Ray's 'Ritin'

By RAY MARTIN

Personally I'm not going to worry about it because I won't be around by that time, but in the year 2026, there will be so many people on this old sphere that they'll be standing around on one square foot per person.

Now that's going to offer a problem, since several people I know take up considerably more than one square foot of standing space, they being horizontal rather than perpendicular, but then, as I said, that will be the problem of those people who will be living 63 years from now.

Too, it's going to be awfully hard to sleep standing up, and by comparison the fellows who have been whizzing around the world in space capsules lived in spacious quarters compared to the compartments 2026 men and women will live in.

This information concerning the future of mankind comes from a speech which Dr. A. H. Gohlke made to Lions here this past week. The doctor, who is with High Plains Foundation staff at Halfway, figures the world is going to be pretty crowded in 63 more years what with 50 billion people living on this planet.

Of course just standing room for these 50 billion people (the population now is 3 billion) isn't the only problem those folk are going to have. They will need food and clothes and that may present more difficulties than just standing. What with somebody on every square foot of ground, food-growing space is going to be at a premium.

And that's where research is going to come in. Of course the 50 billion figure is based on the present population trend. A few wars may wipe out a few billion or maybe some of the folk will be homesteading strips of land on Mars by that time or some other planet. But as of right now, it looks as if the boys and girls of 2026 are going to have it pretty rough.

This food and fiber problem is Dr. Gohlke's dish. He's a scientist, interested especially in growing food and clothing. (Come to think of it, standing that close together they won't need much clothing in order to keep warm.)

Dr. Gohlke brought the matter of research right down to west Texas. Here those who are still standing around on their one-foot-square plots 63 years from now are going to find water scarce. In fact, the scientist is worried now over the water level in west Texas. It's going down pretty fast, and we're not replacing it as fast as it is being used (and sometimes wasted) in irrigation.

The High Plains Foundation, Dr. Gohlke says, is spending much time in trying to solve this lowering water table. Seems, the scientist said, that the water level under West Texas is supplied (See RAY'S, Page 5)

Easing of Cotton Restrictions May Follow 'Rebellion' in Wheat

Bailey county cotton farmers, who produced an all-time record cotton crop — 113,229 bales — in 1962, were asking themselves this past week whether the resounding defeat of the wheat program might mean eventual elimination of cotton controls.

One farmer in this county put it this way: "Support prices for cotton have hiked the price so high for 47 consumers that synthetics are becoming an alarming competitor for the cotton price."

He pointed out that better farming methods make it possible to produce as much or more cotton on fewer acres, and that if restrictions were lifted, a "natural" decline in acreage would help maintain the price of cotton somewhere in the 20-25 cent range.

Farmers in Lamb county also saw the possibility of elimination of cotton controls next year. That county, which produced a record 226,000 bales last year, is feeling

Pupil Transfer Deadline Near

Parents who are transferring their pupils from one district to another must do so before Saturday, June 1, County Judge Glen Williams pointed out this past week.

The applications for transfer must be made at the county judge's office in the county where they live.

This application for transfer, school officials explained, must be made each year, regardless of whether pupils were transferred this year or not. Thus the transfers are good for only one school year.

the pinch of a 10,000-acre reduction in its cotton acreage this year. But in exchange for the lowered acreage, cotton prices have been pegged at around 32.5 cents per pound, an increase of about three cents in the past three years.

The Lamb County Leader says that in the same period, "the high-

Leaders Urge New Wheat Plan

Wheat certificate plan, which was defeated in last Tuesday's referendum throughout the nation, was defeated in Bailey county by a vote of 242 to 142, and late in the week agricultural experts still were attempting to analyze the situation.

While Charles B. Shuman, president of the Farm Bureau, was pleased over the results, here in Texas the Farmers Union president Jay I. Naman summed up the election with: "I am only relieved that our organization can not be charged with the responsibility that the opposition has assumed in urging the exposure of wheat farmers and all of agriculture to the risks of uncontrolled wheat production and the resulting side effects to other farm programs."

The two organizations, however, — Farm Bureau and Farmers Union — were agreed in one respect: A new wheat plan should be offered before Congress adjourns. Shuman called for immediate congressional action. In a statement saying the referendum showed farmers want a change in direction in government farm policies, he said the plan should (See LEADERS, Page 5) er price of cotton has been blamed for a loss by cotton in the world fiber market. Cotton's share of the world's fiber market has decreased from 70 to 65 percent in the past four years, the International Cotton Advisory Committee reported recently.

