Richardson reached the last round by eliminating Donald Frame of Harvard, 6-14, 6-3. Jacobs, favorite to win the title, took his semi-final match from a townsman, Aaron Miller, 6-0, 6-3.

Miss Fannie Stephens and brother, W. H. Stephens, left Monday morning for a few days' visit in Weatherford.

Donald Crenshaw of Mineral Wells returned Monday after a Christmas visit there.

QUESTION of HONOR by Ruth Cross

SYNOPSIS: Resigned to her aunt's decree that she shall marry a rich husband, Anne Wilnot, New York society beauty, becomes the guest of Leon Morse, railroad magnate, at his Sierra mountain lodge. On a lonely ramble in the mountains Anne meets a man whose indifference humiliates her and she assures the stranger's prospector partner, Sheb, an eccentric character, that she will heed his admonition to leave the younger man alone. At the lodge Morse is disturbed when he learns Anne has disregarded his warning about walking alone and an irrigation company has apparently blocked his attempts to obtain a right of way for his railroad.

Chapter 3
A STUDENT OF MEN
A door opened and Mrs. Wilnot, alone in the great living room, glanced up.

"Anne!" Mrs. Wilnot cried, and the quavering, nasal tone carried the horror she felt at the sight her niece presented.

Anne tired, blousy, with wind-blown hair, a sun-burned unpowdered nose, was hardly recognizable as she leaned against the door frame. Her high boots were spattered with mud and her skirt and sweater disheveled.

She straightened with a jerk at her aunt's exclamation and started wearily towards the stairs.

"Anne, where have you been?" the older woman asked.

Anne let herself back limply against the balustrade. "I've merely been taking a walk, Auntie," she replied in her best offhand tone.

"A walk—" her aunt echoed. "For heaven's sake, take yourself out of sight!"

But it was too late. Morse and Douglas came out of the study. Morse already had caught sight of Anne, and he came up quickly frowning with intense disapproval as he took in her sorry plight. Douglas lingered a little behind him, smiling.

"I thought I asked you not to go into the mountains alone," Morse began, controlling his anger with effort.

Anne nodded. "I believe you do," she confirmed, in her most inconsequential manner.

"There are still a few wild animals," Morse went on, "and, as I was just telling your aunt, the whole country is overrun with the irrigation company's workmen and our own."

Anne was watching him steadily and curiously. Twin veins of perversity and reckless mirth looked out of her eyes.

"Oh," she murmured with the merest suggestion of an upward tilt to her head. "I'm not afraid of the animals or the men either. Besides—I daresay I'm the only one around here who hasn't learned to take orders yet!"

With a light laugh, she turned and went up the stairs, leaving a trail of muddy footprints behind her.

Mrs. Wilnot gasped—almost audibly. A hushed silence ensued. Douglas, still taking in the scene from the sidelines, watched his employer's angry crimson face, and smiled as he walked away.

It was no part of Robert Douglas' plan to see his employer married to a clever woman.

Twenty minutes later, a vastly different Anne emerged from the saffron and ivory bathroom which connected with both her bedroom and boudoir.

She stood a moment while Delphine adjusted the sash to a clinging, deeply befringed negligee and added a pat here, a finishing touch there to an exquisite coiffure, then stepped into the bedroom.

Her aunt sat grimly erect on the edge of a fragile gold and ivory chair knitting. Anne passed her and flung herself wearily full length on a chaise longue—also ivory and gold—piled high with luxurious pillows.

There was a prolonged silence. Anne lay thankfully inert, with closed eyes.

Abruptly the older woman put down her work, smoothed it implacably across her knee.

"Anne," she said in a quiet, deceptively mellow tone, "are you quite mad?"

The girl roused with a start from her reverie. "I beg your pardon, Auntie—"

The question was repeated—more caustically. Anne considered thoughtfully for some moments, then, covering as yawn with the back of her hand, "No—no, not if you mean about Leon Morse. I know exactly how he must be handled—if at all."

Her aunt granted cryptically. "Just you leave him to me, Auntie," the girl went on, clasping her hands behind her head. "I've been studying this man game a good many years. Leon Morse prizes nothing that he doesn't have to conquer first—a railroad through the clouds or a woman—it's all one. Even his money wouldn't mean anything to him if he hadn't wrested it at the point of a bayonet from some less ruthless fellow creature."

"If I submit tamely to his domineering, he'll lose interest. That's where most women fail, they don't realize the necessity of appealing to a man's imagination!"

"Anne, don't be coarse."

"My dear Auntie—the younger woman lifted her eyebrows amusedly; her mouth twisted in a wry smile. "If I didn't put things into ordinary, plebeian words now and then, how would we ever understand one another at all? I think it's pretty fortunate that one of us knows how to call a spade a spade. And so far as Leon Morse is concerned the best thing you can do is to trust me."

Her aunt's throaty murmur was packed with meaning. "That's what I've been doing these years—trusting you—and this is all that's come of it!" She took the morning's mail from bag and tossed it near Anne.

Anne picked the letters up with a rather bored air, opened two or three and glanced idly through them.

She crumpled the papers in her hand, covering another yawn and pushed them aside. "I've seen these bills—several times before—they don't interest me particularly."

"Well, I have an idea they will," the other woman said grimly.

"While you've dawdled and flirted all these years, I've spent every cent that I could possibly get hold of on you, and now—"

"Gambled, you mean, don't you, Aunt Emily?" Anne interpolated quietly.

The line about the grandmotherly old mouth tightened. "Well, anyway, you're got to make it good. If you dillydally around and let Leon Morse slip through your fingers as you've let many another good chance, we are absolutely ruined—we can't even go back to New York."

"Bravo, little Auntie," Anne leaned over and patted the plump, unresponsive arm lightly. "But," she added more seriously, "you're omitting to mention that I would have married any one of a half-dozen, Phil King or Andrew Morton or—even Jim Dacres, though heaven knows, he was bad enough! But you always thought I could do better—perhaps you didn't put it quite so crudely—"

"I certainly did not," Mrs. Wilnot corroborated with asperity. "and—you have done better. There's not a girl in New York who would n't envy your chance with Leon Morse—and you may as well understand if you lose him through any of your rashness and—impudence I'm through with you. You can try making your own living for a change, if Leon Morse's millions are not good enough for you!"

