Monday night approximately one hundred and twenty-five farmers and their wives from Comanche and Eastland County met in the Gorman High Scchool Gym to discuss the future of peanuts.

Joe Bob Browning, secretary of the Eastland County Farm Bureau acting as chairman, stated that the meeting was called for the purpose of finding out if the farmers were satisfied with the present set up on quota and oil stock acreage. Plans are being made to meet with farmers from South Texas so that a resolution may be written to be presented at the State Farm Bureau Meeting from the State meeting it will go to the National Farm Bureau and then be presented to the proper presentatives at Washington.

Miss Ozella Pulley is wearing pretty little emblem now days. The emblem is a gold pin presented to her by the Texas Electric Company acknowledging their appreciation for her services rendered during the ten years employment with them.

A ruby marks the number of years. The jewel is the light of an engraved torch, significant of the Company's business of furnishing light and of the employee in being a torch bearer.

Miss Pulley was for several years Assistant Secretary and then Secretary of the City of Gorman before she accepted her present position.

Oh, our hearts with joy are filling
As our high school colors wave,
And our spirits thrive with rapture
As we see our boys so brave.
Fight for victory;
Fight for honor,
Show your spirits as so true,
And we will win this battle
For our dear old red and blue.

Chicago: The Heritage of Al Capone

If the Senate Crime Committee had gone no further than Chicago in its quest, it could have written a complete report-in-miniature on the picture of nationwide criminal and political corruption. For practically every example of rottenness found anywhere in the tian Service of the Methodist Secretary, Mrs. Tom Small, Sec- nett and Circle 3, Mrs. G. D. Ri- Scrgeant today! Located at 311 United States was duplicated in the capital of the Capone mob.

Chicago remains the jungle of criminals who walk in the foot-steps of Al Capone. Virgil Peterson, operating director of the Chi-cago crime commission and former FBI agent, traced the history of the Chicago mob from the days of Big Jim Colosimo, who "had risen to power and influence through the operation of a string of brothels." On May 11, 1920, Big Jim was bumped off. Peterson noted

A brutal example was the murder in September, 1950-still unsolved-of former Police Lieutenant Drury before he could appear as a witness before our committee.

> A wave of suspensions and resignations by higher-ups in the police department followed our investigation of great wealth accumulated by a number of Chicago police captains.

The most highly publicized case was that of Capt. Daniel A. Gilbert, referred to by Chicago newspapers as "the richest cop in the world." Gilbert was serving as chief investigator for the state attorney's office of Cook county, and also was the Democratic candidate for sheriff. Captain Gilbert, a well dressed, breezy figure, told us he estimated his net worth was approximately $360,000, and that dividends on stocks and bonds he currently held were bringing him in about $42,000 a year.

I remarked to him, "People don't understand how you get hold of all that money." Whereupon, the captain began explaining to us all the details of his badge-to-riches story. There was a little "honest gambling" on the side, but mostly it was done through investments in stocks and bonds.

His income tax returns also showed annual winnings on wagers. "I bet on the football games and I bet on prize fights," Captain Gilbert said, "but mostly it would all be elections." I asked him:

Q. "You just like to bet?" A. "I have been a gambler at

It was about two weeks after this that the voters of Cook county registered their disapproval of Captain Gilbert by defeating him at the ing the parole from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth of three Capone syndicate gangsters, Paul Ricca, Louis Campagna, and Charles (Cherry Nose) Gioe, alias

The three, along with a pack of other Chicago, New York and West coast mobsters, were sent to the penitentiary in 1943 to serve 10-year sentence on conviction of conspiracy to extort huge sums from the movie industry by threatening to call a strike of a gangster-controlled union. After Ricca, Campagna and Gioe had served only about onethird of their sentences, efforts to secure their paroles were success-eral government on charges of income tax evasion. The claims had to be settled before the gangsters could be paroled. At this point, the mob stepped in, and there ensued events as strange as a dime novel.

The attorney called in to settle the tax case was Eugene Bernstein. Many years ago, Bernstein had been with the Internal Revenue Bureau. When he obtained his law license and left the bureau, he specialized in tax cases. He accumulated a list of clients that read like the blue book of the Capone syndicate.

