"He Profits Most Who Serves Best"

CONVENTION MONTH

Before June closes both parties will have held their National Conventions to be immediately followed by another, the Third Party convention. Then the fireworks will commence all along the line.

The Republicans face their convention with everything apparently settled. Though not settled to either their satisfaction or their confidence. The leaders are making heroic efforts to "iron out" some of the kinks and eliminate or soften some of the bumps that loom up.

The Democrats look forward to their meeting in New York with nothing settled. There are loud claims for this or that candidate, but absolutely no certainties. The line of attack upon the Republicans is fairly well indicated, but the man to lead the assault is not yet clearly in sight. Between the liquor question and influences that play both political ends against the middle, the leaders have a rough road to roll over.

Promoters of the Third Party movement do not hope to elect a candidate, but desire to give the people an opportunity of expressing their real political sentiments. If a new party should be framed as a result of the campaign, it will be because of that expression.

The Single Taxers already have a ticket in the field with candidates in 26 states.

The Prohibitionists may put a ticket in the field, and the Socialists will either endorse or nominate.

The presidential election of this year will be the most momentous in the history of the nation for the reason that the women of all 48 states will, for the first time have an opportunity to vote, and there is no basis for predictions in any direction. At the last presidential election, when Mr. Harding had such an overwhelming majority, not more than half the qualified voters went to the polls. This year the total vote cast may be double government can be used as a mighty force for the common good, and we are a failure as a citizen unless we throw the full force of our personality into it. Let us not evade our responsibility but fulfill it, and be a patriot in the highest and truest sense.

If so many woodsheds had not been converted into garages, perhaps the children would be as good as they used to be.

BUILDING UP A COMMUNITY'S BUSINESS VOLUME

The advertising "game" is more and more becoming the telling factor, the barometer if you please for finding the business pulse of a community in general. Along with tidy streets and well kept business houses, should go the well filled advertising columns of the local newspaper. No local community can reach a high degree of prosperity without the local newspaper, as likewise no local newspaper can experience true prosperity without the co-operation of the prosperous business people of the community. Advertising systematically and persistently followed shows real value in the increased sales of any business house.

Recently a friend and patron of the Santa Anna News, who annually has a task requiring special publicity, asked the management to make a news item showing just what he was going to do in his office. This service was freely and gladly given. The patron complacently remarked: "You have no idea how those little things help. We are always busy the next morning after you make such an item."

The idea of the needed publicity was not new or strange to us, because publishers know the mission of their columns and what they will accomplish. Ask any newspaper worker who has inadvertently made an error or misstatement. He is immediately prodded and jibed and kept busy explaining matters for days to come, even though the error covers only two lines in print.

Oh yes, we, newspaper people are well aware that advertising—the commodity we have to sell—is effective. When business concerns who do not advertise, or who advertise spasmodically, wake up to the sales-building power of a definite newspaper advertising policy, we will have a better community.

MARRIED IN BLUM

Mr. Leland Fry, clerk at the Santa Fe Station, slipped off over to Blum, Texas first of the week and surrendered his earthly possessions and future earnings to one Miss Vivian Hanks, on the after of matrimony Wednesday evening. The newly married couple arrived in the city Thursday morning, and for the present time are making themselves at home with Mrs. J. D. Allen in her rooming house over the First State Bank. The News welcomes the new bride to our city and hope for her a life of happiness and prosperity.

UNITED STATES FLAG

The celebration of Flag Day, as conducted all over the country on June 14th, is not merely an occasion for the exhibition of surface emotion; nor is it designed simply to provide an opportunity for public display; nor to arouse a mere temporary patriotic enthusiasm. Its purpose is to teach, in an entertaining and effective manner, what the American Flag really typifies; to impress anew upon the minds of all the history that has glorified it; and to inspire in every heart that true patriotism which prompts to peace time loyalty and devotion no less than to war time sacrifice.

President Wilson, in an eloquent address on Flag Day, in 1917, said: "But one may live as well as die for a flag and for the ideals which it symbolizes. Every flag that floats free in the breeze is a living thing. It speaks with the voice of the great and the mighty present. It is a challenge to us, the Americans of to-day. The flag has no other character than that which we give it from generation to generation. The choices are ours."

Flags symbolize the noble aspirations and glorious achievements of the human race; they epitomize the romance of history and incarnate the chivalry of the ages. Their origin dates from the time when Jehovah made a covenant with man to never again cover the face of the earth with water, and unfurled the first flag—the multicolored banner of the rainbow.

Around the bits of varicolored bunting which the people of each land nominate as a national flag there clusters thoughts of patriotism, of personal sacrifice which has moved the world forward from the days when each man struggled for himself alone, like other wild animals.

The prestige of our flag was achieved by the practice of civic virtues and steadfast adherence to the principles of democracy. Patriotism is more than a sentiment; loyalty is more than an expression.

Piercing the clouds of war that enshroud the civilized world, there shines forth in effulgent light of freedom and justice the emblem of the hopes, the ideals, and the achievements of America, the standard of honor and of victory, the Flag of the United States. Its stars and stripes voice the spirit of America to live the tenets of Christianity, to teach the gospel of work and usefulness, to advance education to demand purity of thought and action in public life, and to protect the liberties of free government from the aggressions of despotic power. It is the symbol of Light—the banner of Dawn.

One Way to Maintain It

We cannot maintain this Constitution without insisting upon its being followed. We cannot maintain it by laughing at those who try to make a joke of it. We cannot maintain it by being tolerant and liberal and indifferent towards those who attack it. We must stand for it when it is challenged. And it is being challenged today, here and there in a hundred directions. This Constitution provides for free, popular government. Under it we have a democracy in which all the people have their part in government. Every officer, legislative, executive, judicial, military, is the servant of all the people—not of any class, not of any group, not of any calling, not of any race, not of any religion; but all. And this is fundamental to our democracy. Elihu Root at recent convention to celebrate anniversary of signing the Constitution.

Canada ranks third in the world as a gold-producing country, being exceeded only by the Transvaal and the United States. Ontario is now the principal gold area in the dominion producing about 40 per cent of the output.

GOOD MORNING

How many of us stop when we say "Good morning" to think what that phrase means? Nobody knows how it started, but he or she to whom the idea first came was a poet. For in those two words lives the essence of a prayer. Of course we who say it hope that our own morning may be "Good" that goes without saying. But do we go a step further, and breathe a prayer that the day of those we meet may also be filled with happiness? The full phrase of our ancestors was "God give thee good morrow."

This would be a great old world if we really meant what we said, if when we greeted our acquaintances, we really wanted their days to be filled with the joy of living. If we did, we'd go out and help make them so.

Democratic Dark Horse Field

About two weeks hence the Democratic National Convention will be engaged in a tug-of-war. It is still anybody's fight. Only one thing is accounted almost certain—that none of the three aspirants now out in front—William G. McAdoo, Alfred E. Smith and Oscar W. Underwood—will be the victor. The race is considered to belong to a dark horse, and the dark horse field was never so overcrowded. There's an entry from every corner of the land.

The newest suggestion in the dark horse field revolves around the name of Thomas J. Walsh, Senator from Montana. Mr. Walsh strikes many of them as "logical" beyond any aspirant now in the field and there is much talk in Washington of giving Mr. Walsh one of the places on the Democratic ticket.

Democratic leaders speak of "first string" and "second string" dark horses, when they have eliminated the Big Three. In the first string are Mr. Davis, Mr. Ralston, Mr. Cummings and Mr. Glass. In the second string are Governor Sweet of Colorado, Royal S. Copeland, Senator from New York, Governor Silzer of New Jersey, Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Chairman Cordell Hull of Tennessee, Houston Thompson, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, and former Governor Gardner of Missouri. Mr. Gardner's name has just entered the field. He was a successful war governor of Missouri and is considered, as a "border state" man, to measure up to the western and progressive requirements the Democrats will call for at New York.

The foregoing entries do not exhaust the list. The country is wide and the Democratic Party is numerous.

South Africa Election

Much interest centers around the results of parliamentary election, on June 17, in the Union of South Africa. The gold mining industry and its leaders are not indifferent to the vital issues separating the South African Party from the Nationalist—Labor Pact, in both national and economic spheres and are taking an active interest. Aside from the fact that most of the shareholders of the industry, being loyal British subjects, naturally favors a party supporting the British connection as opposed to that Nationalists' desire for a republic, the latter has definitely expressed its hostile intentions toward the industry in various ways and the fight promises to be bitter on both sides.

General Issac R. Sherwood, of Toledo, is the oldest member of Congress, to which body he has been elected as a Democrat, as a Greenbacker, as a Republican. He is 89 years of age and proposes to drop politics and go back to his newspaper work. He was made a Brigadier General by President Lincoln for gallant services.

