butchered. Each mind was fresh with the memory of some horrible deed the savages had perpetrated along the frontier and all red men looked alike to them.

The Kickapoos continued their journey into Mexico unmolested after this fight. They found a permanent home among the towering Santa Rosa mountains, a hundred miles beyond the Texas border, yet within sight of it, and down there in that hazy, lazy, dreamy land they still dwell, much the same people that they were in that romantic past when they chased buffalo on the Clear Fork, the Concho and the Colorado rivers of Texas. The chief difference now being that they have thrown away their tomahawks and live in peace.

These Indians harbor no ill will toward the pale-face, so far as one may discern. Those Texans to-day who occasionally go down there to hunt the fleet-footed deer and the grizzly bear are accorded the very best of treatment at their hands. But you find without old warriors among them who took part in the Dove Creek fight and whenever the subject of this fight is mentioned to one of these warriors he will take a deep puff at his pipe, blow rings of smoke up toward the sky and with a sad far away look on his face, will say: "Heap big mistake of the Tehangs, (Texans)."

The Forestry Problem of Texas

By E. O. SIECKE,
State Forester.

Perhaps you will say that our forestry situation does not concern you. Very likely you are a farmer, a business man or a professional man. Perhaps you feel that the owner of forest land, the lumber manufacturer, the lumber retailer, together with a few alarmists who are always predicting dire consequences, can do all the worrying that needs to be done concerning our rapidly vanishing forest resources. If you hold this attitude of mind you will naturally question the soundness of the statement that from the cradle to the grave the help of the forest is vital to you and that no one can escape the penalty that must be paid when our timber level drops and the forest products essential to our every day existence, either become unavailable or can be had only at exorbitant prices.

The Many Uses of Wood.

The farmer uses more lumber and other forest products than any other class of citizens. His farm home and farm buildings are made of wood; his fences are fastened to wooden posts; he grasps his implements by wooden handles and he hauls his produce to market in wooden wagons. The merchant usually arises from a wooden bed; trends on a wooden floor; eats breakfast at a wooden table while sitting in a wooden chair, and reads the morning paper made from wood pulp. In his place of business he uses a wooden chair and wooden desk. The goods that he sells come in wooden packing boxes, which incidentally consume one-fifth of the lumber produced in the United States. His goods are sold over wooden counters and wrapped in paper made from wood pulp. Furthermore, many articles that the merchant sells consist largely of wood fibre. Much so-called silk material is artificial silk made from wood; linoleum is 80 per cent wood flour; victrola records are 60 per cent wood flour; much of the string and cord that he uses and sells is made of tough twisted paper derived from wood pulp. No matter what business or occupation a man follows, his activities bring him in contact with wood and wood products many times a day; in fact, he is hardly ever entirely free from contact with things that come from the forests. It appears, therefore, that all classes of citizens are about equally involved in our forestry problems.

States Now Importing Lumber.

From the time this continent was settled our forest history has been one of exploitation without replacement. The once important lumber producing States of New England, New York and Pennsylvania have long since run through with their forest inheritance and have become lumber importing States. Pennsylvania today pays not less than $25,000,000.00 a year in freight charges on the lumber it imports, notwithstanding the fact that this lumber could be grown at home on her huge devastated area of forest lands. The extensive pine forests of the Lake States region have also disappeared. The Southern pine region extending from Maryland to the Trinity river in Texas has for the last fifteen years furnished more than one-third of the lumber used in the United States. The virgin timber in this group of States is being exhausted with alarming rapidity, and this region will cease to be a considerable factor in the exporting lumber trade in from twelve to fifteen years.

In a few years Texas must begin to import larger and larger quantities of lumber from the Pacific Northwest, since northern California, Oregon, Washington and northern Idaho contain the bulk of our remaining forest resources. It should be borne in mind that even the timber resources of the Pacific Northwest region will be exhausted in about sixty years. Sixty or seventy years is a very short time in the life of our Nation and State. If we are to escape the dire consequences of a timber famine it is high time for the various timbered States and the Nation to evolve and put into operation a practical forest policy under which our forests will be treated as a crop and not as a mine.

Exploiting Our Forests.

Let me repeat, that the history of lumbering in the United States shows that we have progressively exploited our timber in each forest region without making adequate provisions to secure renewal of commercial forests on areas not valuable for agricultural purposes, but which are nevertheless admirably adapted for producing another crop of lumber trees. We have exploited our forest as a mine using up our forest capital without taking measures for the replacement of that capital.

What of the situation in Texas? Texas originally had about 12 million acres of magnificent longleaf, shortleaf and loblolly pine forests, of which less than 1,500,000 acres remain. A few of our big mills have sufficient timber to run them for fifteen years, but 80 per cent of the large mills will be cut out by 1930. At a conservative estimate, we have in East Texas six million acres of cut-over land not adapted to agriculture. Less than two million acres, or 30 per cent, of this cut-over area is supporting a second growth stand of pine. The aggregate annual production of these young forests converted to terms of board feet of lumber is less than one-third of the lumber used by Texas citizens today and, furthermore, the bulk of this young timber will not have reached "lumber" size by the time our remaining virgin is exhausted. About four million acres of this non-agricultural cut-over land supports timber of very little value, or is entirely unproductive. Indeed, nothing else could be expected, for logging operations have not been conducted with an eye to keeping the land continually productive and fires have annually swept over these areas killing the baby trees that managed to make a start. Our big forestry problem in Texas is to make this area productive as speedily as possible, growing the lumber supplies we shall need in the future.

Cut-over area has been burned repeatedly. Young pine is entirely absent and in a few years the remaining seed trees will disappear, thereby preventing natural and inexpensive reforestation.

Vital and Economic.

Considered in the light of these facts, our forestry problems become one of the most vital and economic industrial questions pressing for solution at this time. In the final analysis, it is merely making productive those areas within our State splendidly adapted for growing timber crops and of little value for other purposes. From the standpoint of public welfare the time has come when it is just as important to grow timber on timber land as it is to grow cotton on cotton land.

The importance of making our idle timber growing lands productive is apparent when we appreciate that by 1930 Texas citizens will be compelled to import approximately one billion board feet of forest material annually from the distant Pacific Northwest. The additional freight rates on this material, over and above freight rates from East Texas points, will amount to $10,000,000.00 per year. Furthermore, forestry neglect has created millions of idle acres in our East Texas cut-over land, thereby reducing taxable values as well as constricting the field for profitable employment of labor. The total cost to Texas citizens, therefore, of our continued indifference to forestry will in a few years time, easily amount to $15,000,000 a year—an indirect tax equal to two-thirds of the cost of our State government today.

This being the situation, what has been done and what is being done to put our lumber growing land on a productive basis? Our Legislature in 1915 created the office of State Forester, placed it under the jurisdiction of the Board of Directors of the Agricultural & Mechanical College and appropriated $10,000.00 per annum to develop the work. Appropriations gradually increased during subsequent legislative sessions so that now the forestry activities conducted by the State are supported by an appropriation of $40,000.00 per annum. With the meagre funds at its disposal, the Forestry Department has attempted to develop all lines of forestry important in the State. However, for the purpose of this article, only those phases of the State work that deal with the renewal and proper management of our lumber forests will be discussed.

Forest and Grass Fire Menace.

Lumbermen and other citizens giving thought to forestry are especially unanimous in their conclusions that forest and grass fires constitute the most natural barrier to the renewal of our lumber forests. The State Forestry Department has, therefore, paid particular attention to the forest protection work, and in this work the Federal Government has matched State money dollar for dollar. The field force in forest protection has grown from nine to thirty-two men and satisfactory progress has been made in controlling the fire nuisance. Approximately seven and one-half million acres, grass areas, have been under patrol for a number of years. During 1921, 11 1/2 per cent of this area was burned over, during 1922, 6 1/2 per cent, while during 1923 only 2 1/2 per cent was burned. It is conservatively estimated that such reduction, due to the fire suppression work, has resulted in renewing a fair growth of young pine timber on 500,000 acres of cut-over land.

The last Texas Legislature provided funds to assist the timberland owning farmer in the proper management of his woodlands. The farmers in the commercial timber belt of East Texas own more than 1,000,000 acres of timberland covered with second growth pine varying in size from seedling up to sawlog trees. Increasing the productivity of this forest acreage will be a factor in minimizing our timber shortage.

The State has also made funds available for the purchase of about 1,000 acres of cut-over land to be managed as a State Forest for the purpose of demonstrating the knowledge we already have concerning the growing of successive timber crops and for ascertaining through research the things we do not yet know. The first State Forest area of 1700 acres was recently purchased. It is located near Kirbyville, near the boundary line between Jasper and Newton counties, and contains areas where reforestation has not yet taken place and also areas covered with second growth timber from seedling to merchantable size. Opportunity is, therefore, presented to start research and demonstration work relative to the proper management of young timber of different ages as well as concerning the best methods of securing renewal of young growth.

Legislative Committee Investigating Forestry Problems.

Another favorable action taken by the thirty-eighth Texas Legislature was to request the Governor of Texas to appoint a committee, consisting of four members of the Legislature and seven

CURRENT COMMENT

By J. H. LOWRY

BEFORE AND AFTER THE BATTLE.

It is before the battle that I try to write this; it will be after the battle when you read it; provided of course that you can find time to scan the Current Events, after reading the comic sections, football results, election returns, automobile accidents, and the parties attending the shooting of husbands by Dallas wives. The subject of which I speak is the one scheduled to be fought at the polling places on November 4th to determine who will be Governor of Texas. As I try to write it is prognostication, extravagant claims, with an occasional bet to back up the judgment of the prognosticator; when you read it will be the realization or the crushing of hopes—the I-told-you-so or the admitted conviction that the people are crazy and incapable of self-government. Today dozens of men and women are rushing into print or standing on the street corners telling why you should or should not keep your pledge to support the nominees; when you read some will tell of the dirty lies and the crooked ways that were employed to win, while others will be preparing for a heavy assault upon the offices within the gift of the Governor of Texas. As I try to write we are all fluttering around in human blindness, trying to convince the world that we know something we know we don't know; when you read, the mists will have rolled away, the curtain will have been removed, and we will know who is going to draw the salary, hand out the offices, fuss with the Legislature and assist in levying the taxes that we will enjoy paying about as much as we enjoy having a tooth pulled.

Realizing now as I did in the old days of community debates in the log school houses, that there are two sides to the question of whether pursuit or possession gives the greater measure of happiness, I do not undertake to say whether the ante or post election season fills the cup of pleasure to the higher notch, but rather I am consoling myself with the knowledge that no matter how the battle goes in Texas we will reap a result and a thrill we haven't had in many days or years. No matter what the result may be, we'll have the present generation never again—a woman Governor, or a Republican Governor, of Texas. Either result will give us much to talk about and write about, and possibly cuss about for many months to come. I rather like to look ahead and guess how things will be under conditions that may be thrust upon us, and so I will ask you to pardon me while I venture a guess at what we will say and do under the new condition grand old Texas is soon to experience.

