A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

No shirt, no shoes, no stroke

Shirts vs. skins might be acceptable for a pickup basketball game, but on the golf course?

Residents near the Carroll (Iowa) Municipal Golf Course are complaining about too much exposed skin when golfers go shirtless to beat the heat.

"They're complaining about the beer bellies," a city councilman said. "Some of the fellas who are out there should have a maternity jacket on."

Officials say they believe the city should have a policy requiring shirt and shoes at the golf course.

Aside from improving the aesthetics, the councilman said, it would help golfers avoid skin cancer.

Plumb out of sexy lingerie

Many people get tired of answering the phone and finding that the caller has the wrong number, but Estelle Orringer of Chapel Hill, N.C., seems to have more room for complaint than most folks.

Orringer, 86 years old and in a nursing home, is tired of getting calls from people looking to buy lingerie, massage oils and bubble bath.

"I don't know who they are," Orringer said. "I think they're calling the wrong person. I just say that person isn't here."

A catalog by Secret Passions, based in Chapel Hill, is responsible for the mistakes.

The company changed its customer service number two years ago, but forgot to change the listing on its order form, said Katie Zvolerin, a company spokeswoman.

School district to help pay cost of insurance hike

By RONN SMITH
Editor

Insurance is going to cost more for Muleshoe school employees this year, even though the district will make up part of the increase in contributions.

Board members have approved by a 5-0 vote a total increase of 40 percent in contributions to the insurance program, as recommended by Superintendent David Hutton.

At the same time, they approved raising the district's contribution per employee from $72.50 to $100, also following Hutton's recommendation.

The increase is due to some extremely large claims filed in the past few years.

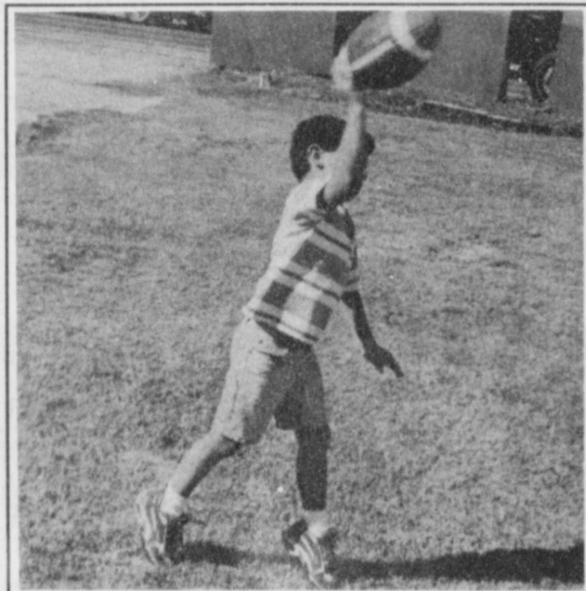

Board President Cindy Purdy said she hopes that employees will remember that the district had three or four years with excellent records that resulted in per capita contributions to the group health trust actually declining at one point while benefits increased.

The current annual total contributions into the fund amount to $503,584, and the balance in the fund is expected to be about $200,000 as of the end this month.

Four alternatives will be available: a base plan, an enhanced plan, a reduced plan and an alternate plan (the latter with a $1,000 deductible to reduce premium costs). Exact funding for the trust depends on enrollment patterns.

A day in the sun for migrant children

College financial aid aimed specifically at Muleshoe students

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

College students from Muleshoe who are still looking for financial aid for the upcoming semester might consider checking into the Opportunity Plan.

Based in Canyon, this nonprofit organization has raised funds from Muleshoe residents over the years to provide low-interest loans and scholarships for Muleshoe students.

Since 1968, a total of four student loan divisions and three scholarship divisions have been established by Muleshoe residents through the Opportunity Plan to benefit area students.

More than 140 students from Muleshoe have received financial aid through the Opportunity Plan program.

Officials of the program stated in a press release Monday that available funds include:

Coker buys Hayes real estate business

After 16 years of affiliation with one of the top agricultural real estate firms in Texas, Muleshoe's Vic Coker will do his own thing.

Coker bought the Muleshoe office of James F. Hayes and Co. July 1 and the business will become Vic Coker Land Company August 1.

"It just seemed like the next step for me," said Coker, who joined James F. Hayes in 1982. "I've been with Jim a long time and he's decided to make some changes in his life. It's a good time to get out on my own."

Hayes said Coker is a long-time friend and associate and their harmonious relationship over the years has been beneficial to many.

"The time came for Vic to put his name on the door and all of us at James F. Hayes and Co. applaud him and wish him the very best," Hayes said. "It is with mixed emotions we wish

Go-Kart wreck injures one

Muleshoe police released limited information Thursday about a July 22 traffic accident involving a Go-Kart and a pickup near the intersection of West 21st Street and West Avenue E.

