HAIL STORM SUNDAY DOES MUCH DAMAGE TO CROPS

Last Sunday afternoon this vicinity was visited by a severe hail storm which did considerable damage to small grain and other growing crops. In several sections all growing crops are reported to have been ruined and all will have to be planted over. North-east, east and south-east of town, several communities suffered considerable damages.

Another hail storm was reported in the southern portion of the county early Wednesday morning, but we have not been informed as to just how much damage it did. Farmers in the hail beaten districts have been in town this week buying planting seeds and making preparations to re-plant their crops.

We regret very much to note this deplorable condition, but it is some consolation to know that it is still time to make fair cotton crops and late feed in the paths of the storms.

The storm was reported worse in the vicinity of Rockwood than any place we have heard from, where one or two churches were blown from their blocks and other property damaged, but no casualties have been reported.

Gardens, shrubbery and chickens suffered worse damages here in town than did anything else. Some window lights were broken out, but nothing serious has been reported except fear and a little excitement.

W. J. STACY HERE ON VISIT, DIES

W. J. Stacy, 70, who formerly lived in this country, having been engaged in the mercantile business at Waldrip, but of late years living at Van Buren, Arkansas, came in last week to spend the summer with relatives in the pursuit of bettering his health conditions, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. A. C. Watson, Tuesday morning. His remains were prepared and carried to Trickham Wednesday where interment was made. His wife was notified, but was unable to come and be at the funeral.

Mr. Stacy has a brother, M. J. Stacy, living at Stacy, Texas, who was here and attended the funeral.

SAN ANGELO HOST TO THOUSANDS THIS WEEK

The three first days of this week the biggest event ever pulled off in west Texas took place in the city of San Angelo, the convention city of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for 1923.

The business interest of San Angelo did much constructive work preparing for the convention and from all reports the 1923 convention was the biggest event so far in the history of west Texas.

Brownwood was successful in her campaign for the 1924 convention, and we predict our neighbor on the east to swell her efforts to succeed any stunt for the betterment of this country put forth on her part of any city in our midst.

Following is the list who attended from here, if we managed to secure all their names:

The Sponsor for Santa Anna, Miss Bell Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Childers, V. L. Grady, P. P. Bond, Fred W. Turner, F. N. May, C. K. Hunter, Moody Polk, W. E. Wallace, W. J. Hosch, Bob Gardner, R. L. Douglass, Fred Brushingham, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. John Potter, John Overby and Misses Lula and Ruby Volentine. Others may have attended but we failed to secure their names.

SEVENTY-THREE PEOPLE MEET DEATH IN FIRE

Seventy three people met their death near Camden, S. C., last Thursday night, when a school building caught on fire during the commencement exercises. The stairway, only exist to the auditorium where the exhibition was being held collapsed and killed several, many tried to jump to safety from the second story windows and were injured to such extent that death followed, and from the reports, but very few escaped who were in the building. The fire was started from an oil lamp being turned over during a play that was being put on by the students. 62 of the victims were buried near the scene of the disaster in one grave.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our appreciation of the many kindness extended to us by our friends at the death of our loved one. We assure all that their tender ministrations will ever be remembered with gratitude.
Mrs. C. G. Erwin and children,
Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Notley,

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dunwoody and children.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF SCHOOL ENTERTAINING

Most every night the past week has been marked by some event of the closing exercises of the school term which ended here last week.

The students of Miss Sybel Simpson and Mrs. Meyer gave two very interesting recitals at the Methodist church Wednesday and Thursday nights of last week, and the students of Mrs. Len Phillips gave another very pleasing recital at the Baptist church Friday night. Each of the above classes had a large number of students and the renditions given at each of the above recitals well demonstrated the skill and effort that had been put forth on the part of the several instructors.

Sunday at 11 o'clock, the baccalaureate sermon was delivered at the Methodist church by Dr. Chandler, president of Daniel Baker College at Brownwood, in our opinion, one of the best and most appropriate talks that was ever delivered on such an occasion.

Monday night the Seventh grade gave one of the most satisfactory entertainments we have ever witnessed in the Baptist church. We failed to get a list of this grade who passed and were promoted to the higher grades, but they represented a large number of the best homes in this country and to be present and witness the style and manner of their well prepared program, is an inspiration. Such work cannot be done without special effort and many hours of toil. Much credit is due this class and their efficient teacher who has labored with them during the nine months they have been wrestling with their several subjects.

Tuesday night at the Baptist church the graduating exercises of the High School class were delivered in a manner that demonstrated special effort on the part of one of the largest classes that has graduated in the Santa Anna school for years. There were thirty one in the class who worked faithful to the end, stood successful examinations and received their diplomas as a reward for their determined efforts. In this class there were 16 boys and 15 girls, representing the best homes in the state. Each one who had a part on the program Tuesday night did credit to themselves and the able faculty who had taught and advised them during school. Success always crowns faithful efforts and this large class who graduated with honors can now appreciate the victory they won from hard and faithful efforts put forth during the several years they have been in school.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Dr. T. H. Shelby of the University of Texas. The salutatory was delivered by Jim Williams and the valedictory address was delivered by Thomas Campbell, all of which was well delivered and well received. Others participating on the program were Misses Ruth Holt, Mattie Ella McCreary and Madora Kirkpatrick, and speaking from an honest standpoint of view, skill and talent were both exemplified by all and much credit is due them.

