The Sports Circuit

By Tom Beasley

IF CHUNKY Louie Madison is feeling perky (he's been slightly ill for the past few days) he'll probably start at quarterback tonight in the Wink game. If he breaks into the line-up, Bigony will be at full and Wood and Henninger at halfback positions. Otherwise, Henninger will be the signal chirper and Settles will plug right half. The Settles boy has been looking plenty nice.

SATURDAY'S SCHOOLBOY football slate:

- DISTRICT ONE Norman, Okla. at Amarillo. DISTRICT TWO Childers at Poly (Fort Worth). DISTRICT FIVE Sherman at Woodrow Wilson (Dallas). DISTRICT SEVEN Childers at Poly. DISTRICT EIGHT South Park (Beaumont) at Sunset. North Dallas at Brackenridge (San Antonio). Adamson at Beaumont. Woodrow Wilson at Sherman. DISTRICT TWELVE Lockhart at San Antonio Tech. DISTRICT FOURTEEN South Park at Sunset, Dallas. Adamson at Beaumont.

CLIFF TRAINER has a lot of natural ability but Steer coaches are worried because he has been so erratic in practice. He looks fine one day and terrible the next. On defense, Trainer will not be used in the secondary. Brandon has figured out a better combination.

THE SOUTHERN Methodist aerial circus will be well supplied with accurate tossers this year, having "Fighting Bob" Finley, veteran of last year's Rose Bowl eleven, Jack Morrison, son of Coach Ray Morrison of Vanderbilt, and Kenneth Goodson, one of the brightest prospects of the season, to do the heaving. The smallest man reporting for regular practice with the Southern Methodist varsity this year is Harrell Delafield, 150 lb. senior back from Dallas, and the largest gridster is Howard "Tusko" Moore, 235-pound sophomore tackle from Mineola.

WHEN we made that crack about hoping San Angelo would get "washed out" we didn't expect a flood.

BROWNWOOD SCHOOL officials should be "killed to death" or

HERALD LEAVES FOR GAME WITH WILDCATS

TILT MAY BE TOUGH FOR LOCALS

With a team that stacks up as a big question mark, and having been slowed down in daily workouts by bad weather, Coaches George Brown and Carmen Brandon left this morning for Wink without feeling very confident of their lightweight and somewhat unsteady black and gold aggregation.

The game tonight on the Wink field is to be the season's opener for both clubs, and the determined little band of Steers may find the tough old field section players every bit as polished as a good Class "A" array.

The affair will be a test for the locals, and will enable the coaches to check weak spots and repair the line-up, if possible, for the district skirmishes. Practically anything can be expected. They may try a fast ground attack or take to the air for the evening. At any rate they'll have a varied offensive ready, and will probably toss in a little of everything in order to sound out every department.

Reports from Wink this morning stated that the weather was good and that the game might be played on a fast field. A record crowd is anticipated. Cliff Trainer, 189-pounder, the heaviest man in the secondary, will not start the game, but may get into the contest for a little straight-away ball logging and power plays.

Passing has been poor but young Raymond Lee Williams will probably do the hurrying if the Herd takes to the air. The starting secondary will be very light, averaging only 151 pounds.

something for their failure to report the postponement of the Leon Comanche game scheduled for Thursday night. The game is ticketed for tomorrow night. We drove to Sweetwater before learning of the postponement.

SUPT. KLUCK of Cisco, Nat the Oil Belt football meeting in Breckenridge Wednesday, said to those present that, "From the bottom of my heart and with all the seriousness my tongue can utter, Sweetwater, San Angelo and Big Spring are as welcome to the Oil Belt district as a bunch of skunks at a lawn party." That was a swell send-off.

GORIION WEIR, Abilene sportsman and grid fan, preceded Dutch Meyer, head coach at TCU and last speaker on the program, who told the newcomers they need have no worry about "not being looked after properly." He finished by saying he was sorry Blondy Cross, San Angelo sports editor, was not present. Weir said he wanted to pay a tribute to Elondy for "conducting one of the greatest contests ever known in American football. "Cross," he said, "conducted a vigorous campaign to change the name of the district from the Oil Belt to something else. I'm sorry," said Weir, "Elondy is not present tonight because I wanted to tell him that the Oil Belt name had gone on for years before he conducted his contest and would go on for years to come in spite of his efforts."

IT WAS rumored at the meeting Wednesday night that Brownwood has lost Thurman Bostick, 205-pound letterman tackle who Coach Pat Cagle was turning into a blocking back. Rumor had it that Bostick had been found ineligible because of the eight-semester rule, and that he had already left Brownwood to enroll in Texas Tech.

Promoters Of Pro Tennis After Natl. Amateur Champ

F. PERRY CONSIDERS NEW OFFER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (AP)—Throughout the recent national tennis tournament at Forest Hills the gossip had it that Fred Perry of England was playing for stakes much bigger than the mere retaining of the national crown. They spoke of offers ranging from $50,000 to $100,000 which supposedly had been dangled before the Englishman's eyes with the proviso that he get out and win the American title and establish himself beyond any shadow of doubt the amateur champion of the tennis world.

Now that he has regained the national singles title Perry should be worth at least $100,000 to the promoters of professional tennis. They need Perry badly. If they hope to repeat the tennis junkets of past winters they must have him. The pro tennis tour of last winter proved anything but the gold mine the promoters figured on. And only a new face—the greatest amateur rank has to offer—can put the enterprise on the black side of the ledger.