The Leader said critics of the farm program have charged that cotton has been priced out of competitive position by the high support price. Chief among these has been the American Farm Bureau Federation, which is credited with a major part in defeating the wheat referendum.

The Bureau has taken sharp issue with Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman, who contends (See COTTON, Page 5)

Historical Group Slates Meeting

County Judge Glen Williams has issued a call for an organizational meeting of the newly appointed Bailey County Historical Survey Committee Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at Paul's Restaurant.

"Every county has a history all its own, and Bailey county is no exception," said Judge Williams. "The committee has unlimited possibility for doing our county a great service in the field of preserving our history for future generations."

He continued that a part of the work of the committee will be to assemble interesting historical data and information that could be put in book form and preserved. "Also we would like to place a medallion or two on some historical buildings or structures in the county," he said. The (See GROUP, Page 5)

Weather Hurls Book; Some Crops Aided, Others Hurt

Rains which streamed across West Texas this past week boosted some crops but left others buried under layers of mud. Generally speaking, Bailey county escaped with less damage than some of the neighboring areas, such as Boyina region where an avalanche of hail beat down everything that grew.

This Jekyll and Hyde weather situation was revealed late in the week after a swing throughout the irrigated and dryland areas alike found some farmers happy over the rainfall and others equally unhappy.

Grasslands were definitely helped by the rains which measured all the way from 1 inch to more than 3 inches. At the Wildlife refuge south of Needmore, pastures were given a big boost by a rain that measured 1.3 inches. Lake water was boosted. Rains Thursday night dumped 2 to 3 inches of moisture on the Enochs area.

On the other hand, water which swept down the troublesome Running Water draw flooded some lands but proved the need for a series of detention dams to slow the water in its mad rush across the five-county area it covers. Experts say that the rains of the past week would have been sufficient to have filled a whole flock of dams along the draw.

In the West Camp irrigated section, sheet erosion resulted after a rain measuring 3.34 fell. Cotton in many sections was washed out, and SH 1760 was virtually all covered with mud. On the other hand, cotton which had been planted for as long as three weeks appeared to be in pretty good shape, although the cotton which had been planted only a short time before the deluges hit probably will have to be replanted.

In fact, farmers southwest of Muleshoe suffered heavily from damage to newly planted cotton, and one farmer who has 450 acres of cotton in that section of the county said he will have to replant practically all his cotton.

Heaviest damage, however, was apparently in the extreme north end of this county & over in Parmer county where a strip from Bovina to Lazbuddie was laid low by hail and heavy rains.

Wheat was not damaged extensively in areas where no hail fell, but the crop was written off as a total loss in some areas of the county. One Lazbuddie farmer, whose place was snowed under by lingering hail, summed it up laconically with: "I'm serving snow cones and shredded wheat; that's all I got left to get money out of."

Jimmy Wedel, who said rain gauges at his place measured 3.2 inches of moisture, said sheet erosion was heavy at his place, and some of the land probably will be planted to Midland Bermuda in an effort to prevent future erosion.

He said the run-off on his farm, however, was heavier than in some sections because the land was well saturated with irrigation water at the time the rain fell. Thus the soil soaked up little or none of the heavy rain. His cotton appeared to have stood the heavy downpour fairly well, but a dryoff will bring out sand fighters to prevent wind damage after the surface has crusted over. In fact, he said that rains which fell last week probably would provide sufficient moisture to make irrigation unnecessary before Mid-July, even if no more rain falls. The county, immediately following (See WEATHER, Page 5)

'Highway Week' Proclaimed Here

Major Arthur Crow has proclaimed May 26 through June 1 as "Highway Week," and urged that "special attention be directed to the needs of our highway system" during this special observance.

He pointed out in his proclamation that "the growth and future economic potential of the state of Texas is linked inextricably to its fine system of highways which stimulate both business and recreation by making travel safe and pleasurable..."

He also congratulated the Texas highway department for its achievements, adding that 5 million registered motor vehicles travel "well over 40 billion miles a year in Texas." He said that "due to this traffic, many miles of Texas' 25,000-mile system of U.S. and state highways are already obsolete for the traffic they presently carry."

Lions to Install New Officers

Muleshoe Lions club will install new officers at ceremonies Tuesday night when wives of members will be special guests, Horace Edwards, retiring president, announced this past week.

N. L. (Red) Johnson, a furniture dealer, will become president succeeding Edwards, and Jack Young, district attorney, is to be first vice-president. Bobby Althart, a banker, will be installed as second vice-president, and Frank Ellis, funeral home director, will become third vice-president.