Following is the list of the graduates of the class of '23 and we bespeak for them successful careers in the future.

T. J. SCOTT TO SING HERE JUNE 27-29

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Scott of Fayetteville, Tennessee, who are recognized as being the greatest among Evangelistic song leaders of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church are to have charge of the music during the Synodic Institute to be held in this city June 27-29. Besides doing some first class singing, Mr. Scott will teach something of the use of sacred music to a better advantage in all kinds of church services.

In addition to this musical treat, Rev. W. H. McLesky of Nashville, Tennessee, Editor of Sunday School literature, will be among those to lecture on the different phases of church work. Mr. McLesky will have charge of the Sunday school work.

One dollar is the price of the registration fee for this institute. It will be well worth the time and money of any person of any denomination to register and attend this institute. Remember that the one dollar paid for registration fee, for which you will receive a ticket certifying that you are entitled to all privileges of the institute, is the only cost connected with the Institute. No collections will be taken during the institute. Come and hear the best program of its kind that has been here for months.

SHOWER

Honoring Miss Elsie Stephenson who was to be married to Mr. Robert Glassy of Shattuck, Okla., on the following Friday, an announcement shower was given by Mr. A. H. Dean on last Thursday evening.

This entertainment proved to be one of the most interesting and brilliant of the season. Scores of friends who had assembled with the many beautiful and useful gifts enjoyed the games and merriment so deftly arranged by Mrs. Dean.

Miss Stephenson and Mr. Glassy, accompanied by a few friends and relatives, drove to Coleman Friday morning and were quietly married. Bro. J. W. Gates officiating. The bride and groom took the evening train to Shattuck, Okla., their future home.

WILLIS-HAMON

Mr. Clebert Eugene Willis and Miss Blanche Hamon were united in marriage at the Christian church on last Wednesday evening, by the pastor, Leon Williams. The bride and groom are well known here, and their many friends are wishing them a prosperous journey on the way of life. Many presents were presented them before and after the ceremony as an evidence of love and well wishes. They are at home at Austin, Texas.

"THE LILY OF THE WILDS"

Captain Lawrence Sullivan Ross, ex-Governor of Texas, and Indian fighter, rescued a beautiful white girl from the Comanche Indians in 1858, near Fort Belknap, Texas, and then adopted her as his own daughter. While in captivity she was known as "The Lily of the Wilds," and was recaptured after a desperate battle with the Indians, in which Captain Ross was severely wounded. CITY CEMETERY NEEDS WORKING

We have been asked the question if we thought it would injure our business to call attention to the condition of our cemetery.

Well, no, we don't think it will affect our business, neither would it hurt to set a day and advertise it well and meet at the cemetery and put in the day cleaning it up. We do not feel it our duty or place to call for such a meeting, but we will advertise it and help in every way we can to norate the news to every home in the community without charge and then go out and help to do the work if some one will take it upon themselves to call the meeting. Who will be next?

WEST TEXANS PREPARE TO ENTER MEXICO

West Texas News Service.

Midland, Texas, May—"The balance of credit will be in favor of us Americans if the trade relations are ever resumed with Mexico," thinks John T. McElroy, well known cattleman and independent packer, of Odessa and El Paso. Mr. McElroy believes that it will be but a short time before the Obregon government is given official recognition by United States, he stated that it will be a good thing for all concerned but scoffed at the idea advanced that it will again mean $100.00 cattle. "That's all poppy talk," he said. "The people who say it are not posted on conditions. They don't know what they are talking about."

There is a very noticeable movement in West Texas, especially in the South Plains region, toward preparations for a friendly invasion of Mexico as soon as the bars are down.

Already several cattlemen in this part of the state have representatives in Mexico negotiating for ranches to be used in the event Mexico and United States again go on "peace" basis.

Hundreds of young men are preparing to explore the riches known to exist in Old Mexico.

The belief that recognition will come in a very short time prevails to a stronger degree in West Texas than in any other part of the country.

GRASSHOPPERS MENACING CROPS IN SOME SECTIONS

Reports have been coming in to Santa Anna the past few days to the effect that the country is filling up with grasshoppers. They seem to be propagating by the millions, and farmers state they are doing considerable damage to the young crops. Efforts are being made to exterminate them in some places, but we have not been advised as to the results. The editor is not a grasshopper specialist, but if we had a crop that was being infested with the grasshopper pest we would use the latter hours of the evening and early hours of the night in building fires over the field and conducting drives. A vessel of somekind that will hold kerosene oil, or saturated rags set on fire would serve for the purpose, and we would be glad to see some farmer try the plan. To satisfy our curiosity, we will come out some night to a well infested place and give the plan a trial if some farmer will call us by phone and extend the invitation.

ADVANTAGE OF A GARDEN COMMUNITY

Is there anything finer to be said of a city than, it is a city of flowers? A city of flowers presumes an industrious, nature loving people. Slothful individuals do not create pretty gardens and well kept lawns.

YOUR SAFEST INSURANCE

In buying merchandise is to buy that which is made and backed by manufacturers of reputation. No firm, whether manufacturer or retailer, who expects to continue a business and make a success of it can afford to advertise an article that will not give service for the price he asks for it. The outward appearance of an article is often deceiving. The quality must be built into it in order to give satisfaction. Take a shoe for instance. There are a great many grades of leather (and some that are not leather) you can be fooled in their quality. We can be fooled in their quality, as a safe guard against this we buy only from manufacturers who stand behind their products, and if for any reason there should be defects, which will occasionally occur in any line, adjustments are gladly made.