Anne bows to the seemingly inevitable and Morse decides to fight for his right of way, tomorrow.

Texas Bankers' President Sees No Reason for Termination of State's Development During 1929

GALVESTON, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP).—A. A. Horne of Galveston, president of the Texas Bankers' Association, sees in Texas for 1930, "assuming favorable seasons, a very satisfactory year to all, from the producer on our myriad farms to our business men and trades. I see nothing that can stop the growth, development and prosperity of our great state."

The full statement of the bankers association head follows:

"First as to the nation; the stock crash late in October and the first of November sobered the country in several ways. It taught a host of gamblers, big and little, that you can never get something for long, and that what goes up must, of a necessity come down. The decline in stock and similar security values purged the business and commercial structure of this country of many harmful humors and various hurtful fermentations. The nation, here on the threshold of a new year, feels cleansed—not only of a lot of paper profit—but of some unhealthy notions and ideas. The people are going back to work. They will take up the old tools of conservatism and thrift, and with the Hoover business plans behind them, the wheels of industry and building trades will hum again, and employment and labor distresses and slack business will soon be eliminated. With the farm board and other political agencies earnestly at work we can expect the year to be a great one for agriculture—particularly if the farmer will help himself with the same zeal as is shown by his white-collared friends who are about to 'save' him again. The motor industry, the radios, the talkies and a few other things which we call luxuries, but I believe the year 1930 will see great activities as sound a prosperity as this nation has enjoyed in some time. Money for sound business and industry is plentiful at a reasonable rate, and the credit fabric of only a few brokers has been torn and ravelled and frayed."

"My guess along with all the other wise ones is that Texas will have an even better year than in 1929—and—we agree 1929, with all its uncertainties at the close—was a splendid year in the state. Our country banks are perhaps now in the strongest position they have been at the beginning of any year during the last fifteen. They are all preaching and practicing sound banking principles which means strict safety and accommodation of the depositor, and a fair return on the investment for the stockholder. Every year our country bankers—we think of Texas bankers as country bankers, since there are so few city bankers among us—in Texas are improving bank management, learning their business better, insisting on the old basic principles that have been recognized as 'good banking practices' for a hundred years, and which never change, I see in Texas for 1930, assuming favorable seasons, a very satisfactory year to all."

A Christmas Carol

By Charles Dickens

BEGIN HERE TODAY

A cold-hearted, grasping miser was ERENEZER SCROOGE. And his partner in business, JACOB MARLEY, had been dead seven years. On Christmas Eve Scrooge had a visitor. It was Marley's Ghost. Wrapped in clanking chains and raising dreadful cries, it repented a wasted life and told Scrooge he was wrong to shut mankind out of his heart.

"You shall be haunted by three Spirits," Marley's Ghost said. "The first will call when the clock strikes One."

And it did. It called itself the Ghost of Christmas Past. On the wings of the wind it bore Scrooge back through the years and allowed the old miser to see himself as a boy again, when the love of his fellow men had not yet left his heart.

The Spirit then departed, and the second one appeared, this one calling itself the Ghost of Christmas Present. Scrooge was taken to the home of BOB CRATCHIT, his poverty-stricken clerk, and he saw happiness and true Christmas spirit in this family circle, which included a crippled child, TINY TIM.

Then the third Spirit appeared. This one called itself the Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come. It takes Scrooge to a squalid quarter of the city, where some miserable wretches are selling the effects of a dead Scrooge.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

XII
The parlour was the space behind the screen of rags. The old man raked the fire together with an old stick-rat, and having trimmed his smoky lamp (for it was night) with the stem of his pipe, put it into his mouth again.

While he did this, the woman who had already spoken threw her bundle on the floor, and sat down in a flaunting manner on a stool, crossing her elbows on her knees and looking with a bold defiance at the other two.

"What odds, then? What odds Mrs. Dilber?" said the woman. "Every person has a right to take care of themselves. He always did."

"That's true, indeed!" said the landlady. "No man more so."

"Why, then, don't stand staring, as if you was afraid, woman! Who's the wiser? We're not going to pick holes in each other's coats, I suppose?"

"No, indeed," said Mrs. Dilber, and the man together. "We should hope not."

"Very well then!" cried the woman. "That's enough. Who's the worse for the loss of a few things like these? Not a dead man, I suppose?"

"No, indeed," said Mrs. Dilber, laughing.

"If he wanted to keep 'em after he was dead, a wicked old screw," pursued the woman, "why wasn't he natural in his lifetime? If he had been, he'd have had somebody to look after him when he was struck with Death, instead of lying gasping out his last there, alone by himself."

"It's the truest word that ever was spoke," said Mrs. Dilber. "It's a judgment on him."

"I wish it was a little heavier judgment," replied the woman; "and it should have been, you may depend upon it, if I could have laid my hands on anything else. Open that bundle, old Joe, and let me know the value of it. Speak out plain. I'm not afraid to be the first, nor afraid for them to see it. We know pretty well that we were helping ourselves before we met here, I believe. It's an sin. Open the bundle, Joe."

But the gallantry of her friends would not allow of this; and the man in faded black, mounting the breach first, produced his plunder. It was not extensive. A seal or two, a pencil-case, a pair of spectacles, were all. They were severally examined and appraised by old Joe, who chalked the sums he was disposed to give for each upon the wall, and added them up into a total when he found that there was nothing more to come.

"That's your account," said Joe, "and I wouldn't give another sixpence, if I was to be boiled for not doing it. Who's next?"

Mrs. Dilber was next. Sheets and towels, a little wearing apparel, two old-fashioned silver teaspoons, a pair of sugar-tongs, and a few boots. Her account was stated on the wall in the same manner.

"I always give too much to ladies. It's a weakness of mine, and that's the way I run myself," said old Joe. "That's your account. If you asked me for another penny, and made it an open question, I'd repent of being so liberal, and knock off half-a-crown."

"And now under my bundle, Joe," said the first woman.