Hoosiers Less Oil Belt Formidable In Big Ten Race

INDIANS STRONGER BUT SO ARE OPPONENTS, SAYS McMillin

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Sept. 18 (UP)—Indiana will have an improved football team this season, but, paradoxically, the Hoosiers are not likely to win as many games as in 1935 when they had their most successful campaign in 25 years, Coach A. N. (Bo) McMillin predicts.

All the "documentary" evidence that can be collected seems to bear out the contention of the Sweetwater delegation.

On Sunday following the meeting in Abilene, Jan. 25, 1936, the date of the game was announced as October 23, and so recorded in this paper. Every subsequent schedule printed has carried the date, October 23.

The Abilene Reporter-News, Coach Mayhew's own hometown paper, on Sept. 6, 1936, carried a resume of the 1936 season prospects, concluding with a complete district 2 schedule. In that schedule the Abilene Reporter-News lists the Sweetwater-Abilene game on October 23.

This was called to Mr. Mayhew's attention by the representative of The Sweetwater Reporter.

"Does your newspaper always get everything correct?" snapped Mayhew.

During the discussion, it was disclosed that so far as any written, official record of a meeting, Jan. 25, 1936, in Abilene, when coaches and officials worked out the Oil Belt schedule, there is none. No minutes of the meeting were kept, it was said.

It seems to be one man's word against another.

As the discussion moved along, Dewey Mayhew gave arguments why he wouldn't play in Sweetwater October 23.

Because it's Friday, was one of his reasons and he said Abilene was getting away from the Friday game date, although he admitted four of his conference games are scheduled on Friday.

Because, he said, there is a college game in Abilene Friday night and "hundreds of Abileneans won't come to Sweetwater on Friday when they would come on Saturday."

Then Sweetwater officials pointed out that it would be a losing proposition to play in Sweetwater on a Saturday afternoon, because many of the local fans could not attend on Saturday who could on Friday. The Abilene coach said that Eagle supporters there would more than make up the difference. But it was pointed out to him that it was doubtful if Abilene would send enough to offset the differ-

Philadelphia Athletics for a while but could not win a place on the A's roster. Mule Haas is another who passed on to Chicago after having served under Connie Mack's banner.

When Washington no longer wanted Luke Sewell he went to the White Sox. Few big-league catchers are as smart behind the plate. The veteran gave Chicago a high grade of backstopping and, while he is no Bill Dickey, Sewell more than makes up for it in the flawless manner in which he handles the pitchers.

Washington passed up Jack Hayes a few years back because he could not hit. Yet this same Hayes, under Jimmy Dykes, has been thumping the ball at a .300 clip most of the season. He has been dependable in the field, too. And then there is Tony Plet, another castoff. Tony has been doing all right for the Sox despite the fact that he had outlived his usefulness in the National league.

Dykes has one of the smartest coaches in the business in "Muddy" Ruel. The success of several of the White Sox pitchers is his success. There is little about the business of tossing 'em up that the little veteran does not know. He is largely responsible for "Sugar" Cain, a St. Louis Brown castaway, having acquired control after others had given him up as hopeless. He helped Dietrich immensely when he discovered that the main fault with the bespectacled hurler's form was that he was not gripping the ball properly.

The success of the White Sox

George Miller, Monongahela, Pa., 185-pound junior, is a returning letterman who has the task of filling Kelso's center position.

McMillin came to Indiana in 1934, and the Hoosiers that season won three games, lost three and tied two. Last year Indiana won four games, lost three and

Crocheted Animal Patterns

By RUTH ORR
Pattern No. 388
We took the kids to the zoo one day, though it would be more truthful to say that we made them the excuse for going, for we enjoyed it more than they did. That's how we got the idea for doing the fillet animal designs. We thought of them as bands for towels that you could make for Christmas, but you will find them just as attractive for a bureau scarf or for curtains, or for bib and tray cloth for a toddler.

The fillet squares, crocheted in mercerized crocheted cotton, measure 4 inches across, and are intended for the corners of bridge table covers or for curtains, or as covers for guest-room pincushions. Done in the soft knitting and crocheted cotton, they measure 7 inches and can be used on a bedspread or crib cover. The pattern gives diagrams and directions for 6 bands and 6 squares; also what crochet hooks and what material and how much you will need.

To obtain this pattern, send for No. 363 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Big Spring Herald, Needlework Dept., P. O. Box 200, Station D, New York, N. Y.

Marlene Goes Tyrolean; So Go Londoners

London Ladies Follow The Style Set By Actress And Daughter
By MILLIE HUDSON
LONDON (AP)—Women clothed in gay Tyrolean garb are brightening London streets since Marlene Dietrich and her daughter, Maria, adopted the colorful vogue in Salzburg.

The bright peasant colors, short-coated suits with quaint embroidered waistcoats and high-crowned, feather-trimmed hats, fit into the fashion scene here.

So suitable, in fact, are these picturesque little suits that many are not adaptations, but exact copies of the rational dress. One model for smart street wear is a replica of an old costume in the Tirkler Volkstum museum in Innsbruck.

Decorated With Hunters
It is a dark green waist-length coat worn with a white embroidered blouse, black woolen skirt and red patterned neckerchief to give accent. Silver filigree buttons ornament the jacket and a high-crowned black felt hat edged with green matches.