According to the police report, the accident occurred on 21st Street 1/10 of a mile south of Avenue E when a Go-Kart pulled out from an alley and the driver of a pickup did not see the smaller vehicle. The accident occurred just before noon.

Names of the drivers were not released because both are juveniles. Police declined even to release the drivers' ages.

Both vehicles had to be towed because of the damage sustained, according to the police report. Damage was estimated a more than $500 individually.

The report indicates that at least one of the drivers was taken by ambulance to Muleshoe Area Medical Center and treated briefly.

The Go-Kart driver was ticketed for failure to yield the right-of-way and the pickup driver was ticketed for violating the restriction on his driver's license.

World trade negotiations hold potential of greatness

This fall, world representatives will gather in Seattle to begin the 1999 round of multinational trade negotiations.

Conducted under the framework of the World Trade Organization, these negotiations — expected to last several years — will set the tone in international trade for years to come.

According to a release from the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, the negotiations also will largely determine if the organization will assume a much-needed leadership role or "become nothing more than a toothless dog lying on the porch, unwilling to hunt and unable to back up its bark with any kind of a bite."

According to Ross Wilson, the association vice president, the U.S. needs to stand firm on the issues and philosophies that have allowed worldwide trade to flourish in recent years. The U.S. also needs to take a firm stand in reforming the trade organization's settlement process.

The cattlemen also advocate keeping current language on science-based trading rules, protecting scientifically approved technologies, increasing access to trade in importing countries and negotiating continued decreases in tariffs.

Hayes," Coker said. "I do appraisal work when it comes along and though I'm not a state-certified appraiser, when the need arises, I will work with James F. Hayes to get it done."

"We're good friends and have a great relationship. We will continue that."

Coker said he will make a few changes, but nothing major. First-class agricultural real estate service will be his calling card.

"I will continue to represent properties as I have in the past; up front, no fluff, to the point," Coker said. "I feel like this method has always worked for me in the past and I will continue to do business that way."

Coker will continue to operate in a large geographic area and has a relationship with a New Mexico broker and will work across the state line as well.

"We won't just represent farms and ranches. We'll offer dairies, feed lots, packing sheds, whatever comes along. We just don't sell residential real estate," Coker said.

"We enjoy the area we work in and it's a neat business to be in because of the people you meet and work with on a daily basis."

Coker is a native of the Springlake-Earth area, graduating from Springlake High School in 1963. He graduated from Texas Tech with an agriculture degree in 1968 and began farming in 1969. He still farms some and raises cattle.

Coker began in the real estate business part-time in 1982 and was full-time by 1983. He earned his real estate broker's license in 1985 and has done sales and appraisals all over the Panhandle and from New Mexico to Abilene since.

Coker and his wife Judy have four children, all Muleshoe High School graduates: Valerie Johnston and husband, Kinkead, of Muleshoe, Shana Coker of Muleshoe, Barry Coker, a Texas Tech senior, and Angie Coker, a Texas Tech sophomore.

The company will remain in the office at 310 Main St, Suite 103.

Adrian helps West Texas Heat to national finishes

Gradee Adrian, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Adrian of Muleshoe, spent much of the month of July on the road, competing in Basketball Congress International national tournaments in Dallas and Colorado Springs.

Adrian plays for the West Texas Heat 13-year-old team in Amarillo. Players may compete in the 13-year-old division as long as they were 13 or under on January 1.

The BCI 13-year-old national tournament was in Dallas July 3-7. With 33 teams from all over the U.S. competing, the West Texas Heat, coached by Grady Brown of Hereford, finished third overall.

The Heat then stepped up and competed in the 14-year-old BCI national tournament July 24-28 in Colorado Springs. Out of 36 teams which competed at the Air Force Academy, the Heat finished a respectable 8th overall.

It was Gradee's second year to compete for the Heat, which finished 17th in the National AAU Tournament in Nashville last summer. The Heat also qualified for the AAU National Tournament this summer in Orlando, but were unable to attend.

Gradee will be a freshman at Muleshoe High School this fall. She plays post and was a top scorer and rebounder for the Heat.

Team members included assistant coach Don Sunderland of Amarillo, Kati Donaldson of Allison, Jennifer Arenas of Amarillo, Carlie Henson of Hereford, coach Grady Brown of Hereford, Jennifer Paetzold of Canyon, Kristy Keeling of Canyon, Anamarisa Perez of Amarillo, Heather Brown of Amarillo, Ashley Sunderland of Amarillo and Jacquie Searight of Olton.

