It's Funny How Folks Still Call it the 'Light Bill'

VES, SIREE! In the old days it really was the "light bill." And L folks called it the "light plant" instead of power plant as we say today. All we got was light. And in most places lights were off in the daytime-and we weren't too sure of 'em at night. Of course it's different now. It's like Mrs. James says ...

"I remember how proud we were of the little light plant here in 1908 when my Old Bill entry was paid. But it was nothing compared to our pride in the West Texas Utilities during later years because they brought us the first really good service we ever had. The cost has been steadily going down ever since until now we are using many times more service for all our household needs and is costs less than we used to pay for a few small lights alone. I have been a customer of the company since it began serving Baird in 1915 and know that the good service, the lower rates, and the taxes it pays bave been very valuable to our town. Long may it serve!"

Mrs. James is right, too. We're getting better-much better-service. For about what we used to spend for lights alone, we're lighting the house many times better and washing and ironing clothes, cleaning sugs, possing the bread, maning the radio, using the refrigerator and the food mixer. We're getting a lot more for our money!

"Why not call it the SERV-ICE bill? The thousand men and women in this organization have had the training and experience to render you a service-and do it more economically than is possible with the old-fashioned, obsolete Nght plant at the mercy of freakloh weather, breakdowns, and periodically wora-out machinery."