THE LOCAL PAPER

Newspapers are not published from philanthropic motives, but many country publishers are often tempted to believe that most of the people in the community in which their lot is cast have this opinion of them. They are asked to grind everybody's ax and they do so most patiently and willingly, provided no one is injured by the grinding. The local newspaper is expected to know everything that is going on, and to present the local news fully and attractively. It must be wide awake and progressive, vigilant for the advancement of the material progress of the locality, be on the lookout for helpful projects, and be ready in season and out of season to exploit the industrial agricultural and social advantages of the section with which it is identified. This work it does.

And for so doing it should receive cordial and substantial support—a sure incentive to redoubled efforts, making the paper more potent for good in the community.

Far too often the support is only half-heartedly, and grudgingly given; the publisher grows discouraged at the apparent lack of appreciation of his efforts; he can not afford the expenditures which are really necessary to make his paper what he would like to have it, and it is said to be running down, when its decadence is, in fact, a reflection upon the spirit and progress of the community.

There is no enterprise which deserves more liberal or considerate treatment at the hands of the people than the local newspaper. The local merchant should use it freely, and demonstrating that advertising pays, should willingly pay a fair price for the returns he receives. Every citizen should take and read his local newspaper and they will find the whole community quickened into new activity by the impulse which the live local paper will give. In this way the home paper should be made a tower of strength.

As the News goes to press Thursday, the Republicans are in the midst of their National convention in Cleveland, Ohio, where the interest is dragging, and the G. O. P. ax is grinding slowly. As Mr. Coolidge is practically without opposition. Platform demands and the matter of selecting a running mate for the President is taking up the time, while a pipe organ and a good brass band are furnishing music for the occasion.

PICNIC

The Intermediate B. Y. P. U. spent a most delightful afternoon on the creek last Thursday. Several went in swimming, others waded and still others fished. About 6:30 the bunch was called to a particular spot on the creek where a large lunch was spread. After the lunch was over and several stories and games had been told and played the picnickers returned to town. Those who went were: Rev. and Mrs. Martin and son, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Slaughter and children, Mrs. Moody Polk and son James, Misses Dora Garrett La Verne Dennis, Thelma Lackey, Eureka Pleasant Ola Polk and Messers Jimmie Harvey, Louis Ratcliff, Manuel Edwards. Only a few were able to go, but still we all had a nice time.—Contributed.

Child Health Conference

The second child health conference will be held in Santa Anna at the American Legion hall, on Saturday, June 14th, at 2 to 5 p. m. Parents are urged to bring their children each month. Please do not use this excuse, "I meant to bring my children, but it just slipped my mind!" The secret of the monthly conferences is that you have your child weighed and inspected each month, and not only once a year and your duty is done. Please do not wait until your child has lost several pounds in weight and is sick, then expect to bring him back to normal in a few days time.—Mrs. J. Wesnik, County Health Nurse.

THE RETURN AND THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-11; 3:1-6:22.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."—Isa. 40:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Building a House for God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Love for God's House.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Rebuilding of the Temple.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Significance of the Return.

1. The Return From Captivity Predicted (Jer. 29:10-14).
It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon, telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to write a letter to the captives in Babylon (Jer. 29:1-9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by false prophets.

10. The Length of the Captivity (v. 10). Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive among which Daniel was found.

11. The Prediction of Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra 1:1-11).
1. The Proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4). This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). God never forgets. What He has promised He will do. It was by divine initiation—the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus. In his proclamation he ordered that all who desired should go back and build the house of the Lord God, and those who lacked this inclination should lend assistance by making gifts of silver, gold and beasts.

2. The Response to Cyrus' Proclamation (vv. 5, 6). The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.
3. Royal Favors (v. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and placed in the house of his gods. This, no doubt, greatly encouraged the Jews, for there were 5,400 vessels returned.

11. The Temple Rebuilt (Ezra 3:3-6:16).
1. The Foundation Laid. This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with impressive ceremonies.

(1) The priests in their apparel (v. 10). The priests' garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.
(2) The priests with trumpets (v. 10). These trumpets were made of silver and were used in calling the people together.

(3) The Levites with symbols (v. 10). These were to furnish the instrumental music of the sanctuary, in accordance with the arrangements made by David (I Chron. 15:10-21).
(4) They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively. The one company sang, "The Lord is good." The other responded, "For his mercy endureth forever."

(5) Mingle weeping and shouting (vv. 12, 13). Some of the older men, who had seen the magnificent and glorious temple of Solomon, which had been destroyed, wept much when they saw how far short the present foundations came from the former temple.

2. The Building Hindered (Ezra 4). The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people, the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive.

(1) An unintelligent pessimism (Ezra 4:13). Under the circumstances this was a glorious beginning and gave promise of great things for the future. Therefore it was no credit to the priests, Levites and chief of the fathers to mar this occasion with their weeping.

(2) Worldly compromise (Ezra 4:2, 3). They said, "Let us build with you, for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method today.

(3) Open opposition by the world (Ezra 4:4-24). When refused a part in the work open opposition was resorted to.

3. The Temple Finished (Ezra 5:1-6; 6:15). Through the ministry of the Prophets Haggai and Zechariah the people were encouraged to resume the work of building the temple.

IV. The Temple Dedicated (Ezra 6:16-22).
The people were united in this building program and came together upon its completion and solemnly dedicated it to God.

WASHING WOOLENS

One of the properties of wool which makes it valuable as a textile fiber also makes woolen cloth difficult to launder. This is the property of felting or shrinking. Wool has, a short fiber, or staple, as it is technically called. This fiber is covered with minute scales, and under certain conditions of heat, moisture and pressure these tiny scales are locked together and the fabric is shrunk. If wool did not possess this felting quality, it would be impossible to spin the short fibers into yarn, and what is our most valuable fiber would be practically worthless.

Because heat, moisture and pressure cause wool to shrink and because all three of these enter into the laundering process it is necessary to give them due consideration.

First, the temperature of the water in which blankets or other woolens are washed must never be high, never more than tepid. Not only is wool shrunk by high temperature but by a change in temperature as well. This means that the rinse water must be neither hotter nor colder than the wash water, and it also means that woolens should not be dried by the stove or over the radiator, nor should they be hung out in the freezing weather. Therefore, in so far as possible keep the washing, rinsing and drying temperatures equal.

Second, pressure applied, when the woolens are wet, causes a locking of the scales or shrinking. In other words do not rub nor wring blankets. The following has been found a very satisfactory way of washing them: Dissolve one bar of good laundry soap or the equivalent of soap flakes may be used. Add four tablespoonfuls of borax and a half-cupful of household ammonia. This is sufficient for washing one pair of blankets.

Put this solution in enough water, lukewarm, to cover the articles to be washed and allow them to remain in the water several hours. It is sometimes convenient to put the blankets to soak over night. They may then be placed in the morning and be put to dry during the day.

If there are resistant, dirty spots, rub them gently with the hands. Never, under any circumstances, use a washboard.

The same amounts of borax and ammonia should be added to the rinse water and the blankets are left in this for two or three hours.

Drain off the water, or gently squeeze out as much as possible. Hang up the blankets without wringing in some place where they may drip.

Not only does heat cause wool to shrink, but it causes it to become yellow and board-like.

Baby flannels, which must be washed almost daily, are especially apt to be yellowed and shrunken, and particularly so when they are dried hurriedly before the open oven door or over the radiator, as they so frequently are.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Dishes or cooking utensils, soiled by eggs, may be washed much more easily if soaked in cold water.

Dishes soiled by sugar and starchy substances may be washed much more easily if soaked in hot water.

A rug, the edges of which insist upon curling up, may be made to lie flat by placing a wet Turkish towel over the edge in question and weighting it down. A good way to weight it is to put the ironing-board over the towel and then place several heavy articles on top of the board. Allow it to dry.

A piece of oiled paper placed over the dish holding unused egg yolks will keep them from getting dry.

Put stale bread through the food chopper and keep the crumbs in a jar or crock, covered with a clean muslin cloth. If kept in a container with a lid the crumbs will mold.

Save the small pieces of soap and use them to make soap jelly, which, kept in a mason jar, is ready for shampooing. A box in the bathroom will prove a reminder to gather up the bits left from the bar.

A finger cut from an old glove, put over the end of the curtain rod, will make it much easier to run the curtain onto the rod.

Rinse off the lemon squeezer immediately upon using it and it will not collect that white deposit, so impossible to remove.

From Holland comes the Edam cheese, which is round and dyed red on the outside. In Holland, it is often served in slices, especially when fresh. In America, a slice is usually cut from the top and the inside scooped out as needed. It is not often used in cooking in this country, but an extremely thrifty person will fill the shell with rice or macaroni which has been seasoned and bake it, thereby getting the last bit of good from her Edam cheese.

INFLUENCE OF PUBLIC EVENTS ON FASHIONS

The present craze for oriental colors and designs which is sweeping the country, is more or less a direct outgrowth of the interest centered in Egypt due to the successful archeological expeditions being conducted there.

The eyes of the world are turned toward those ancient tombs which are yielding their secrets of long gone days. The success of the explorers is a triumph in which the whole world wants to share.

