

36 Years on 'The Hill,' Garner Succeeds by Reason of Seasoned Experience and Sound Judgment

John N. Garner would make a great President. He has a better practical understanding of national Government than any other living man. It is his life, and has been for 30 years.

At the end of the three dozen years under the Capitol dome he is, according to the calendar, 70 years old. Off the calendar he is 80 years old and in tip-top physical condition. This vigor and physical toughness he would carry into the greatest offices within the gift of the people and he would have the extra 20 years of knowledge of affairs, domestic and foreign. He came to his present place of eminence the hard way. In his public service there is no problem of Government with which he has not grappled.

Bascom Timmons

That Garner considers the solution of the unemployment and agricultural problems as the two outstanding challenges to the Union and that the chief attention of a Garner administration would be bent to this end, no one who knows him doubts. He likes to tackle tough problems, and here are two tough ones.

Opposed to Government in Business

If any one is supporting Garner on the theory he would be a do-nothing President, that supporter would better begin looking for a new man to support. He would be a heads-up administration. He believes modern government must meet modern needs. He has said that "evolutionary process must go forward to meet ever-changing human needs." He would not have the Government evade any legitimate function, but he would be zealous in his endeavor to see it did not encroach on functions outside its field. "Putting the Government into business is a violation of the Nation's industrial and commercial fabric," he declared in his 1932 acceptance speech.

Garner would make a great President because he thoroughly believes in our democratic system of three branches of Government. He has been called congressional-minded. It is true he has fought invasion of the prerogatives of Congress, but he is just as firmly against trespass against the executive and judicial branches.

Believing as he does in a Government of laws and not of men, he abhors unnecessary bureaucracy and would indubitably seek to dissolve some of it entirely, but back in Congress some of the legislative powers it exercises, back in the courts some of the judicial powers it occupies, and back in the States some of the local powers that belong there. All this would preserve the natural dignity of the executive branch, rather than weaken it.

Garner believes, as did Grover Cleveland, that the whole art of government is simply applied common sense and common honesty, with reason, justice and tolerance as hand-maids.

Has Vivid "Sense of Humanity"

Garner as President would be guided by a sense of humanity. It was he who introduced the first general relief bill in 1932. It was a pay-as-you-go measure, and carried a tax to pay its cost. He believes in an ever-increasing standard of living for the working man and woman. He has a passionate devotion for the well-being of men and women who work for their daily bread. He has always fought monopoly and the concentration of wealth, and has insisted that the Government lay down rules to guarantee free and fair competition. He is for property rights because he believes them the very base of human rights. Ownership of property, he thinks, is one of the best guarantees of the dignity and independence of the individual. He is against favoritism in law enforcement.

Garner knows you cannot get something for nothing. He believes in constructive economy. He is the indestructible pioneer type who learned in a pioneer country how hard it is to make a dollar. He would be scrupulously careful with the taxpayer's dollar. He has the courage to resist fantastic proposals and boldly to meet an issue.

To continued efforts to find solutions of the Nation's problems Garner would take to the presidency vast experience. "Experience," to paraphrase the great Justice Holmes, "is the life of administration." Garner loves his country, believes in it, knows it is durable and wants it to believe in itself. He wants Government to do its part toward preserving freedom of opportunity. He believes economy, thrift and self-reliance are still the hallmark of the majority of Americans.

Garner would make a great President because of his gifts of leadership and his judgment of and ability to work with men. He has often said that most men he has known in public life were men of good will, patriotically interested in the welfare of their country. He has always found a zest in sitting down with men who review problems from diverse angles, men of different experiences. He believes that out of such deliberations come sound, practical, beneficial and progressive solutions. He takes to such counsel tables his own fidelity to principles, clarity of reasoning and ability to get at facts.

His judgment of men is excellent. When he became Speaker, in 1931, he demonstrated his ability to choose men for important assignments—of finding the proper man to do a job. Men were placed in roles for which they were best qualified. He has always liked to reward merit in young men, and this gave him the opportunity. Although the Democrats had a fragile majority of only three votes overnight, he welded them into a cohesive, fighting organization.