Joe went down on his knees for the greater convenience of opening it, and having unfastened a large many knots, dragged out a great heavy roll of some dark stuff.

"What do you call this?" said Joe. "Bed-curtains?"

"Ah!" returned the woman, laughing and leaning forward on her crossed arms. "Bed-curtains!"

"You don't mean to say you took 'em down, hings and all, with higgling there?" said Joe.

"Yes, I do," replied the woman. "Why not?"

"You were born to make your fortune," said Joe, "and you'll certainly do it."

"I certainly shall hold my hand, when I can get anything in it by reaching it out, for the sake of such a man as he was! I promise you, Joe," returned the woman coolly, "don't drip that oil upon the blankets, now."

"His blankets?" asked Joe.

"Whose else's do you think?" replied the woman. "He isn't likely to take cold without em, I dare say."

"I hope he didn't die of anything catching? Eh?" said old Joe, stopping in his work, and looking up.

"Don't you be afraid of that," returned the woman. "I ain't so fond of his company that I'd loiter about him for such things, if he did. Ah, you may look through that shirt till your eyes ache, but you won't find a hole in it, nor a threadbare place. It's the best he had, and a fine one too. They'd have wasted it, if it hadn't been for me."

"What do you call wasting of it?" asked old Joe.

"Putting it on him to be buried in, to be sure," replied the woman, with a laugh. "Somebody was fool enough to do it, but I took it off again. If calico ain't good enough for such a purpose, it isn't good enough for anything. It's quite as becoming to the body. He can't look suttler than he did in that one."

Scrooge listened to this dialogue in horror. As they sat grouped about their spot, in the scanty light afforded by the old man's lamp, he viewed them with a detestation and disgust which could hardly have been greater, though they had been obscene demons marketing the corpse itself.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the same woman when old Joe, producing a flannel bag with money in it, told out their several gains upon the ground. "This is the end of it, you see! He frightened every one away from him when he was alive, to profit us when he was dead! Ha, ha, ha!"

"Spirit!" said Scrooge, shuddering from head to foot. "I see, I see. The case of this unhappy man might be my own. My life—indeed that way now. Merciful heaven, what is this?"

He recoiled in terror, for the scene had changed, and now he almost touched a bed—a bare, uncurtained bed—on which, beneath a ragged sheet, there lay a something covered up, which, though it was dumb, announced itself in awful language.

The room was very dark, too dark to be observed with any accuracy, though Scrooge glanced round it in obedience to a secret impulse, anxious to know what kind of a room it was. A pale light, rising in the outer air, fell straight upon the bed; and on it, slumbered and breath, unwatched, unwept, uncareful for, was the body of this man.

Scrooge glanced towards the Phantom. His steady hand was pointed to the head. The cover was so carefully adjusted that the slightest raising of it the motion of a finger upon Scrooge's part, would have disclosed the face. He thought of it, felt how easy it would be to do, and longed to do it; but he had no more power to withdraw the veil than to dismiss the spectre at his side.

"Oh, cold, cold, rigid, dreadful! Death set up thine altar here and dress it with such terrors as thou hast at thy command; for this is thy dominion! But of the loved, revered, and honoured head thou canst not turn one hair to thy dread purposes, or make one feature odious. It is not that the hand is heavy, and will fall down when released; it is not that the heart and pulse are still; but that the hand was open, generous, and true; the heart brave, warm, and tender; and the pulse a man's. Strike, Shadow, strike! And see his good deeds springing from the wound, to sow the world with life immortal!"

No voice pronounced these words in Scrooge's ears, and yet he heard them when he looked upon the bed. He thought, if this man could be raised up now, what would be his foremost thoughts? Avarice, hard dealing, crippling cares?—they have brought him to a rich end, truly?

He lay in the dark, empty house, with not a man, a woman, or a child to say he was kind to me in this or that, and for the memory of one word I will be kind to him. A cat was tearing at the door, and there was a sound of gnawing rats beneath the hearthstone. What they wanted in the room of death, and why they were so restless and disturbed, Scrooge did not dare to think.

"Spirit!" he said, "this is a fearful place. In leaving it, I shall not leave its lesson, trust me. Let us go."

Still the Ghost pointed with an unmoved finger to the head.

"I understand you," Scrooge returned, "and I would do it if I could. But I have not the power, Spirit. I have not the power."

Again it seemed to look upon him.

"If there is any person in the town who feels emotion caused by this man's death," said Scrooge, quite agonised, "show that person to me, Spirit. I beseech you!"

The Phantom spread its dirk before him for a moment, like a wing; and withdrawing it, revealed a room by daylight, where a mother and her children were.

She was expecting some one, and with anxious eagerness; for she walked up and down the room, started at every sound looked out from the window, glanced at the clock, tried, in vain, to work with her needle, and could hardly bear the voices of her children in their play.

At length the long-expected knock was heard. She hurried to the door, and met her husband, a man whose face was careworn and depressed, though he was young. There was a remarkable expression in it now; a kind of serious delight of which he felt ashamed, and which he struggled to repress.

"He sat down to the dinner that had been hoarding for him by the fire, and when she asked him faintly what was (which was not until after a long silence), he appeared embarrassed how to answer.

"Is it good," she said, "or bad?" to help him.

"Bad," he answered. "We are quite ruined."

"No. There is hope yet, Caroline."

"If he relents," she said, amazed.

Scrooge glanced towards the Phantom. His steady hand was pointed to the head. The cover was so carefully adjusted that the slightest raising of it the motion of a finger upon Scrooge's part, would have disclosed the face. He thought of it, felt how easy it would be to do, and longed to do it; but he had no more power to withdraw the veil than to dismiss the spectre at his side.

NEW YORK.—City Justice Lippa must decide whether Jack Kearns is married or not. In an affidavit submitted in behalf of the sports promoter, he avers a woman who is suing him is Miss Edith Angel. The woman has presented other affidavits in which Kearns admits she is Mrs. Kearns and refers to her as Lenna Kearns (Angel reversed). Kearns claims a contract for payments of $500 a month was signed under duress.

NEW YORK.—With holiday greetings Ray Barbuti, Olympic 44-meter champion, is receiving congratulations on being a "Benedict," a face which friends have just discovered. He was married last March to Miss Sylvia Hicks, sister of Helen, the golfer.