The designers and manufacturers of textile fabrics are expressing their interest by bringing forth a bewildering array of materials, oriental in color and design.

The dress designers are creating costumes which they know or think to be Egyptian in line and feeling.

The merchant is filling his shop with these costumes and his shelves overflow with a riot of color and design.

The jeweler and the bootmaker will make their wares in keeping with the rest of the costume, as will the manufacturer of every dress accessory known to woman.

The feminine world will array itself in a coat of many colors and fashion's decree will be executed.

Surely King Tut in all his glory was never more magnificent than he is now in memory.

Strange that a king of a dead and gone civilization should be the arbiter of fashions thousands of years after his time? Not so strange at that. Public events have always made their impress on the fashions of the day.

In olden times when coats of mail were part of man's war equipment, the clothes were tight fitting, so that the coat of mail could be worn over them. The women's clothes were a reflection of the men's. In times of peace they were apt to be loose and flowing. The military feeling was present in the styles of 1914-1918.

We never go through a presidential election without featuring a new color, the favorite of the first lady of the land.

SPECIFIC METHODS OF REMOVING STAINS

The following directions applied, to the problem of removing specific stains may simplify the housewife's labor in this respect:

Blood may be removed by soaking first in cold water and then washing in lukewarm, soapy water. Wet starch will absorb the stain from a thick material. Put a lump of wet starch over the spot and, when dry, brush off. Repeat until the stain is gone. Old stains may be removed by means of hydrogen peroxide, to which a little ammonia has been added. Rinse with very weak acetic acid and finally with water. Colors of fabrics are also faded by the peroxide. This fact must not be overlooked.

Cover chocolate or cocoa stains with borax and soak in cold water.

Coffee, tea, and most fruit stains may generally be removed by stretching the fabric over a bowl and pouring boiling water onto it so the water will strike the stain with force.

Peach stain is particularly resistant. It is the stain which old-fashioned housekeepers used to tell us would come out when the peach season was over. Rub glycerin over the spot two or three days before washing.

Grass stain is one which is frequently found in households where there are small children, and a knowledge of how to treat it is valuable to the mother. Such stains may be soaked in alcohol if the color is not affected, otherwise, make a paste of soap and baking powder, spread over the spot and allow to stand for several hours. Milk may prove effective when the stain is fresh. Hydrogen peroxide and ammonia, or just ammonia may be used. The effect of the agent upon the color must govern the method employed.

Mildew, when newly formed, may usually be removed by strong soap-suds and sunlight. As the old stains are very stubborn, it is well to see that they are not allowed to grow old. In such cases, a strong bleaching agent, must be used, and then the question of color enters to complicate the problem.

Medicine stains are soluble in alcohol, in which they are soaked.

Rust may be removed by covering with lemon-juice and salt and putting in the sun or holding in the steam of the tea kettle.

The removal of ink stains is rendered more difficult because it is impossible to know the exact nature of the ink. Colored fabrics may be soaked in sour milk, as the color is unaffected by the mild acid in the milk. Oxalic acid may be effective. Oxalic acid is a deadly poison, therefore it should always be plainly marked and kept on a high shelf. Salt and lemon may be used with success in mild cases.

Republican Newspaper of Massachusetts Condemns Republican Congress as Failure.

Republican newspapers in various parts of the country are admitting that the present Republican Congress has been a failure. In part of this depreciation of the Republican Congress is propaganda in behalf of President Coolidge, who is to be depicted in the campaign as much better than his party and his official associates, but in many cases the criticisms are based on the facts.

The Springfield (Mass.) Union a Republican journal, has editorially condemned the Republican Congress as unworthy of public confidence.

"In neither the Senate nor the House has the Republican party made a record sufficient to justify any Senator or Representative in appealing to his constituents on the strength of that record," says the Union.

Western Republican newspapers are complaining because Congress has done nothing for the farmers of that section, and there is dissatisfaction in other quarters because the Republican Senate, under the leadership of Senator Lodge, has refused to ratify the proposal for American membership in the World Court.

Pampered Children

Most people will be quick to point to the moral in the slaying of young Robert Franks of Chicago by the sons of two Chicago millionaires, who did not offer any real motive for the crime in their confessions.

And none will be wrong in pointing to the moral—for its lesson is one that is needed in every household where there are children.

In this instance, two young men, not yet of age, both college graduates and one of them unusually brilliant, with everything that money could buy, brutally murdered a defenseless boy.

Whatever their motive may have been, the fact stands out that they were pampered sons of the rich and they committed a deed that is very likely the logical development, of their environment, their mode of thinking and their superficial ideas of life.

Doubtless they have been reared in surroundings that have led them to believe that anything was theirs for the asking.

They had lived the life that they knew to the fullest and have found it empty. Then they sought new thrills, which ended so disastrously.

Pampered boys and girls are the incorrigible boys and girls. Children whose every whim is satisfied and passing fancy gratified, with few exceptions, are the children who come to grief sooner or later.

No matter to what estate they may be born, children have to be restrained and directed by persons wiser in experience and older in years.

Those who have a free rein are on the road to the same destiny that now holds two Chicago boys, in its death grip—perhaps not a destiny so fatal, but one that will bring pain and sorrow.

Thoughtful parents will regard this terrible tragedy as a possibility for any boy or girl who are permitted to do as they please and will be guided accordingly.

Good Intentions

Some people mean well, but never do well. Their lives are paved with good intentions never carried out. They are always intending to do something that never gets done.

Instead of taking a just pride in accomplishment, they are continually humiliated by the inadequacy of their excuses.

They do not even drift with the tide of humanity, but unresistingly are switched into the eddies of life.

For them there is a beginning and an end, but nothing in between.

They have neither true friends nor bitter enemies, because they do nothing to inspire either friendship nor enmity.

They are nameless because no one takes the trouble to name them.

HEALTH TEACHING

Health teaching must begin in the public schools, a speaker told the National Tuberculosis convention, but it has to be carried on in the home and parents have to be entirely in sympathy with the program before the schools can accomplish much, influential as they are.

Children's habits are formed at home before they become of school age. If they are not required by their parents to take paths as frequently as they should, to cleanse their teeth and take care of their body properly, no amount of teaching will accomplish that which is desired.

Once upon a time a school teacher sent the parents of a particularly unclean child a note asking that he be sent to school clean. The teacher received the following reply:

"Willie ain't no rose. Learn him, don't smell him."

Teachers can accomplish little in the modern health crusade in the public schools when parents take this attitude.

A spirit of selfishness is contemptible in an individual, a family, or in any special group of people. The idea of "Lord, save me, and my wife, and my son John, and his wife, us four and no more," never made the world better or happier, and such a spirit should be discouraged.

Sick Headache

"I have used Black-Draught when needed for the past 25 years," says Mrs. Emma Grimes, of Forbes, Mo. "I began taking it for a bad case of constipation. I would get constipated and feel just miserable—sluggish, tired, a bad taste in my mouth, and soon my head would begin hurting and I would have a severe sick headache. I don't know just who started me to taking

A WEE SQUIRREL

Mount Sterling, a pretty town in eastern Kentucky in the heart of the white burley tobacco country, is on the dividing line between the famous Blue Grass region and the mountains.

In early days many Indian battles were fought in this section, which—guys Kentucky, the sobriquet of The Dark and Bloody Ground. Then during the Civil war, Kentucky being a so-called border state, several severe engagements were fought in the vicinity of this town, and it was occupied at various times by each of the contending armies.

Looking east from the town one has a fine view of the beautiful foothills of the Allegheny mountains some twenty miles away. And in the opposite direction, lie the wonderful Blue Grass farms, which have long been celebrated as a center for rearing the finest grades of horses. One summer morning, not long ago, while we were visiting on one of these farms, woodmen cut down a huge old black oak tree. When it fell they were astonished to find in a hole in the tree a squirrel's nest in which were five baby squirrels, very young—they did not yet have their eyes open. The falling of the tree killed all but one. My cousin, who owned the plantation, took the wee squirrel home. Now how to feed it was the question. Well—he filled a small bottle with warm milk and put a quill in the cork, and it was certainly a cute sight to see the squirrel nursing on that bottle.

Cousin kept it in his coat pocket much of the day, and he took it everywhere with him, stopping occasionally for fresh milk for the baby squirrel. At night it slept all curled up in an old cap on the closet shelf in his room. Bunny was a great pet and lived to be several years old. His death was deeply mourned. (© Western Newspaper Union.)

EARLY DAYS IN SANTA ANNA AND COLEMAN CO.

As Remembered by Dr. Mathews
In 1882, having just graduated from Missouri Medical College in St. Louis, (now known as the Medical Department of Washington University), Dr. J. P. Mathews left his old home near Jefferson, Texas, and located at Queen City, in Cass county where he practiced medicine two years. It was while located at this place that Dr. Mathews first conceived the idea of coming to what was then the western frontier.