The club also will install Buddy Ray, a jewelry store operator, as new Lion Tamer, and John Charles Gilbreath, discount store owner, will become tail twister. Robert Hooten, motor company operator, will be assistant tail twister.

Other officers to be installed will be: Guy Kendall, Bailey County Electric Co-op, will continue as secretary-treasurer, and Tye Young, a farmer, will again (See LIONS, Page 5)

Jaycees Launch Beard-Growing Contest as July 4th Promotion

Razors, except for "touch-up" jobs, have gone on vacation, stashed away in the medicine cabinets throughout Muleshoe. And they won't come out of hiding until after July 4.

It's all a part of Muleshoe's Golden Jubilee Fourth of July celebration, and is sponsored by the Muleshoe Jaycees.

Men have until June 1 to grow recognizable beards — mustaches, full beards, Van Dykes or what have you, Dale Long, chairman of the Jaycees' beard-growing contest, announced.

On that date, the Jaycees will start looking over facial foliage to see that it's making adequate progress. If a fellow doesn't have beard, he will be given his choice: He can either buy a shaving permit for a buck and a half or he will have to pay a $1 fine. Only thing about the fine is this: It's good for only one day; the next day the shaver who hasn't bought a permit, can be fined another buck, and so on.

So, it will be cheaper to buy a shaving permit. The Jaycees recognize the fact that some men probably can't grow a beard or their work will make it impractical to grow a beard. Thus the shaving permit. This permit, incidentally, must be carried in the holder's billfold and may be called for any time a Jaycee sees the smooth-skinned man in public.

Another feature will be ties — fancy, western type bow ties — that explain the July 4th celebration. The Jaycees will offer these for sale shortly.

The beard-growing contest will reach its peak on Wednesday, July 3. At that time, a beard-judging contest is scheduled on the Piggly-Wiggly parking lot when members of the ESA sorority will be the judges.

Winners will not be announced, however, until the following night at the July 4th talent contest program at Benny Douglas stadium. At that time, trophies will be awarded for the longest beard, the best-looking beard and the ugliest.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

The game isn't over until three strikes make the out but the farmers have one strike out on the road back to national solvency. This may also scuttle other proposals.

Quoting President Kennedy in his news conference, after the wheat referendum vote, "I don't agree with the farmers' choice and hope it will have no adverse effects, and feel the people have been misled by opponents," and there won't be any new issues of legislature brought before Congress and that the Secretary of Agriculture was doing a good job? I wonder?

See Freeman probably won't need all the aid as he had asked for previously, as we know he was ousted as Governor from Minnesota, not rejected by the farmers, but maybe he can still remain an appointed to some roving post.

In days past Congress didn't have to ask or consult the president with what to do. And some of the more heated Congressmen might assure themselves other votes could be forth coming in the near future and not miss read the action recently attained.

We can fight back by studying and teaching "Capitalism versus Communism", as Congress is ignoring investigating of the U N activities leading toward Communism.

Our answer can be Christian's fighting for lost faith he guided the people, as a fighting nation usually remains free with help through God and his people. May his be so in the "USA."

IT'S FOR THE BIRDS

By MELVIN R. EVANS

Refuge Manager, Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge

With the coming summer many of us will be heading for our favorite fishing pond, lake or stream. Some of us will return empty handed, and blame the weather ourselves, and possibly the game department (state or federal) in the area where we fished.

When we consider the pressure that is put on the various fishing areas, we must realize that there is terrific demands on the fish populations, as well as on the governmental (state and federal) agencies that deal with this industry.

Fish that are planted in these water areas will be planted in several ways. Among the methods used to stock fish are ten gallon cans packed to the high country on pack horses, fish planted from hatchery trucks, and fish planted from low flying airplanes.

An example of the last method mentioned above, is the planting of an estimated one million trout in Lake Powell in Arizona. These fish were planted in one day by one plane, flying only six bombing missions.

Lake Powell is the lake which was formed by the construction of the Glen Canyon Dam. This lake received three million fish in two days of flying. This total was composed of two million two inch Rainbow Trout and one million Bass. The Bass which were planted were received from hatcheries as far away as Austin Texas, and Tishomingo, Oklahoma.

WHY PLANT

There are four primary reasons for planting hatchery reared fish.