"I don't know. But, before that time, we shall be ready with the money; and even though we were not, it would be bad fortune indeed to find so merciless a creditor in his successor. We may sleep tonight with light hearts, Caroline!"

Miss Lizzie Hamilton, who spent the Christmas season with her cousin, Miss Fannie Stephens, returned to her home in the Richland community Monday.

SCHOOLS NEEDED.

The country still is deficient in good flying schools, according to an article in the January number of World's Work by Frank Coffyn, a veteran in the field of aviation.

"What we need most of all," says Coffyn, "is properly run and intelligently managed flying schools, adequately equipped with good planes that are constantly and rigidly inspected."

Our airplanes have been developed to a remarkable point; but, after all, no airplane can fly safely without a good pilot. Mr. Coffyn is far from the first man to demand more and better training schools.

WE CAN COOK.

American cookery comes in for a good bit of criticism from world travelers. We are told that we do not prepare food in an appetizing manner, and that the cooks of Europe have it all over us.

For all we know this may be true. But we talked recently with a gentleman who had just come back from 10 years in Europe, during which period he had dined in all of the famous restaurants overseas and had eaten the favorite dishes of all the great chefs; and this man said that the best thing about getting back to America was the fact that he could eat some good American food once more.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

ORTIZ RUBIO IN WASHINGTON.

Houston Post-Dispatch: President-elect Ortiz Rubio of Mexico received but an indifferent welcome in New York, but in the American capital he was accorded an unprecedented honor.

doubt that it had a more special significance. Indeed, it is rather difficult to understand why Mr. Hoover should make acknowledgment to a Mexican dignitary for courtesies in which Mexico did not have an opportunity to participate.

It was Mr. Hoover's intention to make a visit to Mexico, but as everyone knows, he did not carry out the intention, other calls upon his time preventing.

As a demonstration that the Mexican policy of Mr. Hoover's predecessor is still the national policy the president's action should have far-reaching and beneficial consequences.

The Coolidge-Hoover Mexican policy has been justified on the ground that it has been colored by misunderstanding of the American attitude toward Mexico and her present leaders.

Well, well, income taxes are getting lower and lower. It's going to be a tough blow, however, for some of the charities usually listed on the regular March returns.

There is a Fashion-of-the-Month club in New York. Apparently there are some people who actually believe a fashion can really be confined to such an interminable length of time.

Once there was a man who told another man what to do for a cold and the other man followed instructions immediately. And the cold was cured.

Some of the Christmas drinks make it seem almost impossible that anybody ever could be arrested or selling liquor on the strength of such evidence.

Once there was a man who came in winter from California and suddenly was stricken dumb. He did the only thing left for him to do, of course—he killed himself.

Lower Rates On Long Distance Calls Announced

The nationwide decrease in long distance rates which will go into effect New Year's Day will mean an annual saving of $33,500 to telephone users in Texas, according to P. C. Cayton, local manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company.

That is, calls placed to a distant number rather than to a specific person. It applies on charges to points 60 to 300 miles distant and will amount to 10 cents in most instances, and five cents in a few cases.

Report charges on "person-to-person" calls, however, will be lowered five to 40 cents on calls to points 140 to 2200 miles distant. Report charges are made when the distant telephone but not the person wanted, is reached.

Hollywood's Sights and Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Many movie stars are shackled by their cinematic pasts. Lillian Gish in her first talkie is essaying a new characterization, far removed from the sweet, prim demure little miss she always has been under D. W. Griffith's direction.

Many stars who attempted to break away from their established forte, from the prison of being "typed," might cite their own experiences to discourage her.

However, aided by the novelty of a microphone-given voice, she may be able to launch her new personality successfully, as did Mary Pickford in "Coquette" after a career as a sweetly hoydenish girl.

No Straying Allowed Still, Clara Bow remains the "It" girl, the "Brooklyn bonfire," much against her own wishes. In only one picture, "Ladies of the Mob," was she seen as anything else, and immediately fan letters protested.

Edward Everett Horton, the precise, meticulous comedian of the screen, has not fared so well on the local stage when he undertook more serious parts, and Victor McLaglen, hard-boiled in "What Price Glory?" failed to impress greatly as the romantic and heroic scout of "The Black Watch," but immediately registered heavily again as the hard-boiled sergeant in "The Cock-Eyed Woman."

Stay Put, You Star! Joan Crawford is the "dancing daughter," the "modern maiden," the jazz girl, although her forthcoming musical "Montana," may free her from that.

And the fans would not know what to think if Douglas Fairbanks did not leap over a chasm or down a stairway or at least do something athletic.

Chester Morris was a crook in "Alibi," and has been a criminal in pictures up to "The Case of Sergeant Grisha," now in production. Charles Ruggles, the drunken reporter in "Gentlemen of the Press," was several drunken reporters in talkies as a result, and Kay Francis, the vamp of that picture, seems irrevocably abandoned to screen wickedness.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Five Republicans are contesting for the seats of five Democrats in the House and the probability is that some of them would not have bothered to make a contest if they had not counted on support from the large Republican majority.

Congressman Frederick W. Dalling, a Massachusetts Republican, has reintroduced a bill which would virtually remove the political element from decisions in contested election cases by transferring them from the House to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

He Would End Delay The bill, if it became a law would also reduce delay. The cases now pending arise from the election of November, 1928. Presumably they will all be settled during the regular session. But if a member is ousted from his seat by a contestant he keeps the pay he has drawn since March 4, 1929, and the contestant's pay also starts from that date, so that representation of the particular district temporarily costs the government $20,000 a year instead of $10,000.

Under Dalling's proposal, both parties would file briefs with the court immediately after the election contested. Acting while Congress was in recess, the court would consider the merits of the case and render its finding of fact to the House, which would still have the final decision as provided by the constitution but which presumably would sustain the court at once.

"The time has come to put an end to the idea that contested elections are political issues," Dalling says. "Partisanship is now very apt to be a controlling factor with the result that the real merits of a case often do not get the attention they deserve."