It may be that the battle of the ballots will favor Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, now better known as "Ma," and that she will guide the destinies of the grand old commonwealth for the next two years. If so, what an important personage this woman will be for a time. Her photograph, made some years ago, of course, will be displayed everywhere, newspaper reporters will come from the four corners of the earth to interview her, and if she cares to she can earn far more than the salary of the Governor by writing a short story of her life and giving one of the metropolitan papers or big magazines the exclusive right to print it. People will look with great interest on the picture of the little shack in which she was born; they will study carefully the pictures of the backyard of her home, and if she has a favorite cow, rooster or dog, said favorite will be pictured in all prominent publications and the name thereof will become the name of countless cows, roosters or dogs throughout the land. Of course, every woman in the land will wear a "Ma Ferguson sun bonnet," and we tremble when we think of the financial loss milliners who have laid in heavy stocks of other headwear will sustain. If the good lady upon whom the burdens of state rest will favor us with a short story of how Jim proposed, and tell us what the first family quarrel was about, and how it ended, we'll read it with far greater interest than we read the late works of the popular fiction writers, or the lives of Babe Ruth and Al Johnson. Of course, the good lady would scorn such a suggestion, and chase one making the suggestion from the executive mansion with the gubernatorial broom or rolling pin, but if she cared to she could easily amass a great fortune by furnishing testimonials on the virtues of the cook stove or sewing machine in use in her home, and increase her bank account many fold by recommending the brand of face powder she prefers, or extolling the curative properties of the remedy with which she cures her colds. I do not have space here to speak of the inauguration, but I know the women reporters who write up the brilliant affair will find some new adjectives with which to tell us about the inaugural costume. And let me add here that if Ma should take the oath of office arrayed in a plain calico dress it will be rank foolishness for any one to oppose her for re-election. And it will be interesting to note how many original women suffragists there are in Texas when the mad scramble for office begins. Fellows like myself, who never dislocated a hip in a mad scramble to get to the polls and cast a ballot for equal suffrage, will gladly confess their errors, and declares politics is to be purified and the world uplifted by women ballots and women officials. With Lady Astor, Jane Adams, Frances Willard, Florence Nightingale and Charlotte Corday, and other women who have wrought, Miriam A. Ferguson will take her place in the galaxy of female immortals and the world will bow before her in lavish homage—for nothing succeeds like success.

But ballots are treacherous things. They may clothe one with immortality, and canopy one with halos, and they may send one to the dark corners of oblivion, where no reporters will seek, a photo or life history, and no agent will invade to ascertain what kind of sewing machine or face powder is used, or what remedial agent is employed to cure common colds. If the ballots prove false to Miriam A. Ferguson, this good woman will remain in her home, look after the sewing on of buttons, the darning of hosiery, the setting of hens, the rearing of chickens, and the curing of colds. And she will be the center of affection to which children and husbands will turn for sympathy and aid, just as she has ever been, and the world will care little about where she was born, how she was courted and won, what sewing machine she prefers, or what remedy she uses when she contracts the flu. The world crowds the halls and feels a supreme interest in the acts of those who succeed, but pays little attention to the batter who fans three times and goes to the benches. It will be triumph, of course, for the good woman if she heads the march to the mansion she so sorrowfully left six years, while the world looks on and applauds, but my opinion is that she will be happier if she remains in the home, of which she has long been the affectionate center. There she may forget the thrills and the disappointments of the cold, clammy, cruel game of politics, but even in the big executive mansion, sought by many and watched by all, she can never forget the quiet joys of the old home, in which she lived and loved and was the reigning queen. Nor do I believe that high position or the pomp of power can ever satisfy the soul of a good woman as did the old home in which the children were born and played, and where the old family dog stands guard over the back yard and bays a deep-mouthed welcome when he hears the footsteps of a loved one approach. But as a rule, it isn't happiness people strive for—they want triumph.

The battle of ballots may result in victory for Dr. Butte, nominee of the Republican candidate for Governor. There has been no such thing as the election of a Republican Governor of Texas in Texas since reconstruction days, and many of us who have voted the Democratic ticket since reaching the voting age have laid the flattering unction to our Democratic souls that never would the unholy hands of the wicked Republicans be laid upon this grand old commonwealth. We have even said that if such a dire calamity should overtake our beloved State, the lone star would put out its light for shame, and never again hold its radiant torch to guide a free and happy people into the ways of pleasantness and the paths of peace. We old-timers of the Jeffersonian league have long felt that water would run up hill, and evening blush to own the stars that gem night's radiant brow, long before the people of Texas would turn their backs on a Democratic nominee and enthrone a wicked Republican in the granite State house. But it is evident that a change has come over the spirit of some dreamers. They are not throwing as choice gems of profanity at the wicked enemy as they did in days gone by, and some are even admitting doubt whether the State would grow up in rag-weeds and become a habitation of owls and bats if a Republican should be chosen to guide the destinies of imperial Texas. And so it may be, when you read this that all over these wide extended plains such a shout of joy will be going up as hasn't been heard since the eventful eve when the magazines of the skies burst upon Judean hills over the election of a Republican Governor of Texas.

And if Dr. Butte is given the reins of government and ensconced in the State house, what are you going to say, and what are you going to do? Of course, the first thing will be to make sure of the pronunciation of his name, but after that, what? What can those of us who, when applying for Fish Commissioner,

Health Inspector, stenographer, Asylum Trustee or Penitentiary clerk, and who are prone to boast of our Democratic records and our great sacrifices for the party, say to the Republican mogul who sits on high and divides the spoils? I have my story prepared, and it runs like this: "Good morning, Governor Butte, But or Boot—I have long been convinced, Governor, that politics in our State was too one-sided. The best interests of the State demand that the political parties be of equal strength. This will force the parties to name as their nominees their best material, neither being willing to risk the chance of losing with an incompetent, or a person of questioned integrity as nominee. I congratulate you and the great State of Texas, dear Governor, over the selection of such a scholarly and polished gentleman to hold the lines of State. By the way, Governor, some of my people back in Tennessee were Republicans. I am sure you must have known them; since they were noted for cussing Democrats, and one of them served as constable two years in McNairy county. He made a fine record and would have been re-elected if he hadn't made himself unpopular by capturing too many moonshine stills. My great grandmother was one of Abraham Lincoln's sweethearts and named her oldest boy Abe. But what I called to say, Governor, is, if you haven't selected a Grass Commissioner for Brazos bottom, that I have hoed grass, pulled grass, mowed grass and slept on grass. For a long time we had ground grass as breakfast at our homes, and I used to hang meat with bear grass, and I believe I could render a service as Grass Commissioner that would be the talk of the State and popularize your administration with all classes. In the event you have some one slated for Grass Commissioner, I would be glad to accept a position as pork inspector in any cafe you may name. I sincerely hope your administration will be a great success, and I assure you my hearty co-operation in making it so. I forgot to say that if all the grass commissions and food inspections have been filled I would be glad to have a place as notary public in my precinct, and if you will consider my application for such a high honorable position I will be glad to submit a petition signed by at least ten reputable citizens of my county."

But, suppose Dr. Butte isn't elected, what will become of him? Don't worry. No Republican who makes a good race in Texas ever comes to grief or is forced to seek a place in the cotton fields.

POULTRY RAISING FOR PROFIT

By MRS. MARGARET STUTE.

In a recent survey of farming conditions in Texas it was discovered that thousands of Texas farmers were not raising chickens. At the same time I saw a report which stated that hundreds of carloads of eggs are monthly shipped into Texas, sold at a big profit, and the money used to build up neighboring States at the expense of our own State. I know some farmers have tried to raise chickens with little or no success, and I felt perhaps that they had not had the correct information as to the best breeds, correct feeding and housing. So, I am going to try to give the readers of the Magazine Section, in a series of three articles, some pointers and facts on chicken raising and marketing as related to me by one of the best chicken experts in Texas.

Mr. M. C. Allison, of 5628 Pershing avenue, Fort Worth, Texas, has been connected with the raising of chickens for over fifty-five years. He has made a success of his business and is well versed in it. He is a practical business man, and, having devoted the greater part of his life to this one line of business, I feel we are, indeed, fortunate in securing these facts from him as to his experience in raising and marketing chickens.

White Leghorn Superior.

The past eighteen years he has devoted to developing his own strains of different breeds, and for the past ten years he has been specializing on the breed that he has finally determined to be the most profitable and the most satisfactory for our Texas climate. He, at present, has a large plot of ground in a suburban suburb of Fort Worth and has several hundred of his own strain of English single comb white leghorns. He has a large incubator which holds over than fifteen thousand eggs and does a great deal of custom hatching (that is, hatching for other persons) along with hatching thousands of baby chicks from his own flock which he ships all over Texas.

Mr. Allison considers the white leghorn superior to other breeds, for several reasons. First, the only profit to be made in chickens, in his opinion, is in the production of eggs. Leghorns undoubtedly excel in egg-production, he said. Next, they eat less than other breeds, and they have more flesh and less bone than other breeds at the same weight. Mr. Allison has demonstrated that a person with only a small flock of leghorns should have enough eggs for his own use, raise all his own chicken meat and have enough eggs for sale to pay the greater part of his grocery bill.

When the farmer can do this, in connection with his garden and hogs, he will have a more comfortable living; and he should, at least, all things being equal, give the chicken business a thorough trial.

After the breed has been decided on, the next step is to select a strain of that same breed which has a good egg-laying record, that is healthy, vigorous and has never been contaminated with any disease. Mr. Allison urges prospective chicken growers to raise only one breed. They will invariably get mixed, even if segregated in different pens, by flying over the fence, gate left open, etc. The best result is obtained from pure-blooded chickens, just the same as with live-stock etc.

Baby Chicks Cheaper.

When establishing a start, it is usually cheaper to buy baby chicks, preferably an April hatch, and raise your hens from these. You can buy one hundred and fifty chicks for about the same price of a few hens. However, this should not be attempted, Mr. Allison said, unless one is equipped with good brooders so as to handle them properly.

Otherwise, there will be so much loss that it would have been better to have bought hens in the first place. As soon as the baby chicks are old enough to distinguish the sex, they should be separated. Pen the cockrels up and fatten to be eaten or sold as soon as possible; they annoy the pullets and retard their growth by chasing them away that are illustrated in the accompanying photograph. Of course, this is not always the case, but, as the only accurate test is to trap-nest the hens, and the average farmer does not have time to do this, the suggestions herewith can be relied on to give a fair test. Fatten, eat or sell all of the undersized pullets.

Mr. Allison with Leghorn cockerel and pullet of April hatch, 1924.

The following spring, before hatching time, select the best hens in the flock and segregate in separate pens by themselves with roosters from some other flock, as inbreeding of the same flock deteriorates the stock. Be sure they have not been exposed to diseases and come of a good laying flock. Use ten hens to one rooster, and mate ten days before any of the eggs are set. Set eggs as soon as possible, after they are laid.

The Most Natural Way.