"I came to Santa Anna," said Dr. Mathews "in February 1884. At that time the town was located in the gap of the mountain. There were two general stores, Wofford Bros. and Crosby and Moffit. The beauty and the promise of the country appealed to me very forcibly, and besides a survey of the Gulf Colorado & Santa Fe railroad passed thru the gap. The people were expecting the road to be built soon therefore, I decided to locate and I wrote a friend of mine, Mr. T. E. Brazelton, who is now Industrial Agent for the Santa Fe road, to join me here, as the Santa Fe would build through the gap as that was the only practical thing they could do. Mr. Brazelton recently said I had not satisfactorily explained yet why the Santa Fe should have built through the gap. There was also a telegraph line which extended to Fort Concho.

"In the very earliest days Santa Anna water supply was very limited as it consisted of one shallow well, and at times there was quite an incentive for one to get his water early in the morning. There is quite a contrast between that water supply and the present one with our two lakes filled with water enough to cover probably one hundred acres.

"The first school building was situated just east of Mrs. McDaniels' residence and north of the road. Shortly after I came O. F. McGonagill, J. W. Herndon and myself were elected trustees for the school and the school building was moved to where the present buildings are. We elected Mr. J. E. Martin teacher and time proved that we had made a wise selection as he is favorably remembered by many of the old timers today. The school trustees and others saw that the school building would have to be enlarged. On investigation it appeared that to get an adequate amount subscribed would be a doubtful proposition. Some knowing the characteristics of the people said we would have to get up an entertainment and a voting proposition, so we got up a contest between Mud Creek and Santa Anna to decide the most popular young lady. McCutcheon. We surely had some crowd and some contest. The result was that we got all the money we needed and the Santa Anna girl won in the contest.

Among the early amusements in those days Badger fights stood out very prominently. The promoters had no mery on any one on account of prominence. Captains, Majors and Colonels being favorites. Large crowds attended these; old men as well as the young. I remember seeing a Major who was a prominent man in Santa Anna at that time pull a Badger. I remember especially to have seen a very refined physician who had been a naval surgeon pull a badger. He was as mad as a hornet when he caught on and you may know that was some spectacle.

"Coleman county at this time was strictly a stock country, cattle, sheep and horses being raised exclusively. Consequently the country was full of cowboys. Antelope was plentiful then, often coming up in town I wrote a friend of mine, Mr. T. E. Brazelton, who is now Industrial Agent for the Santa Fe road, to join me here, as the Santa Fe would build through the gap as that was the only practical thing they could do. Mr. Brazelton recently said I had not satisfactorily explained yet why the Santa Fe should have built through the gap. There was also a telegraph line which extended to Fort Concho.

"The first school building was situated just east of Mrs. McDaniels' residence and north of the road. Shortly after I came O. F. McGonagill, J. W. hopeful, thinking Bill was getting better. The cowboys started up the row again and some one suggested to Bill's friend that he take Bill to his house which was near. The friend picked Bill up and started but he did not get very far until he was halted and Bill was taken away from him. As things were not quiet up in town Bill's friend went back much disturbed about him. Soon after he met Bill who had a broad grin on his face and who was enjoying himself very much. He said, "Say Pard that was a good sham fight we pulled off wasn't it?"

"A Mr. Reed was County Judge at that time and Ben Pittman was sheriff. There was only one farm then between Santa Anna and Coleman. This farm is known as the Close farm and is now owned by the Rev. Fender.

"Soon after I came about 1886 I think, the country was very much disturbed about fence cutting. G. W. Mahoney having one of the first large pastures fenced had great difficulty in keeping it fenced as his wire was frequently cut down in the night. I remember returning from a call one morning and noticing that the wire was cut between every post for ten miles.

"On the 31st of March 1892, a cyclone visited us and entirely destroyed several residences. In one of these residences I had a patient that had died just a few minutes before with pneumonia. There were several persons present. A boy was killed and all were injured. I had left the house a short time before the cyclone struck the house which was located just north of where the cemetery is, was blown away and the corpse was blown to the foot of the hill. One wagon tire was blown from a new wagon which belonged to Henry Brown, who lived just south of the cemetery, and carried one and one half miles, and landed over a tree top. (This was the report Dr. Mathews will not vouch for the truth of it.) We maintained a hospital until the injured recovered.

"The first newspaper established in Santa Anna was the Santa Anna News, in 1886. A man named Rowland was the editor. He came here from somewhere in the east for tubercular trouble. Major Spann afterward established the Mountaineer and at one time the town maintained three newspapers. Mr. Wilkes was at one time editor of the Santa Anna News."

People at that time did not go in a rush and a push. One dark rainy night he had a call to go to the Pink Barton place on Home Creek. He started and got lost and wandered all night in the rain and the darkness. He came to a small house where a lone woman was but she told him he could not stay there. Finally in his wanderings in the dark he saw a house through the flashes of lightning, the hail was falling and the storm raging, so he went to the house, but on investigation he found no one lived there, however, he decided he would take refuge there from the storm. Pushing the door open to enter, to his amazement he found the cabin full of sheep, which had taken shelter there from the storm. In went the doctor and stayed with the sheep until the storm was over. After this he wandered around and came in home at daylight.

The country doctors at that time were men of bravery and fortitude, getting up in the middle of the night and going horse back long distances in the worst of weather with no roads scarcely and oft-times so weary and tired they would almost go to sleep in the saddle. Sometimes they were called on to perform difficult and serious operations without any preparation and with very few surgical instruments. Turpentine, camphor and carbolic acid being the only antiseptics to be had. Bridges were scarce and often they had to ford the swollen streams. One time Dr. Mathews crossed Home Creek when there was a rise. Just as he got to the opposite bank the body on his buggy began to float. Had he been a moment later he would have been drowned. Another time he was near the Turner ranch and a hail storm overtook him, his horse became frightened, the Dr. got out of the buggy to try to quiet the horse and the horse ran away and left him afoot. After some trouble he came in home

Dr. Mathews is very modest and retiring in disposition. When asked by the reporter the most pathetic incident in his practice, he very reluctantly gave the following story, saying that he did not wish any of his medical friends to think that he was trying to boost himself.

In the early days there was a very poor family moved into a hut down on Mud Creek. The man began getting out cedar posts to sell for a living. Of course at that time posts were cheap and the man had a mere pittance for a living. In this family was a boy who had a deformed eye, the ball of the eye being twice the size of a normal eye-ball. The child was poor and thin and about half the size he should have been for his age. His father brought him in town for treatment from time to time, finally he was taken very sick and Dr. Mathews was called in. His eye was badly inflamed and was in a very serious condition. The doctor saw if the child lived the eye would have to be taken out, and advised his father to take him to a specialist. Of course the child's father did not have the money for this, as specialists were not common at that time. The father insisted that Dr. Mathews operate and finally he agreed to. A physician was summoned from Thrifty and together they made a speculum. Neither of the doctors having the instruments necessary to perform the operation but with such material as he had Doctor Mathews performed the operation and the other physician administered the chloroform. The operation proved a success. The boy recovered and began to grow and soon became stout and healthy.

Dr. Mathews was married in October 1888 to Miss Emma Chambers in the old school house which was then used for a church. Mrs. Mathews came to Santa Anna in June 1887, having just graduated from Baylor University. She has been an ideal wife for a physician, always interested in her husband's work, sharing his successes and encouraging him in his disappointments. Mrs. Mathews is very intelligent and interesting and one of the best loved women in Santa Anna. Out of six children born in this home only two are living, Jodie and Ralph Mathews, both of Brownwood, Texas.

Dr. Mathews is a splendid business man and retired from the practice of medicine several years ago in order to devote his time to his business. He is a very fine type of man; strictly reliable and conscientious and perhaps the highest esteemed man in town. Santa Anna is especially glad to claim him and his wife for its citizens.

Below is given a list of the names of old timers as furnished by Dr. Mathews in town:

J. D. Simpson and wife, J. F. Turner, Mrs. J. S. Parker, Henry Parker, Mrs. G. W. Faulkner, L. W. Hunter and wife, Mrs. Will Hunter, S. H. Phillips.

He recalls the following old settlers in the country that are here now:

Miss Blanche Boyd, Mrs. Paul VanDalsem, Mrs. Chas Oakes, E. P. Rendleman and wife, Mrs. Cris Burke, Charles Holt, Will Holt, J. D. Holt, Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kirkpatrick, Mr. John Campbell, Stafford Baxter, W. E. Baxter, Mrs. E. E. Polk, Sam Harper and wife, Pink and Bailey Barton, Will Harper and wife, Luther, Sam and George Stewardson, Will Day and wife, Sam Hamon, H. W. Kingsbery, Henry Brown, A. R. Brown, Tom Campbell, Mrs. R. C. Gay, Fred W. Turner, Mrs. George Williams, Andrew Fowler, Mrs. C. B. Aldridge.

The lamented Mr. Stockard has so ably dealt with this subject that there is but little interest to tell.

—Miss Ollie Pearce.