J. J. GREGG, Editor and Publisher

Keeping young has been reduced to a science, but it is making a lot of massage artists rich.

Some men live to eat and eat to live, and if there is any time left in between they do an odd job or two.

The wise merchant advertises his goods for sale—if they are worth advertising. The shrewd buyer looks for goods that are advertised, because he knows that if they are worth advertising they are worth buying.

There is only one way to keep professional politicians out of congress. That is to wait until the devil gets the present crop and then forget to raise any more.

The News has been authorized to announce a singing at Line school house next Sunday afternoon, led by J. A. Parrish. All singers invited to attend. The editor sold a supply of the new Vaughan song books to the Line school community last week.

Some men spend years in dreaming of the day when they will be elected to public office, and when they get there they spend the time in dreading the hour when they will be kicked out. Between dreaming and dreading there isn't much time for constructive work.

Henry Ford is worth about $600,000,000, Rockefeller is worth $300,000,000, and a number can count up to $100,000,000 each. How much are you worth, and what do you think of a system of taxation that makes possible the accumulation of such gigantic fortunes?

Next week we wish to publish a list of the new buildings recently built in Santa Anna, and the editor will appreciate the assistance of the carpenters and others who are in position to furnish us information along this line. Several nice homes have been built here recently and others have been re-modeled and made new, and we will be glad to pass the good news on.

An American commission is in Mexico, sent there by the president for the purpose of seeking a basis of adjustment of the differences between the two countries. General Obregon seems to be making fair headway as president of our sister republic, and if the politicians and big financial pirates will keep hands off we can see no obstacle to a sincere and permanent peace. It is only people who profit from strife who want anything else.

A card received from Pastor J. M. Reynolds, dated at Kansas City, Mo., on the 17th inst., states that the Southern Baptist convention is in progress. The card further states that summer clothes are very much out of place in Kansas City as the weather is very much cooler there than here in sunny Texas. Pastor Reynolds will be home the latter part of this week and be in his pulpit Sunday.

Announcements were printed here Wednesday, announcing the marriage next Monday of Miss Maude Bowers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Bowers, to Mr. Crawford Donley Patterson of Pittsburgh, Penn. The happy couple will leave soon after their marriage for Pittsburgh to make their future home. Young Mr. Patterson has already arrived in the city and impresses us as being a splendid young man, and we congratulate him on his success in winning one of our accomplished young women, and would much rather adopt him to our home circle than to lose to Pittsburgh, but submit to his choosing. Come back to see us.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

There are many people who believe that co-operative marketing offers more advantages to the producer than any other means now proposed. Through it the producer is enabled to help himself, which is just exactly what the producer wants for he believes in his own ability to work out his own destiny. If he has an open field and a fair opportunity. For these reasons the co-operative plans are being formulated and pushed in many places. There are many producers in Texas who are turning to their own satisfaction the financial advantages derived from co-operative marketing. They have tried it and found it good, even though it was tried in but a small way.

The co-operative idea should be developed largely in the state during the coming season in many fields and with many products. The producer believes his largest advantage now would be possible by controlling the marketing of those things he produces and by following his products much nearer to the consumer. The public will be interested in watching the co-operative work put under way in the larger operations and will hope it may bring a goodly measure of the advantage the producer seeks.

It will soon be time to dig up those old war time recipes on how to can fruit with the minimum of sugar, judging by the way that commodity is soaring skyward. Wholesale quotations have been running around eleven to twelve dollars and they say the peak has not been reached. What is the worst feature about it is that there does not seem to be the scarcity to demand a rise in price like this. A commission has been appointed to look into an alleged combine to boost prices, but commissions are notoriously slow in coming to conclusions, and in the meantime the canning season will be over.

TENDING THE HOME PLACE

Some people's idea of beautifying a home is to set out shrubs and plants and then let them take care of themselves entirely. Many people set out shrubs, not so much because they love the beauty of these plants, as because they have the idea that they will thrive without effort on anyone's part.

Perhaps some plants may grow all right without attention particularly in rich soils, but as a rule their appearance can be improved by care. By digging around them regularly, and fertilizing and thinning as needed, shrubbery can usually be made more attractive.

Many homes around which the plants have been neglected get a run down and tangled appearance that is worse than if nothing had been set out. It does take a little effort to keep a place well tended but the results are so rewarding that no one in Santa Anna should begrudge it.

BOOST YOUR HOME TOWN

Let's all boost for Santa Anna.

The merchants hereabouts are here to stay. They choose to locate here because they believe in this community. They are not interested in a quick "clean-up" in running up sales records; but to grow steadily with the growth of the town.

Nothing can contribute to the growth of any place like a strong mercantile backing. Nothing is asked of the merchants that they are not glad to give of freely.

You can help them to help this community—you can help yourself by trading at home. And the best of it is, when you keep your money in this community, you save money.