Mr. Allison, in discussing the various methods of hatching, pointed out the virtues and faults of each method to me. Hatching with hens is the most natural way, as the greater number of chicks are thus hatched and a greater number will be strong and vigorous. The difficulties are that hens rarely set in the months that are the best for maturing good chicks. Chickens running with hens are more exposed to disease and mites, and there is a limited possibility in numbers. Individual incubators are rarely satisfactory unless there is some one who can give them a great deal of attention so that the heat will be kept of an even temperature. The investment in the machine must be kept in mind; also the danger from loss and fire risk. Of late years custom hatching has become more and more popular. Custom hatching is where one man has a large machine with a capacity of several thousand eggs and gives his whole time and attention to it. He is usually able to hatch them for a very small amount, and when the feed of the hen, and loss of production during hatching time is taken into consideration, it is the cheapest way of hatching, whenever it is possible. Chickens can be hatched from January to May. Mr. Allison has found that April hatched pullets are the best winter layers in the leghorn breed, because they will not molt if hatched after April 15th. This is a point to be watched, as winter eggs bring the best price on the market.

Selecting Eggs for Hatching.

In selecting the eggs for hatching, there are several things worth remembering. Select only the medium-sized, regular shaped ones. Discard long ones, round ones, those with rings around them, those with rough shell, those with shell having light spots, or any irregularity whatsoever.

The healthiest, most vigorous and best chickens are gotten from the eggs of hens in their second summer. As the chickens depend on the parent stock for their vigor and egg-laying capacity, it is then necessary to keep the flock of pure blood and build up by breeding with new stock each year. It is usually best to eat or sell hens after the third summer, as their egg-laying capacity is diminished beyond that time, as a rule. Cull the flock every year and keep your eyes open for any sign of weak stock; dispose of these without delay.

Keep the roosters penned up during the summer and fall, as they annoy the hens and infertile eggs bring the best price on the market since they are the best keepers.

Market your eggs while they are fresh and establish a reputation of having A-1 eggs. Sort out the most uniform eggs in shape and color and market them.

Mrs. Matthews and her husband, who died in 1895, came to Texas from Alabama by wagon in 1854. For several years before moving into the rock house, the couple lived in stockade houses, as protection against the Indians, who were at that time raiding the Texas settlements.

The rescue took place nine years ago when the boys were en route home from school. Young Anderson fell into the swollen waters of East Buffalo Creek. The two Moreland boys dived in after him and saved his life.

WILL TRY LONG STAPLE COTTON.

Two Cherokee county, East Texas, farmers will try the growing of long staple cotton next season. The two farmers are Bloomer Florence and Walter Powers, who have purchased 400 bushels of cotton seed of three leading long staple varieties.

The seed were selected from cotton which this year averaged a bale to the acre in Van Zandt county. Florence and Powers say they intend to plant all three of the varieties upon the same kind of land, giving the crops the same cultivation and fertilization, in order to observe the results next summer and fall. The seed affording the best results will be of the variety they will continue to plant each year thereafter.

From the United States Government helium plant, at Fort Worth, 2,000,000 feet of helium gas was shipped in 14,000 metal containers to the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., to inflate the sister ship of the Shenandoah, the ZR-3, after her arrival there on the completion of her trans-Atlantic voyage from Germany. The 14,000 metal containers filled 24 freight cars to full capacity.

Shortly after the arrival of the ZR-3, at Lakehurst, she was put in "drydock" in her hangar and emptied of the hydrogen inflation, which was replaced with non-inflammable helium from the Fort Worth plant, the only source of supply for helium in the world, according to Lieut. Wicks in charge of the plant.

The ZR-3 came over to the United States from Germany inflated with hydrogen gas, which is a dangerous explosive and has caused the wreck of several big Zeppelins.

ROAD CHIEFS OF NINE STATES TO MEET.

Highway officials of five States of the United States and four States of the Republic of Mexico are being summoned to attend a road and bridge conference in Fort Worth on November 10. A conference highway association to cope with interstate highway problems and attempt a detailed plan of co-ordination and correlation probably will grow out of the meeting, it was said by A. R. Losh, district Federal highway engineer, who announced plans for the session after a conference with W. E. Lea of Orange, president of the Texas Highway Association, and W. T. Wheeler, secretary of the Texas organization.

U. OF T. GETS $14,834 IN OIL ROYALTIES.

During the month of September the Big Lake Oil Company paid $14,834 to the University of Texas as royalty on oil produced on University land in Reagan county.

Under a ruling made by the Attorney General the royalty must go to the University permanent fund, and therefore cannot be used for the erection of buildings on the campus. H. A. Wrog of Austin, University regent, authorizes the statement that the regents will ask the next Legislature to amend the law so that oil royalties will go to the University available fund, instead of the permanent account, and in that way it can be used for new buildings to displace the many frame shacks on the campus.

FORESTRY PROBLEM OF TEXAS.

citizens of the State at large, to investigate our forestry problems and to submit to the next Legislature a report outlining a comprehensive State Forestry Policy. This committee has been appointed and is actively engaged in the work assigned to it.

The Federal Government is, obviously, interested in seeing that depleted forest lands, wherever located, are again made productive. For the past thirteen years the Federal Government, through the United States Forest Service, has allotted funds to timbered States, having forest protection organization, for the purpose of increasing such work. The McNary-Clarke Forestry Bill enacted by the last Congress increased the Federal funds for creative forest fire protection work $400,000.00 to $1,000,000.00 per annum.

The Texas Forestry Department receives $18,000.00 per annum Federal funds and when the McNary-Clarke Bill becomes operative Texas receives, at least $45,000.00 per annum providing such amount is matched State funds.

The State Forestry Policy adopted by the State Forestry Department and the Texas Forestry Association may be summarized as follows:

State Forestry Policy.

1. Adequate State appropriations to permit the fullest co-operation with the Federal Government in forest protection and proper management of woodland owned by farmers and lumbermen.

2. The purchase by the State of from 50,000 to 100,000 acres of cut-over pine land in East Texas in order that the State may take the lead in demonstrating practical forestry.

3. The enactment of forest taxation laws providing that lands covered with second growth timber of unmerchantable size be taxed annually on a nominal soil valuation only, and that timber products be taxed only when they are cut and marketed. At the present time local taxing bodies have the power to tax both land and growing timber crops annually at constantly increasing valuations. This practice can be compared to the action of a county assessor visiting a farmer's cotton patch every third day during the growing season and on each visit placing a tax on that crop at a constantly increasing valuation.

Forestry is not a fad but a business proposition. The formerly timbered States that have exhausted their lumber forests without renewing forest growth and are now paying huge freight tax on lumber secured from distant sources have learned the lesson and are taking adequate steps to again make idle forest areas productive. The sooner Texas falls in line toward rebuilding its depleted forest area the shorter will be the period during which we will have to pay a supertax of millions of dollars annually on our lumber requirements from the distant Pacific Northwest.

POULTRY RAISING FOR PROFIT.

ket these. Keep the irregular-shaped ones for home consumption. See that your eggs are clean and properly kept. All of these pointers help to bring the producer the highest price on the market.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In the January issue of our Magazine Section, Mrs. Stone will take up the problem of housing poultry, as described by Mr. Allison.)

MAN WITH T. B. IMPROVED

Following is the contents of a letter from Dr. J. B. McKnight, Superintendent of the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium near San Angelo:

August 25, 1924,
Mr. W. E. Sharkey,
Gainsville, Texas,
Dear Sir:

I note from my files that your application for admission to the State Tuberculosis Sanitarium has been received and rejected on account of your advanced condition. At this time we have 60 men on waiting list, and should your application have been accepted, on account of our long waiting list, would mean a wait of six to eight weeks.

Yours very truly,
J. B. McKnight
Superintendent.

The young Mr. Sharkey, the person above addressed, bearing the letter, was in Santa Anna Thursday of last week, and stated he had gained several pounds, was improving rapidly and was going to get well, even though he had been pronounced past redemption and hopeless.

Sharkey stated he had no money, but friends fitted him up with a couple of burrows, a light and cheap wagon, with a little camping outfit, and told him to go west in search of improvement. Started out, alone, broke, sick, hopeless and in despair, he headed for the west, wondering why he could not just die and be relieved. One night as he was starting a fire, he noticed that the fumes from the Kerosene oil seemed to loosen up his lungs, and he proceeded to take a drink from the oil can. It appeared to give relief, and he began drinking the Kerosene oil three times daily, sleeping out in the open and driving west. Now his fever has left him and he is gaining strength every day.

This is the story Mr. Sharkey told us, as he gave us the letter to read, and asked us for a small donation, stating that he could only live and travel by charity donated to him by people he met. Proud to say, we were able to help him some and send him on his way. Here's hoping he fully recovers.

GOOD COTTON PICKER

Boyd, the 12 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elder Smith, picked 167 pounds during one afternoon this season. The same day a 10-year-old sister picked 193 pounds during the day. Mr. Smith picked 390 and says the boy beat him on the last weighing.

MRS. FERGUSON WINS GOVERNOR'S RACE

In Tuesday's election the Democrats were again victorious in Texas, and elected the first woman governor in the world. She will assume the duties of the office early in January of next year. At this time we have not received complete returns, but the following is the latest up to the time of going to press:

MRS. MIRIAM A. FERGUSON

Ferguson 140,824
Butte 104,683

The Amendment, pertaining to veterans pensions, seems to have carried by a large majority.

Local Boxes

Santa Anna North Ward polled 262 votes, giving Coolidge 53, Davis 165, LaFollette 2.

For the Amendment 48, against the Amendment 18.

For Governor, Ferguson 132, Butte 120.

Santa Anna South Ward polled 386 votes, giving Coolidge 54, Davis 297, LaFollette 4.

For the Amendment 140, against the Amendment 39.

Ferguson 224, Butte 137.

The election was quiet in Santa Anna.

Coolidge Re-elected President

President Coolidge was re-elected president of the United States by a large majority.

This was no surprise to the writer, as it seemed to be to some.

STOLEN CAR RETURNED

Thursday morning of this week, J. H. Brannan was agreeably surprised to find his Ford Coupe, which was stolen four weeks ago, had been returned some time during Wednesday night, and placed back in the garage where it was stolen from. All the numbers had been removed, even the engine number had been chiseled off and one or two new tires had been put on.

Mr. Brannan had offered a reward of $100 for the return of his Coupe, and had practically abandoned all hopes of ever recovering it. Now it has been returned and he doesn't know who to offer the reward.

You can't retain a position at the top without immense sustained efforts. Those who are climbing will bump you off. Shadow boxers never score a knockout.

D. J. JOHNSON ATTENDS LION BANQUET IN B-W

The following is an extract from a lengthy mention in the Brownwood Daily Bulletin last Saturday, speaking of a banquet in the basement of the First Methodist church at Brownwood Friday night:

"D. J. Johnson, formerly of Brownwood, now of Santa Anna, and who said he now has two homes, one in Brownwood and one in Santa Anna, spoke briefly on the need of good roads, especially between Brownwood and Santa Anna. Mr. Johnson has the boosting habit, which he learned while a citizen of Brownwood, and said last night that Santa Anna has already gained more cotton than will be made in Brown county or will make this year. Of course this statement was made off hand, and under the influence of the exhilarating atmosphere of the Lions club, which affects people differently. A committee will probably be appointed to take the matter up with Lion Johnson in order to ascertain if he was in earnest or just joking about the cotton statement."