Other Muleshoe girls competing for the West Texas Heat organization in different age groups include Jessica Carpenter, Rendi Hodge, Kayla Glover and Britni Gartin. MHS graduate Erin Wilhit was a member of the Heat varsity.

Third in the Nation

The West Texas Heat 13-year-olds finished third in the BCI National Tournament July 3-7 in Dallas and 8th in the BCI 14-year-old National Tournament in Colorado Springs July 24-28. Equine sleeping sickness making waves in parts of East Texas

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Mosquitoes, as standard operating procedure, can make life miserable for humans, poultry, horses and livestock.

This summer, there's a chance — albeit a small one — that in East Texas a common garden variety mosquito bite can lead to death.

Texas Department of Health officials have reported occurrences of eastern equine encephalitis in East Texas.

Eastern equine encephalitis is a disease that can be fatal to both horses and humans. In Louisiana, the disease has been cycling for more than two months, killing 40 horses and an uncounted number of emus.

Most recently, two humans in Louisiana have been infected, with one man still in a coma, according to Dr. Jimmy Olson, professor with Texas A&M University's department of entomology.

"It's something to be concerned about. The eastern variety doesn't just kill those with weakened immune systems like the other varieties do. It can strike down a man in the prime of life," Olson said.

Recently, the disease has spilled over to the East Texas counties of Jasper, Harrison, Cherokee and Hardin.

Though no East Texans have yet to become infected, 30 to 40 emus have died of the disease in Jasper County, while in Harrison, Cherokee and Hardin counties there are reports of horses either killed or diagnosed with the disease.

Entomologists don't know which mosquito species transmits the disease, but they do know that Western Louisiana and East Texas are home to the same species.

This week, Olson and members of his staff will be in East Texas trapping mosquitoes in hopes of determining exactly which species of mosquito is the vector.

"Until then, it would be wise to consider any mosquito suspect," he said.

Once infected, horses begin to show clinical signs of encephalitis in about five days while symptoms in humans take seven to 10 days to appear.

The mortality rate in horses infected with encephalitis is from 50 to 90 percent. The fatality rate in humans is 65 to 80 percent, according to a Texas Department of Health release.

There is a vaccine for horses but not for humans. Most veterinarians should have the vaccine in stock.

Dr. James Robinson, entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says people can lower their risk of mosquito bites by wearing long-sleeved shirts and pants and using a mosquito repel-lant. The most effective products will contain Deet®, but the strength of the active ingredient will vary.

Look for "Deet" or "N,N-diethyl-m-toluamide" on the list of ingredients and chose the product with the highest concentration.

Most local county Extension offices will have a publication authored by Robinson and Olson titled "Mosquito Management and Control."

Because horses show symptoms quicker than humans, they can act as sentinels for encephalitis activity in an area, Robinson noted.

Symptoms in horses include fever, irregular gain, wandering, circling, incoordination, yawning, grinding of teeth, pendulous lower lip, the inability to swallow, paralysis and occasional convulsions. In humans, the symptoms include fever, headache, vomiting, lethargy, neck stiffness and coma.

LADIES GOLF ASSOCIATION

The Muleshoe Ladies Golf Association held its monthly luncheon July 21. President Cheryl Engleking presided.

She recognized and welcomed guests Sandy Fullerton, Jonessa Brockman, and Christie Whitt.

Our birthday lady for the month was Darlene Henry. A different happy birthday was sung to her by Engleking and Linda Elder.

A thank you note from the families of Stan Barrett and Mary Frances Holt was appreciated. Secretary Jana St.Clair called the roll and read the minutes of our June meeting. Rhonda Box gave the treasurer's report. Yolonda Phillips was thanked for her care of club flower beds.

Five ladies went to the July 14 Hi-Plains Playday in Clovis. Winning points were Helen Templeton, with low putts in her flight; Neats Foster, low net in her flight; and Elinor Yerby, low gross in her flight. Tournament chairman Laverne Winn announced that the annual Ladies Partnership will be Aug. 14.

Playday awards were given by Templeton to: June 23 — best score on holes that began with the letter S-6, 7, and 16, Templeton, Anita Allgood, Kay Field; June 30 — best score on all three pars, Engleking and Deborah Noble; July 7 — Four clubs best score, Engleking and Yerby; July 14 — take off three worst holes, Allgood, Lynn Campbell and Judy Wilbanks.

A plaque was offered to Wilbanks to mount her ball! The door prize was won by Claudine Elliott. A scramble was played, with two teams tying at 69; members were Field, Box, Henry, Templeton, Brockman, Analita Haley, Laverne Winn and Dorothy St. Clair.