The News force has been more than busy this week, doing the printing of another 16 page edition of the Poultryman, published by Ray E. McCorkle of Coleman. LESSON FOR MAY 27

ISAIAH, THE STATESMAN AND PROPHET

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 41:1-13
 GUILTY TEXT—Here am I, send me, Isaiah 65.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—II Chronicles 26:21, 22, 23; Isaiah 1:5, 17-17, 81-84; 31:1-17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Isaiah Who Was Ready.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Isaiah's Call to Service.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Isaiah's Work for His People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Isaiah, the Statesman and Prophet.

I. Isaiah's Vision of the Lord (vv. 1-4).
 No one's ministry will ever be fruitful until he has had a vision of Jehovah. The scope of his tasks and the power to perform services will be lacking until he sees God.

1. He Saw the Lord on His Throne (v. 1). The prophet's gaze penetrated to the very throne of the eternal. We need not so much know things concerning God as to have a vision of Him, even to see Him on His throne. Surely now, as perhaps never before, with the awful darkness settling down upon the world and the foundations of culture and civilization, institutions and governments are tottering, we need a vision of the enthroned Lord.

2. He Saw the Seraphim Above (vv. 2, 3). Whatever form or rank these things have, they clearly are ministers of the Most High. Their standing indicates that they were in readiness to do His bidding. Their equipment with six wings shows the celerity with which they executed His will. In the Divine presence they had different uses for wings. One pair was needed to veil the seraph's head from the "intolerable effulgence" of the glory. One pair veiled the feet, which had been soiled in the execution of the commission. The third pair was suspended in mid-air while waiting to depart on any errand which the Lord willed. All ceaselessly cried, "Holy, holy, holy." The supreme attribute of Jehovah is holiness. It is for this that His creatures worship and adore Him. The treble repetition doubtless refers to the true God. Holy is the One who created us, holy is the One who redeemed us and holy is the One who sanctifies and keeps us. From the position of God's throne they see the whole earth filled with His glory.

3. He Saw Manifestations of Majesty (v. 4). As the holy ones cried the very doors moved and the temple was filled with smoke. Smoke indicates the Divine presence in anger (Ex. 19:8, 20:18). This indicated that the selfishness, idolatry and ingratitude of Israel provoked God's anger.

II. Isaiah's Conviction of Sin (v. 6).
 When the prophet got a vision of the holy God he was smitten with a sense of sin. This is always true. The reason that men think well of themselves is that they have never seen God. Face to face with the Lord, Isaiah saw himself as wholly vile. He realized that he had sinned in speech and, if in speech, then in heart, therefore the cry of despair. He was not only guilty himself, but was living in the midst of an unclean people.

III. Isaiah Cleansed From Sin (vv. 6, 7).
 Having been convicted of sin and having made confession of it, a burning coal was taken from the altar to purge away his sin. His penitential guilt was forgiven and removed. Those unclean lips were refined by fire and, with pure speech, he expressed the holy thoughts of God. Only fire from God's altar can purge us from our sins.

IV. Isaiah's Call.
 God did not call the prophet until after he was cleansed. The purged soul is the soul ready for the Lord's service. Indeed, the unconvicted, unforgiven and uncleansed soul cannot even hear the Divine call for service.

V. Isaiah's Dedication (v. 8).
 Following the cleansing from sin there was the quick response for service. The one purged and sanctified and made meet for the Master's use readily responds to the call of God. They did not inquire as to the issue, did not desire to see the end from the beginning, but with freedom came forward to serve.

VI. Isaiah's Commission (vv. 9-13).
 The previous outlook was not promising. He shrunk back from the responsibility and instantly cried, "How long, Lord?" The people were steeped in selfishness and the Lord assured him that their blindness and sin, though long, would not continue forever. The people would go on in sin, to be taken captive and the land be made desolate.

Economy.
 The regard one shows economy is like that we show an old aunt who is to leave us something at last.—Shenstone.

Conscience.
 The worm of conscience is the companion of the owl. The light is shunned by sinners and evil spirits only.—Schiller.

Neighborly Love.
 Love your neighbor, yet pull not down your hedge.—George Herbert.

IMAGINATION

The next time you imagine you are sick stop and consider the subject for awhile. Perhaps you are not as sick as you thought. You may not be sick at all. It is possible that the wish is father to the thought and that you are unconsciously seeking an excuse to do nothing for a few hours.

Try a new experiment. Go into the garden—work—forget yourself—and you may find that mind has a wonderful influence over body if you know how to apply it in the proper way.

Some people never contract a monetary debt. Others know them too well.

Severe Indigestion

"I had very severe attacks of indigestion," writes Mr. M. H. Wade, a farmer, of R. F. D. 1, Weck, Miss. "I would suffer for months at a time. All I dared eat was a little bread and butter. . . consequently I suffered from weakness. I would try to eat, then the terrible suffering in my stomach! I took medicines, but did not get any better. The druggist recommended and I decided to try it for, as I say, I had tried others for two or more years without any improvement in my health. I soon found the Black-Draught was acting on my liver and easing the terrible pain.

 "In two or three weeks, I found I could go back to eating. I only weighed 123. Now I weigh 147—eat anything I want to, and by taking Black-Draught I do not suffer."
 Have you tried Thedford's Black-Draught? If not, do so today.

DOES AN EDUCATION PAY?

The question, "Does an education pay?" is not debatable. It is the only thing in life that does pay, that has ever paid.

But how an education can be had—that is a different matter. Every educated man is self-educated.

Knowledge cannot be bought; neither can it be sold.

If a man converts his knowledge into cash, he still has the knowledge. He can use it over and over again.