Among other "borrowed" styles is a padded cotton coat to wear over a dress for cool days. In blue and white, it is embroidered in wool with pictures of men hunting. These coats are worn generally by men and women in the Tyrol.

For the girl cyclist wishing freedom there are "lederhosen," the famous leather shorts used by Austrians and Bavarians. These are passed on by the natives from generation to generation.

To match these shorts are hand-woven gossamer wool blouses and yellow linen waistcoats embroidered with the story of a complete hunt.

Dark Green a Favorite
The fancy Tyrolean waistcoats are worn with tweed and woolen suits.

Dark green velvet is a favorite, or flannel embroidered with farm and flower motifs. Some have felt fronts with the back and sleeves of wool. Knitted pullovers are patterned with leather cherries. Heart-

Miss Mayme Lou Parr Wed to W. H. Beaty

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Mayme Lou Parr to W. H. Beaty on Sept. 2 was made recently by Miss Parr's relatives.

Miss Parr resigned several weeks ago from her position as Howard county home demonstration agent which she has held for the past two years. She came to this county from Waco.

The marriage was performed at the home of the bride by the Rev. C. A. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The couple will reside in Hobbs, N. M., where Mr. Beaty, laundry proprietor of Big Spring and Hobbs, will operate a laundry.

shaped buttons and pockets continue to be a popular decoration.

The peasant pinafore dresses in cotton prints with contrasting aprons and puffed sleeved blouses make youthful outing ensembles or dainty house dresses.

Fancy Austrian belts, buttons and colored woolen buttonholes, handmade by the peasants, will accent fall ensembles.

Son Of Former Pastor Marries At Stamford

Friends here have received word of the marriage of W. G. Bailey, Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Bailey, formerly of this city but now of Albuquerque, N. M., to Miss Christine Wells of Stamford.

The ceremony was performed in Stamford on Sept. 12 by Rev. E. A. Head, Methodist minister of that city.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. B. Wright and is very popular in Stamford where she completed her high school work.

The couple will make their home in Slaton where Mr. Bailey is employed by the Fowler funeral home.

Mrs. Verd Van Giesen returned Thursday night from El Paso where she has spent the past month with her mother who is ill.

Cool Days Call For Warm Dishes; Try These Recipes For Cooking Pork Chops And Fancy Waffles

By MARTHA LOGAN

Did you ever wonder why there are two sets of words to describe livestock and their products? When the farmer sells livestock to the meat packer, it's cattle, hogs, calves and sheep; but when you buy it from your butcher it is beef, pork, veal and mutton. Many years ago a certain Norman-French gentleman named William set out in ships with his armored soldiers on a perilous voyage to England. He landed and finally succeeded in conquering England. Thereafter, he was called William the Conqueror. You remember the story from your history books of the Norman-French invasion of England. William spoke French, but the rustic sheep-herding people he conquered spoke Anglo-Saxon. At court lords and ladies conversed lightly in French, but the stout but honest underlings continued to speak Anglo-Saxon. When their fatted animals were brought to the households of their feudal masters, they were served under the French names corresponding to beef, veal, pork and mutton. Names which then were the Norman-French for the self-same animals that the native underlings called kine, calves, tivo and sheep. And so, perhaps, if it had not been for William the Conqueror, I would now be giving you recipes for cooking swine chops instead of pork chops.

Luscious, juicy, brown, baked pork chops—doesn't the mere mention of them set your mouth to watering? And here's how I like to prepare my baked pork chops.
Stuffed Baked Pork Chops
1-4 cups fine dry bread crumbs, 4 tablespoons butter, 1-2 cup small onions, minced, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 cup mushrooms, 1 egg, 1-4 cup cream, 1-2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup catsup, 1-2 cup water.
Cut pocket in each chop. Make a dressing of bread crumbs and seasoning. Place dressing in the pocket of the chops. Brown, place in roasting pan, cover with some water and catsup. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 45 minutes, basting frequently.

Or, sometimes, when I'm very lazy and don't want to cook a big dinner, I bake pork chops in a casserole with noodles and cream of mushroom soup. Served with a combination vegetable salad, rolls, a beverage, and a simple dessert, this makes quite a complete dinner and one I'm sure you'd enjoy.

Pork Chops en Casserole
2 cups uncooked noodles, 1-2 cup finely minced onion, 4-6 pork chops, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 medium can Cream of Mushroom soup.

Cook noodles in boiling, salted water 8 minutes. Drain. Fry chops until nearly done and salt slightly. Minced onion, combine with noodles. Put chops in casserole, cover with noodles mixture. Pour over 1 cup of mushroom soup. Bake at 350 degrees F. 30 to 40 minutes.

For variety, you might like to occasionally use cooked rice and a can of condensed tomato soup instead of the noodles and the mushroom soup.

Waffles

Griddle cakes and waffles are such favorites on American breakfast and supper tables that new recipes for these good things receive a warm welcome from home-makers.

In making these waffles and griddle cakes, housewives will be extending a welcome to a new whole wheat flake, which plays an important part in giving these hot cakes a new flavor texture and goodness. Huskies are whole wheat flakes which contain all the valuable food essentials of whole wheat—iron, phosphorus, carbohydrates, proteins and four important vitamins. So wives and mothers will be gratified to know that, in serving these hot cakes, they are providing the family with good, sound nourishment, as well as with delicious food.