Those attending were Templeton, Haley, Box, Henry, Ruby Hart, Elder, Engleking, Allgood, Elliott, Tammy Black, Yerby, Cookie Bamert, Dorothy St.Clair, Field, Winn, Noble, Jana St.Clair, Phillips, Jeanetta Precure, Jo Remppe, Wilbanks, Brockman, Fullerton and Whitt.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

PROVERBS---A WAY OF LIFE!

AMONG THE PEOPLE OF THE BIBLE, THE TEACHINGS FOUND IN THE BOOK OF PROVERBS WERE GIVEN SERIOUS ATTENTION! THE PURPOSE OF THIS BOOK WAS TO INSTRUCT THE PEOPLE IN THE PRACTICE OF WISDOM, THE SANE AND PRUDENT PURSUIT OF THEIR DAILY LIFE, THE ART OF LIVING WELL, AND THE VIRTUES BY WHICH THE GOAL OF HAPPINESS WAS TO BE WON! IT ALSO ADVISED AGAINST THE MANY PITFALLS THAT COULD COME TO A PERSON IN THEIR DAY-TO-DAY LIFE. THE IDEALS OF LIFE ARE ALSO TOUCHED UPON: HONESTY, INDUSTRY, CHASTITY, CONSIDERATION FOR OTHERS, HELPFULNESS, AND MANY OTHER VIRTUES, BUT AGAIN AND AGAIN THE BOOK SEEMS TO CALL TO OUR ATTENTION THE SEARCH FOR WISDOM AND KNOWLEDGE!

The Butterfly Wedding

A new phenomenon is upon us ... the butterfly wedding. Butterfly breeders offer boxes of monarch butterflies to brides and mothers of brides. They arrive chilled and are warmed up for the big moment, then released in a golden cloud. It is very romantic and fairly expensive.

For those on a smaller budget, the moth wedding might be more appropriate. This wedding takes place in the dark with the bride wearing a coal miner's helmet.

The reheated moths are released and the bride switches on her head lamp. For an extra $10 the helmet can be fitted with a bug zapper so the light show can be augmented with sound effects.

As this wedding fad begins to spread, I can see entrepreneurs reaching out beyond the traditional butterfly-kissin'-cake ceremony. Imagine those sturdy folk all around the Great Lakes marrying off their daughter in a fish wedding.

It could take place in knee-deep water on the edge of a cranberry bog or in a hockey arena down on ice.

Choreographed just as the groom says "I do," the entire audience in the hockey-rink grandstand would repeat, "Ya, he does," and throw a 6-pound mullet over the glass barrier.

Members of the wedding party would be up to their halibut

BAXTER BLACK

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

in seafood. The bride could toss a can of tuna to the expectant bridesmaids, and the best man would be clad in a rented tux and snorkel.

Not to be outdone, the Society for Fun with Fungus would offer toadstool weddings. The bride and groom could exchange ringworm, and truffles would be served at the reception. The wedding cake would have lichens on the north side.

It's not that theme weddings haven't been done. I can remember reading about motorcycle weddings, sky-diving weddings, scuba weddings, cowboy weddings and spelunker weddings, for example.

All are flamboyant, planned primarily to get their picture in the paper. But the butterfly wedding strikes me as a little less ostentatious — beautiful but not garish.

Yet even the butterfly nuptials might be too showy for some.

They could opt for a quieter theme such as the elegant pollen wedding, the classic cheese wedding or a subdued ceremony featuring dental floss.

Although there's no guarantee, you can never tell about some of those wild dental hygienists.

"Dad, I'm Coming Home, and I'm Bringing My Dog"

When my oldest son, a college sophomore, called to say he was coming home to visit and, oh, yeah, he'd become half-owner of a $30 mixed breed dog who would also be spending the night, I was not particularly thrilled. I was glad Chris was coming home; I just wasn't all that excited about the canine coming with him.

I like dogs. Well, theoretically. But I guess I like being dog-less better. My life is simpler that way.

Focus On Faith
Curtis Shelburne

We just don't have time for high maintenance pets, even though we now have seven doves and a duck. The doves don't want to be petted at all and the body language of the duck strongly indicates that it would very much prefer not to be.

Dogs are different. You can warm up to a dog, and a dog can warm up to you, but you need to have time for the relationship. We don't. Our family has proven on at least two occasions that we don't have time to properly care for canines. The finest favor we can do for the species at this stage in our lives is not to own one.

But Chris brought the pup home. To spend the night. Then to spend the weekend. Well, just until Tuesday.

And my youngest son, who has been campaigning shamelessly for a dog for years, has fallen in love with the little furball.

And my wife's lost her mind.

She not only let the dog in the house, she let her sit on the couch, and she's carried the pup and talked baby talk to her, and, trust me, she's never done that before.