Just as he can't transfer it to another, so no other can receive it from him.

He may inspire others to obtain knowledge, but no more. He may show them the way, indicate to them the easiest paths, but that is all.

Schools and colleges do not educate men, they merely make possible and convenient for men to educate themselves.

Men have become educated without ever entering a school or college, and men have gone through all kinds of schools and colleges, making the grades, passing the examinations, receiving the diplomas, and degrees, without becoming educated.

Let this fact speak for itself. Let it sink in deep. It is the big outstanding fact of history, and it means much.

The schools, or college's opportunity; that, and no more. It is not a mill to grind out perfected human beings, to convert ne'er-do-wells into Solomons, but it is the door, the practical, common sense way, to enter the field of learning.

One can learn all that a school or college offers on the outside, but it will be harder, much harder, and is discouraging 999 out of every thousand.

One can go to school, or college, and get nothing, but that too, it is exceptional.

The school and college are here, not because education is barred to the few without them, and because it would be barred to the many.

They are here as a matter of practical economic time-saving, has an inspiration for which there is no substitute, as a privilege for the masses.

As to those singular men who win success without education be careful how you rate them.

Unlearned and unlettered they may be in the formal sense, but not in the essential sense, and besides, whatever they may have achieved for themselves, they owe much to those around them and before them, who worked with the tools of education.

Henry Ford, for instance, does he run his factories and erect his gigantic machines?

Did he perfect the process of refining metal, without which the automobile would be impossible, or the battery, or the spark plug?

No indeed, he merely added an idea here and a thought there, but the bulk of it he drew from educated men, not only in this generation, but in past generations.

He has made millions, while Milton, Socrates and Moses made nothing, while Columbus died in chains, but which of them all is most successful?

What is this success that every boy and girl worries about?

Is it so much money to spend on pleasure, so much more income to spend on luxury, so much social climbing to lord it over one's neighbor, or is it made of finer stuff, of that substance that we call service that the world remembers with gratitude?

Don't confuse education with formal knowledge, our success with the dollar, though both form a necessary part of conventionalized society.

Put education and success on this basis—first, to become healthy, helpful human beings; second, to become good citizens; third, to become useful workers in the world of trade and profession, then the question of whether education pays, or whether it insures success, becomes easier to answer.—Houston Chronicle.

K. LAMITY DEFINES A "KNOCKER"

(The American Forum)

A subscriber asks:—"What is the real meaning of the word 'knocker' and how did it originate?"

In the early days of Texas, when farms were few, and far between, hogs ran wild, and in the summer time, when there were no acorns, or pecans, these old razor-backs became very thin and poor, and as there was nothing to eat, they spent most of the time lying in mud-holes, and longing for the fall of the year. A razor back hog can live on less than an editor, and there is no reliable evidence to prove, that one of them ever actually died of starvation. They simply get thinner and thinner, until you cannot detect their presence from a front view—and a legend of the old-time cowboys declares that they simply grow thinner, until they just fade from view—but are still alive.

Only a few of them were caught with dogs, and marked, by cutting off about enough ear to make a door-mat. When let alone, their ears grew in length, until they resembled saddle-skirts, while their tails were over a foot long, and ended with a brush of stubby hair—something like that of a calf.

In lying in the sticky black mud, a ball of dirt was formed on the end of their tails—small at first—but after continuous wallowing in the mud, and drying in the hot sun, this weighty appendage finally grew bigger, and bigger, until it ranged in size from a Ben Davis apple to that of an average cocoon—and became as hard and solid as a billiard ball.

So long as the gaunt old sow was lying down—or standing still—all was well, but as soon as she started walking, her caudal ear-drops (or tail-drops) got in motion like the pendulum of a clock—bumping against her shanks, tripping her hind legs and playing Hades generally.

These old razor-backs were wilder than deer, and on seeing, scenting, or hearing the slightest noise, or evidences of danger, they lit out for tall thick timber, with a speed that would cause a jack-rabbit to grow green with envy.

Then was when the deadly mud-ball, (or "Knocker," as the cowboys called it) got in its vicious work. It swung from side to side like a flail, and pounded the ribs of the frightened animal, until it fell breathless, exhausted, and squealing like a siren—for the old fool sow thought a man had been after her, and was beating her with a sledge hammer.

This is the origin of the word, "knocker," meaning a deadly, dirty weapon—that hurts no one but its' owner. In other words, a "Knocker" means a dirty ball of mud—on a sow's tail.

The next time you meet a knocker you will know what he is.

ROBBING TOMBS OF EGYPTIAN KINGS

Back 3,000 years ago, when Egypt flourished with a civilization almost equal to our own, her Kings were usually buried in tombs hewn out of solid rock, and every precaution taken to seal the tombs so that "grave robbers" could not enter them and steal the precious jewels and works of art that were always buried with the Kings. King Tutankhamen's tomb, recently discovered by the late Lord Carnovan, in the Valley of the Nile, in Egypt, had fortunately escaped the tomb robbers and for that reason contained many valuable treasures of art, textiles, and mechanical products.

VIRTUES OF FRIENDSHIP

A true friend is a valuable possession to any man. But in order to gain the friendship of other people a man must first be his own best friend.

Truthfulness, sincerity, energy and a correct mode of living should be high spots in his life. Nothing short of these should be even considered.