HOME

Young man, don't spend your money foolishly, with no thought for the future. Save your money for a home of your own. If you have no money except what you earn yourself, then scrupulously save and lay aside a part of your income, until you have enough to pay for a piece of land. To be the owner of a homestead will have a beneficial effect upon your character. It will increase your self-respect, your confidence in yourself. You will feel that you have a substantial position and something at stake in the community. The ownership of a home will add greatly to your happiness. The feeling of possession which it engenders is a source of constant satisfaction. There is one spot on earth which you improve and beautify. With that spot your thoughts, your ambitions and your affection become identified. You learn to love it. It is like an unchanging friend. It becomes an unending source of enjoyment. It is one investment that pays enormous dividends in satisfaction.

Texas produced 43 per cent of the cotton crop last year, and bids fair to go as strong in 1924. There is profit in cotton at prevailing prices, but an over production is most sure to lower the price to where there is no profit. Beware—raise some feed.

There is no room in the breast of a newspaper editor for malice. He, of all men, learns the lessons of forbearance. He spends a lot of time each week in keeping out of the papers items that would hurt, or bring a blush of shame or sadden unnecessarily the heart of some wife or mother or friend.

The attendance at the singing at the Presbyterian church on Sunday afternoon was the greatest since its organization, proves that the interest is also growing. Let everybody come to these gatherings and take part, especially the membership of this church.

The members of the Presbyterian Missionary society met at the home of Mrs. Frank Miles on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Fred Turner Jr., efficiently led the meeting in the study of mission work in Cuba and Porto Rico. "Flower Day" was observed in a most charming manner, each member present being presented with a cluster of sweet peas, which carried a clipping of interesting information and history, read by each one, aside from the usual program. Several visitors were present.

The News editor mounted a Ford last Friday afternoon after the paper was mailed out, and meandered our way across the country to Brownwood, Comanche, DeLeon, Gorman, Eastland, Cisco, Rising Star and returned by way of May. May, at one time was known as "May-town," but the fellows living there eliminated the "Town" and now it is just plain "May." We enjoyed spending a few hours in the splendid little city of Rising Star, where the writer and family lived ten years, and the operator was reared and lived for a certain part of a century. We had the pleasure of visiting the printing plant while there, which was our home for some 10 years. However, Editor Sellars has recently purchased the plant, discarded most of the equipment purchased by the writer, and has installed a more modern equipment and is enjoying a splendid business. The business men of Rising Star are loyal to their paper, patronizing it in an advertising way, and also have their job work printed at home. They appreciate their home paper and Editor Sellars is both proud and worthy.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my many friends for the beautiful flowers while I was in the hospital. Mrs. J. B. Joiner.

THE PASSING DAY

(By Will H. Mays)

One of the worst features of our "jazz" age is that half the people seem to be almost perpetually weary and bored. Unless keyed up to the highest pitch of excitement they are suffering from a sort of reaction that makes them tired of life and everything about them. They rush from one exciting business or pastime to another and between times are afraid that they may not make connection with some event more thrilling than anything that has gone before. They are forever wanting more. If they have money, even beyond all possibility of using it, they are eager for greater gains; if they have position, they feverishly long for still higher places of honor and conspicuousness; if they have either friends or foes they seem anxious for more of either. All the while they show a spirit of dissatisfaction, of unrest, of killing eagerness for they know not what.

This perturbed state of mind, this longing for something more than they have, or something different from past experiences, wears out both body and mind, and incapacitates for real progress. Ambition of any kind, desire in any direction, may be laudable, but it can be overdone. Impatience, of a kind, is commendable, but when it results in dissatisfaction it is destructive of constructive effort. Pleasures overdone are as bad as too much food; intemperate success may be worse than failure; men and women are so constituted that struggle is best for them; disappointment is often the best discipline.

Dissatisfaction invariably accompanies over-excitement and restlessness. I met a man recently who complained that he was not succeeding as he thought he should. He was not getting wealth fast enough; his health was not as good as he wished it to be; and he was inclined to blame God for placing him in a world that the man did not understand and that would not do his bidding. Yes, he had prospered, but not enough; and he feared his business might not continue so good. He was able to be about, to attend to business, to mingle in society, to do things that a few years ago seemed impossible for him; but he didn't feel like a fighting cock after either business or social dissipation, and so life was getting drab and monotonous. He merely wanted more of everything than he had secured, and he was dissatisfied because it did not come as fast as he wished.

It is nice to dream of having everything just as we would like everything to be; but if that should be, the whole social system would soon go to pieces just as the planetary system would quickly end in chaos without some guiding, restraining force. The sensible thing to do is to dream and strive to bring dreams to pass, but to leave the results with a higher power that regulates things pretty well despite our complainings. We merely weaken ourselves when we waste our energies in fretting. We can't regulate the world or control absolutely our own fortunes, so why complain about it? We cannot stop the waters of the passing river, so why drown ourselves in the effort? Get the most out of the passing day, and look joyously to the morrow.

Just now the farmers of Texas seem to have more reason than any other class for becoming discouraged. Rains in almost every part of the State have put them behind with their work. Planting has been greatly delayed and many crops that are up are badly in the grass and weeds. In some sections crops have been drowned out and seed for replanting can not be had. But in spite of all this the farmers can not afford to become discouraged and there is no need for it. The best thing is to make the best of conditions and to work to overcome them. If one crop cannot be made there may be time for another, and intensive work will overcome the grass and weeds. The hot summer will soon dry out the top of the ground and the rains have given a season that will cause a quick growth of crops.

Prices are good and there is every prospect that they will continue good. Texas farmers are resourceful and may be depended on. They know how to meet and overcome difficulties.

Fear is man's worst enemy, and yet it is needless to entertain fear. The things we most fear seldom come to pass, and even if they do the person with a mind filled with fear is not prepared to meet them like the one who faces difficulties with confidence. Fear is surely cowardice expressing itself with greater strength than courage.

J. A. Thomas For State Senate From the 25th District

In this issue of the News will be found the announcement of J. A. Thomas of San Angelo for the State Senate from the 25th District, subject to the Democratic primary in July. Incidentally, the election of a Senator this year—there are now two in the race—will fill a vacancy that has existed in this district for about a year.

Mr. Thomas was born and reared in Williamson County, Texas, being fifty years old and twenty years of his life has been devoted to the practice of law. For two terms he was Tom Green County Attorney, retiring then of his own accord. He was elected three times as District Attorney, resigning before the end of his third to resume his private law practice. He has an excellent record before the bar and as a good citizen. He is a life-long Democrat, and has been active in councils of the party. He wishes to assure the voters of Coleman county and this section of the District that all support given him will be appreciated and that he will endeavor to deserve the trust reposed in him if elected.

Mr. Thomas declared that generally speaking he was for an economical administration of the State government, consistent with good business judgment; for fewer and better laws and for the simplification and improvement of existing statutes in the interest of court procedure and in other respects, and would likely favor the repeal of some existing laws and the enactment of but few additional ones; and to work at all times for the best interest of the State's educational system.

Mr. Thomas sates that in his long experience prosecuting he came in contact with a good many of the technicalities and quibbles in the law which prevent the courts properly dispatching business and administering justice, and believes he is in a position to do some effective work at Austin trying to straighten them out.

The sixteen counties in this senatorial district are: Sterling, Irion, Schleicher, Coke, Runnels, Tom Green, Concho, Menard, Coleman, Brown, Mills, Comanche, McCulloch, Mason, Gillespie and Kimble.

Tuesday Mrs. Ed Bartlett opened her home to us and we spent an enjoyable and profitable afternoon, having with us our captain, Mrs. Ford, also Mrs. Martin. After song and prayer the lesson was studied, then a course of study planned. After the social hour of contests refreshments of cake and cream with sweet peas as plate favors was served to Mesdames Grady, Newman, Croft, Martin, Hill, Newman, McCreary, Jones, Pillow, Hosch, Rowe, Watkins, Ford Kizer, Gregg, Lamb, Bartlett, Garrett, McDaniel and the hostess.—Contributed.

STUDY CLASS

The Study class of Circle No. 2 of the Baptist Missionary Society met at the Baptist church Monday afternoon. A very interesting lesson was taught by the pastor, Rev. Martin. A nice crowd was present and much interest was manifested by the class in the work. This is a great work and the pastor hopes each member will be present at the next meeting.

Methodist Missionary Society The Methodist Missionary Society met at the Methodist church Monday afternoon; an interesting meeting was held. Mrs. Bond led the devotional exercises. There were several present. The next meeting will be a social meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Josie Joiner.

I AM YOUR TOWN

Make of me what you will—I shall reflect you as clearly as a mirror throws back a candle beam.

If I am pleasing to the eye of the stranger within my gates; if I am such a sight as, having seen me, he will remember me all his days as a thing of beauty, credit is yours.

Ambition and opportunity call some of my sons and daughters to high posts and mighty privileges, to my greater honor and to my good repute in far places, but it is not chiefly these that are my strength. My strength is in those who remain, who content with what I can offer them, and with what they can give me. It was the greatest of all Romans who said: "Better to be first in a little Italian village than be second in Rome."