And, well, me too. The puppy and I took a nap together on the chaise lounge Sunday afternoon, and she seems to agree completely with me that life would be better with more snoozes in the sun, good food gratefully consumed, and romps with the family in the yard.

This is a good dog. She's a she, which, in my experience, means her IQ is twice that of the other half of the species. She's small, a puppy still, but will never be a whole lot bigger. (And unlike the miniature Chihuahuas my family had when I was a kid, rodents which someone mistakenly classified as canines, she's not neurotic—frazzled, fidgety, and shaking all the time.) She's short-haired and black and looks like a very small Labrador with one white paw, a little white streak under her neck, and a small white star on her jet-black back. Who knows what she is breed-wise, but she's cute.

I didn't think her owners needed a dog. (I'm pretty sure I was right about that.) Now, I just hope her owners are good enough for her. Oh, they won't be mean to her, but this little fuzzball should be played with, snoozed with, and enjoyed.

Important life skills like the right amounts of sun-snoozing, joyful playing, and, I'd say, grateful grazing, are skills they don't teach adequately in college. But sometimes God can use even little creatures like, say, playful puppies, to remind us of some of the best of His gentle graces and generous gifts.

Senate set to consider bankruptcy law reform

The Senate is set to consider a bill to reform federal bankruptcy law.

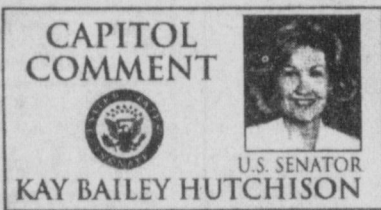

Last year's effort failed, in part, because it endangered the "homestead exemption" in Texas and other states. Texas has a constitutional protection for a family's home even if everything else is lost in a bankruptcy proceeding.

Some in Congress want to impose a nationwide homestead exemption limit of $100,000 on the value of a homestead that is protected in bankruptcy proceedings. The federal government has never before imposed a one-size-fits-all limit on the state, and I will resist all efforts to do so now.

Not only would this be an unprecedented encroachment on states' rights, but it also would threaten home and farm ownership for millions of Americans in a misguided attempt to prevent rare instances of abuse, which are addressed adequately elsewhere in the bill.

Consider the example of an elderly couple on a fixed income who have worked hard their whole lives and finally paid off their mortgage. Perhaps one or both become ill, and fall behind on paying their debts.

Should they be forced to sell their home where they've lived for 30 years — their only asset and source of security — to pay off their debts?

Since its days as a republic, Texas has answered this question with a resounding "no." Texas' founding fathers believed the homestead exemption to be so important that they enshrined it in our state constitution in 1846. This principle reflects the core values and traditions of our state.

Proponents of limiting homestead exemptions are telling Congress that millionaires routinely use state exemptions to shield their fortunes from creditors. The facts tell a different story, though.

A January 1999 independent analysis of bankruptcy filings reported: "We did not find a single debtor who came close to the popular stereotype of abuse. Our conclusion is that this is a relatively rare phenomenon in bankruptcy."

The proposed reforms already contain strong provisions to prevent abuse. These include a means test. For example, an individual is required to live in the state for at least two years before being eligible for homestead protection.

Nor would a $100,000 limit recognize the differences in property values from state to state and from region to region. For example, $100,000 may get you a nice home in Ozone, Texas, but it is not likely to get you very far in upstate New York.

And looking ahead, $100,000 today is likely to get you something far different than what it will 10 years from now.

Texas doesn't use a dollar amount for homestead valuation. Our constitutional homestead exemption protects a Texas family's primary residence located on 200 acres of rural land or 10 acres in an urban area. Other states have tailored homestead exemptions to their needs.

There is no doubt that bankruptcy reform is overdue. Congress needs to close the loopholes in the law that allow irresponsible individuals to slip out from under their debts. People who don't pay their debts cost everyone money, because businesses have to raise their prices to account for bad debts.

But we should not confuse the bad actors with the millions of honest Americans who have worked, in some cases their whole lives, to build up value in their homes, only to see those homes lost when they run into financial trouble.

I will fight any attempts to permit the federal government to undermine Texas' constitution when it comes to homestead protection.

Growers gain ground against boll weevil

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Cotton growers in some parts of Texas celebrated July with more than fireworks: According to the Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, the pesky boll weevil is being eliminated from many cotton-growing counties.

Growers in the Southern Rolling Plains Eradication Zone were the first to become involved in boll weevil eradication, in 1994.

Since the inception of the program, weevil populations have been virtually eliminated in the nine-county region, which surrounds San Angelo.

"We're pleased with the investment we've made in our program and very proud because it's already paying real dividends, and allowing us to compete in the cotton marketplace," said producer Kenneth Gully.