"Under such legislation as I propose the House would be organized in strict accord with laws governing elections in the various states, expedited decisions in important cases would do away with the present long delay which is a distinct detriment to legislative work, the number of cases not based on real merits but instead on hopes of a partisan decision would be reduced and many personal and partisan considerations would be eliminated."

William Tyler Page, clerk of the House, is a strong admirer of the bill and is likely to appear for it before a House committee.

Mr. Ruth & Bryan Owen of Florida is one of the members whose seat is being contested. William C. Lawson, whom she defeated by 30,000 votes last year, disputes her American citizenship.

Former Congressman Ralph E. Updyke of Indianapolis is after the seat of Representative Louis Ludlow on the ground that Ludlow, a newspaper correspondent, was a resident of Washington and not of Indiana. This issue of influently was raised against James M. Beck of Philadelphia following a special election in 1927. But Beck, although he also was charged with being a Washington resident, kept his seat by vote of the House.

Broadway

By Central Press NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—Eleanor Painter is back in town from triumphs in grand opera abroad. She has been engaged by an opera producer for a tour of the country in the revival of an old light music classic.

Miss Painter has not a vestige of the celebrated "artistic temperament"—a euphemism for temper. This is due largely to the fact that she was brought up in the only girl in a family of seven children.

"Any egotism that may have been fostered by a doting mother," says Miss Painter, "was quickly dispelled by the 'six young demons.' There's nothing on earth that can quite equal the salubrious temperamental effect of six boisterous brothers."

ILLUSION SHATTERED Cathleen Healey, headliner in vaudeville and featured player in musical comedy and revue, is passionately fond of Parker House rolls. When she can't get a Parker House roll to munch with her matrimonial mocha her whole day is spoiled.

Parker House rolls as everyone knows or blushes for not knowing, originated in the Parker House in Boston—a hostel famous for its cuisine. Some time ago the old place was razed and in its stead a modern caravanserie of the same name was erected. No trace of the former inn exists within the ornate walls of the new hotel with the exception of a few old ladies who were guests for years at the former hotel and are clinging to the new joint for the sake of fond memories embodied in the name.

With all that out of the way we can now get back to Miss Healey and her rolls. Playing Bagston recently it occurred to her that it might be a smart stunt if she went over to the Parker House itself and roped a herd of rolls on the hoof.

She dropped in for breakfast, and having wound her way in the order through the grapefruit, cereal and the rest of the rite, said to the waiter:

"And of course I want some Parker House rolls—heated." Later she noted the server in anxious consultation with the head waiter, who in turn sought the ear of one of the assistant managers. They had evidently encountered a snag in the administration of the dining room.

Ten minutes after the coffee was served and after Cathleen had reiterated her demand for Parker House rolls the waiter hove in sight with two of the species, slightly crumpled and evidencing signs of wear and tear.

One more illusion wiped off the Healey slate: Parker House rolls at the Parker House!

NO CHOKING HEARN Low Hearn, diminutive Broadway comedian, recently returned from abroad to go into pictures here. Hearn is small besides being short and plays odd and eccentric parts with a certain wistful pathos. The helpless aspect of the characters he creates leads playwrights and stage directors to write into the player's roles business of being choked by other characters.

The first choking was seasons ago. Since then, in every production in which he has been featured, Hearn has been choked.

When the movie people offered him a good contract he said: "There's one clause that's got to be in that contract."

"Anything within reason, Mr. Hearn," replied the film magnate, preparing to offer more money. "What is it?"

"No chokings," said Hearn. "And it was so written into the contract."

Several weeks later as they were rehearsing a scene in Low's first picture, the director, who of course was familiar with Hearn's stage work, called out to the character playing opposite Hearn:

"Now, then, Sam, put your hands around his throat and choke him."

With the other man's hands around his throat, it was all Low could do to utter: "No choking! It's in my contract."

"Well," said the director, who knows actors and is a great director because he does know actors. "It may be in your contract all right, Mr. Hearn, but there's nobody on or off the stage or screen who can be more artistically choked than you."

WEST GIVEN EDGE OVER ENEMY

STELLAR BACKS OF WEST EXPECTED TO OUTSCORE EASTERN ALL-STARS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1. (AP)—Two all-star elevens, featuring all-American performers from both sides of the Rockies, met today in the annual New Year's day football battle between the East and the West.

The contest was a benefit for the Shriner's hospital for crippled children here and was called for 2 p. m., Pacific Standard time.

Three times, in the last four years, the West had come out on top in the annual clash, but last year two "dark horse" Eastern performers, Harpster and Holmer, led their team to a 20 to 0 victory. The East hoped to make it two straight today, but observers handed the West the pre-game edge.

Backs Potent
The Western advantage lay especially in the backfield, with three key men ready to lead drives down the field. Fanny Hunting of Goddard, Benny Lom of California, and "Dutch" Clark of Colorado, were all triple threat men and finished performers in all phases of backfield play.

Coach Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley of the East placed the burden of key man on "Frosty" Peters of Illinois, a quarter and about the best drop kicker in the country, but Hunting, Lom and Clark have him covered in all-round play in advance observations.

Eastern Line
Comparison of the lines of the two squads gave the East the edge. A mighty center trio, led by Jack Cannon of Notre Dame, one of the greatest guards of all time, and two powerful tackles, Slight of Purdue and Twoomy of Notre Dame, were

PITT READY FOR USC TROJANS

WARM WEATHER ON COAST CONSIDERED DETRIMENT TO EASTERN ELEVEN

By PAUL W. ZIMMERMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 1. (AP)—On the historic greenward of Rose Bowl, the Golden Panthers of Pittsburgh and the University of Southern California Trojans today assembled their forces for the fifteenth annual Tournament of Roses football classic.

Primed to the minute, these eleven staked their skill and cunning against each other before a capacity crowd of 70,000 in defense of the honors of the East and Pacific Seaboard.

Despite a season's record marred by two defeats, Coach Howard Jones' Trojans were quoted as slight favorites to administer to Coach John Sutherland's combination of their initial beating. Warm weather had a great deal to do with this partiality shown the coast aggregation.