I am more than wood and brick and stone—more even than flesh and blood—I am the composite-soul of all who call me Home.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

More handkerchiefs, more neckties, more socks for father long live Father's Day.

Father never got much enthused about this Father's Day business until he found that it was another opportunity to add to his visible supply of wearing apparel, and ever since that time he has been a rank enthusiast.

He particularly likes the idea of receiving a real "loud" pair of socks from a daughter, and how he "enjoys" paying for them at the end of the month. And then that new necktie that sonny always gives him—and then wears it until all the "new" comes off. How he does love those neckties.

No joking—father does like to be appreciated. He was a little jealous when Mother had a halo placed upon her head, but he never said a word—just kept plodding away. He always knew that anything ever said about or done for mother would not pay the debt humanity owes to mother, but right down deep in his heart, father always believed that he deserved a little recognition for the part he plays in keeping the world turning on its axis.

So when somebody suggested a laurel crown for Father, he straightaway sanctioned the idea and it has grown until Father's Day has graduated into the calendar.

This year it falls on Sunday June 15. Last year was the first time father ever received widespread recognition with a "day" and he liked it so well that he believes he will relish one every year.

As a rule, father doesn't care to have anyone "make a fuss over him." He is content to go on doing his bit by rearing his family and helping wherever he can in community betterment.

But he'll have to admit that he's a little blase if he doesn't warm up to the idea of being the center of attraction one day in the year.

Bring on the socks, the handkerchiefs and the neckties.

Motor No. 10,000,000 Completed By Ford Plant in Detroit

Detroit, June 4.—Ford Motor No. 10,000,000 was completed at the Ford-Motor Company this morning and the ten millionth model "T" Ford car will leave the assembly line this afternoon, an official announcement says.

The first model "T" car was completed October 1, 1908, and it was seven years later when model No. 1,000,000 was produced. The last million cars the company announces were turned out complete in 132 working days.

FAITHFUL AND TRUE

We believe the greatest tribute that can be paid to anyone in this life is to have it said when he is gone he was faithful to every trust and was always true.

The Scriptures admonish us to be faithful, and the promise is given that "he that is faithful until death shall receive a crown of life."

There is so much of hypocrisy and deceit in this world that we can all appreciate the real and the true when we find it in the lives of those around us.

We love our friends when we know their friendship is sincere, but oh, the anguish—when we find that those we have learned to love are untrue, and that our trust in them has been betrayed.

We may go along and have the confidence of those among whom we are associated, and those nearest and dearest may believe our love is true and genuine, but that confidence may be destroyed by a single act of ours which proves that we have always been false at heart and were never worthy of the trust imposed in us.

The disappointment we feel when a dear friend has proved to be insincere and untrue, is the most saddening thing we can experience. But it is joy beyond measure to know that we have a friend who is faithful and whose love is true. And the only way we have of knowing the truth or falsity of a friend is when he or she is put to the test and the fact established beyond all doubt.

There are many obligations in life besides those we owe to our friends and loved ones, and we must meet the test in each and all. We have obligations to our town and country and to our government and to our government that we cannot avoid. If we are good citizens and true, we will never do anything to injure them or to retard their progress in things that go for their upbuilding. We cannot claim to be friends to religion and not defend it when it is attacked. We cannot be friends to education and refuse to help in the work of promoting it. We must stand by those we love, and must help the institutions we pretend to believe in, if we would prove the sincerity of our declarations.

But we cannot be spasmodical in these things. Devotion to a person or a cause will not cease because of difficulties or disappointments in what we are trying to do. If we are hot and cold we may be sure that we are not what we pretend to be. A true mother does not love and hate her child alternately. If she did she would not be a true mother. We must be constant in our affections and thus show that we are sincere.

In all the avenues of life let us be steadfast; let us be what we pretend to be at all times. Let us remember that to him that endureth to the end shall the crown be given. Let us always be faithful and true.

HER BUYING GUIDE

In her capacity as housewife, every woman in charge of a household is its general manager.

Upon her devolves the duty of making rather large purchases, which leads into another duty—that of economical expenditures of the household funds.

The observing housewife has doubtless noticed that her husband reads industriously what he calls his "trade papers," pertaining to his business. He reads them to keep pace with his work and to help solve the problems that arise every day.

The careful housewife will find that the newspapers are her "trade papers." The advertisements tell her nearly everything about the purchases she wishes to make, that she should know.

If she is a good household manager, like her husband, who spends many hours engrossed in his magazine and papers so that he may conduct his business more successfully, she will study with care the advertisements in the newspapers and find that they enable her to conduct her business more economically and successfully, and thus add to the comfort and joy of home life.

After becoming a careful and thoughtful reader of newspaper advertisements, this type of housewife will be able to choose the store that gives her the greatest value for her money.

Her choice will inevitably be the store where she can get the advertised goods she asks for and where she has been assured in advance, through advertisements, that the purchases she makes will be as advertised.

The thoughtful household manager will discover that any merchant who advertises will keep the contract he makes with his customers in his advertisements. She soon learns that any retail dealer who advertises regularly will not betray her confidence.

She knows that when the merchant inserts an advertisement in the newspaper, with his own name attached, he is speaking to her.

THE REWARD OF WORK

The newspaper reporter who won the Pulitzer prize of $1,000 for the best newspaper story written in 1923 proved that hard work and sustained effort has its reward.

The reporter was Magner White and his story was written for the San Diego Sun about the eclipse of the sun. For thirty nights he poured over scientific books, seeking all of the technical knowledge he could for the job that lay ahead.

An eclipse such as the one of last year takes place only every 120 years. He realized that it was his one big chance; that he would never have another one like it. So he prepared.

There is a lesson in this example for all of us. He demonstrated what everyone knows, but too little appreciates, that nothing worth while comes to us except through honest effort; and that to attain a goal, it is necessary to make preparation commensurate with the task.

A total eclipse of the sun is visible on the earth every 120 years, but our span of years here is much shorter than that.

When we set out upon our life's work, little realizing what a comparatively short time we are to be here, how many of us decide what our aim in life shall be, and then set about as thoroughly to react it as this newspaper reporter did in the accomplishment of his task?

Very few ever pay any attention to the experiences of those who have trod the same path—the technical knowledge required to make a success of life. Most of us plunge headlessly and thoughtlessly into the great experiences, never knowing the pain, the sorrow and the heartaches that it holds for us.

If those on the threshold only tarry for a few minutes at the feet of experience and wisdom and learn what lies before them, how much more wonderful this world would be.

But youth seldom does and so often learns its lesson at great cost.

The man who has a watch that keeps good time often imagines that it is due to his own shrewdness.

The season of the year is arriving when they will be coming up for the third and last time.

No one likes to hear a dry speech, but a wet one is not allowed in respectable society nowadays.

WHY YOU ARE WHAT YOU ARE

By EDNA PURDY WALSH

THE BUILDERS OF THE WORLD

The forehead which hangs over at the temples means building. Constructiveness, which is located in the middle part of the side temples, about two inches upward and two inches backward from the outer angle of the eyes, is its cause. It is the inventive faculty, qualifying its possessor for complex construction of machines, electrical plants, locomotives, typewriters, thrashing machines. They are always builders of some kind when constructiveness and intuition are strong, and unless other faculties are weak, they succeed.

The squarely-built man, with constructiveness large is an admirable employee and he will go to the top. He is usually direct and honest on account of his osseous, calcium make-up. He never talks very much, and his eyes when he is an active builder or mechanic, are not large. He does not tell his plans but just goes ahead with them.

He is often a somewhat silent husband. Though the large-bodied man with constructive ability large is slow, he is the one who takes raw material, raw facts, etc., and shapes them into an invention, which his quicker, more muscular brother can sell but not invent. Muscles predominating in an individual mean motion, but large, square bones and square head mean slower, more powerful continuity of thought.

HOME HINTS AND DIET

By INEZ SEARLES WILLSON
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

DIGESTIBILITY OF CHEESE

Is cheese as indigestible as it is ordinarily credited with being? Experiments carried on by the Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Bureau of Animal Husbandry seem to show that this is not the case. These experiments were conducted with young men as subjects. They were given a diet consisting of bread, American cheese and fruit. The results proved that over 90 per cent of the protein was digested and that 90 per cent of the energy was available and there were no evidences of digestive difficulties.

The digestion of the protein of cheese takes place in the intestines rather than in the stomach and this may be the cause of the general opinion that cheese is a "heavy" food.

There is a large amount of fat present in cheese and it forms a coating around the protein. This makes it difficult for the digestive juices to reach the protein and thus the digestive processes in the stomach are retarded.

Distress, due to eating cheese, has been attributed to the presence of free fatty acids which are produced during the ripening process. The same condition may be brought about by cooking cheese at a temperature so high that the fat is decomposed and fatty acids freed.

Further experiments, in which the energy required to digest cheese was measured, prove that the same amount of meat is assimilated no more easily.

