Lottie Moon, a missionary of earlier days, has been memorialized in the annual offering given by the church toward missions.

The life of Charlotte Diggs expressed apart from love. In a Church." service of supreme devotion she left her family and friends, a suc cessful teaching position in her native beautiful Virginia to go into North China as a missionary.

Eighty years have passed since she first set foot on China soil where for 39 years she dedicated 7 p. m. her life to sacrificial service.

It was in 1912, December, forty one years ago, that she became ill and had started on her journey hoping to reach her terrestial home but God had not decreed it so. She by-passed the terrestial for her Eternal Home while her ship lay at anchor at Kobe, Ja-

Economics, as it is taught, is related almost wholly to industry. Generation after generation of young city Americans grow to adults, unaware of agriculture's importance, its problems, and pursuits, and therefore, they have little appreciation of how completely their very existence depends upon the farmer.

Industry and its commerce have so thoroughly dominated the education, habits of thought, and means of communication of the American people during the last few decades that many have come to look on the machine as the source of all the best things in life. The world of organic life and growth, upon which farming is based, has only a feeble grip upon our consciousness.

Three Steps to Better Lighting

> There's no doubt about it. . . you'll find lots more enjoyment in home activities . . . with less eyestrain and fewer accidents, when you follow three simple suggestions that make the most of home lighting.

> First of all . . . be sure each reading lamp or fixture is equipped with the size bulb that provides plenty of light.

> Next, see that all empty sockets are filled with the correct size bulbs. Small bulbs make seeing difficult . . . puts extra work on the eyes.

> And third, always keep a ready supply of lamp bulbs in reserve. Work or play is never interrupted by a burned-out bulb when you have an immediate replacement. Keep the 1, 2, 3, of good lighting in use throughout your home for the better, brighter light that means easier seeing.

"Consult your dealer's chart for correct size bulbs for every room . . . stock up on extra bulbs . . . and follow these three rules for