Blueberry Griddle Cakes
1-4 cups sifted flour, 3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons sugar, 2 eggs, well beaten, 1-4 cups milk, 1 cup Huskies, 1 tablespoon melted butter or other shortening, 1 cup fresh blueberries.
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift again. Combine eggs and milk; add to flour gradually, beating only until smooth. Add Huskies and shortening. Fold in berries. Bake on hot greased griddle. Serve with blueberry hard sauce. Makes about 2 dozen griddle cakes.

Blueberry Hard Sauce
1-3 cup butter, 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar, 1-4 teaspoon grated lemon rind, Dash of salt, dash of clove, 1-2 cup fresh blueberries.
Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and continue creaming until light and fluffy. Add lemon rind, salt and clove, and beat well. Fold in blueberries. Chill before serving. Makes about 1-4 cups sauce.

Buttermilk Huskies Waffles
1 cup sifted flour, 3-4 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon salt,

East Ward P-T A. Hears Report On Summer Roundup

Mrs. A. J. Cain, representative of the East Ward P-T. A. on the Summer Round-Up committee, gave a report of the round-up at the group's first meeting of the year which was held at the school building Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. James T. Brooks presided at the meeting. Mrs. George B. Long gave the devotional and led the group in prayer. Mrs. Guy Tamsett read the minutes from the last meeting and the treasurer's report was made by Mrs. W. E. Rayburn. There being no definite program arranged at the time was profitable spent in a round table discussion of needs of the school. Mrs. J. J. Troop stressed the need of a phonograph. The donation of such would be greatly appreciated by the teachers.

Parents and teachers who registered were Mrs. Jim Black, Mrs. H. A. Merrick, Mrs. Tom Cantrell, Mrs. John Temple, Mrs. George W. Neil, Mrs. George B. Long, Mrs. R. L. Pinkerton, Mrs. J. J. Troop, Mrs. A. J. Cain, Mrs. W. E. Rayburn, Mrs. R. W. McNew, Mrs. Cora Coker, Mrs. James T. Brooks, Mrs.

CHEAP Electricity

WORKS NIGHT and DAY in YOUR HOME!

Not an hour passes in the night or day but that CHEAP ELECTRICITY is making your home more comfortable, keeping it well lighted and helping with the multitude of daily household chores and kitchen tasks. And yet the cost for electricity is only a few cents a day—one of the smallest items of household expense.

With fall and winter approaching, look to the lighting in your home. You'll be surprised how much a good reading light improves the appearance of a room, and how little it costs to have plenty of light for reading or studying.

THE AMBITION OF LEADERS

After the fashion followed by a former Texas statesman, Herr Adolf Hitler gives himself a very good recommendation. He is no chicken-hearted, white-livered varlet to faint at the sight of blood...

There is every probability that Herr Hitler's prescience will be genuine. The fuhrer will see to it that if necessary, and if someone else among the disturbed nations which are being led by fanatics of varying degree does not start things, he will do so.

One cannot help stand amazed at the situation in Europe, nor cease to wonder that people have such short memories. It would appear that the recollection of the carnage of twenty years ago would be strong enough to prevent a repetition but it seems they are willing to go through another and more terrible conflict.

Italy with her duce dictator, Russia with her commissars, Germany imbued with the idea of future greatness, France with a revolution hanging in the balance and likely to be precipitated at any minute—all are feverishly girding themselves against a struggle that each is helping to bring near.

War, if necessary to uphold principles, may be condoned. We of the South have experienced that, though we would not fight today for those same principles. But in none of the threat of war in Europe is there a principle involved—from beginning to end it is a matter of overweening personal ambition, backed by people who seem content to be led by the loudest talker regardless of what he says or where he is leading.

★ Man About Manhattan ★

By George Tucker

The girl with the rattlesnakes tattooed on her torso ground her unfinished cigarette into the pavement. She took a hitch at her skirts and spat.

"Well, Sailor..." Sailor Kelly of the Seven Seas (he probably rowed a skiff across East river once) adopted a patronizing tone.

"You," she said irritably, "can't help anything..." "Now, Lulu," Sailor Kelly suggested, "don't be unreasonable. It rains in Chicago just as it does in New York. We'll do all right..."

Lulu, let me make clear, was really a lulu. As stooge to Sailor Kelly ("You gotta loiter to perdeck yer goll"), she cavorted to the wall of an oriental reed, giving what was supposed to be a snake dance, the idea being simply that the more one wiggles the healthier one is bound to become.

The idea behind their little squabble was that Lulu disliked rain. She hadn't wanted to come to New York anyway. She liked Chicago. Besides, when it rained, the suckers were too occupied to succumb to the siren voice of a lady snake dancer, regardless of the thrilling serpentine embellishment on her body.

Sailor Kelly, "world's strongest male" (he travels under dozens of modest little claims like this) is one of an army of phonies who hawks his act on the street corners and vacant lots of the town.

The idea is this: You amble up to the Sailor's stand and become enchanted by the terpsichorean wizardry of the delectable Lulu. Then, just as you are beginning to believe those tattooed snakes wrapped around her torso are coming alive, Sailor Kelly stops piping in his reed and makes a little sales talk about the wonders of health-giving exercises, aided and abetted by a marvelous new patent medicine discovery.