In order to lessen the length of time that cheese remains in the stomach, it should be taken in as finely a divided state as possible. Careful chewing will help. The practice of eating crackers with cheese, especially soft cheese, is a great aid in separating the particles. Hard cheese is more readily reduced to small pieces. Melting cheese and mixing it with other foods is the very best way of making it possible for the digestive juices to reach the protein.

The use of baking soda and other like alkalies has been recommended for making the cheese more digestible in that it renders the protein soluble. Experiment does not bear out this claim. The alkali does neutralize the fatty acids which may or may not be an advantage as it affects the flavor of the cheese.

Many experiments have been conducted to prove the value of cheese as a food. The results have been very satisfactory. Not only is it a highly nutritive food, but it is in a form which can be assimilated by the body without the expenditure of undue energy. It does not cause digestive disturbances. It may be combined in numberless ways with other foods to make attractive and palatable dishes in which both fat and protein are furnished in an economical form.

HOME HINTS AND DIET

By INEZ SEARLES WILLSON
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

WHAT WE MUST EAT TO BE WELL NOURISHED

Proteins are the "tissue builders." They contain an element, nitrogen, fruit and other foods, but a certain amount of additional "sweets" are craved and the diet should contain them in some form.

Fat is another energy giver. It is furnished by such foods as potatoes, rice and other cereals.

Starch supplies energy. It is one of the most abundant foods and is found most abundantly in oats, butter and cream. Energy is stored in the body in the form of fat.

Mineral salts such as lime, iron, phosphorus and others are needed by the body to build tissue and to counteract certain acid formations which may take place during the process of digestion. Vegetables and fruits and milk are the sources of these valuable substances. Milk is rich in lime, which is one of the reasons it should figure largely in the diet of children. Spinach and beets give us iron, as do raisins.

Roughage, in the form of cellulose, which is the woody part of fruits and vegetables, is necessary to regulate body processes and aid in the elimination of waste. Therefore the diet should contain the coarse vegetables such as cabbage, lettuce and asparagus, the coarse breads and "gritty" cereals.

Liquids also aid in elimination of waste.

Last, but not least important, are the vitamins, which have been called "the protective foods." The exact nature of these substances is still a problem for the scientist to solve. This much is certain, there are substances present in some foods which are essential to the proper growth of children and the good health of every one. The lack of these substances in the diet is the direct cause of certain diseases. Milk, meat, eggs, fruits and vegetables contain vitamins. All vitamins are not present in all these foods, one may be found in one and another in a different one.

AN UNLUCKY TOE

(By Joe Sappington)

Last Sunday afternoon while moving a fifty pound chunk of ice from our Ford, it slipped and fell on one of my big toes and mashed it flat. That particular toe seems to be a marked and fatal digit for accident.

Many years ago I got it caught in the jaws of a rat trap out at our hen house where I had gone in the dead hours of the night to see what was disturbing the chickens. After the jaws of that trap came down on it all the men folks in ten blocks of our house came over to see what had happened to me and the chickens. Still on another and earlier occasion I got the same toe caught on a garden rake one dismal dark night while trying to locate a couple of squalling cats in the back yard and again the neighbors came in a solid phalanx to see who the murderer was.

All the accidents to happen to that particular toe within the last four decades, to the exception of last Sunday were at night time when darkness reigned supreme.

If that poor mashed toe could talk it would give me thunder for my carelessness and would probably address me something after this fashion:

"Say, you dern squash head, you must think I enjoy being mashed and bruised. When you were a little boy you made a battering ram of me that left me almost a total wreck. It also seems that you can never learn to be careful of me. I thought after you got to be a grown man surely you would have more sense than to expose me to all the fool dangers running at large. But I was sadly mistaken as the record will show. But of all the idiotic fool things you have ever done, was that stunt of last Sunday when you let that 50 pound chunk of ice fall on me in broad day light. Of course you did a lot of loud cussin and hopping around on one foot and abused your family for buying ice, but that did me no good. To say the least of it, I think you are a blame fool no matter if you are bald-headed, weak-eyed and hump-back and if you don't like what I have said you can lump it."

Yes, that is what I think that toe would say to me if it had the power of speech.

THE TIMID BORROWER

"I'd like to borrow $50 to buy a cow I saw yesterday," said a farmer to the cashier of a country bank.

The cashier hesitated. "No, I can't lend you $50 for a cow, but I'll let you have $100 or $125."

Astonishment was written all over the face of the man seeking funds. "Why, I can't afford to pay that amount for a cow. I'm rather hard up just now."

"If you can afford to buy a cow at all, you can afford to buy a good cow instead of a poor one," replied the cashier. Then he proceeded to explain just why a high-priced cow was cheaper than one costing only $50.

"The average cow producing about 165 pounds of butterfat valued at 50 cents a pound, earns $82 a year's gross income," he said. "Deducting the cost of feed leaves a profit only $10 to $12, and does not take into account the labor involved, depreciation, and other overhead expenses. Now can you honestly afford to buy this kind of cow? A $100 or $125 cow will produce 300 to 500 pounds of butterfat. You can figure the profits for yourself."

Convinced of the profitableness of investing more money in a cow, the farmer left the bank with the funds in his hands. He started paying for the animal with his first milk check. One-half of each milk check went to the bank to pay off the indebtedness while the farmer retained the remainder for his expenses.—Exchange.

The War Department proposition to conduct a two-day draft of 10,000,000 of men will cost more than the soldiers' bonus any one year and serve no really practical purpose except to stimulate other nations to similar experiments and expense.

Flappers are not as bad as they are painted, says a college president, and in some cases it wouldn't be possible.

Keeping Young Folks at Home

How to keep the young folks at home in the evening is a problem that has confronted many parents, because of the counter attractions that take them away.

Some parents think they have solved it by installing a radio. There are few young people, especially boys who are not attracted by a radio receiving set.

It brings to their ears concerts, news, results of athletic events, lectures and sermons. They can travel from coast to coast in one evening, picking up the strains of a famous piece of classical music one minute and casting aside in a few minutes for one of their favorite jazz numbers by an orchestra in a city perhaps one thousand miles away.

The boy who last year was standing on the curbstone smoking, or wasting his hours away in some game, may now be spending his time at home, roaming over the universe with his mind, tuning in here and there, constantly striving to find something new that the air is willing to give up.

It is a new and thrilling pleasure for a boy and has a peculiar fascination that attracts father and mother too, but the wise parents will sit back and allow the youngsters to manipulate the dial, realizing full well what it means to have them at home.

The radio provides a peculiarly useful interest for boys, stimulating their ingenuity and encouraging them to do things themselves instead of watching someone else do them. The boy who acquires skill in handling the instruments is the one who has patiently figured it all out, and he is the boy who will apply himself with the same care to the big job in the world when he gets to it.

SERVIE ON THE JURY

Jury service is one of the first duties of citizenship, but it is one of the last duties the average citizen is willing to perform.

Men of character and ability who possess the natural qualifications necessary to the rendering of fair and intelligent verdicts will go to great lengths in order to evade service on a jury.

Yet they will criticize the judgment of those who are willing to serve.

Mr. Average Citizen feels that he cannot afford to neglect his business interests in order to spend two or three days, or perhaps a week, in a jury box at small pay.

The financial sacrifice such service entails is a barrier between him and his duty to his community. He forsakes duty in attempts to evade making the sacrifice.

In far too many cases this attitude fills the jury box with men who are not fitted morally or intellectually to perform their duties without fear or favor.

The result is spread broadcast over the country in the form of criminality that is difficult to check and that increases the tax burden.

The law of nature requires that we reap as we sow, and even now and then we can hear the hum of the reaper.

Blazing the Trail

Workers in the woods frequently find the trail blazed by the axes of those who have gone before. Guided by these marks they easily find their way.

Advertisements perform a similar duty for you in the important business of spending money—either for the necessities of life or for luxuries.

They point the way to values of which you would never know if they were not there to guide you.

Do you read them? Wise shoppers do. They are economical buyers—the ones who keep themselves strictly up-to-date on the best opportunities for saving money, or spending it judiciously, which is one and the same thing.

Read the advertisements in this paper. Read them to know what's what in the shopping district. Read them because they place before your eyes a moving panorama of business progress. Read them to save money—to save steps—to save disappointments. Read them because they blaze your trail to satisfaction in your everyday buying. Read them regularly—follow their guidance. It pays.

Stiffling Commerce

When you hoard money away, you assist in stiffling commercial activity of your home community as well as of the whole country at large.

If you put it in the bank, the banker lends it to someone who uses it to produce something. That keeps other people at work and keeps the money in circulation.

If you lend it on a mortgage or buy bonds, it serves the same purpose. It keeps circulating and everybody is benefited.

When money keeps moving, it enables many people to move ahead in its sorry straits.

The dollar that is hidden away is in a bad place. If you have any such dollars, bring them from their hiding place and put them to work.

