In Time Of Trouble

The pages of this week's paper have columns filled with stories of grief and trouble, of sadness and death. But these do not destroy the beauty of life, of friend ship and love. They only make the contrast more vivid.

Days such as some Gorman folk have lived through the past several weeks make more clear the realization that our appreciation of R B Lane is greatly merited.

Efficient and poised are apt descriptions of our fellow townsman but they are so very inadequate. Training without exception makes for courtesy and "apparent" sympathy in the profession of a mortician. Lane's sincerety leaves no place for the superficial.

Words from the Holy Writ, without sacrilage, express in a measure our interpretation of the comforting and reasurring manner in which he gives of himself as he performs the necessary tasks of the undertaker. "In time of trouble" he is a "tower of