On sunshiny afternoons the Sailor takes in quite a haul. But on rainy afternoon it's lean pickings. And when I encountered them it was pouring. Lulu reached into a tattered valise and withdrew a red raincape. She adjusted it to her swan-like neck.

Now, Baby, it'll stop soon...

But Lulu didn't hear him. She paused on the curb to hitch up her skirts once again. The last I saw of her, she was disappearing in the rain on Columbus Circle.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Dear Editor: For four long years now we have been pouring a daily column upon a defenseless public—365 days in the year, including Sundays, Christmas, Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July.

Occasionally one or the other of us has taken a trip to Maine or the middle west or to Mrs. Roosevelt's pet homestead project in West Virginia.

Now, however, we are going to do that very thing. Despite drought, floods and Henry Hopkins, the outpourings of Alf and F. D. R., and the fact that the indefatigable Mrs. Roosevelt still carries on "Her Day," we are going to quit.

We who are about to quit salute you, and hereby propose to write some deathbed confessions.

Magic Formula: We have had a lot of letters from people who want us to unfold the mystery of how we work, of how we dig up news, of how we manage to get under the table during cabinet meetings.

Well, Houdini never revealed the secrets of his magic nor the supreme court the legerdemain by which it declares laws unconstitutional. So we have ample precedent in continuing what little illusion we have created with a bias public.

We have to gather news while it's hot, and write it while it's hot. Sometimes it takes days, or even weeks to train down a story. Sometimes the story unfolds in an hour or in a minute.

Mistakes: We confess that sometimes also we make mistakes. We made one very recently when we reported, in our honest, administration, that Governor Landon was refraining from kissing babies.

But that wasn't the worst of it. He also posed for the photographers while kissing that baby, and some papers carried the picture and our column side by side.

Sometimes we have made more serious mistakes—though we believe not often. One mistake which we have deeply regretted did a great injustice to a fine southern gentleman, Hugh MacRae of Wilmington, N. C.

Last April we published a story, carefully checked with authoritative and supposedly reliable government officials, regarding a substantial homestead interest on the government 4,000 acres of his land for $6 an acre, after paying only $1 an acre for it.

Not only was this entirely erroneous, but MacRae had paid $12 for the land 28 years before, and had been paying taxes and interest on it since, so that actually he lost a large amount of money.

Thus we were guilty of making serious and injurious misstatements about a patriotic gentleman who has been one of the leaders in land settlement in the south. While we printed the correct facts after we were advised of the mistake, we take this occasion to state publicly our regret over the injustice we did to MacRae.

Readers sometimes have asked us if we have ever pulled our punches in regard to any individual in public office. We plead guilty in one instance—our stories about the late George Dern, secretary of war.

It came about through Eddie Dowling, a little Irishman who had a heart of gold and thinks everyone else should have one. Eddie sat beside Dern at a dinner in New York one night, and told us that the secretary of war was agitated because we had taken him for some pretty fast whirler on the Merry-Go-Round.

Mrs. Dern had told the secretary she ought to resign rather than permit such things to be said about him. Well, Dern, we discovered, was a sick man even then. He had been a good governor of Utah, but a civilian running the generals has a tougher time than a Maine fisherman catching lobsters on the deserts of Utah. So for two years prior to his death, we pulled our punches in George Dern.

Occasionally one of our many newspaper bosses gets the idea that we are too hard on one political party or the other. We have had squawks from both sides, and some cancellations of the column.

Those of our readers who think we are pro-Roosevelt might be amazed to know what Mr. Roosevelt thinks of us. This may be bragging a bit, but we think we are about the only newspapermen to whom he has devoted a good part of a cabinet session—in cussing us out.

Twice during private meetings with the American Newspaper Editors' association he has bawled out some of our colleagues. But this doesn't put them in a class with us. You have to be bawled out in cabinet meeting to be tops.

However, we don't hold this against Mr. Roosevelt. Probably if we were in the White House we would do a lot worse. To have a bunch of newspaper columnists writing up everything you do every day, both public and private, and interpreting your innermost thoughts, must be tough.

Some day, before elections—when we resume writing this column—we are going to try to summarize the character and achievements of Mr. Roosevelt. And we are going to try to do the same for Mr. Landon.

Undoubtedly this will send a lot of dead cats in our direction from both sides, but as long as they keep coming from both sides, we're probably safe.

State's Oil Tax Revenue In July Near Record High. AUSTIN, Sept. 18—July oil production taxes collected by the state amounted to $763,766, and have been exceeded by only one other month in history. Comptroller George H. Sheppard announced. Last May's revenues from oil production reached the peak of $774,486, while the June income was $743,999. The state's oil tax revenue through July this year has amounted to $7,781,353, while an additional $93,414 has been collected in pipeline taxes for support of the state conservation administration. August oil production for the nation as a whole, Sheppard said, was the greatest in history, and he anticipated that Texas' share, when the tax collections for the month have been completed, will top previous records.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

Chapter 24
FAIRLY SAFE

"I'll go as soon as I've finished this one," said Carol. "If I quit now I won't be able to remember to-morrow what I meant to say to-day." She was aware for the first time of Laura's friendliness, so she said:

"Thanks, anyhow. Couldn't we have lunch together tomorrow?"

"Laura nodded. 'Suits me fine. Well—good-night.' She went back to the sheet before her.