"Growers in weevil-infested areas will continue spraying, decade after decade on their own, unless they choose eradication that provides an organized and uniform method of control. That's the only way to permanently end the weevil problem," Gully advised.

In 1995, SRP program personnel trapped 846,080 weevils the last week in June. This year during the same time period the number was 157 weevils, a 99.98 percent reduction.

In addition to the reduction of boll weevils, there has been a dramatic decrease in the amount of pesticides used in the zone.

"Growers are not having to contend with the boll weevil as they have in the past. They are depending less on pesticides and relying more on beneficial insects that prey on cotton pests," said Foundation Program Director Osama El-Lissy.

"Texas will soon be able to compete with those in other states who have already finished eradication programs and who are growing cotton less expensively," stated El-Lissy.

For several decades, growers in the SRP concentrated most of their pest management strategies on one particular insect. "Prior to the success of the boll weevil eradication program in this zone, the entire cotton production system revolved around this devastating pest (boll weevil), from planting time to harvest management," said Dr. Thomas W. Fuchs, state IPM coordinator.

"Overwintered boll weevil control with insecticides often reduced beneficial insects and opened the door for other pest problems. We are now able to conserve the natural enemies of other pests. The program has enabled growers to more fully utilize proven IPM (integrated pest management) practices and resulted in fewer insecticide applications and higher yields," Dr. Fuchs concluded.

Runnels and Tom Green County IPM Agent Rick Minzenmayer's observations closely mirror those of Fuchs.

"I've worked and managed the IPM scouting program in the SRP since 1987," Minzenmayer said.

"Prior to boll weevil eradication, producers' No. 1 problem every year was the boll weevil. Most cotton fields (prior to eradication) would be treated twice for overwintered weevils and then, beginning in late August, begin treatment for in-season weevils until mid-September," Minzenmayer stated.

The foundation, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Department Agriculture will review all final data at the end of this year and may declare the SRP the first zone in Texas to have successfully eradicated the boll weevil.

The SRP eradication zone typically averages 220,000 cotton acres in the following Central Texas counties: Coke, Coleman, Concho, Irion, McCulloch, Runnels, Schleicher, Tom Green and portions of Taylor.

GPS technology utilized for cotton mapping

■ Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation preparing for spraying

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Using state-of-the-art technology provided by Global Positioning Satellites, the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation has begun an extensive mapping process of all cotton fields in the Western High Plains Eradication Zone.

"The mapping phase provides us with the precision we need as we begin the eradication process," said Assistant Zone Manager Michael Hester.

"We use the same GPS satellites that the U.S. military employs to give us unparalleled accuracy that is so vital in the program," Hester stated.

"The other critical element is working with cotton growers to gather information relative to establishing communication lines identifying field locations, acreage and point of contacts. Grower participation, cooperation and understanding is vital to a successful eradication effort in the zone. Having access to fields, we are able to efficiently set and check boll weevil traps and this will further enhance the effectiveness of the program," Hester said.

"Precise mapping helps cotton growers by allowing very accurate applications of Malathion ULV, the only insecticide used by the foundation and the same insecticide that many communities use when spraying for pesky mosquitoes. The ULV stands for ultra low volume and it is applied at 12 ounces per acre," said

Program Director Osama El-Lissy.

"After many years of research and development, the U.S.D.A. and various technical experts confirm that Malathion ULV is the most effective tool in eradicating the boll weevil, specifically a purified form called Fyfanon ULV," added El-Lissy.

"This is a growers program and it is led by growers. We look forward to doing the best possible job for our producers in the zone," El-Lissy commented.

Successful boll weevil eradication has already been completed in Alabama, Arizona, California, Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina and Virginia. The states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Tennessee are currently implementing boll weevil eradication efforts.

Mitchell to be honored for contributions to improve marine life and conservation

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

GALVESTON — Anglers have known it for years as "12-Mile Rig," one of the best and most easily accessible spots on the upper Texas coast to find red snapper, king mackerel, cobia and even grouper.

On May 24, the former Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. oil and natural gas production complex, 12 miles southeast of Galveston Jetties in 60 feet of water, became the most accessible artificial reef on the upper Texas coast close to Galveston Bay.

Dubbed Mitchell's 12-Mile Reef in honor of company founder and renowned Galveston philanthropist George P. Mitchell, the old production platform provides outstanding near-shore opportunities for anglers and enhanced reef fish habitat to benefit the marine ecosystem.

The massive drilling platform and two smaller satellites were cut into 17 pieces and carefully arranged over a 100,000-square-foot area on the ocean bottom.

Explosives were not used, in order to avoid disturbance to marine creatures and habitat.