When a man attains those virtues he is his own best friend, and will not lack for the friendship of others.

FRANK EDSALL

SANTA ANNA, TEXAS

HOUSTON BOY LAUGHS AND JOKES AFTER TRAIN CUTS OFF BOTH LEGS

The case of 7-year old Wayne Fleming, causes physicians to marvel. Both the boys legs were severed Tuesday afternoon when he was run over by an International Great Northern train while he was walking down the railroad tracks on his way home from school. Yet when he was brought into a hospital still conscious although near death, he chattered cheerfully with nurses and surgeons. Almost his first remark was, "You know, you musn't keep me here too long; my mamma will want me soon."

During the afternoon patients talked about him as they heard him laughing and carrying on a conversation from his bed.

"I wasn't run over," the boy told nurses. "I was just walking along side the train and it sucked me under."

A pedestrian found the boy, mangled by the heavy wheels, lying at the side of the tracks. He carried him to the nearest house and an ambulance took him to the Baptist Sanitarium just in time to prevent death from loss of blood.

Physicians declare that the boy has a fighting chance for life.

THE ALLIED DEBT

France is out with a statement that she will not reduce the amount of reparations due from Germany unless the U. S. consents to cancel the eleven or twelve billions of dollars in debts the allies owe to this country. Very plain, and easy to understand.

The United States must be the goat, or there will be no adjustment of the present European muddle. European restoration is to be brought about at the expense of the American people.

If that is to be the attitude of the allies the sooner we realize it the better it will be for us.

Having supplied the money, munitions and man power that turned the tide of war in favor of the allies and enabled them to achieve victory where they faced certain defeat, we are now asked to "come across" again and pay their bills as well as our own.

A few more galling exhibitions of this kind may lead Americans to regret that they ever had anything to do with the war.

There is always a limit beyond which it is not safe to go.

Certain men are never satisfied until they get into trouble, and then they are never satisfied until they get out. It's hard to please some people, anyway.

THE GREAT IDEA

We need something in this town that will wake us up, something that will jar us into greater life and activity. We are by no means dead. We are not even sleeping. We are stepping forward at a pace that is commendable when compared with the progress of other communities.

But that isn't enough. We ought to step faster, take longer strides, and get there sooner. When we look around us and consider the extraordinary amount of intelligence to be found on every hand, we are at a loss to understand why we are merely "stepping along" when we should be "pushing the breeze." Someone is nursing the great idea that will eventually fill us all with enthusiasm and pep, but that someone is too timid. His idea is bottled up and he hesitates to pull the cork. Spread your idea broadcast and watch it take root and grow. It is useless as long as it is confined by a cork.

EAGOTISM

Some people never parade their successes with a brass band, but they make about as much noise in other ways.

When they make a shrewd deal and clean up a bunch of money they like to have it known to everyone but the assessor. Shouting the good news abroad appeals to their vanity, and vanity in them can not be ignored.

But when he comes out at the little end of a deal he generally does one of two things. He accuses his opponent of resorting to sharp practices, or he puts the calm to share in his ability to keep silent.

He finds no glory in the fact that some other man has eulogized him in a financial transaction.

A LIFE OF SUNSHINE

We know of an estimable lady in this town who takes great pleasure in conferring happiness upon others. Next to her family it seems to be her chief aim in life.

She invariably meets you with a smile upon her lips and with sunshine in her heart, radiating good nature and friendliness and contentment wherever she goes.

All women respect her, some envy her, men admire her and little children love her.

It is much to say of any woman, but she deserves all that we have said.

If you qualify in this class you are the one to whom we refer.

WHAT THE WORLD IS LOOKING FOR

The world today is looking for men who are not for sale; men who are honest, sound from the center to circumference, true to the heart's core; men with consciences as steady as the needle to the pole; men who will stand for the right if the heaven totter and the earth reels; men who can tell the truth and look the world right in the eye; men who neither brag nor run, men who neither flag nor flinch; men who can have courage without shouting to it; men in whom the courage of everlasting life runs still, deep and strong; men who know their message and tell it; men who know their place and fill it; men who know their business and attend to it; men who will not lie, shirk or dodge; men who are not too lazy to work; nor too proud to be poor; men who are willing to eat what they have earned and wear what they have paid for; men who are not ashamed to say "No" with emphasis and who are not ashamed to say, "I can't afford it."

WE ARE BORROWERS

We are a nation of borrowers. We borrowed our numerals from the Arabs, our calendar from the Romans and our banking system from the Italians. And most of us borrow, or try to borrow from the bank. We borrow our fashions from Paris and our language from England, although we do manufacture a good deal of it here at home. Our neighbor borrows our lawn mower and we borrow his hammer, and we forget to return them. We borrow time from business for pleasure. We borrow from the future and try to cash in our emotions today. And we borrow trouble and pass it on to the other fellow.—Mineral Wells Index.

WHY HE LEFT THE FARM

"Why did you leave the farm my lad?"
 "Why did you bolt and leave your dad?"
 "Why did you beat it off to town and turn your poor old father down?"
 "I left my dad, his farm, his plow, Because my calf, became his cow;
 I left my dad, 'twas wrong of course Because my colt became his horse.
 I left my dad to sow and reap Because my lamb became his sheep;
 The garden truck I made to grow Was his to sell but mine to hoe."