The door opened and Blake came in and went to a filing cabinet. He saw her and raised an eyebrow.

"What are you doing here?"

"Trying not to de-rail a train of thought. I'm leaving now."

"You'd better." He grinned suddenly. "I don't want the NRA on my neck."

"What about yourself?"

"Oh, he drawled, 'I'm an Executive. I don't count."

"I see," she slipped the sheets into a drawer and got up stiffly, realizing for the first time how tired she was.

He said quickly: "Wait a minute and I'll drive you home."

She hesitated, and wondered if he thought that was why she had figured. He read the uncertainty and smiled.

"Oh, I know you're innocent. Come on."

In his car she relaxed, and returned to her trick of absorbing sights and sounds. The streets were a cacophony of protesting brakes and roaring motors and the unintelligible shouts of newsboys.

On the sidewalks people with closed faces pushed and hurried like chips in a moving stream, and in the occasional eddies were lovers united, or shop girls exchanging confidences: "He said . . . and so I said . . ."

The sense of her own loneliness pressed down on her again, filling her with sudden despair. I wonder if I'll ever have a place here? she thought, and shut her ears to the answering: "The odds are all against it."

Blake glanced at her once, and noticed the shadows of fatigue beneath her eyes. Her eyes and the shadows were almost the same color. He said impulsively:

"Look here, what are you going to do when you get home?"

"Get a bath, eat dinner, read a magazine, go to bed."

"Sounds like my schedule. Why don't you stop in one of those regenerated movie temples and cool off, then have dinner together before I take you home?"

The suggestion was like a hand in the dark.

"It sounds pretty swell to me. Only don't spoil me, the sooner I get used to my own company the better off I'll be."

"Well, you can start tomorrow. I'm sort of fed up with my own."

She wondered again about Irma Thornton, and decided that Irma was either superbly confident or completely indifferent. Blake wasn't the philandering type; perhaps Irma had placed her chips on that. Well, it was Irma's business, not hers. She wasn't the philandering type either.

He drove slowly up Peachtree. "Here's Garbo, and Lionel Barrymore."

"Let's see Garbo."

"They parked the car and plunged into the stream. Coolness breathed on them at the theater entrance and they went in and sat beneath hurrying clouds in an improbable blue and gilt sky.

Darkness had dropped on the city when they came out, and the city fought the darkness with a barrage of colored lights. Red lights that winked seductively, white lights that shone steadily, green lights that chased each other like squirrels in a cage. The air was milk-warm, and the throngs had thinned; had slowed their pace and lowered their voices to match the sense of time suspended that occurs between day and night.

Blake said lazily: "Well, where do we eat?"

"Wherever you say. Let's go where it's quiet."

They walked slowly to the Merrimac, and found the grill fairly cool and almost deserted. Carol ordered sliced chicken, a frozen salad and iced coffee.

He grinned quizzically. "Of course it's none of my business and I know I shouldn't speak of it, but—that's pretty slim fare for a working girl. Whether you want it or not you ought to stow away an occasional steak with a lot of potatoes and vegetables. How about it?"

"All right. You do the ordering then. I'm just not very hungry."

The steak, when it came, was delicious, and she found that Blake was right; her appetite had been lurking around a corner awaiting its chance. He looked gratified.

"What did I tell you? Let this be a lesson to you."

"All right," she felt surprisingly meek. "I won't do it again."

Afterwards they drove out Peachtree in silence, and he left her at the Sherwood entrance. She glanced at the towering facade.

"Cosy little nest, what?"

"Very. But mine's just about as cosy right now. Well—goodnight."

"Goodnight. And thanks for a grand evening," she added ruefully. "I'm always thanking you for something. When will I ever have a chance to do something in return?"

He said roughly: "Oh, rot! You should have. And turned quickly away."

Carol laid several typewritten sheets on her employer's desk, and tried to make her voice casual.

"Here are the first four. I thought it would be better for you to make a judgment before I'd done all of 'em wrong. Shall I wait, or will you read them and then talk them over?"

"I'll read them all first. I'll call you in a few minutes."

He picked up the first advertisement with considerable curiosity.

Blake read deliberately. When he had finished he put the pages aside, and reflected that they held the answer to his impulsive decision regarding Carol.

Blanks read deliberately. When he had finished he put the pages aside, and reflected that they held the answer to his impulsive decision regarding Carol.

"Tell Miss Torrance I'd like to see her."

Carol came in, and he saw the dread in her eyes. He nodded reassurance.

"They're all right. Sit down and let's talk about them." He went through the ads carefully, suggesting changes and giving his reasons for each change.

"You can breathe now, you know. I think the job's fairly safe."

His approbation almost unnerved her. She said: "Once more—thanks!" and fled to her desk.

Cornelia Farrar looked now like a fashion illustration, but Carol's guess had been correct. They were able, at dinner on Friday, to pick up the threads snapped six years ago.

Before the consommé was finished they had left the preliminaries to friendship behind them.

Cornelia said lazily: "Of course I can guess why you're here, and sympathize with you. It's the same reason why I'm working like a roadhand while there's still money in the family bank account."

Carol sighed. "Don't tell me you're drifting too."

"Oh, yes! I tried everything I know. Being a debutante, and engaging to get my engagement book a little fuller than anybody else's. After I'd filled the thing for six months I threw it in the fire and broke all the engagements. I went serious and social-minded for the next six months and that wasn't much better."