Just send your committee up Mr. Lions, and we will produce the evidence to prove to you that D. J. Johnson was neither lying or joking.

LODGE SOCIAL

The members of the I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges met in a social meeting last Thursday night. Those present seemed to enjoy the evening first-rate, especially about 9 o'clock when an invitation was extended to assemble in the dining room where an oyster supper had been prepared. Besides the oysters, a supply of pies, cakes, coffee, etc., were also served. The committee on arrangements did a good work and were praised by all present.

MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Rendleman attended the marriage of their niece, Miss Rama Beekley, at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. B. B. Beekley of Melvin, Texas, Tuesday. Miss Rama is the youngest daughter of the Beekley family.

She was married to Mr. L. Baze of Melvin. The writer very kindly remembers Miss Rama and the Beekley family, having spent several days with them on the Llano river several years ago, while taking a vacation.

Four Youngsters Disappear

On Monday night, October 27, two young couples, Cecil Townsley and Miss Grace Cheek, Marcus Weldon and Miss Eran Campbell, stole a march on their parents and disappeared, leaving in a Ford car, and to this date their whereabouts have never been revealed. The parents are sorely grieved, and have exerted every effort to learn of their whereabouts.

The Fire department was called out about 1 o'clock Sunday morning to the Call Fuller home where a fire had been discovered in the house, but was extinguished with but little damage.

COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION MET LAST SUNDAY

As was announced in our issue of two weeks back, the Coleman County singing convention met with the Trickham class last Sunday and recorded another successful convention. One of our best classes is at Trickham, and one of the best convention communities in the county is also at Trickham. The day was ideal for such an occasion, and the usual Trickham dinner was served at noon. The new books made a hit, and the day was very much enjoyed.

Armistice Day—Its Lesson

The hopes of mankind were never higher than on November 11, 1918. The most terrible war in human history had terminated in a victory that was "to make the world safe for democracy," "forever to end war" and "wipe out the scourge of militarism." Mud-caked men in the trenches, toil-grimed workers in shop and factory, and fearful mothers nursing the next war's "cannon fodder" cried aloud with joy. At last peace and good will should reign among men, and the common people of the world, who for untold centuries have paid the cost of all wars in blood and taxes, should find freedom and happiness in the new era of universal peace.

For six weary years the world has been staggering under the colossal weight of wretchedness imposed by the "war to end war." The people at last stand disillusioned. The common people of the world not known the brutal truth. The late Woodrow Wilson declared that they knew they were lied to, deceived, and herded into the shambles of the late war by the false promises of cynical politicians who cared far more about coal and iron and oil and 100 per cent profits than they did for such trivialities as democracy, justice, righteousness and peace.

Under despair and disillusionment the miserable hordes of hungry humanity in Europe have overthrown governments and driven out many of the rulers who betrayed them, and the whole world is looking to America as its model.

Then what of tomorrow? Shall we put our trust in heavier armaments, as urge those generals who are already talking glibly about "the next war"? Shall Armistice Day, 1924, find us still trying to solve the world's woes by bayonets and brute force? Unless we be stark mad, God forbid!

SENATOR COLE, 102, OF LINCOLN'S TIME, DIES IN HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 3.—Senator Cornelius Cole, 102, member of Congress during the administration of Abraham Lincoln, died at the family residence here today. He suffered an attack of influenza last year from which he never fully recovered.

Senator Cole's weakened condition combined with his advanced years proved too severe a strain on his vitality and death came swiftly after a short illness.

LUNCHEON CLUB POSTPONED MEETING

The Business Men's Luncheon Club postponed their regular weekly meeting this week, due to no preparations being made for the luncheon. This condition was brought about, we understand, because of several members not attending. We realize that we have not accomplished as many worth while things as we have visualized, but we have accomplished a great many things worth while, and many things can yet be accomplished and will be accomplished only by our coming together in these meetings, counseling and working with each other for community development. We trust arrangements will be perfected ere another week whereby we can continue to hold our weekly meetings for the town and community's sake.

Booze Peddler Landed In Jail

Rich Goddard of Brownwood was arrested here Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff J. C. Welch, charged with transporting intoxicating liquors in violation of the law, and also, driving an automobile on the public highway while being intoxicated.

The liquid goods were found in his possession, the car was confiscated, while Goddard was placed in the County Jail at Coleman.

BARGAIN SUBSCRIPTION OFFER

$1.00 Pays to January 1926

The Santa Anna News is anxious to be identified with the best, most loyal, interesting and patriotic institutions in Santa Anna, and being desirous of joining the others of the town in offering bargains, we are going to make the following astounding subscription offer for a few days. There are but few local papers now with a subscription price of less than $1.50 a year, but in our anxiety to get every family in this territory to reading the Santa Anna News, we reduced the price two years ago to $1.00 a year, and now we are going to make an offer still more attractive by offering the News from the date your subscription expires this fall to January 1st, 1926 for only $1.00. We have a large number of subscribers whose time expires this fall, and every one who renews before this offer is withdrawn, will extend your time to January 1st, 1926 for the price of $1.00. This is an exceptional bargain, and we would be glad for several hundred to take advantage of it, the offer is confined to our local territory, and does not include foreign subscribers.

THE TELEGRAPH TOUCH

There is a magic association with telegraphy that few men and boys are able to resist. The people who follow the impulse to take up telegraphy as a profession usually make good beyond their expectations and claim that reward which accompanies the knowledge of this profitable vocation.

Every successful railroad man has sometime in his career worked a telegraph trick. This explains why there is a wide open field for telegraphers. Operators are promoted to other branches of railroading. They absolute accuracy they learn while operating the key places them in direct line for agencies, chief dispatchers' jobs, and positions in the operating department of railroads or executive positions.

The railroads are showing unusual interest in the Telegraph Department of Tyler Commercial College at Tyler, Texas. One of their local railroads supplies messages to the advanced students. The main line of the St. Louis Southwestern Railroad Company Dispatchers train order wire, running into the Telegraph Department, supplies all messages transmitted from station to station. The College supplied with every book, tariff, report blanks, and every form that is used in the railroad offices.

Soon after the Cotton Belt began to supply the College with regular railroad blanks, a wire to receive real messages and begin to assist the instructors in the teaching of station work, the manager of the Tyler Commercial Office of the Western Union Telegraph Company visited the Telegraph Department and arranged for similar work to be done in the Western Union line. The General Western Union Course is offered to all young women and young men interested in Commercial Telegraphy and likely to enter the employ of the Western Union Company. Tariffs, books, blanks, Daily and Monthly Report blanks and all other supplies are furnished by the Western Union Typewriters, files and complete instruments are in the Western Union Department at Tyler Commercial College.

By having the Western Union Telegraph Company to advise the students causes the Tyler Commercial College to have more calls for operators than can be supplied. Graduates of the General Western Union Course can be placed in positions promptly.

The General Railroad and General Western Union courses are described briefly in the 208-page book, "Achieving Success In Business;" copy of this book is yours if you are interested in courses offered. Clip the coupon which is below and send it to Tyler Commercial College.

You may take the course of Telegraphy in combination with the General Secretarial, General Business, Banking, Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Business Administration, Civil Service, Penmanship, Radio or Cotton Cladding.

Clip the coupon which is below and send for the 208-page book. It's free.

While most of the nations of the earth have been equipping great armies and building navies, and killing each other off, over half of all the railroad mileage on earth has been built in our own country, more than two-thirds of all telegraph and telephone lines have been built in our own country, and eighty per cent of all the automobiles manufactured and in use in the world are in our own country. You can't have both expensive militarism with its resultant misery and industrial development with its resultant happiness. Which shall it be?

The helpful hen should replace the eagle on the silver dollar, declares Jewell Mayes, secretary of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture. The hen is the modern personification of the principles of economy advocated by Benjamin Franklin, while the eagle is a tramp, and a cousin of the buzzard, Mr. Mayes says. He will ask the farmers of Missouri to send in their votes on the subject. We offer as an amendment to Mr. Mayes' motion that the milch cow and the brood sow be added to the ticket.

Why not get the Supreme Court to settle this controversy about evolution? If five of the judges decided against evolution—as they probably would if the matter came before them—it would become unconstitutional to have any more misunderstanding about it.

A drunken driver is a distant menace to everybody, himself included. He has been fined long enough. It doesn't work. Let's send him to jail where he belongs if convicted after a fair trial in which his defense has been heard.

The old man with one foot in the grave and another on a banana peel is safe compared with the fellow who sets a wobbly stepladder on a rickety crate in doing some repair work.

The first step in getting rid of a fault is to admit it.

DON'T MONKEY TOO MUCH

Sitting in the home of a friend the other evening we heard the strains of a pipe organ over six hundred miles away. The room in which we sat had every window and door closed and the home was weather-stripped. There was no aerial or outside connection with the radio cabinet from which the strains of the pipe organ were coming. A brick house, weather-stripped and closed tight as a drum, and yet the pipe organ, played six hundred miles away, was heard distinctly. Talk about your fairy stories, your Aladdin's wonderful lamp and the goose that laid the golden eggs!

The other night we saw a picture that moved on a screen. For a moment it was still—something had happened to the machine. It was still, like the old magic lantern pictures of 20 years ago, then the people began to walk, the birds began to fly and the whole scene was in action.

A few days ago a big bag filled with gas and driven by motors, brought thirty-two people from Germany to America in 81 hours. It took Christopher Columbus months to make the trip.

And so it goes. Science prevents pestilences, surgeons make new faces, physicians prolong life, inventors send ships into the air and under the seas, the human voice speaks across vast distances, miles are obliterated until a man crosses the continent between daylight and dark. This is a wonderful age in which we live.

We have witnessed the expansion of steam from Watt's tea kettle, through the monster turbine engines into the marvelous work of the dynamo. Today scientists tell us there is power enough locked up in a tumbler of water to propel an ocean liner from New York to Liverpool—that a few quarts of water, some day, will run factories and furnish the necessary power of transportation.

And yet some folks are worrying over the possible exhaustion of wood, coal and oil. Better worry for fear some inquisitive scientist touches the wrong atom and blows us all into space. Some seeker after knowledge is apt to do just that very thing, and when he does we won't even have time to say "goodbye."

FROM WEST TEXAS C. C.

Poultry Shipments

Since New York and Pennsylvania are two of the principle cities to which poultry from West Texas is shipped, and since the various states quarantining against Texas commodities because of the hoof and mouth disease has caused general misapprehension among a number of shippers in the promulgation of rules by various states, we desire to state that so far as New York and Pennsylvania are concerned the following will apply:

New York: Dressed poultry from Texas may be shipped into or through New York State if accompanied by certificate issued by Federal or Live Stock Sanitary Commission inspector of Texas certifying poultry originated outside infected areas to be packed accordance amendment number one.