1. To provide fish populations for direct or indirect harvest in areas where natural reproduction is inadequate.
2. To start fish populations of desired species-composition in newly created water areas such as farm ponds or in waters from which the fish have been removed.
3. To provide fish populations for direct or indirect harvest in areas where natural reproduction is inadequate.
4. To provide fish populations for direct or indirect harvest in areas where natural reproduction is inadequate.

MUD-COVERED — SH 1760 practically all the way across Bailey county was covered with mud, and water poured across the road in several places as a result of the hard rains last week. This picture was made near West Camp gin.

FLATTENED LAND — Although cotton furrows were flattened by this last week's rains, many farmers believe the crop was not seriously damaged. Playa lakes, however, like the one in the background, did some damage, especially to alfalfa which "drowns out" in 72 hours.

(Continued from page 1) through water that percolates down from the top. It's not water that results from snow melting in Montana or Colorado or even in Kansas; it's local water, and rainfall isn't sufficient now to keep that percolating process working properly. Some wells are down as much as 40 feet. In 60 years, it will be gone, three years before the population hits the 60 billion mark!

Now the answer, Dr. Gohlke and his associates at Halfway believe, is in "recharge." Seems the trick is to catch the water which falls during such rains as last Tuesday night is gully-washer, and sent it straight down into the ground instead of letting it ground. The doctor says they have flat as it is, they can't take care of even a modest rain anyway.

Of course there are some problems in this matter of putting rainfall back down the wellholes. One of them is sediment and another is pumping equipment. But High Plains is doing a right neat job of trapping the rainfall and shooting it back down in the ground. The doctor says they have been able so far to save 38 percent of the natural water. Now if only they can trap it all, they will have the problem of recharging irrigation wells licked.

Around here, too, there's another problem, and this one the boys at High Plains are trying to solve through their greenhouse. It's the problem of temperatures. Cotton, to strut its stuff properly, must have warm weather, and every time a ditchful of cold water is pumped into the cotton rows, the temperature of the cotton roots are lowered five to 10 degrees. And that's bad for the cotton. For one thing it lowers its microclimate and that, of course, lowers its quality and pretty soon the mills, which are quite choosy anyway, won't want his low microclimate cotton.

These chilly cotton plant roots also upset the chemical functions of the cotton, and the roots send up too much of one chemical and not enough of another so the poor cotton gets confused and just doesn't turn out its best product.

The scientist who spoke to the Lions says they are attacking his problem — chilly cotton roots — in three ways over at High Plains. No. 1 is to warm the irrigation water, so in the future you may see steam rising from the cotton rows. Another way is through proper spacing of cotton. They have found that skip-row farming permits the plant to get considerably more sunshine and thus the plants don't get the shakes and get all fouled up in their chemistry. The Foundation is urging that the skip-row practice be followed.

The third way is through mulching — putting a blanket, so to speak, around the chilly cotton roots to hold the heat. Here the petroleum industry is working along with the cotton researchers by providing a petrochemical which does the job of warming the cold-natured cotton roots. So, maybe by the time the year 2026 rolls around they will have warmed up the cotton stalk sufficiently to make it produce warmed cotton which can be turned into pre-warmed clothes so those 50 billion people won't get cold.

What will they eat? Well, that he didn't explain, but at least if we work at this problem of solving their clothes they won't be cold. And that's as far apparently as they have got in this matter of research.

Meantime, isn't it about time to irrigate the cotton again? SHOP MULESHOE FIRST

While Bailey county is not a major wheat-producing area 499 farmers voted in last Tuesday's referendum. Five-hundred eighty-six wheat farms were listed in the county.

Per capita consumption of paper and paperboard in the United States in 1961 was 449 pounds. To produce it, more than 40 million cords of pulpwood were used.

Cotton--

On the other hand, cotton people disagree, many contending that fewer controls may lessen prices and eliminate the less efficient grower, the farmer who is not primarily a cotton producer.

The Lamb county publication said: "The assumption is that farming will become more specialized, especially as it applies to cotton, with emphasis production at the lowest cost per pound."

"If this situation results, the South Plains — which has probably the nation's best per-pound production record — might go even more heavily into cotton, while other sections would find other crops more profitable. Farming would enter more swiftly into specialization."

"But this theory has not met unanimous agreement with cotton growers, especially in the marginal areas, which exercise strong political strength."

"The proponents of the lower cost increased use program for cotton, however, do not generally favor an abrupt change in the market program, but a gradual withdrawal from high supports to enable producers to adjust their operations."

"The results of March 21 may have forecast the future for the cotton industry."