"I'm surprised you haven't married," Carol said frankly. "You've got everything it takes."

Cornelia's lip curled. "It doesn't take much. The catch in that is that most of the eligible men are so rotten spoiled no sensible girl would have them. If there's any worse training for a husband than being an eligible man in a city for a few years I can't think what it is."

"She shrugged the topic away. 'In spite of which, you'll have to have some recreation. Suppose I have a dinner next Friday.'

"Oh, heavens, no! I didn't look you up to be launched: I just wanted to see you."

"I know you didn't, you ass," Cornelia's mind leaped on. "What about this job of yours? Do you like it?"

"I'm crazy about it—or think I will be when I get the bang of it. Blake Thornton's a grand guy to work for."

"Blake's a grand guy for anything," Cornelia said shortly. "I think I'll ask him to the party," Cornelia decided.

Hoot Gibson Star Of Western Picture Booked At Queen

Hoot Gibson rides to victory and brings peace to the dry grass country where warring ranchers have battled for years, in his latest western thriller, "Fand of the West," which is booked for Friday and Saturday at the Queen theater.

And, as a reward for his clever tricks in exposing the double-crossing foreman of the Rocking U ranch, the cowboy star wins the hand of the girl (played by Joan Barclay), which gives him the title to the Rocking U.

Hoot finds himself caught in a feud between two rival ranch groups, and when one of the outfit to which he is hired is killed, finds himself suspected of murder. He becomes the object of search by both factions, and how he extricates himself from this predicament provides the exciting climax to the story. Gibson has plenty of

IN TEXAS FILM

Fred MacMurray, one of the stars in "The Texas Rangers," epic story of the great organization that assisted in establishing law and order in this state which plays at the Ritz theater Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday.

Another action drama with the old West as the setting is "Heroes of the Range," the featured attraction at the Lyric Friday and Saturday, with Ken Maynard as the star. This popular cowboy actor goes through a fast melodrama, displaying his skill as a rider and fighter, and his courage in battle with his foes.

June Gale plays opposite Ken, and helps to provide the romantic element in the picture. Ken, of course, has his wonder horse, Tarzan, and the animal plays an important part in the more thrilling sequences of the story.

Star-Studded Cast Seen In Drama Of War

Lionel Barrymore, Fredric March, Warner Baxter Are Co-Stared

Featuring one of the most impressive casts of the year is "The Road To Glory," offered at the Ritz theater Friday and Saturday and hailed as one of the strongest love dramas of the current movie season.

Frederic March, Warner Baxter and Lionel Barrymore are starred, with the supporting cast headed by June Lang and Gregory Ratoff. With outstanding acting by these ace performers, the film tells a gripping story of love in all its phases, with the sweeping panorama of war as the background.

Baxter is seen as the war-weary commander of a valorous regiment. Monique, a lovely French nurse, provides him with his only interest in life.

Frederic March, Baxter's chief aid, unwittingly falls in love with Monique too, unaware that Baxter cares deeply for the girl.

The triangle creates a crisis between the two men, which is increased when Baxter, to his astonishment, discovers that his private life, Lionel Barrymore, is a private life in the regiment.

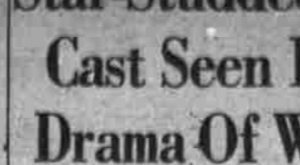

Glowing with pride over the old soldier's heroism, Baxter's sense of duty compels him to order Barrymore to the rear, for the captain fully realizes that if one man should die in his duty, the entire company might be endangered.

Barrymore is not so easily discouraged, however, and his burning desire to serve his flag under his son, prompts him to bribe Gregory Ratoff to "lose" the order when the regiment moves towards the front.

Barrymore is in the ranks. What glory does he feel when he is promoted to the rank of major, and love is revealed as the film moves swiftly, strongly, on to its crowning climax.

A stranger leaped upon a workman in Malines, Belgium, bit of the tip of the man's nose, and fled.

Lionel Barrymore and Gregory Ratoff are others in the cast of the picture, which treats of love and glory on the war front.

AT THE LYRIC

Ken Maynard, popular cowboy actor who is starred in the Lyric theater's Friday-Saturday feature, "Heroes of the Range."

There are again three episodes in the new issue of the March of Time, an added attraction at the Ritz theater for Friday and Saturday. The subjects are: the development of automobile trailers in which more than a half-million Americans now live; the revolt of the Southern sharecroppers; and Albania, tiniest of the Balkan kingdoms, where Mussolini now holds the purse strings.

March of Time depicts the sensational growth of the trailer manufacturing industry, pointing out that 300 companies are now manufacturing the vehicles. Some of the thousands of trailer tourists are shown in resorts and national parks and the new model trailers, equipped with all the comforts of home, are presented.

In presenting the underlying causes of the sharecropper discontent, the film points out, in the sharecropper episode, that the crying need for basic change in the farm system is plain to planter and sharecropper alike; lest the South's single crop system inevitably collapse. March of Time's camera crew spent more than a month in Arkansas, making the scenes. Sharecroppers and planters alike assisted in the work.

The Albanian episode demonstrates how Mussolini, by putting cash into the little country, has all but taken control of the Balkan kingdom.