Pennsylvania: Dressed poultry originated in Texas permitted into or through Pennsylvania if fowls are slaughtered under inspection of the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry and have passed such inspection and marked accordingly.

It will be observed that the regulations of Pennsylvania are much more drastic than those of New York, and as all practical service routes for this class of traffic require movement thru the state of Pennsylvania it will be necessary for us to comply with the Pennsylvania regulations in order to move thru that state.

Mr. J. E. Boog-Scott, Texas Livestock Sanitary Commissioner, and Mr. J. S. Hershey, of the Gulf-Colorado & Santa Fe railway, are both actively interested in this matter.

Yours truly,

Porter A. Whaley, manager

THE PASSING DAY

(By Will H. Mayes)

The people of the United States have been vying with each other in the effort to show the Prince of Wales that we are pleased to have him visit this country, as indeed we are. The Prince is a nice sort of a visitor and a democratic kind of a fellow in spite of his inherited title. He knows how to make himself agreeable in a truly American fashion and seems to be without that affectation that we have learned to expect in Englishmen generally. That being true, he must at times have a feeling of disgust at the propensity of the average American to bow down and worship royalty. Doubtless he would much prefer to be accepted for what he is rather than for his title, but Americans will not have it so.

In spite of our democratic ideals, we are not far enough removed from monarchical government to keep from toadying to royalty and seem to delight in paying homage to those highest in authority. This is shown so often in the character of our entertainments. The most popular spectacular shows we have are our pageants depicting the crowning of a king and queen, with great royal processions of dukes and duchesses, ladies in waiting and attendants. In spite of the almost ludicrous mimicry of such affairs people turn out in great numbers to witness these processions of imitators of royalty and the royal performers pay immense sums to bedeck themselves in what they regard as royal apparel. The spectacle would be amusing if it were not so pitiful.

We are too much disposed to truckle to those in authority. Every citizen is under obligation to support, and should delight in supporting, those to whom the affairs of government are entrusted, but this does not carry with it even a suggestion that those in service are a whit better personally than other citizens. It is interesting to watch the almost servile attention we give to a president or even a governor and then to see how quickly and how far he can drop from public sight as soon as his term of office expires, and that in spite of the fact that his service has in most cases made him a really greater man. A governor is a great man so long as he is governor; an ex-governor is merely a man who is down and out so far as the people are concerned.

CANNED GOODS

The people of the United States, the most "weeked" in the world, are going to have to submit to another "week."

This time it is "Canned Foods Week" and it will be observed the week of November 8 to 15.

Forty-seven states, it is recounted, have planned for the observance to show the superiority of the United States as a producer, exporter and consumer of canned foods.

Few of us have ever realized the importance of canned goods. Upon this comparatively new factor in our national life has been built some of our greatest achievements.

There's the tourist camp, for instance. The tourist camp can trace its rapid rise to a position of importance in the life of every tin can tourist to canned goods. No tourist camp is possible without it.

Anyone can readily imagine how dull and uninviting touring would be without a certain amount of canned goods to give life to the party.

Really, the dependence which we as a people have come to put in canned goods is too little appreciated.

Slowly and steadily the thing has been growing on us until some of our best music is coming canned. We have lots of political and after dinner speeches that in themselves raise the business of canning to a fine art—not to mention the canned publicity that the political parties and other space grafters gratefully offer the newspapers.

The fellow who thought of "Canned Foods Week" ought to be congratulated for his vision. We must pay a debt long overdue to canned goods of whatever nature.

IT'S ALL OVER

Tuesday of this week brought to an end one of the longest drawn out and hardest contested political campaigns we have witnessed in many years, and we are proud it's over.

Texas has the distinction of electing the first woman governor in the world, in the person of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, wife of James E. Ferguson of Temple, Texas.

Now that the people have spoken and she has won the election, it behooves every citizen of Texas to accept the result and put their shoulder to the wheel and help make the very best of the situation we can. Texas is the best State in the Union in our judgment, and if we did not think so we would have made our home elsewhere long ago, and we feel a personal interest in her welfare. Let's be friends and neighbors, and so conduct ourselves as not to bring about further disorder and eruptions in our own local affairs as well as that of our grand old state.

This has been a hard week on editors. An editor who takes no public stand in local politics, when that is all he can hear talked about, has some funny thoughts to run through his mind, but the worse part of it is, he has to conceal the fun and keep it to himself. To let it out would change the fun into peril and in that event no one could have any fun. At the time this is being scribbled, the voting is in full progress throughout the country and no one knows what the result is going to be.

Every time an airplane does a tail spin or a nose dive, or a mine blows up, we are reminded of what a fine thing it is to have the earth at our feet.

ORDINANCE NO. 70

ORDINANCE REQUIRING ITINERANT MERCHANTS SELLING BANKRUPT STOCKS OF GOODS, OR ADVERTISING FIRE SALES, OR WATER AND FIRE DAMAGED STOCKS FOR SALE FOR LIMITED PERIODS OF TIME, TO PAY AN ANNUAL OCCUPATION TAX TO THE CITY OF SANTA ANNA AND PROHIBITING SUCH ITINERANT MERCHANT FROM OFFERING FOR SALE OR ADVERTISING FOR SALE SUCH STOCKS WITHIN THE CORPORATE LIMITS OF THE CITY OF SANTA ANNA, WITHOUT HAVING FIRST PAID SUCH OCCUPATION TAX, AND PRESCRIBING PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS OF THIS ORDANCE.

BE IT ORDAINED by the City Council of the City of Santa Anna, Texas:

Section I. That before doing business or offering to do business within the corporate limits of the City of Santa Anna, Texas, every merchant who may remove from place to place and offer for sale "bankrupt stocks of goods" or advertising "fire sales" or "water and fire damaged stocks" for sale for a limited period of time shall pay to the proper officer of the City of Santa Anna, Texas, the sum of FIFTY DOLLARS per month for the first month or less than a month; and shall pay for each additional month that such sales are continued within the corporate limits of said City of Santa Anna, Texas, an additional sum of TEN DOLLARS; provided that when such itinerant merchant shall remain for six months in the City of Santa Anna, Texas, he shall pay an addition to the FIFTY DOLLARS charged for the first month, an additional sum of FIVE DOLLARS per month. Said occupation tax shall be paid in advance.

Section II. Every itinerant merchant engaging in business described in Section I of this ordinance, is hereby prohibited from pursuing said business within the corporate limits of the City of Santa Anna, Texas, without having first paid said occupation tax.

Section III. An itinerant merchant who shall engage in the business described in Section I of this ordinance within the corporate limits of the City of Santa Anna, Texas, without having first paid the prescribed occupation tax to the City of Santa Anna, Texas, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and each day that such merchant shall pursue such business in the corporate limits of the City of Santa Anna, Texas, without having paid said occupation tax, shall constitute a separate offense, and upon conviction such merchant shall be fined in the sum of FIFTY DOLLARS for each offense.

Section IV. All ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

Section V. The fact that there is no ordinance in effect, within the corporate limits of Santa Anna, requiring the itinerant merchants selling bankrupt stocks of goods, or advertising fire damaged stocks for sale for limited periods of time to pay annual occupation tax to the City of Santa Anna and prohibiting such itinerant merchant from offering for sale or advertising for sale such stocks within the corporate limits of the City of Santa Anna, without having first paid such occupation tax, and prescribing penalties for violating of this ordinance, creates an emergency demanding that all rules requiring ordinances to be read over and referred to a committee be suspended and that this ordinance be placed upon its passage and same is accordingly done.

ENACTED this 6 day of November, A. D. 1924, and approved same day.
 W. E. BAXTER, Mayor, City of Santa Anna, Texas.

TEXAS SCHOOL NEWS

Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 3.—There will be programs of interest to every teacher when the Texas State Teachers Association Convention is held in San Antonio, Nov. 27, 28 and 29. Kindergarten teachers, grade teachers, high school teachers, and supervisors, principals and superintendents will hold group meetings. In addition, English, Latin, music, agriculture, mathematics, commercial, geography, home economics and all other individual subject teachers will have special programs intended to be of direct help in their classroom work back home.

Nationally important educators have been engaged to make addresses before the groups. But perhaps the most important phase of the meeting will be the round-table discussions. Under the leadership of the chairman, each group will take up important questions and hear opinion expressed by teachers who are meeting and solving these problems. These meetings have been found to have great value for the school that has a representative there.

Superintendents and principals will have one of the most important section meetings, Thursday afternoon, Nov. 27. Thomas J. Yoe, superintendent of Brownsville schools, is chairman and George H. Wells of Cisco is secretary. Dr. James F. Hosc of Columbia University, New York; Supt. G. M. Sims of Port Arthur; Mrs. Laura Warren, dean of women in El Paso; Dr. B. F. Pittenger of the University of Texas; and Supt. J. J. Godbey of Cisco schools will make the addresses.

The Texas Grade Teachers Association will have a large meeting, opening with a banquet Friday noon. Miss Mary J. Byrne of Fort Worth is president; Mrs. Ira B. Simmons, Houston, vice-president; Miss Lena Dunlavy, Fort Worth, secretary, and Miss Merle Brazelton, Paris, treasurer of the group. Miss Evalyn Sterling of San Antonio; State Supt. of Schools S. M. N. Marrs; Miss Eula Hunter, Fort Worth; Miss Bessie Robinson and Miss Rebecca Henry of Houston, and Dr. James F. Hosc of New York will provide the program.

Elementary school principals and supervisors, with T. Guy Rogers of San Antonio, as chairman, will have a strong program. Walter D. Cocking of San Antonio; Leonard Power of Dallas; Miss Lila Baugh of Houston; S. M. N. Marrs; Dr. E. R. Seligman of New York, and Miss Elma Neal of San Antonio will make the addresses. Miss Eva G. Pinkston of Dallas is secretary of this section.

Public Health Association

Austin, Texas, Nov. 4.—The Christmas seal of 1924 departs from the usual type of design. Instead of stressing the Christmas idea, it stresses the health and educational appeal. The design depicts knowledge enlightening the world as to the dangers of tuberculosis. Resting her hand upon the shield of the doublebarred cross she indicates that she is defending the world against tuberculosis. This is a happy symbolism of the tuberculosis movement in its preventive activities.

The design is admirably executed by Mr. George V. Curtis of New York City. Mr. Curtis is an artist of international reputation. For over sixty years, since boyhood, he has been drawing and painting. He spent a very large part of his life in France, at Barbizon, the headquarters of the famous Millet school. As a painter of landscapes and portraits he gained an enviable reputation both in Europe and in this country. Many of his paintings have been exhibited in Paris and other European and American galleries. He has made a special study of the Christmas seal idea and has designed two seals besides the one for 1924.

Thirty two million of these seals have been ordered by the Texas Public Health Association and will be used all over the State during the month of December to raise funds for the campaign against tuberculosis.