On July 10 at 10 a.m., the Ocean Star Offshore Drilling Rig and Museum on Pier 20 will host a reception for Mitchell and his company, which is one of Ocean Star's founders.

The unveiling of a new exhibit panel on Texas artificial reefs will honor Mitchell for his many contributions to marine conservation.

At 11 a.m., a Texas Parks and Wildlife representative will present the new panel to the museum.

The three structures in the new reef site were donated by Mitchell Energy, of which Mitchell is founder and chairman. The company is based in The Woodlands, Texas.

A widely regarded conservationist, Mitchell is recognized as a successful and responsible energy producer, a leader in restoring and preserving his hometown of Galveston, an active participant in creating a habitat for the endangered whooping crane, and as the founder of The Woodlands, an environmentally planned community north of Houston.

He has been active in a range of other activities, ranging from education to national affairs. His many awards include the Lorax Award (named after a Dr. Seuss creation as a person who cared for trees because they cannot care for themselves) from the Global Tomorrow Coalition.

Although there are other artificial reefs in the Gulf on the upper coast, few are as close to shore. Barr's Reef, less than a mile from 12-Mile Reef, is in the same Galveston 189 OCS leasing-block area.

Barr's Reef, established in 1969 with concrete pipe and enhanced in 1997 with the addition of 100 reef balls, only has a 4-foot-high profile on the bottom. Mitchell's 12-Mile Reef has a higher profile in the water column, and a more complex pattern on the bottom.

Basco's Reef, 23 miles south of Sabine, and the George Vancouver Liberty Ship Reef, nine miles south of Freeport, are the only other reefs established near the upper Texas coast for small boat access.

Other shallow-water artificial reefs in Texas are farther south near Port Aransas and Port Isabel, where the water is deeper closer to shore.

"What's so great about this (new artificial reef) site is it's so close in," said Irby Basco, a Beaumont-based contractor who serves on the TPW Artificial Reef Advisory Board.

Some sites are so far offshore that they are inaccessible to small-craft owners looking for a Saturday fishing excursion.

"That's why we need more reefs closer to shore that trailer-pulled boats can get to," Basco said.

"The beauty of this program is that it's a win-win situation for everyone," said George Hover with Mitchell Energy.

"It saves us money by avoiding the costs of dismantling and towing the rig to shore. Perhaps more important, it provides a near-shore opportunity for anglers and maintains the existing marine habitat," he said.

Jan Culbertson, Artificial Reef Program coordinator with Texas Parks and Wildlife, said the soft muddy gulf floor doesn't normally offer much substrate for algae or invertebrates to attach to and form natural reefs.

She said that is why these offshore platforms are important structures for establishing artificial reef habitat.

Summit to focus on agricultural biotechnology

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

AUSTIN — Developing a strategic plan that will allow Texas to become a national leader in agricultural biotechnology and allied life science technologies will be the focus of a summit Sept. 29-30 at the Omni Southpark Hotel.

The Summit on Biotechnology for Agriculture, Food, Fiber, and Health is expected to attract scientists, investors, economic development specialists, policy makers, agricultural interests, food processors, consumers and natural resources leaders to develop an action plan to "capture the value of the bio-based economy that is being created through the applications of these technologies."

The event is sponsored by the Texas Agricultural and Natural Resources Summit Initiative, an apolitical forum begun in 1993 for people concerned about Texas' food, fiber, and natural resource, and founded on the principle that Texans can find workable solutions to any challenge.

"The focus of the summit is on the development of biotechnology, the transfer of that technology from the laboratory to commercial development and the use of that technology for the economic benefit of the state," said Dr. John Mullet, director of the Crop Biotechnology Center at Texas A&M University and chair of the summit program planning committee.

"The scope will include biotechnology and allied technologies related to food, fiber and health product development," he said.

The conference will include general informational sessions and breakout work groups. The issues for discussion, organizers say, will include the role of Texas universities in developing biotechnology and the diffusion of innovation to producers and consumers; managing the impact of biotechnology for maximum benefit and minimal risk for consumers and natural resources; coordination of the marketing chain for biotechnology derived products; new alliances and organizational structures needed; policies and institutions needed to facilitate the transfer of biotechnology from labs to commercial development; and specific biotechnology applications and key technologies that should be emphasized in Texas.

"The application of biotechnology and allied life-science technologies to agriculture is reshaping agriculture and agribusiness at a scale that is revolutionary in scope," said Dr. Gene Nelson, Texas A&M University agricultural economics department chair and summit leader.

He said that change will impact all sectors of the economy, but "above all, the future competitiveness of Texas agriculture and the high technology sector of the Texas economy is at stake."