Story Of The Texas Rangers To Show Here

King Vidor Production To Open At Ritz Saturday Midnight

Of particular interest to Texans who, as they celebrate the state's Centennial year, are honoring the Rangers for the part they played in the commonwealth's making, is the picture, "The Texas Rangers," which opens a run at the Ritz theater with a midnight matinee showing Saturday night. It will appear also on Sunday and Monday.

That organization of men whose work was greatly responsible for making a unified, law-abiding state out of the sprawling region of early Texas is immortalized in the film play written and directed by King Vidor.

Filled with action and the color of the post-reconstruction period in the Panhandle, "The Texas Rangers" features a cast headed by Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Edward Ellis and Bessie Bartlett. It was filmed in outdoor locations in Texas and New Mexico, with the governors of both states giving full cooperation.

"The Texas Rangers" dramatizes the work of the early band of semi-military state police in putting down hostile Indians, riding the country of bad men and cattle thieves, and "making Texas a reasonably safe place in which to live" in accordance with their oath. Two tribes of Indians were enlisted to stage the historic battle which brought the final subduing of fierce southwestern redskins.

Both MacMurray and the wisecracking Oakie are members of the Rangers in the picture. Miss Parker, as the daughter of the commander of their station, is center of the romantic story which is featured against the epic background.

Trees Tested For Arid Land

Seven Species Recommended For Planting In Plains Areas

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. (UP)—Seven species of broadleaf trees are recommended by the department of agriculture for windbreak planting in the northern Great Plains, where scanty moisture and extremes in temperature make tree life difficult.

The seven species were selected from 15 tested for 20 years. They are Chinese elm, green ash, chokeberry, boxelder, Siberian pea-tree, buffaloberry and American plum. Tests were begun in 1914 at Mandan, N. D., and plantings were completed in 1917. A few years after planting, the willows, poplars and birches began to die and most of them were gone by 1923. Although the Norway poplar survived better than other poplars, it cannot be recommended where moisture is scanty.

Fallings of early settlers to grow trees in the northern Great Plains prompted the department to investigate shelterbelt planting in 1914. Although the department points out that the seven recommended trees may not be the only broadleaf species for windbreaks, they are the only ones with a good record out of the 15 that seemed most promising when they were planted.

An ideal windbreak for the northern Great Plains might include, the department suggested, beginning on the windward side, a row each of choke-cherry, Siberian pea-tree, green ash, box elder, two rows of Chinese elm, one of boxelder, two of green ash, and one each of buffaloberry and American plum. A clean, cultivated strip at least 12 feet wide on each side should be included. Other trees might be used, providing the low growing trees are kept to the outside.

CEREAL PKG. TOPS TO ADMIT CHILDREN TO 'TEXAS RANGERS'

The tops from two packages of Kellogg's corn flakes will admit all children 12 years of age and under to see "The Texas Rangers" at any time during the picture's engagement here. It was announced Friday by J. Y. Robb, manager of the local R&R theatre. "The Texas Rangers" is booked at the Ritz Sunday and Monday, with a mid-night matinee showing Saturday night.

The free-admission deal was made possible through the cooperation of Paramount Pictures, the Ritz theatre, and the Kellogg company, cereal manufacturers. Similar arrangements are being made with other theatres throughout the state.

The arrangement results from the fact that the picture, directed by King Vidor, a native Texan, has been adopted as the official motion picture of the "Junior Texas Ranger Force," an organization sponsored by the Kellogg company in connection with their radio program for children, "Riding With the association will have loaned in excess of $40,000 in little more than a year's operation.

TEXANS ARE WARNED AGAINST FAKE PLANS TO RAISE DEMO FUNDS

Warning against unauthorized efforts to raise funds for the democratic national campaign has been issued to Texans by Roy Miller, director of organization and finance for the party in this state. Miller pointed out that the demo national campaign committee for Texas is the only organization officially authorized to solicit and accept contributions.

The Young Democratic clubs of Texas is engaged in the sale of "lucky" coins at 50 cents each, Miller said, and this has the approval of the democratic national committee. Aside from this sale, the director announced, "no selling scheme of any kind represented to raise funds for the democratic national campaign has the approval of the committee for Texas, which is the party's official agency in this state."

Miller said that democrats who desire to be of service to the party are urged to make their contributions to their local or county committee, or the executive committee, or the congressional district in which they reside, or to the committee headquarters at Austin. All contributions in whatever amount or wherever made will be credited to the quota of the county in which the contributor resides.

From Cambridge, Mr. Roosevelt will proceed to the summer white house at Hyde Park, N. Y., where he will attend government affairs until Sept. 29. Then he goes to Syracuse, N. Y., to address the state democratic convention.

The latter speech, it was believed, will mark the opening of his personal re-election drive that will be carried forward through October and into November.

Although Mr. Roosevelt has traveled and spoken intensively since June 1, covering more than 10,000 miles in about 30 states, his tours have been described as purely "non-political."

When the president leaves Syracuse the night of the 29th he will come to Washington to remain for a day before setting out on an invasion of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York City.

October 1 will find him in Elkins, W. Va., where he will attend the annual mountain festival, probably speaking extemporaneously. That night he will enter Pittsburgh to deliver a major speech on a subject yet to be announced.

The Pittsburgh speech is expected to be a political one with its appeal directed primarily to labor. His Pennsylvania visit is being looked upon as a further step in the democratic effort to win that politically important state.