The United States pays its crooks three billion dollars a year. Of these vast wages to dishonesty two-thirds is paid by the public voluntarily for worthless, "get-rich-quick" schemes. The remaining one billion is taken forcibly from the public by embezzlers, bandits and thieves and through credit frauds. Statistics on the losses through credit frauds afford a tribute to the honesty of the borrowing public in the United States, the greatest credit nation in the world. The losses where borrowers fraudulently fail to repay their loans approximate only $400,000,000. America's credit business extends into the billions annually. The relatively low credit loss accounts for the credit basis for the nation's business.

BAPTIST WOMEN SEEK $22,000,000

SACRIFICIAL EFFORT IS BEING MADE TO RAISE THEIR FULL SUBSCRIPTION TO 75 MILLION CAMPAIGN

NEW PROGRAM PLANNED

Provision Made For Support Of General Causes Through Canvass of Members November 30—December 7.

Under the leadership of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, the Baptist women of the South are seeking to raise $7,000,000 in additional cash between now and the end of the year for the Baptist 75-Million Campaign, thus matching their subscriptions in 1919, when the program was launched, with actual payments. It is announced at Baptist headquarters. The women were asked to assume responsibility for $18,000,000, or one-fifth of the goal of the Campaign, but their subscriptions went far beyond this.

Their original goal of $18,000,000 in cash had been reached by the women June 1, 1924, and under the leadership of Miss Kathleen Mallory, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union, they are making extra efforts to meet their pledges as well as their quota. Thousands of Baptist women throughout the South are practicing self-denial in many ways in order to make special contributions to the missionary, educational and benevolent enterprises embraced in the Campaign, while other thousands who have already paid out their subscriptions are making special thank offerings that the goal may be reached. Reports indicate that thousands of Baptist men as well will redeem their subscriptions in full during this year.

Large Results Obtained Indicating some of the results that had been realized from the Campaign up to May 1, 1924, the general headquarters reports that the foreign mission force has been increased over 100 per cent, while as many persons have been baptized on the foreign fields in the five years of the Campaign as there were church members there at the outset of this program after 75 years of missionary effort. In the realm of home missions the 1,170 workers report the baptism of 203,532 persons, organization of 1,095 new churches and 3,333 new Sunday schools, and the completion of the $1,000,000 Church Building Loan Fund.

An average of 2,734 state-mission workers have been employed during the Campaign who report 240,485 baptisms, organization of 1,646 churches and 3,035 Sunday schools, and the erection or repair of 2,331 houses of worship. Into the 119 Southern Baptist schools, colleges and seminaries the Campaign has put $7,528,485 in permanent improvements, $2,910,430 in maintenance, and $2,732,231 in endowment, while $1,277,021 has been employed in the cancellation of outstanding debts.

Old Preachers Aided As a result of the Campaign more than 1,000 aged preachers and their dependent ones have been helped; $4,464,000 has been put into 19 Baptist orphanages caring for 4,000 homeless boys and girls; while the number of Baptist hospitals in the South has been increased from 12 to 24.

In order that there may be no let-up in the support of the general missionary and other causes fostered by the denomination at the close of the 75 Million Campaign plans have been perfected for the projection of the 1925 Program with the week of November 30-December 7, when an every-member canvass will be made of the 28,000 Baptist churches of the South for the support of state, home and foreign missions, Christian education, ministerial relief, hospitals and orphanages next year. These are the same interests that have been embraced in the Campaign but they will be supported in the future on the basis of annual subscriptions from the members of the churches rather than on a five-year pledge.

Want $15,000,000 Next Year Reports reaching the general Campaign headquarters are to the effect that organizations have been set up throughout the territory of the Southern Baptist Convention looking to the completion of the old Campaign through the redemption of the pledges, and the successful launching of the new program through the taking of subscriptions through the year at the same time. It is the hope of those charged with the leadership in these programs that a minimum of $15,000,000 will be raised for the general denominational enterprises in 1925 and that each year thereafter there will be an increase over the preceding year.

HEALTH POINTS

(From Red Cross)

Children all over America are playing the "Game of Health." They have been started in this new game by the Junior Red Cross, which is the children's department of the American Red Cross, and they are very enthusiastic over the game and its results, according to reports. In the Southwestern Division of the American Red Cross many of the schools are working enthusiastically for advancement in this health game and some have reached a standard of excellence which is attracting wide attention. The purpose of the game is to build strong and healthy bodies and therefore keen minds. The children are weighed and measured at regular intervals and their record is kept on a health chart. The credits are also kept on the chart with reference to observing the health rules which are as follows:

Drink a glass of water before each meal and before going to bed; drink milk, no tea or coffee. Bathe twice a week. Eat some vegetables and fruit every day. Sleep long hours with windows open.

Brush teeth thoroughly twice a day.

Wash hands before every meal, keep finger nails cut short and clean them every day.

Keep fingers, pencils, moneys and everything that might be unclean out of the mouth and nose; and at all times keep hands away from the face.

Use your own drinking cup at school and when away from home.

Cover nose and mouth with handkerchief when sneezing and coughing; take 30 or more slow breaths of fresh air a day; ten breaths in the morning; ten at noon and ten at night.

Try to sit up and stand straight with shoulders well thrown back, to eat slowly, and to attend to toilet and each need of the body at its regular time.

CHILD FIRE PREVENTION

If all the people of our country were to learn by heart the rules regarding fire prevention which Fire Commissioner Drennan of New York has suggested for memorization by the school children of that city, so that what these rules require becomes instinctive, we would see a material decrease in our $500,000,000 annual fire loss.

The rules which the Fire Commissioner suggests do not ask for more than ordinary care. He suggests that matches be kept always in metal containers; he warns against throwing remnants of lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes away without seeing where they fall; he tells one not to try to start fires with kerosene, nor to go into dark closets, bedrooms or cellars with lighted candles or matches and not to use lighted candles on Christmas trees; he further cautions against keeping gasoline, naphtha or benzine in the house, and ends the list of twenty-one rules with the commandment: "Do not look for gas leaks with a lighted match or candle."

Your town is just what you make it. If you don't like the town, you will probably find that the town doesn't like you. But if you have the right attitude, then you will find the community friendly. It is a mirror in which you will find a reflection of your own disposition.

The business of claiming everything in sight will end Nov. 4.

and everyone in the home who does not go to school to play the game of health with you and keep each rule.

RAISING CATS

In the Statesboro (Georgia) News we read:

"Now, here is something worth while, something most any enterprising citizen of Statesboro can reflect over, and from which he can probably get the idea for a business that will make him a fortune. New York fur men are buying the skins of common, ordinary house cats--the kind that make most of us wish for a shotgun or a boot/jack. They say they have discovered a process whereby cat skin can be tanned until they are as flexible and wear resisting as fox skins, and that they can be made to take black dye satisfactorily. These skins make fur garments as beautiful as most anything now on the market. So the cat, that has never been of any more service than to catch a few mice and look comfortable before the fireplace, may at least prove to be an important part of our commercial life. And who knows but we may some day have a flourishing cat tannery right here in our own community."

Not very pleasant to contemplate (at least for the cats), but if the new process proves a success many dull villages may become great centers of industry. It only goes to show that nature's gifts are consumed by man, he has to begin to look about for substitutes. All of us can't wear furs from animals that long ago became scarce. But that has increased rather than decreased the demand for furs. It is but natural, therefore, that someone should turn to the house cat for relief--and at present the supply is greater than the demand.

The country will watch the experiment with interest. If the innovation proves popular there should be relief to all the superstitious; for no longer will we have to worry at all times about continuing our way up or down a street after our path has been crossed by a black cat. And when all available cats are killed off, perhaps someone will invent a process to make a sealskin coat out of a dog's hide. If that process is ever perfected, it should prove to be a howling success.--Temple Telegram.

Who owns the Santa Fe?

More than 67,000 stockholders own this great railway. Several thousand live in the states it traverses. All have a voice in its management.

Every Southwest investor should buy a share in the Santa Fe and thus get a valuable interest in an institution that helps build up that section. Let it be Yours, in ownership as well as in service.

The Santa Fe operates in thirteen states and in these states there reside 7,635 of its stockholders. While this is almost the largest number on record, it is slightly below the year before. We should be very glad to see those residing along the Santa Fe Lines become much more generally interested in its stock, although both the common and preferred shares give a smaller return than many other investments promise. The high price is a deserved tribute to the property. Every investor in the Southwest might well buy one or more shares in the Santa Fe.

At the beginning of this year, the ownership of the Santa Fe was divided among 67,118 stockholders with an average of 53.1 shares apiece. Twelve months before there were 64,643 stockholders, averaging 55.4 shares apiece. The number of stockholders has increased steadily for many years and the average holdings decreased, resulting in an ever-widening distribution of ownership.

Among the stockholders are found:

Women.....30,370
Men.....30,931

This joint enterprise of a great body of our citizens is open to all to participate in as stockholders. Why then should any favor government ownership and the certainty of supporting the railroads as taxpayers?

Since the organization of the present company in 1895 it has not failed in any year to earn its full interest, nor since dividends have been declared to earn them in full. The Preferred Stock dividends are limited to 5%. The first payment was made in 1898 at 1% and in 1900 full payments of 5% were begun and have been maintained for the ensuing 25 years without interruption. Common dividends were begun in 1901 at 3 1/2% and have been maintained steadily since that date with gradual increases, 6% having been paid since 1909.

For the railroads, as a whole, the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission show that at the close of 1923 there were 807,524 stockholders, or 30,392 more than the preceding year. The average dividends on the outstanding stock amounted to $4.03 per share.

Quite a lengthy mention appeared in the Brownwood papers last week of the Fourth District Medical Association of Texas, which met there Wednesday and Thursday. A very interesting program was carried out and all who attended were benefitted by the able discussions of subjects of vital interest to the profession. Drs. Sealy, Lovelady and Hays attended from Santa Anna.

GOOD ROADS MEET IN HOUSTON.

Decision to hold the joint convention of the United States Good Roads Association, the United States Good Roads Show and the Bankhead National Highway Association at Houston on April 20th to 25th, has been announced following a conference between J. A. Rountree, director general of the organizations, Mayor Holcombe of Houston and H. H. Haines of the Houston Chamber of Commerce.

At a meeting of the Pecan Growers' Association of San Saba and Lampasas counties, the following petition was ordered sent to James Finaly, representative from the Ninety-third District: "We, the undersigned Bend Pecan Growers' Association of San Saba and Lampasas counties, respectfully petition you to use your influence at the next session of the Legislature of Texas to have introduced and passed an amendment to the present game law, to have the present 'bag limit' of 10 squirrels per day removed, for the very good reason that the depredations of these animals is becoming alarming to the pecan growers, and if relief is not granted in the pecan belt of Texas it will become a menace to an important industry."