"South Plains farmers to whom wheat is not a principal cash crop, will have guideposts set by the wheat industry back into a new era of farm business. His interest in the result will be shared by most of the country, especially high-placed persons in Washington."

The hail in sections where it fell, did extensive damage, but fortunately not too large an area was hit.

FRANKLY SPEAKING

By REV. J. FRANK PEERY

ALPHA AND OMEGA

God has clearly stated that the Alpha (beginning) and the Omega (end) belong to Him and are in His hands for safe keeping. However, with the U. S. Supreme Court due to hand down a decision next month on "religion in the school", we could see the end of an era. Within my lifetime and my school days I've always known prayer and Bible reading in the public school. I've been called on countless times to lead in prayer or give the morning devotion on the public address system piped to every room in the school building. I realized a great joy and satisfaction during the days of teaching Bible, as an elective, to a class of 60 students in one of our fine high schools in the Panhandle.

There is a strong possibility party Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Platts in Lubbock.

Mr. and Mrs. Ottilie Nichols of Meridian, visited here with friends Monday.

Raymond Austin is spending some time at Wheeler with his father, Jack Austin, who has been ill for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Teaff, Jerry and Diane attended the air show at Reese Air Base, Lubbock Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. P. M. Lancaster is a patient in the Medical Arts Hospital since Friday of last week.

Mrs. Marshall Campbell, Pep, was a visitor at the Methodist church Sunday, she was a guest of Mrs. Elwanda Duke.

Mrs. John Richardson returned home Sunday after spending several weeks at Rush Springs, Okla., with her mother, Mrs. Tugman, who had been ill.

that the coming court decision will declare it unconstitutional for public schools to permit Bible reading and prayer in the classroom.

I am certain it would be difficult to measure the clergy or laity on such a decision. Sharp differences surely exist. However, on one thing we must all agree: Such a decision by the Supreme Court would usher in the Omega of the Alpha. The era of spiritual emphasis toward God would be on a definite downhill run. Can an American school really be an American school where God's name or His way of life is never recognized? What about the dedicated Christian teacher who really believes and feels that she must say something to class or assembly in the realm of God, Christ, or prayer? What about the prayer in the locker room or in the huddle before the opening kickoff and the squad of young men who really feel that this spiritual moment is a part of the total of the game of life on and off the field? What will happen to baccalaureate?

If such a ruling should come against prayer and Bible reading in the classroom, anti-religious forces would claim a great victory. Before long moral and spiritual decay will reach into every external structure of our society. Radio, TV, and the press would soon be effected. Scouting, the home, and civic clubs will succumb to this apathy. Look around you — it is already happening.

Frankly speaking — The Christian faith is basic to the American faith, and it speaks to the total man for the total of life. In the classroom or in the home, on the athletic field or in the mission field, what will it be Alpha or Omega?

POWER IN THE BLOOD

Instances similar to that one in the news recently are reminders of the great power that is in the blood. I refer to the child who needed a blood transfusion to insure recovery from surgery. The parents refused to let the doctors give it a transfusion. While the doctors were trying to get a court order the child was removed from the hospital. This is a very sad thing.

Yet to me it seems much more tragic that people who have heard the Word of God for years do not recognize the power in the blood of Jesus Christ. Even though the Bible says that without the shedding of blood there is no remission, there are many people that are trying to get peace of mind and cleansing from sin in many other ways. Every thing that a sinner needs is available at the cross where the Lord Jesus Christ shed His blood for us.

Ephesians 1:7 says that the sinner has redemption and forgiveness. When a person in America, Asia, or anywhere in the world judges himself by the standards of Almighty God he immediately realizes the need for forgiveness. He not only is reminded of the need; but, when through prayer and repentance he goes to the Lord, the Lord is willing and ready to freely forgive. This forgiveness is possible through the blood of the cross.

There are many that claim to have the forgiveness for their sins that need to cleanse their lives. This cleansing must be done by the individual as they are empowered by the Holy Spirit. Here again the Bible says that cleansing is possible because of the power of the blood of Jesus Christ — Hebrews 9:14. The Believer in Christ is to turn from evil habits, thoughts, etc. and live a pure life in Christ.

Human sense of smell can hardly detect the poignant perfume of the buried truffle. Most French truffle seekers hunt with pigs. In Italy dogs lead the search. Sardinians use goats.

JENNY SLIPPER POINTS—

A MODERN PARABLE

By BETTY BURLESMITH
 Once upon a time Mrs. America was busily making butter and spinning gold in her warm sunny kitchen. Suddenly Young Citizen burst into the room and declared he wanted to watch television.