Burned Bridges
While the Pitt players and their adversary staff burned all bridges behind them by announcing the weather would have nothing to do with the outcome of the struggle, followers of the annual game pointed to previous conflicts and shook their heads.

For individual brilliancy, the Pitt team, with such all-American timber as Octavius Unasa, Joe Donchess, Tom Parkinson and Ray Montgomery, held the edge. The Southern California squad hoped to couple a reserve power of intense preparation with such sparkling performers as Russell Saunders, Francis Tappan and Marshall Duffield.

Especially in the backfield did the Troy warriors possess potential strength which all but eclipsed that of the starting lineup, and the forward wall was not without its rugged supporting cast. Superior weight was claimed by the Jones aggregation.

Battling Jinx
Southern California entered the fray, however, trailed by the fact that no team has twice won in the annual clash, but the men of Troy brushed this aside with abandon, pointing to a season's record which, notwithstanding two defeats, marks the U.S.C. combination as a team with great scoring potentialities.

Probable starting lineups:
Pittsburgh Position West
Tully Left Tackle Hoff
Daugherty Center Dye

Dimeolo (C) Right Guard Galloway
MacMurdo Right Tackle Anthony
Collins Right End Arbelbide
Baker Quarterback Saunders
Walinchus Right Half Pinkert
Parkinson Fullback Shaver

SPORTS ON PARADE

HAPPY NEW YEAR

WHAT AN ACHIEVE
Ow, what a headache. Someone must have hollered "low bridge" and we forgot to dodge. No, it's not what you are all thinking either, it's not a hangover, but was acquired honestly and legally. That is we think it was won according to "Hoyle" or some other expert on headaches.

DRAB OUTLOOK
While others at the party were watching the old year out and the birth of another 12-month period with the satisfaction that January 1 is a holiday and that their regular duties would not call them from a comfortable slumber at 6 a. m., this humble scrivener was pounding his temples wondering how to attract the wife's attention to give the "let's go home smile."

WICKED CAN'T REST
Fate had no rest chalked up to our credit last night for after the ball was over, madly decided the only proper way to celebrate New Year's night was to attend one of those stylish midnight presentations. After a few good kicks on the shins, we decided rest was impossible in the picture house and so decided to make the best of it and try, at least, to enjoy what was taking place on the screen.

BACK TO PARTY
But let's talk about the party. We're getting better at the favorite indoor sport. Didn't we chalk up a grand slam (that's what the others said we did, without hardly any interference? Yes, siree, believe it or not Mr. Ripley, our broken field galloping is improving. The dealer passed out 13 players, two more than the average football team, exclusive of officials, and the dash was on.

THE BIG IDEA
We've frank to state that this play called finesse is entirely different than a straight off-tackle smash, but the principles are the same. The idea is to make the other fellow think you are all set to smack down an ace and then cross up the opposition with a gentle queen. It's along the same principal on which Knute Rockne works his Notre Dame Irish. He sends in what looks and acts like his best bet and then comes along with his top trumps just about the time the enemies believe they are headed some place.

TIME FOR ACTION
As we started out to say, we don't know much about this business of doubling and redoubling, but when our partner hiked a one bid to four, we knew right then that we'd have to go through the air if we ever expected to ring up a victory.

OFF THE TACKLE
The adversary on the left just decided that we were no Red Grange and that our straight arm must be in splints or something, for he slacked up momentarily attempting to let a jack do the work of a king. It was the opening we had been looking for all evening. Straight through the tackle we plunged and then suddenly reversing the field while a bitter cross fire waged across the board. By slipping and turning around a host of tens jacks and queens, we finally dashed into an open field with just two halfbacks in the form of kings standing between us and the goal.

A NEW DANGER
Like Knute Rockne we had something in reserve and bowled over those two obstacles with well protected aces. There was some pretty fair sidestepping exhibited on that play, but the roar of the howling mob gave us superb encouragement. We thought we had a cinch for touchdown then, but we had not reckoned with the safety man. There he was, one lone trump spread out all over the goal line. The proposition didn't look so soft then, but we reached down in the bag of tricks and pulled out one of those emergency plays called finesse. It worked, and the howling fans increased their shouts of encouragement.

FINAL THRUST
That safety, defensive man threw a scare in an aught, but it was nothing compared to what followed. Linemen that we had left strewn all over the field were collecting again. We had slowed down the mad pace after eluding the safety man, but the real danger was yet to be faced. We shook off a couple of nine spot tacklers, and then there was number eight slipping in from the rear for a last stroke. The impact with which the last two players hit the turf rebounded all over the playing field, but alas the opponents had withheld the wrong gender from the

SPEED ONLY HOPE FOR SOUTH

POWER PLAYS OF BIG TEN FORMED AROUND WELCH ARE INVADERS' THREAT

By GAYLE TALBOT, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Jan. 1. (AP)—The power plays of the middle west and the passing attack used extensively in the south-west, were pitted against each other here today, when all-star teams of the two sections grappled in the second Dixie Series.

The bout found the Southwest with a score to settle. Last year a collection of Big Six stars, headed by "Blue" Howell of Nebraska, won a decisive victory over the Southwest's best. This time, however, Ray Morrison, Southern Methodist inventor noted for his use of the pass as an offensive weapon, was called upon to coach this section's team, and prospects were fairly bright for the Southwest to square the count.

15,000 May Attend
Advance sales indicated more than 15,000 would witness the game. All proceeds above actual expenses went to the Scottish Rite Hospital for Chipped Children here.

As in last year's tilt, most of the Mid-West's hopes were wrapped up in an All-American line smasher. What Howell did last year, "Pest" Welch, brilliant Purdue halfback threatened to do today. Jimmy Phelan coach of the Mid-West group, centered his offense about the boiler-maker. Indications were it would be Welch and a powerful line against a tighter, but more deceptive, Southwest eleven. The Welch combine was a slight favorite.

Sherman Section
A special section of 1,000 seats was reserved for fans from Sherman, Tex., home of Welch and Eb Carraway members of the Big Ten squad. Both were stars at Sherman high school.