Pumping operations in Orange county have reversed the seaward flow of several streams, causing ruin to rice crops from salt water, according to reports by H. H. Schultz, Government statistician. This and other causes have reduced the total Texas rice crop more than three-quarters of a million bushels. The powerful pumps used to supply the rice fields lowered the water of the streams causing Gulf water to flow in. The production throughout the State is placed at 5,565,000 bushels as against 6,360,000 last year. The indicated average yield per acre is thirty-six bushels as compared with forty last year. Acreage this year is 156,000, last year it was 159,000.

William O'Brien of Amarillo has purchased the noted herd of Herefords, formerly owned by the Miltonvale Cattle Company of Miltonvale, Kansas, consisting of 526 head of registered animals. This is reported to be the largest cattle deal in the United States, in recent years, and involves a consideration of $150,000. Mr. O'Brien now owns approximately 1,000 head of registered Hereford cows, and is one of the largest breeders of Hereford cattle in the United States.

A Hereford calf sold on the Fort Worth market at $10.50 per 100 pounds, weighing 840 pounds. This calf was fed by Middleton of Spur, a calf club boy 15 years old. The feeding was done under the direction of R. B. Johnson, county farm agent of Dickens county. The animal was fed milo and sudan hay grown on the farm of Middleton, Sr. Young Middleton borrowed the money for the purchase and feed of the calf from the National Bank at Spur.

The largest crop of Satsuma oranges ever produced in Victoria county were gathered in October. The oranges are grown on a commercial scale in four large orchards owned by Truxton Davidson, H. A. Harmes and Harvey Sloan.

Mr. Homeseeker:

There is probably no section in the Southwest that offers such splendid opportunity to the man who desires a home, than the Dalhart territory. Lands are cheap, very productive, well watered, easily cultivated. Climate ideal, rainfall ample. No crop failures. Growing season of sufficient length to mature all crops, including cotton. Large tracts of land are being subdivided and sold to actual farmers on good terms and low interest rate. Investigate the Dalhart territory. For information, address the

A LITTLE FUN Jokes to Make You Laugh

SOME DOUBT.

"It has a shell like a nut, but I'd like to see the squirrel who has nerve enough to try to crack it."

ARITHMETIC CONFOUNDED.
"Mah friends," said the colored preacher, "de scriptural rule fo' givin' was one-tenth of what yo' had. If yo' alls feel yo' can't afford dat much, jes give a sixth, or a fo'th."

JOHNNY HAD TO WAIT.
"Johnny, didn't I tell you to come right home from the barber shop?"
"Yes, ma."
"Then why didn't you obey?"
"I had to wait while grandma got her hair bobbed and her neck shaved."

DISTANT RELATIONSHIP.
Two chance acquaintances from Ireland were talking together.
"An' so yere name is Riley?" said one.
"Are yez anny relation to Tim Riley?"
"Very distantly," said the other.
"O! was me mother's first child, and Tim was the tenth."

THE LAST RESORT.
Jones had returned from the seashore with the tired expression he wore when he started his vacation.
"What's the matter?" asked a friend.
"I thought you went away for a change and a rest."
"I did, but the waiters got all the change and the landlord got the rest."

Joe saw the train, but couldn't stop; They dragged his flivver to the shop. It only took a week or two To make his car as good as new. But though they hunted high and low, They found no extra parts for Joe.

PRECAUTION.
The day before she was to be married the old negro servant went to her mistress and handed her a life insurance policy.
"Why do you want me to keep it? I thought you were going to get married," said the mistress.
"So I is, mam, but does yo reckon I wants dat strange nigger to know Ise got my life insured?"

A RUSE THAT DIDN'T WORK.
A lawyer was once defending a man accused of house-breaking, and in his address to the judge said, "Your lordship, I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open, and merely inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles. Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish the whole individual for an offense committed by one of his limbs."
"That argument," said the judge, "is very well put, and following it logically, I sentence the arm to one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.

Mr. Ikenstein was discovered in the meeting of the Ku Klux Klan, and a committee was appointed to wait upon him and find out why he was there.
"What is your name?" asked the spokesman.
"Ikenstein."
"What are you doing in a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan?"
"I just wanted to see the man who buys the white goods."

MARRIED, NOT MARRIED.

Rastus was looking for work and the employer was asking him the usual questions.
"What's your name?"
"Erastus-Jackson, suh."
"How old are you?"
"Ah is 28 yeahs, suh."
"Are you married?"
"No suh. Dat scar on mah haid is where a mule done kicked me."

OLD HUMAN NATURE.

In many parts of Mexico, hot springs and cold springs are found side by side. One can see native woman boiling clothes in a hot spring, rubbing them on a flat rock and rinsing them in a clear cold spring.
A visitor watched this process for some time, and then said:
"I suppose the natives think old Mother Nature is pretty generous, eh?"
"No, senior," replied his host. "There is much grumbling because he supplies no soap."

THE POLITICAL LIFE.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon said on his eighty-eighth birthday in Danville, Ohio.
"With its oil scandals and bootleg scandals politics isn't perfect, but I am not one to discourage any young man from taking up a political life."
"I am not like poor Mark Twain, who said in introducing a certain General Hawley at a political meeting:
"Pure, honest, incorruptible—that is Joe Hawley. Such a man is like a bottle of cologne in a garbage incinerating plant—it may moderate the stench, but it can't eliminate it."

UNCLE SI.

The big oak tree that stood in front of Uncle Si Perkins' grocery store had begun to show tints of autumn. The leaves were turning to russet, gold and crimson. Uncle Si stood looking pensively at the old tree, and then, with just a trace of sadness in his voice, said:
"That old tree's been the best friend this here town ever had. I recollect, years ago, we old timers camped under it when we come out of the States in our ox team wagons. In them days, we had no houses round here, to speak of, an' the old tree sheltered us from the heat an' the storm. Whenever a call went out for us men to meet an' consider some solemn question affectin' the well bein' of the community, we'd gather at the old tree. I've seen many a feller an' his gal hitch up right thar, an' I've seen many a horse-thief dangle from that big limb. Once they hung four horse-thieves together, on the limb, all in a row. The first court ever held in this county was held under this tree, an' I've never heard any better sermons preached than was preached by our circuit riders standin' on a stump under the old tree. Last spring, when the street was widened, they tried to cut it down, but whosoever cuts that tree down has got your Uncle Si to fight."

AUTO HINTS

Starting switch connections must be kept tight to get the best efficiency from the starter.

Considerable trouble is caused by loose or corroded battery terminals; this will affect all the electrical equipment. After cleaning terminals use a little cup grease around the battery post. This will prevent corrosion.

Vibration of the car will oftentimes break the battery ground wire. All battery connections from the starter, starter switch and battery should be made with flexible cable; stiff battery cable will sometimes shake battery cells loose from the box.

Generator inspection should include—conditions of brushes, brush spring tension. Accumulation of carbon and oil on the commutator can be cleaned with 00 sandpaper. In case commutator is badly worn taken off and overhauled.

Chemical tests show that a motor free from carbon runs on 20 per cent less gasoline than one which is not.

Sounding your horn at intersections, curves and blind alleys—yes, of course—but where else? Some drivers save their honing to annoy the people they try to pass on the road; but a lot of good horns go to the junk heap along with their wrecked cars without having had a chance to prove their worth. Here are a few of the places where it pays to horn: At the top of a hill, where some Indian may be coming over the other side and on the wrong side of the road; when passing by parked cars; as a precaution against the man who may start away from the curb without looking; every time you can think of it, when passing through a strange town where the constable may be out for those who forget; when you are driving along in the dark and see nothing in your way, for it's a wise driver who suspects that he may not see it all.

The Texas pecan crop will be about one-third normal this year, according to a condition report made by H. H. Schultz, Federal agricultural statistician. Late rains have improved the crop in some sections while in others drouth and insect damage have practically complete ruin. A good crop is reported in most sections of Mexico which is expected to reduce the high holiday price.

For Our Boys and Girls

By AUNT MARY.

A DAY FOR THANKSGIVING.
I know you all have read about how the Pilgrims many and many years ago set aside a day to give thanks to the Lord for His blessings. Then we must think how much more we have to be thankful for today. Read about the hard times that the Pilgrims had and then you will know how very thankful we should be.
This little poem will be very nice to repeat for your school exercises:

THANKSGIVING DAY.
Over the River, and through the woods,
To grandfather's house we go;
The horse knows the way
To carry the sleigh,
Through the white and drifted snow.

Over the river, and through the woods;
Oh, how the wind does blow!
It stings the toes,
And bites the nose,
As over the ground we go.

Over the river, and through the wood,
And straight through the barn-yard gate;
We seem to go,
Extremely slow;
It is so hard to wait.

Over the river, through the wood,
Now, grandfather's cap I spy—
Hurrah, for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah, for the pumpkin pie!

DRAWING MADE EASY.
This is the second of the interesting pictures that you are to try to draw. Several of my little readers have written me about trying the magic triangle printed last month. Don't forget after the first of the year there are going to be some prizes, and I hope you are all getting into practice. I should like for the boys to try for these prizes, too, as they are well worth having. Now, all get busy and learn how to draw, as shown you in the picture above.

LITTLE GIRL'S COOK BOOK.
Oh! I was fairly swamped with delicious recipes. It surely was a hard task for the judges to decide which was the best. I never dreamed that I had so many interested readers of this department. I know your parents are very proud of you all.

After much discussion and deliberation, the judges finally decided to award the prize to Arnetta Gipson of Henderson, Texas. The points of merit on which she won were: it is a delicious dish and yet inexpensive; also a very healthful dish, one that would be very good for any boy or girl, man or woman, to eat.

Arnetta please acknowledge receipt of the prize as soon as it arrives.

APPLE MERINGUE—Prize Recipe.
Core 8 apples and bake until they are tender.

Make a custard of 3 egg yolks, 1/4 cup of sugar, 1/2 teaspoon of salt, 2 cups of sweet milk, and one teaspoon of vanilla. Pour over the baked apples, put back into oven until the custard has "set," remove and cover with the whites of the 3 eggs that have been beaten stiff and 8 tablespoons of sugar added. Brown in oven.

LITTLE JOURNEYS.
When I was a very little girl a dear old lady whom I loved and who loved me, gave me a very pretty necklace made of pink coral. Ever since then I have loved coral. Do you know where it comes from and how it is made?

A small animal called polyp that lives under the deep waters of the oceans and seas, staying in the warm waters, attaches itself to a rock or stone that is disk-shaped. The polyps increase like plants from seeds, many young polyp buds springing from the parent. The older ones die and their bodies become petrified; this goes on for hundreds of years, sometimes. Their petrified bodies, massed through generations, one upon another, form islands and reefs.

In its growing state coral is soft and velvet-like, but when exposed to air it hardens and sometimes changes color. Coral ranges in color from pure white, flesh, and rose to deep red and purple, or violet, with here and there a specimen of yellow or black. Yellow coral is rare and black is very rare, indeed. There are many shapes and species, but the best known are fan coral, branch, brain, feather and plume coral.

The largest deposits are found for the most part in the Mediterranean sea. It is "fished" almost exclusively by Italians. That used for decoration is worked with knife or file, or turned on a lathe. There are over sixty shops in Italy that employ a force of 6,000 expert coral workers.