The Real Issue

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

IT WAS near the close of a long session—a session which had lasted a winter and a spring and a summer, and threatened to push itself into the first days of autumn, when Wharton, the western member, who had been in the house five terms, concluded to pack his valise and go home. The campaign was growing warm. Nearly all of the county conventions had been held, and a majority of the delegates elected were instructed for him, which insured his renomination if the three remaining counties in the district did not go solidly against him. He had laid his plan mechanically for a renomination, and if he had stopped to ask himself whether or not he really wanted to come back to congress, he would probably have said no. He was tired, but he did not know why. He thought he needed rest, that he had been overworked, that he was played out; yet his private secretary, who kept the run of the pension business and did his routine work, did not seem tired—the private secretary even had refused a vacation, and it was at the secretary's own request that he stayed in Washington.

But Wharton, the western member, was tired—dead tired, and he pictured to himself the pleasures of going back to his home in the little town of Baxter, where people on the streets who had seen him grow up from a boy and called him "Tom," really were glad to see him. Just before he had left his rooms for the departing train his private secretary had handed him the day's clippings; and after he had been riding for an hour or so, while he was fumbling in his pockets for a match, they tumbled out in a tight little roll. He idly read them. He was used to unjust abuse and sick of uncalculated praise. The first clipping was taken from the Queen City Daily Herald; it bore a Washington date line, and was introduced by the words, "Special to the Herald." It read:

"They say here that Wharton of the Fourth district is beginning to feel uneasy. He has received several letters from his district that have convinced him that the Populist cyclone has shaken down several lengths of fence in Lee, Meade and Smith counties. Bill Heatley's strength is said to be developing down there wonderfully. The Hon. Ike Russell, who was here last week looking for a job as receiver of the Baxter National bank, was in close consultation with Wharton three of the four nights he was here, and the 'old man' is wearing a hunted look and is talking to himself. They say down in the Fourth district that it will take more than 'Our Tom' Wharton's hug to explain away his silver vote."

Wharton knew the correspondent and only smiled as he flipped the wadded clipping out of the car window. There was a short editorial clipping from the same paper. It read:

"The dispatches say that 'Our Tom' Wharton is wiggling in his seat and trying to project his astral body in the Fourth district to see how his fences are, and at the same time to keep his corporeal body in Washington to look after Ike Russell's pie plate. If 'Our Tom' doesn't fall down in his anxiety to keep one foot in the 'bloody Fourth' and the other at the political bake shop, he must be either a Colossus of Rhodes or a 'quadrille dancer.'"

Wharton dropped that on the floor and read another from the Smith County Farmer's Friend. It was long and full of double leads and "break lines" and italics and exclamation points. It was abusive in the extreme and closed with this trade:

Now, let us reason together. Tom Wharton has been in congress ten years; he had been judge six years before entering congress, and county superintendent four years before he was judge. Twenty years has this man been in office; his total salary in that time has been only $70,000. Yet he is rated by the commercial agencies at one-half million dollars. He has banks and railroad stock; he owns mortgaged farms. Where did he get them? His time has been sold to the people; he has been false to every trust; he has voted with the East on the money question; he has neglected the farmers at every turn. He is a garden-seed congressman; he comes out here and haw-haws around, and then goes back to vote with Wall street. Wall street knows his friends, and "Our Tom" is worth one-half million dollars, lives in a mansion filled with hammered brass at Baxter, while the farmer foots the bills.

Wharton knew that the editor of the Farmer's Friend had been a candidate for the post office at Smith City; that he himself had lent the editor money and held his note for $500. He put the clipping in his pocketbook with a sigh, and looked through the other scraps of paper. There were perhaps a dozen—a few of them laudatory to an offensive degree, some clearly bids for money, and the rest a fair discussion of his candidacy.

Wharton's first week in the district was spent at Baxter. He did practically nothing to secure his renomination, although wise-looking men from each of the three doubtful counties came every day to Baxter and went directly from the train to Wharton's house. They all wanted money or promises of "assistance"; and each of them told how some precinct could be "swung into line" by a little work on the part of the certain third person—always nameless—who would need money for cigars and livery hire. Wharton put these statesmen off, and they went away doubting whether they would support the "old man" or fight him. The congressman's presence in the little town was an event, and he had callers all day long who seemed to need help in different ways. Soldiers desired pensions, mothers asked for positions in Washington for their sons; young women called to see about clerkship; widows, whose husbands had had known, came to borrow money. He was honestly glad to see all these people and, when he could, he helped them; he rarely made an enemy, even though he always was frank.

It was Saturday evening, and Wharton was just entering on his second week at home, he and his friend, "Ike" Russell, were sitting on the southern porch of the congressman's home. Their wives and daughters were in the parlor around the piano, and the two men were at that preliminary stage of conversation in which ideas are conveyed by grunts and monosyllables. "What did Hughley of Smith City want today?" asked Russell.

"About two hundred, more or less," said the congressman.

"Hughley's a thief; he'd spend about $25, and the rest would go into his jeans."

"I suppose so," Wharton answered.

"Say we lose Smith county?"

"Well, you say," said his friend.

"Did you see Higgins, from Lee valley? He told me last month that he had five fellows who could swing Lee county for $100 apiece."

"Ugh," grunted the congressman. "That makes $2,300 so far, if I come down."

"Well, that's cheaper than you got off before—by several hundred."