Little Travelogues

THE BEARS AT BERNE

Among the pleasant memories of Switzerland none is more pleasant than that of a month we spent at Berne, the capital and one of the most picturesque towns. The great charm of the city is the splendid view of the Alps, the grand galaxy of snowy peaks rising in magnificent array across the southern landscape, and the rich alpenglow being seen with rare enjoyment on pleasant evenings.

Berne was founded in the Twelfth century by the duke of Zähringen and named for the first animal he shot there—the bear—which has ever since been the emblem of the Bernese. For centuries these loyal people have kept pet bears in the town and have set up images of bears. The bear appears in effigy and name in all places, on coats of arms, signs, heraldic emblems, on fountains, flagstaffs, as toys, and heroes in unlimited variety.

The oldest of Berne's gateways, dating from the Fifteenth century, is the ancient Clock Tower with its famous clock. Here again, as everywhere in Berne, friend Bruin plays a most prominent role. As often as the clock strikes a troop of little bears come out and march round a figure of the duke of Zähringen in armor, who stands in the belfry at the top and strikes the hours on the bells with a hammer.

A favorite possession of the Swiss capital is the famous bear pit, where specimens of the real live Bruin have been maintained by the city for four hundred years. In 1798, when Napoleon despoiled all this part of Europe of its treasures to carry off to Paris, he took these historic bears from Berne. The city was inconsolable, and when the empire fell, one of the chief stipulations of the Swiss was for the return of the bears, and they were brought back with great pomp and rejoicing.

These bears are closely guarded and only bread and fruit can be given them.

HOME PRIDE

"You live in the same place you always did?" we asked a man the other day as we walked up the street with him.

"Yes, in the same old hole," he replied.

The answer was typical of the man. He called home a "hole" and it was a "hole" because he could see nothing else in it.

It has always been a "hole" to him and probably always will be because he hasn't vision enough to see its possibilities.

There are not many people like this in this community, but there are far more than there should be, simply because they have taken the wrong view of life and their job.

They represent a type who doubtless have suffered some disappointment, some fancied wrong, and they have brooded over it until everything looks dark. They fail to see a bright spot any place in the future.

Home and all that it means depends upon the viewpoint. If we get the proper perspective, home is something more than a "hole" and we take a just pride in making it respectable.

A humble home may be made just as attractive as a home on which money is lavished. It may be beautiful in the exact degree to which we give time and thought to it.

Pride in our community, our county, state and nation begins with home pride and those who take a justifiable pride in the place they live can be put down as good citizens.

You have heard of the dog that bites the hand that feeds him. That is the way it is with many good people who "cuss" science. Here is a list of fifty things unknown fifty years ago: X-rays, kodaks, electrons, dynamos, harvesters, torpedoes, air-brakes, aeroplanes, telephones, submarines, skyscrapers, typewriters, sleeping cars, fountain pens, reflectorscopes, electric lighting, power elevators, high explosives, thermos bottles, dirigible balloons, vacuum cleaners, color photography, monotype machines, electric locomotives, telegraph tape printers, radium, pionlas, turbines, liquid air, electric cars, gas engines, motorcycles, electrotypes, hydroplanes, automobiles, ball bearings, steam shovels, gramophones, tube railways, cash registers, vacuum brakes, electric heating, pneumatic tires, moving pictures, photo engraving, adding machines, wireless telegraphy and rotary printing presses. Remove all of these together with their effects from your state, county, or town and what would be left? The fellow who barks at science but advertises his own stupidity, for the time has come when truth cannot be crushed to earth. The real scientist is the most honest man among us and at the same time the most tolerant of those who hold opinions contrary to his conclusions.—The Texas Outlook.

Faces tell many a story. Right living and good hearts make kind faces. Innocence glows in the face of the pure. Wicked hearts if there are any blacken the features. Every day in our lives we are according acts on our faces to be read by the world.

"WHEN YOU AND I WERE YOUNG, MAGGIE"

That song spells immortality to us, yes, it spells romance, and takes us back to the days when we were a red-headed country lad, and to us Maggie is the sweetest name in all the world except mother. At our luncheon club we have a book of community songs, and the other day they sang that song, and in an instant we had traveled back to childhood. Again we in the old log school house, we were playing bull-pen and marbles, toting the little girls' dinner basket, gathering wild flowers and writing poetry, we could feel our heart go pit-a-pat, again we were in the play-parties playing snap and blind fold, going to camp meetings in the old tar grinder riding in split-bottom chairs, carrying her parasol and fan chewing sweet gum and talking about fodder pulling and plowing the cotton and the corn. It was simple talk but it was all we knew, and on these pleasant rides we would discuss it to a frazzle. It was a simple, crude life, our horizon was hemmed about with farm life, twisting a mollie cotton tail out of a hollow gum tree, plowing in the new ground. And O golley, when Sunday came, to meeting and Sunday school, but it was always a lonesome Sunday when Maggie did not come. Then on Sunday afternoon all of us young folks would take a stroll out in the woods and up in the mountains, did not even have a buggy or a jitney, but dog-gone the walking was good, and we would like to go back and sit under the old oak tree, and have those boy feelings one time more, gosh, sometimes our heart would get up in our throat, and it looked like we would smother, it's a wonder how we got by, but we did. And real boy love, did you ever have a case of it? If not you have never tasted life, you don't know anything about how it hurts, but it never kills. We would get up bright and early on Sunday morning and put on the shaving act, then began to dress, and to save our life we could not get our tie just right, and then our feet were so big and clumsy, we would cram them into shoes two or three times too small, and then our big brown hands looked like canvassed hams after plowing in the new ground all week, and our pataloon-legs were always too short it looked to us like mother made them that way on purpose. Of course the big rough country boy wanted to look slim and pretty and delicate like the town dude. Yes, our coat was usually too short, and the seat of our pants would stick away out and we simply couldn't get fixed. And the dress notion was the first sign of boy love. It has always been a wonder to us how we got through, and how it came that we won Maggie, but anyhow we did, and that was way back yonder forty odd years ago and naturally that song "When You and I Were Young Maggie," appeals to us. Of course we are not old, but we have gone far enough down the road, got some wrinkles on our brow and some gray hairs among the red, and naturally we like to look back on those happy days and think of childhood, courtship and marriage vows, so far away that to us the memory of it is sacred. The human brain is a film, and memory is a show house, and every once and a while we like to sit in the gallery and reel off these childhood films, and that song Maggie is one of them.—Albany News.

Arizona Bulls Wear Shoes

Some Arizona cattlemen are providing their bulls with shoes to protect their feet from the rough rocks of the mountain ranges. The United States Department of Agriculture reports that the shoes are similar to those worn by oxen used for road work.

Cattlemen say that heavy bulls brought to Arizona from the soft ground of the Middle West are slow to get their feet hardened to the rocky slopes on much of the Arizona range, with the result that the animals stay around the water holes in the valleys and get little to eat. The result is the breeding of weak cows which also remain near the water. Sometimes the bulls get up on the flat hilltops and refuse to come down over the rocky sides to water. Shoeing the bulls helps to solve the dilemma.

The "Tail of the Ticket"

Senator La Follette's apparent determination to become a candidate for the Presidency on an independent ticket is clearly defined in his recent letter in which he denounced Communists and asked his friends to ignore the convention which this element will attend. In the 1916 Republican convention he presented thirteen planks for the platform. They were all flatly rejected by the Committee, but in 1921 they had all become laws. In the Republican convention of 1920 Senator LaFollette presented seven planks for the platform. They were not only rejected but his name was roundly hissed by the delegates. In 1924 three of these seven propositions have become laws and the other four are what is splitting the party. Notwithstanding all these facts, Senator La Follette is going to be a power to be reckoned with in the coming campaign. He is one of the few outstanding personalities in American politics today. This was shown in the vote of the mock conventions in Yale and in Dartmouth universities, where La Follette received votes sufficient to make him a balance of power.

While the managers of the Third Party movement do not anticipate the election of their standard bearer, they do expect to elect more Senators and Representatives in Congress, and perhaps throw the presidential election into that body. In that event, if the political divisions in the House of Representatives are such that a choice for president is impossible, the election will fall upon the United States Senate, and that body is limited by the Constitution to a choice between the vice-president nominees.

It will be seen, therefore, that as conditions are now shaping, there is a reasonable chance that the next president of the United States may be one of the vice-president nominees, and the greatest attention is being given the "tail of the ticket" by party managers.

BILLY SUNDAY'S ILLNESS

Of grave concern to his thousands of admirers is the fight for health that Billy Sunday is making against an illness that threatens not only to end his evangelistic work but his life. When Mr. Sunday was forced to cease his preaching in Memphis, Tennessee, several days ago a wave of regret swept through the country, but when it was known that he was face to face with a serious illness that regret was transformed into deep sorrow.

Billy Sunday is an outstanding figure in the nation. His way of preaching the gospel is distinctly unique, but even those who do not "like his methods" cannot gainsay the fact that he has done a world of good.

Most of the members of congress seem to be engaged in repairing their own political fences during their employers' time.