"No," replied Mrs. A., "you have seen enough programs today. Besides, all of the educational programs are gone for the day."

"O. K. then I'll just ask you some questions. Then I'll be getting educated, won't I?" said Y. C.

His mother tumbled his curly hair affectionately and favored him with an indulgent smile.

"And just what would my little man like to know?" she asked.

"Well," he replied, "why are you making butter and spinning gold again today? You just did that yesterday, and we have some butter and some gold."

"I'll sell the butter for money to put with my gold to buy nice things for you," his mother answered.

"Who will buy the butter from you?" Young Citizen innocently inquired.

A frown appeared briefly on Mrs. A's face. "I had hoped to sell it to the nice new foreign family across the pond," she said.

gave that to us he never dreamed what could be done with it," replied Mrs. A.

So Y. C. ran out into the big yard to play and Mrs. A. went back to her spinning with a sigh of relief. Children could be a problem sometimes, but she was confident that everything would be fine with hers because she and their father had made wonderful plans for them.

They had two of "the most beautiful, and certainly the most intelligent children of any in the neighborhood. But she wondered where little Latina America was, so she decided to stop her spinning long enough to check on her. Just as she stepped out the back door, she heard choked cries from Y. C. What she saw horrified her. A large red bear was standing stoically on the end of the rope which Y. C. had been playing with and the struggles of the boy were pulling the nooses of the rope tighter and tighter around him. The smallest noose already had his air supply cut off and the boy fell into a limp heap at his mother's feet. Frantically, she loosened the noose and began giving him artificial respiration. After what seemed like an eternity he showed signs of recovering.

"What happened?" he gasped. "I was having a wonderful time, then this big friendly bear came up and began to play with me. He stamped his foot down on the end of the rope and that is the last thing I remember."

Mrs. A. looked around for the bear. He was standing at some distance licking his chops and at her horror she saw the blood-stained, tattered remains of Little Latina's dress under his huge paw.

Just a short time before, she remembered, they had told the children that the big red bear would not harm them if they did not bother him. Why oh why had they not realized he would eventually revert to type and be dangerous?

Screaming, she ran wildly up the road to Uncle's big white house, only to find to her consternation that he was ill and too weak to go in pursuit of the bear.

"What is wrong with you?" she wailed. "Don't you know you must come and help me destroy that murderous bear?"

"I have been sick for sometime," he replied weakly, "but you did not seem to know or care. I have been consuming too much of your butter, and it hasn't been the kind of diet I needed to stay strong."

"Where is your gun?" inquired the frantic mother. "I will go after the beast myself."

"I used it for a burying tool when I discarded some old documents and writings which my ancestors had handed down to me, and which I thought I no longer needed. There was one document which told me how to keep that bear from ever coming us, but I thought he was tamed, and I no longer needed the papers or the gun," recalled the saddened Uncle.

"Then please send someone else after that bear," Mrs. A. pleaded. "He has gobbled up little Latina and seriously crippled Young Citizen. All our hopes and dreams have been dashed to nothing. Those people across the pond need to be warned about him too."

"I doubt if they would listen to you now," Uncle said. "Besides, I have no more gold to send someone after the bear. I used it all to help you and your family and to buy your butter. Why I even helped that family across the pond, but they are busy with their own problems, and they want even more gold and I have none to induce someone to go after the beast. He is strong and fierce and it will take much time and many weapons and the help of God to overcome him."

Sobbing heart-brokenly the dejected mother went back to her wounded son. He had painfully dragged himself back into the house and was waiting for her return. Seeing the grief which she seemed unable to bear, he laid his hand on her arm and asked quietly, "Now will you read to me about God?"

"Oh yes, yes," she sobbed. "I guess that is all we can do now."

"I wish you had read to me before," Young Citizen said. "Little Latina wanted to hear the story too and we would both have been safe now if you had."

So sadly the broken mother

INSURE YOUR FARM Against HAIL

To our many Farmer Friends and Customers:

The crop hail season is here. Why not protect your investment in your crop with a good stock company policy. We have four different types of crop hail coverage. We are offering the "Step-ladder" policy this year which pays for a replant until June 4, after which it pays the amount of loss and becomes 100 percent in force June 11. The losses are adjusted on an individual plant basis, no escalator clause, no plant population in this policy.

see WOL INSURANCE AGENCY for Crop Hail Coverage