Wharton yawned, and the silence that followed was broken only by the tinkle of the cow bells in the valley below the town, and the splash of water over the dam across the river that runs around the village. Occasionally the sound of voices singing on the water or the notes of a guitar would come up on the gusts of wind. The piano in the parlor was silent, and the moon was barely visible under the eastern corner of the porch. The men had man, but Wharton went on as if to keep the thread of the conversation in his teeth.

"Yes, yes, Ike. I know about my plug hat and all that; and then do you remember how I ran for judge and was nominated for congress back in '94 as a dark horse on the three hundredth ballot, and how I was elected and told the people from the box down by the bonfire in the public square that I was going to be worthy of the honor? Ike, the tears I shed there was honest tears, for God knows how proud I was. All these ten years were before me, and what a great ten years I hoped they would be. I thought of my plans as a boy—you and me on the fence down in the valley, Ike—and I looked over all the names in congress then—ten years ago I mean—and they seemed great names to me. I could hardly wait to get to Washington to see the men and to be one of them. I was such a boy, Ike—ten years ago."

Each man puffed his cigar in a momentary pause. Wharton lit a fresh one. Russell thought in so many words: "It's one of Tom's talkative nights."

Wharton took up the thread where it had dropped.

"Here I am, Ike, a flesh-and-blood statesman. I've been in it and through it. I've held as high a place in the organization of the house as any of the great men we used to read about. I've passed a pension bill—and the old soldiers, for whom I worked night and day during six months, have passed resolutions against me. I have had my name on a silver bill for which the flat money fellows have abused me. I've led my party through two successful fights. And what is there in it? You know, as well as I do, that it is hollow—all a hollow show. What's the use of it? Why should a man wear his life out up there in that city just to keep his name in print? There was a man named Keller—an Ohio man, who was speaker of the house once. Who that reads the papers knows anything of him today? Yet he worked his life nearly out to be a statesman. Where are the seconds in the Blaine-Conkling fight? Ike, there's nothing in it but ashes.

The politician said nothing; he did not know how the talk was turning.

"They Were Tall, Thin, Spare Men in Swallow-tail Coats and Chokers, and Hair That Looked Fierce and Statesmanlike."

smoked in silence a few moments when Wharton said:

"Ike, what is the real issue in this campaign?"

"I dunno, old man; sometimes I think it's the tariff; sometimes I think it's silver; and then at other times I just give it all up. What's your idea, Tom?"

The congressman did not reply at once; he seemed to be puffing his ideas together for a longer speech than usual. He twisted his gray mustache nervously; he looked askance at his friend, who was apparently listening to the music that had just started up again in the parlor. Wharton went over to the garden hose which was turned upon a shrub, changed its course, came back, relighting his cigar, and said:

"E'Godfrey, I don't know, Ike, I don't know. Do you remember when we used to cut corn at six cents a shock, and go to school down the valley where those cow bells were tinkling a little while ago? We used to sit on the fence of nights like this and talk 'way into the night about what we were going to do?"

"Yes?" said the politician, expectantly.

"Yes, and I used to hope to go to congress some day; we used to talk of the old-time statesmen and read their speeches in the school readers—Clay and Calhoun and the great men whose names we knew as boys. They were tall, spare men in swallow-tailed coats and chokers, and hair that looked fierce and statesmanlike. Do you remember the congressman from this district forty years ago; how dignified he was, what a really great man he must have been? He lived greatness every hour of his life. The men who went to the territorial legislature—how superior they seemed, with their tall hats and close-buttoned coats! Ike, do you remember when I went to the legislature in the winter of '70, and came back discouraged and disappointed with the sham of it all—the row and the rings and the schemes?"

Russell would have interjected some reminiscent joke on the young states-

"Ike," resumed the congressman, taking a firmer hold on his cigar, and tightly grasping the arms of the chair, "Ike, what's the use? Here comes a lot of Bills and Dicks and Toms and Harrys, who want me to put up $2,300 and promises that I'll be two years working to keep, just to go back there. I go back there and work and fret and stew for this, that and for the other thing that I don't care a cent for. I have no heart in it; I feel like a meek; I have to swallow my pride; I've no ideals; there is no reward; nothing but higgling with a lot of mercenary, impetuous thieves here at home, and log-rolling with a lot of shrewd slysters of the same sort in congress at Washington. If I go on, I must buy my way in; buy my own slavery. Ike, slavery to the fellows I despise. I know I've done it three or four times, but I kept thinking the end would some day justify the means. But it doesn't; it never will; it's a fraud, Ike, and I'm done." I am going to be honest just for once in my life. I don't have to go to congress; I can be lots happier here—here with friends and my family—and now don't laugh, old man—and—and—my honor. That's a little stagey, Ike, but that's the real issue in this campaign and I'm out of this fight. Let's go in and hear the music, Ike. That's the end of it, I've thought it all over and I've decided."

Probably most men—at least most moralizing men—would have called the "old man" weak had they seen him the following Monday making out a check payable to Isaac Russell for $2,300. But most men do not know what it is to worship an idol for a lifetime, and they cannot understand how a man can love his idol even when he knows to his bitter sorrow that it is only clay.

A Spellbinder.

"Your wife makes a splendid speech."

"Yes," replied Mr. Neekton; "and I noticed she impressed an entire audience the same way she does me. She says what she likes and no one even thinks of talking back."—Washington Star.