Registration is $90 per person until Sept. 10, then $105 until Sept. 29.

More information is available from the Texas Agricultural and Natural Resources Summit Initiative, Room 113 Administration Building, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843-2142, (409) 845-2340, fax (409) 845-9938, or 3-mail Joe Benningfield at jbenningfield@tamu.edu.

Paris readies for restaging of confederate hero's funeral

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

PARIS, Texas — Civil War re-enactors from north Texas and southern Oklahoma will gather Oct. 22-23 to accompany an 1875 horse-drawn hearse during the re-creation of Gen. Sam Bell Maxey's 1895 funeral service and procession.

A Friday night "wake" at the Main Street Depot Club has been added to this year's funeral re-enactment that honors one of Paris' most influential 19th century citizens.

Maxey was a West Point graduate, Confederate general and two-term U.S. senator from Texas. The Maxey House, built in 1868, is operated as a state historical park by Texas Parks and Wildlife.

True to history, funeral services will be held on the tree-shaded lawn of the Maxey House at Church and Washington streets.

After the 1:30 p.m. Saturday service, mourners will walk or ride in horse-drawn conveyances one mile south to the general's burial site in Evergreen Cemetery.

Rides back to the Maxey House will be available to those unable to return on foot.

The 6:30 p.m. wake (party) on Friday will feature down-home food and spirits in keeping with one of the general's last wishes — that Parisians enjoy his funeral. All "mourners" are invited, said Albert Nichol, president of the Friends of the Maxey House.

"You do not need to be a part of a re-enactment group to participate," Nichol said. "We do ask folks to wear clothing appropriate for 1895 and the funeral of a senator and general."

The public may tour the Maxey House on Wednesdays through Sundays for a modest fee. More than 10,000 artifacts and family heirlooms dating to pre-Civil War days are displayed in the two-story home built in High Victorian Italianate style in a genteel neighborhood.

The National Register property features a new climate-control system, new exterior landscape and security lighting, and new window shades and carpet runners.

The year-old rose garden and new formal flower garden are expected to be in full bloom for the re-enactment.

More information is available by contacting park superintendent Judy Brummett at (903) 785-5716.

CREATIVE LIVING

"Only Olive Oil"

On Creative Living Tuesday, August 3rd at 10:30 p.m. and Thursday, August 5th at 1:00 p.m., registered dietician and home economist Pat Baird discusses creative and surprising ways to use olive oil.

According to Baird, "Just about everyone is concerned about fat — especially saturated fat — and cholesterol, and trying to have less of it in their diets." The tricky part is that fat itself, and the foods that contain cholesterol add to the flavor, texture, and overall appeal of foods people eat everyday. Baird says her goal is to show people how they can cut down on saturated fat and cholesterol, and still enjoy what they're eating.

There are several different types of olive oils, and the most striking difference is in the color, which ranges from pale to deep green. Olive oils vary in flavor, color, and aroma, depending on where they're grown, the climate, the soil, and the parent olive from which they came.

TYPES OF OLIVE OIL:

Extra-virgin olive oil means it's a natural oil, made from a cold-press process without any refining. It lends a hint of flavor to recipes.

Extra-light olive oil is quite neutral. It contains the same calories, but is lighter in color and flavor, making it a good choice for desserts.

Olive pomace oil is used mainly in the food service industry, and is not generally available in supermarkets.

Think of olive oil as you think of wines. Each has its own personality and characteristics. Olive oil can be used to fry, sauté, season, and even bake. Olive oil is a monounsaturated type, which may lower bad cholesterol — and it seems to protect the good, or HDL, cholesterol.

Olive oil can really be used in all types of recipes — and there's all types of olive oils to choose from. It's also nice to know that it's all part of a healthy diet, yet the foods have good flavor. Among cooking oils, olive oil has the flavor to replace butter and margarine, and is a healthier alternative.

SPICY GRILLED CHICKEN

1 lb. boneless, skinless chicken breasts	1 tsp. black pepper
1 Tbsp. olive oil (pure or extra virgin)	1/4 cup fresh cilantro, chopped
2 Tbsp. lime juice	1/4 tsp. salt (optional)
1/2 cup dry white wine	1 Tbsp. dry mustard
1 Tbsp. chili power

Rinse chicken breasts and pat dry. Set aside. Mix remaining ingredients together in a medium bowl. Set aside 3 tablespoons of the mixture for basting during cooking. Add chicken to bowl; marinate for 15 minutes, or for enhanced flavor, marinate for up to 1 hour in the refrigerator. Grill chicken breasts over medium-hot fire (or under pre-heated broiler) for approximately 3-5 minutes on each side until cooked all the way through. Baste with 3 tablespoons of reserved marinade while cooking.