Far-Flung Network of Contacts

Because his acquaintanceship in all parts of the country is second to none, I believe this far-flung network of contacts and knowledge of men would make it possible for Garner to call into service men of outstanding ability for his cabinet and other administrative places. His standard for judicial appointments would be high. He would be especially anxious to find proper men for diplomatic posts. His long experience on the House Foreign Affairs Committee imbued him with a deep and informed interest in international relations.

Insect Damage Expected in Cotton Fields

Following wet weather, damage may be expected in the cotton fields from the cotton flea hopper. This insect is very small, greenish gray in color and very active. Its eggs are laid in the bark, and upon hatching the insect starts feeding on the cotton plant.

A careful examination should be made to determine the extent of infestation, and to the necessity for dusting. This may be done by examining the terminal buds in one hundred plants in three different areas in the field. If fifteen hoppers are found per one hundred plants, dusting should be done. An easier method is to make an insect net 16 inches in diameter and cover with a dark cloth such as percale. The bag should be about twenty-four inches deep. By passing this net back and forth over the cotton, a count of insects per one hundred plants may be made.

Dusting sulphur should be used in the control on the flea hoppers. 12-20 pounds per acre are required. A second examination should be made in seven days and if fifteen or more hoppers per one hundred plants are found, dusting should be repeated.

For boll weevils—examine one hundred squares in five different areas in the field. If ten punctured squares per one hundred plants are found, the infestation will warrant dusting. Five to seven pounds of Calcium Arsenate should be repeated in seven days if infestation continues. Where both the cotton flea hopper and boll weevil are found, use a combination dust of one part calcium arsenate and two parts sulphur and use twelve to fifteen pounds per acre.

Let's keep it American

THE European war has re-awakened Americans to the truth of the saying, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."
Our liberty is not immediately threatened. But it may be if we do not prepare to defend it from any possible attack. Such preparation is an effort in which everyone can share.
We favor adequate preparedness for national defense. This country's natural position gives us a great measure of security against threats from abroad. With careful preparation we can strengthen that position until no nation would dare attack us.
National defense is not only a matter of men, airplanes, battleships and guns. It also requires us to strengthen our American institutions, which are the very things we wish to protect and preserve. They must be preserved. It would be a bitter and ironic victory if, in order to defeat an enemy, we sidetracked the system of free enterprise and the personal liberties which distinguish the American way of life from the tyrannies of Europe and Asia.
Let's keep this country American. Government experts and civilian authorities are studying how to provide for our actual defense and each citizen's part in it. Meanwhile, the rest of us can help by doing our work, whatever it is, as well as we can.
That is what all the people of this company intend to do. Together with other electric companies, we have built a system capable of supplying the nation with electric service in any emergency. This system will be maintained and strengthened and we will continue our day-to-day effort to provide the dependable electric service that makes the United States a better place to live.

News from Summer Home-making Project

"We had a wonderful time," was what the girls who are taking summer projects said about their fishing trip.

They met at the high school building at two o'clock Friday, June 21 and were taken to the Junction lake. The afternoon was spent fishing, exploring the lake and wading. Of course several big fish got away, but the largest one caught was a catfish about four inches long.

After eating supper, cooked over a campfire, the girls went to bed, at least some of them did. Six of the girls had the hardest time trying to eat the ice cream they had frozen without another lively group finding out about it. But it was accomplished, and the ice cream was very good,—perhaps because it was made as a prank.

After eating supper the girls were taken home to sleep and doctor red bug bites, which were too plentiful. The girls really meant it when they thanked their sponsor, Mrs. Jewel Hill, Mr. Hill and Mrs. Tom Mills for taking them fishing.

The work on group projects has been completed and the girls are very proud of their study desk, dressing table, barrel chairs, new curtains and new finishes on the floors and tables of the homemaking department. The girls are working on individual projects such as making clothing, working over rooms in their homes, or canning. They plan to put all the things they have made on exhibit during the rodeo.

The Santa Anna group enjoyed an old-fashioned candy pull at the homemaking department last Tuesday. The hostesses were Mary Jo Gregg, Ila Mae