With information obtained with Tony Accardo's help, he was able to effect a settlement with the government. Campagna's case was settled for $90,371.49; Ricca's, for $36,146.50, and accumulated interest brought the total settlement for the two cases to approximately $190,000. This was approximately $322,000 less than the original deficiency claims. Anyway, the next question was how to raise the money. Bernstein went back to the penitentiary to talk with his clients about it. 'They both took the position they didn't owe the money and wouldn't Bernstein returned to Chicago, Al most immediately, he said, office and leaving packages of bills, usually wrapped in paper, in amounts varying between $10,000 and $20,000. When the first batch of bills came in, Bernstein told us (in what seemed to be a masterpiece of understatement) he was "taken aback." The procession of strange men bearing currency continued until the needed total of $190,000 had been brought in.

Q. "Did you ask their names?"

A. "I wouldn't think of asking their names, because it made no difference to me . . ."

went to Leavenworth again to see the boys out of the penitentiary. At the Kansas City airport, Tony Gizzo, the mobster and alleged Mafia chieftain, met them and drove them day". to the penitentiary. Gizzo also arranged for airplane tickets and hotel suites, as needed, for the Chicago contingent.

We ran up against a stone wall when we sought to learn from Ricca and Campagna-and later from Tony Accardo-who might have put up the $190,000. "Why I would be glad to find out who did that for me," the white-haired, 52-year-old Ricca innocently told us.

Today Ricca is a man of considerable substance. He told us he owns a home at River Forest, Ill., an elaborate summer house at Long Beach, Ind., and an 1100 acre farm in Kendall County, Ill. which he said cost him approximately $230,-000. These assets—plus certain stock holdings and 'he $300,000 cash Ricca said he had on hand when he went to the penitentiary-made the committee look with askance on the story we dug up about how Ricca, after his parole, borrowed $80,000 from one Hugo Bennett, formerly Benvenuti, a $22,500-a-year auditor for the Miami Beach Kennel club and the National Jockey club at Sportsman's park at Cicero, a Chicago suburb.

The situation regarding the Chicago and Miami horse and dog tracks is involved. The president of both the National Jockey club and the Miami Beach Kennel club is William H. Johnston who, in 1948, arranged for a $100,000 contribution to Fuller Warren's Florida gubernatorial campaign.

Johnston sparred at great length with Counsel Rudolph Halley as to whether any of his tracks had links with the Capone gang, but Peterson stated in his testimony: "During One fascinating story into which the heyday of Al Capone, the Cathe committee delved was the net pone syndicate was in control of of strange circumstances surround- dog tracks in virtually every part of the country including Florida."

> Anyway, when Ricca, the Capone syndicate gangster, came out of the penitentiary and wanted $80,000 for the purpose, he said, of making improvements on his farm, he turned to his old friend Bennett, the auditor at the track where Ricca, with other Caponeites, had gambled. Bennett obligingly let him have the $80,000 in two installments of $40,000 each. Bennett insisted he made this un-

Today the Seniors issued the Fish" their death warrant or facisimile. Friday is "Fish Day" and wont it be a day!

If any of you see someone running around in a toe sack with a string of onions around his neck, dont run the other way it will only be some poor "Fish".

We won the game last week, so everyone come to the game this Friday and yell for our side so we will win again!

FRANK KIRK, Reporter

We lost two of our girls this week being in the persons of Sylvia Enloe and Laura Faye Brown I guess Mary Beth and Alice feel lost now. I thought I saw the boys crying the other day or was that just another one of Whit's tall tails getting out of hand.

Dwaine sure has been burning up that road between here and Downing. Hey boy, what's over there? Good luck, anyway.

Mrs. Wright has been winning Lawyer MJ Smith all of the prizes at the De Leon Drive In. Speaking of Drive Ins I saw a forty model Ford go in the Drive In the other night with only one person in it. When it left there was four. Foul play?

Safe Braking Margin Varies

Importance of driving in accordance with highway conditions is illustrated by this diagrammatic view prepared by Chevrolet in the interest of traffic safety. Standard braking tables reveal 190 feet is required for a stop at 50 miles an hour, allowing three-quarters of a second for a driver's reaction to an emergency. When the pavement is wet, however, the distance increases to 258 feet. On icy pavement 472 feet will be covered before a car brakes to a complete stop.