There is a Chinese legend of a maiden who mourned a poet lover, who was driven away by her brothers. One morning she found a rose blooming in her garden and she knew it was her reincarnated lover. Day by day the petals fell until there remained nothing but the core. The maiden picked it and found lying in her hand a pink coral bead. The rose bloomed again and again. Each time the sad maiden plucked the heart. She then strung the hearts of the roses on a golden chain and called it her "neckless of endless sighs."

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.
Christmas is coming. Doesn't that make your heart beat a little faster? It surely does mine. I know, Christmas is the best time of the year. Don't you think so? It should mean a great deal more to us than just giving and receiving presents. We must also think why we celebrate Christmas. We must all that we can to make life a little brighter for them.

What are we going to do? I asked you to write me and tell me what you would like to have for Christmas. I received a great many letters and they gave me many lovely ideas. But I think the one sent by Ruth Mills, Athens, Texas, suggests the most useful things and the best ideas. Although, it was very hard to decide between hers and several other letters, yet I know that those who sent in letters and those who didn't will agree with me that her letter is very fine. The letter follows:

Prize Letter.
Athens, Texas,
October 8, 1924.
Dear Aunt Mary—
Yes, Christmas is a long ways off, but we will have to begin to think about it. I think a few stories and poems good to recite at a Christmas tree. Aunt Mary, give us some games to play at a little Christmas party and also a good puzzle. Oh yes, please don't forget some good recipes to make some good home made candy. I hope to see my letter in the November issue and a prize.

Your reader,
(Signed) RUTH MILLS.
Don't miss the Christmas issue. It is going to be a dandy. I hope that I will be able to give you all of the things Ruth suggests, and more.

FLOWER CONTEST.
My! My! How beautiful the collections of flowers are. I wish you all lived in Fort Worth so you could see them. There is such a large number that I will not be able to announce the winner this month. The Christmas issue will be too full of other things already planned, so it will be January before I can tell you the winner. I am very sorry, but it will take so much time to go over the books. The prizes are lovely. Watch for the January number for the names of the winners.

LIST OF CONTEST ENTRIES.
Last month I gave you the names of a few of those entering the contest for the Flower Books. I was unable to give them all to you, so I will finish the list this month.

LATE FASHIONS.

A dainty model of one of the season's latest styles. If made up with the new "Poiret-sheen," a lustrous twilled fabric of exceptional beauty, it will reflect the latest of modes. The straight-line dress with long tight sleeves is very distinctive. The tucks on the collar and cuffs and along the sides in front together with the delicately embroidered medallion at the waist adds color to the delightful creation.

TESTED RECIPES.

ROASTED TURKEY.

I gave you this recipe last year, but I have had several requests to repeat it this year, so here it is:
First, the turkey should always be killed the day before eating. This is one of the most important points. Scald and pick. Never skin, as this will cause the loss of the juices. Do not draw until thoroughly cooled, but, be sure and remove the craw and the oil bag at the tail when picking. When killing the bird, cut its head off and hang up; neck down, and let bleed freely. Next morning, after it is chilled, wash thoroughly inside and out. Then salt well inside and out. Stuff with your favorite dressing and sew up. Tie the legs together at the ends. Flour slightly and brown in a moderate oven without any lid. When brown, add enough water to cook. Baste frequently. I sometimes lay strips of bacon over the breast. Cook slowly until tender, usually about three to four hours.

CORN FRITTERS.

1 can of corn, 1-3 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, 1 teaspoon sugar
2-3 cupful flour, 1 tablespoon milk
Mix the ingredients well together. Put in a frying pan a tablespoon each of lard and butter. Drop in the batter by the spoonful when hot. Brown on both sides, being careful not to burn.

LATE FASHIONS.

With all of the subtle lines of the boulevards, this Parisian model will attract the attention of the most fastidious woman. Pleated canton crepe edging on collar and cuffs together with the pleated straight line strips in front make a very attractive trimming—something unusual.
Embroidery is used quite extensively on the smart afternoon dresses.

BACKYARD FALL WORK.

This is the time of the year when all thrifty home lovers are planning and working for the glory of the next year. Because, "you plant now, so will you reap next year," is the motto known by every lover of the great outdoors.

Fall planting of trees, roses and evergreens is urged by every nurseryman and experts along this line. This is the time of the year to prepare the soil for planting later.

You have noted from time to time in this page and from other writings of similar nature, the frequent reference to eating plenty of fruit. It is important for the health of us all. Next to this, is the important of watching the family pocketbook and get the most for our money that we can. This is the trust of every good wife. Nowhere do we get such excellent dividends as we do from improving our homes and surroundings wisely and beneficially. Fruit trees will more than pay for time and trouble that they cause us, and there are certain varieties of many kinds of fruit that will grow in any kind of soil if they are given the proper treatment and care.

Peaches are an easily grown fruit and will do well in almost any part of Texas. There are dozens of varieties and each of them have certain merits and certain demerits. It is wise to consult with a reliable nurseryman in your location as to the kind that is adapted to your soil and climate. However, there is one that is almost universal in Texas and that is the Winter Cheek. This unusual peach ripens the first part of November, at a season when most fresh fruit is gone. It is also a late bloomer. I know a man who has grown this variety for thirteen years without a single crop failure. Every year his trees bear such heavy crops that he is forced to pick many peaches before they are ripe in order to keep the trees from breaking. Who wouldn't love to have such a tree in his backyard?

Plums are another fruit that do very good in Texas. There are many varieties and many uses to put them to. Plums are not so choice about their location as many other fruits. Peaches and plums are very plebian in their demands and I always call them the poor man's friend, as they will grow anywhere if given even just a little care and attention.

GRAPES ARE ANOTHER FRUIT THAT IS WELL ADAPTED TO TEXAS SOIL.

The thousand and one delicious things that can be made out of them speak for their merit. Grape butter is especially delicious when prepared properly. After the grapes are thoroughly cooked (I add only one or two table-spoons of water to start them), press through a colander, discard the skins and seeds; put pulp and juice in a large smooth pan with plenty of sugar and spices to taste, cook very slowly on top of the stove, or better still, in the oven, for at least two and a half to three hours. Seal as any other fruit. Grapes are best grown on arbors or on wires, strung from cedar posts. The only care is pruning in the spring and harvesting the crop in the fall. Sometimes, in exceptionally dry years, it will pay to water them a little.

Now is the time to prepare the ground for planting. It is best to plow up the entire plot of land to be used. Then drag and harrow the ground. Spread a thin layer of manure, (only well rotted manure) on top of the ground. If just a small orchard is to be set out, it is best to then thoroughly spade after two or three weeks, removing all the stones, trash and weeds possible. When your trees arrive from the nurseryman set out at once. While you are setting out one tree keep the others covered with a wet sack. Do not put manure next to the roots, but around the outer sides of the holes, using only good surface dirt next to the roots. Fill the hole two-thirds with dirt, tamp down firmly, fill the hole with water and let settle, then fill the remainder of the hole, tamping the dirt firmly. Sprinkle loose dirt on top to prevent evaporation of moisture. The next spring and summer keep the surface dirt around the trees loose. Weeds and grass sap the strength from the soil and should be kept back from the tree. For backyard planting, the trees should be about twenty feet apart. In orchards, they should be farther apart.

With the high price of fruit on the market a few trees will more than repay anyone for the effort. Let's make our motto for the coming year, "more power to the land tiller, if he is independent of the city cannery for his own food." Let us all get busy and make this a banner year for the independence of farmers and landowners.

FIRST AID TREATMENT AND QUESTION BOX.

This month, I am going to finish with the articles of First Aid! Next month, will be devoted to the big Christmas issue. In January I will answer the questions I have received relative to First Aid. If there is something not clear to you please write me, at the address given below, and I will try and answer you.

In poisoning with alkalies, there is swelling of the lips and mouth, intense pain in the throat and abdomen, vomiting, etc. Give diluted lemon juice, or vinegar, white of eggs, linseed oil, castor oil, or flour and water. Apply heat to the body.

For arsenic poisoning, make the person vomit repeatedly, giving them a large quantity of water between each vomit. Give castor oil after the stomach is cleaned out, then force them to take as much liquid as possible, such as milk with raw egg, olive oil, etc.

Corrosive sublimate poisoning symptoms usually come on gradually and sometimes will not be noticed until a great deal of harm is done. There is a metallic taste, salivation, ulcerations of the gums, loosening of the teeth, and prostration. Give a large quantity of milk and whites of eggs, after which, in about ten minutes, make the person vomit freely. Repeat this treatment. Then give a large dose of salts, followed in a short while with an emesa. Wash the mouth out often with tea until the doctor arrives.

When opium has been taken in any form, wash the stomach out as described by giving large quantities of water and making the person vomit. Give strong tea or coffee to drink. KEEP THE PERSON AWAKE. Do this by slapping with wet towels and walking him or her until the doctor arrives.

Poisonous mushrooms are extremely dangerous. Give large doses of castor oil, stimulate, apply heat to the body, induce vomiting, give enemata.

For ptomaine poisoning, a person must act quickly. There is intense abdominal pain followed by purging and vomiting. Induce vomiting, giving large quantities of hot water to drink. After the stomach is clean, give a half teaspoon baking soda to one-half cup of hot water after the person is quiet in bed. Apply heat to the abdomen and let rest. Later give a large dose of castor oil.

When a person has been bitten by a rabid (mad) animal, apply a tight binding above the wound. Cauterize with crude carbolic acid, or a piece of hot metal. Do not leave the ligature (binding) on longer than three quarters of an hour. Take to a hospital for serum treatment at once.

For snake bite, bind above the wound, leave in place about two hours or until a doctor can be reached. At the end of the first half hour, loosen binding slightly, so as to let a little circulation go through the part so as to prevent gangrene. Open the wound with a knife that has been dipped in carbolic acid or lysol, if possible, and induce wound to bleed freely. Take patient to a surgeon as quickly as possible.

The suggestions I have given you for First Aid treatment are some things that you can do until the doctor arrives, or in case he cannot be reached. If you have been benefited by them, please drop me a card or letter and tell me. Also any questions you would like answered. Address Mrs. Margaret Stute, 1941 Dartmoor Court, Fort Worth, Texas.

MARKETING FARM PRODUCTS.

This is a vast and burning question of the day. One too vast to be gone into thoroughly here, but I am going to give you a few hints, given me by a very successful farmer's wife. Market everything while it is fresh, thus establishing an excellent reputation. Sort eggs according to size and color. When near a city, a sign well written and large enough to be read easily, posted on the front gate, will bring more trade than can be handled. Top prices can be secured. Don't be unreasonable about prices, but demand what is fair, deducting what it would cost to deliver them. A thrifty housewife always has something to sell on the farm.

Butter made in a clean household always finds a ready market at a good price. Buttermilk from the churning is usually a good seller. Vegetables rarely pay raising to sell unless in the trucking business. Every housewife on the farm should raise her own supply, however. A few fruit trees and a berry patch usually pays for itself.