While the Southwest line-up included only two players chosen on the Associated Press composite all-conference eleven, it was anything but a "weak sister." In Howard Grubbs, brilliant Texas Christian quarterback, and Choc Sanders, Southern Methodist guard the homelings had two of the section's outstanding stars, and there were plenty of others of almost the same calibre. Added strength came from outside the conference, when Centenary College contributed Pete Hanna, noted triple threat, and Fred Willis, a great tackle.

Mustangs Win Cage Game From Simmons

DALLAS, Jan. 1. (AP)—Southern Methodist University basketball fans were heartened today by the showing of the Mustang quintet last night against Simmons University's cowboys from Abilene. The invaders were defeated 34 to 25, the Ponies playing their best game of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Thomas motored to Midland Sunday, they were accompanied by Misses Elsie Youngblood, Jewel Hawthorne and Eula Morrison.

game and our record run was successfully closed.

GET NO MEDALS
Honestly folks you get less credit for mopping up the opposition in a bridge game than Cy Leiland received for making six of T. C. U.'s 60 points scored against Daniel Baker. Imagine the exhilarating effect of "that's fine partner" from the sweet thing sitting across the table. Well, it was a great party anyway and we're glad we learned what a finesse really equates of and now we think our headaches is no worse than those of the folks who have been following this grid game on the bridge table.

Sport World Leaders Express Opinion

CHAMPS ARE CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Prospects of Renewed International Play Bright for New Year

(By The Associated Press)
Champions and leaders in the world of sport, at the request of The Associated Press today set forth their views as to what the new year holds in prospect. Without exception they look forward to unusually keen competition, especially in international rivalry, during 1930. Their statements follow:

Bobby Jones, national open golf champion—"The only thing worthy of comment in 1929 was the fact that there were no new arrivals in championship golf. I think 1930 will see much action in international competition, particularly in the amateur field. The United States should be able to send a fine team over for the Walker cup matches, and it is safe to say the British side will be stronger than it was two years ago."

Connie Mack, manager of the World's Champion Athletics—"I believe 1930 will be a fine year in sports. Sports of all kinds are constantly being placed on a higher plane, and I think they will be bigger and greater than ever in the year at hand. The Athletics had a wonderful season in 1929, but I have strong hope that they will even surpass this record in 1930."

Tommy Hitchcock, Jr., captain of American polo "Big Four"—"1930 will be a big international year in polo, and the United States enters it with as fine a supply of material as the country has ever had."

Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion—"As far as I am concerned my retirement is official, but I have no thought that I have taken the future of boxing into retirement with me. Out of the chaos of the moment, order will emerge. During the new year a heavyweight champion will be established."

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach—"We lose nine first class football players by graduation and face a stiff ten game schedule in 1930, but don't feel too sorry for us. We'll have a fair team and be scoring a few touchdowns."

Arthur (The Great) Shires, White Sox first baseman—"What I'm going to do to American league pitchers in 1930 is nobody's business, and what I'm going to do to some of these baseball players who think they can fight is plenty. My goal is to get $250,000 and then settle down in some little town. I expect to get a hunk of that in 1930, even if they do call me a fool."

Jack Dempsey, former world's champion—"Boxing will crown a new heavyweight champion in 1930 and with him will come new interest and activity in all divisions."

William T. Tilden
Henri Cochet, world's tennis champion—"Our French team has just concluded its around-the-world trip with great success as I cable this from Cairo. I hope we shall have equal success in keeping the Davis cup against the challenge of youthful Americans."

William T. Tilden, American tennis champion—"Here's hoping that Davis cup returns to America in 1930 in most successful year tennis has ever known. The fact that I am through with Davis cup competition makes my wishes all the more sincere."

IOWA STARTS EXILE FROM BIG TEN

TITULAR PLAY IMPOSSIBLE EVEN THOUGH SCHOOL IS REINSTATEMENT SOON

CHICAGO, Jan. 1. (AP)—The University of Iowa's sentence to athletic disbarment from the western conference became effective today.

Two petitions for reinstatement, the first on June 4, and the last on December 7, were rejected. The pleas were denied because the body which voted the drastic action was not convinced Iowa had done everything possible to clean house.

Our Message!

This is not a store-wide sale but we have certain lines of merchandise that we wish to discontinue and in order to clear this stock out of the store we are offering it at very special prices.

We have new fixtures coming and we must clear these lines before they arrive because with them come entirely new brands and lines to replace the lines that are to be discontinued.

We have planned to do this long ago but our stock has been too large. We have reduced most of the departments and now are offering these special lines at greatly reduced prices that we know that you cannot afford to pass up.

The head office has told us that the fixtures are to arrive very soon and we have orders to clear the stock by that time. We know that the prices we have placed on these close-outs will move them promptly.

They are the greatest values you have been offered since our last big sale in July. We emphasize good merchandise and good service. Our business is growing daily and as it increases we strive harder to give Big Spring people even better service and merchandise.

We are here to grow with the town. We have had a good business the past year and heartily appreciate it. Our service and merchandising plans will be improved with the years and we shall strive to merit your continued patronage.

Southland Greyhound Drops Plan For New Divisional Terminal Here

Lack of paving on the Bankhead highway across thirty miles of Mitchell county, which, it is understood, will be surfaced during 1930, was assigned here Tuesday night as the reason for the Southland Greyhound Lines, Inc., for deciding not to establish a division terminal in Big Spring.

The company recently announced it would change its division from Abilene to Big Spring, bringing also the equipment now kept in Breckenridge.

E. F. Freeman, traffic manager of the western division; Russell Lundberg, superintendent of garages and equipment, and G. G. Van Dam, ticket auditor, were here Tuesday to take over the Pageway lines between Big Spring and Pecos, which recently was bought for approximately $75,000.

Southland Greyhound Lines, Inc., also recently purchased West Texas Coaches, Inc.

Division points between Fort Worth and El Paso now are at Abilene and Pecos. Plans are to have but one division point between those cities when Mitchell county's section of the highway is completed. That division point would be in Big Spring.

"We cannot operate the huge twin-motor buses to be used in the Abilene-Fort Worth section of the line over unpaved roads," said Mr. Lundberg. "That is the only reason we are not in a position to maintain a garage and equipment depot in Big Spring at this time."

Two 34-passenger parlor car buses with inside luggage racks are being ordered for use on the daily schedule arriving from the West at 6:30 p. m. and from the East at 6:30 a. m.

All buses are being equipped with water heaters, replacing all exhaust heating methods.

Four additional new buses are soon to be put into service on the Big Spring-Pecos schedules bought from George Page, said Mr. Lundberg. By March 1 all new equipment will be in use across West Texas, according to plans.

Decision to at least delay establishment of the division terminal will not effect plans for the new passenger station in the Crawford hotel annex now being built.

Attendance

other district to which it may be transferred as provided by law, for a period of not more than one hundred (100) days during each scholastic year.

"The period of compulsory school attendance at each school shall begin at the opening of each school term unless otherwise authorized by the district trustees and notice given by the trustees prior to the beginning of such school term; provided, that no child shall be required to attend school for a longer period than the maximum term of the public school in the district where such child resides."

Section 375 (299) Duties of parent or guardian: If any parent or person standing in parental relation to a child within the compulsory school attendance ages who is not properly excused from attendance upon school for some exemption provided by law fails to require such child to attend school regularly for such period as is required by law, it shall be the duty of the attendance officer shall forthwith jurisdiction in the territory where said parent or person standing in parental relation resides, to warn such parent or person standing in parental relation that this law must be immediately complied with and upon failure of said parent or person standing in parental relation to comply with the law after such warning has been given, the official discharging the duties of the attendance officer shall forthwith file complaint against such parent or person standing in parental relation to said child, which complaint shall be filed in the county court, or in justice court in the precinct where such parent or guardian resides. Any parent or other person standing in parental relation upon conviction for failure to comply with provisions of this law shall be fined for the first offense five dollars, and for the second offense ten dollars, and each subsequent offense twenty-five dollars. Each day that said child remains out of said school after said warning has been given or after said child has been ordered in school by the juvenile court, may constitute a separate offense.

Oil

Hart Phillips, which topped lime at 1,980 feet, pay at 2,212 feet with an increase of production from 2,285-92 feet. Drilling stopped at 2,300 feet where the well produced 900 barrels initially on the pump. Location of the well is 330 feet from the north line and 2,510 feet from the west line of section 22, block 33, township 2 south, T. & P. Ry. Co. survey.

Following the Kirby et al's discovery, Schermerhorn Oil Company jumped into the quest for virgin production and drilled its No. 1 Phillips, which at one time pumped between 1,400 and 1,500 barrels of oil daily. The well is still one of the largest producers in the field.

Sun Oil Company drilled four producing wells, Shell, Stimms and E. L. Smith also entered the play. Lion Oil & Refining Company obtained its first production in West Texas in the Coffee-Phillips pool.

The latest development in West Texas has been Deep Rock Oil Company and others' No. 1 Ogden in Andrews county, a rank wildcat. Pay was topped in Deep Rock's No. 1 Ogden at 4,345 feet and was drilled to 4,345 feet. On deepening the well an increase was found between 4,362-65 feet and another slightly below 4,400 feet. The well has flowed by heads from 150 to 220 barrels daily. Oil is high gravity testing around 37.5, but the amount to date is hardly sufficient to warrant a far flung drilling campaign. Early in January, operators are expected to either deepen the hole or shoot the deep lime pays. Judging from the manner in which the oil has increased, the productive lines must be extremely compact.

Wildcat tests are growing common in Borden county, but out of three started in the latter part of 1929, two have failed and a third is in danger of being abandoned because of a "nasty" fishing job.

Teas & Wheeler Teas & Wheeler's No. 1 Long, 1,320 feet from the north and east lines of section 27, block 30, township 5 north, T. & P. Ry. Co. survey, drilled to a total depth of 4,929 feet, but was carrying a hole full of sulphur water when abandoned. Lime was topped at 2,633 feet.

Louisiana Oil & Refining Company's No. 1 Miller, 150 feet from the east line and 1,320 feet from the west line of section 35, block 27, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey, topped the lime at 2,300 feet and like the other failure encountered a hole full of sulphur water before being abandoned below 4,000 feet.

2,460 feet. Salt was topped at 1,080 feet. The fishing job is becoming serious.

Building

when Minor's Cinderella Shop completed and occupied its new building between Runnels and Main on Third street.

J. M. Radford constructed a new business building on the corner of First and Runnels streets during 1929 in which a restaurant, grocery store, tire shop and service station is now located. The service operated by J. H. Homan on the corner of Third and Scurry streets forms the nucleus for an entire half block of new business buildings.

Ray Wilcox and Jack Ellis, Big Spring business men, erected another half block of new business buildings between Gregg and Scurry streets flanking the Montgomery Ward and Company home. The spaces are now occupied by two dry goods concerns.

Increasing postal business, that has shown no let down during 1929, forced postal authorities to seek and find a more adequate building. A new Post Office building between Main and Scurry on Second street was provided, but even the increased accommodations, additional space and greater box room is proving inadequate.

Deats' Storage Garage home between First and Second streets on Scurry was completed and occupied this year. An addition to the garage was planned in the middle of 1929, but construction work has not been started.

The Charles Eberley Funeral Home, designed along lines most approved for mortuary homes, was completed and formally opened. The Family Service Laundry Company's new home on the corner of Ninth and Main streets was completed in 1929, inaugurating a departure from the older custom of demanding a location in the heart of business districts.

While the business building program seems enormous and was an impressive advancement, the question of modern homes was by no means overlooked. Several new additions to the city were started during early months of this closing year and since their opening hardly a month has passed without some new dwelling being started. A modern apartment house on the corner of Eighth and Nolan streets was started and completed in 1929 by T. C. Thomas, formerly of Abilene. New homes in Washington Place, Edwards Heights, Highland Park,

Cole and Strayhorn and Striplin addition will compare favorably with similar suburb additions of other cities throughout the state.

Mrs. Robert Currie was hostess to the Triangle Bridge club at luncheon and games Tuesday. Luncheon was served at the Masters cafe and bridge was played at the home of the hostess. The New Year's theme was attractively carried out in the party appointments with prizes, tallies, bridge appointments and house decorations following the theme with pretty accuracy.
