Dressed And Painted Easter Eggs Are Received From Louisiana By Marie Hall

Marie Hall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. G. T. Hall, received a box of Easter eggs Thursday afternoon from their former pastor, Dr. Richard Spann of Baton Rouge, La. The eggs are painted and dressed to represent characters and countries and are made by the circles of the First Methodist church of Baton Rouge.

A number of Disney's familiar characters have been duplicated in the eggs. Ferdinand the Bull, who simply couldn't be vicious, is quite outstanding. He has his flowers even though he is an egg.

The negro mammals are complete with red bandanas and carefully guard their little kinky-headed pickaninies. More than 2000 eggs have been shipped to every state in the union and to Porto Rico. Throughout the year two circle members collect scraps of wall paper, ribbon, yarn, old tally cards, and bits of cloth to be used in their handicraft.

MISS LANCENOTES

By Mary Whaley

Life has funny ways of trying one's patience and capacity to endure things up to the breaking point and then suddenly turning a smiling face and making things seem your way.

All those old saws about things being done before dawn and silver linings in dark clouds are more true than that.

hackedney use would lead one to believe.

When Lady Luck has turned a cold shoulder to your own particular circumstances, it makes you want to clutch your brow and cry "Why go on..."

Depending on you, the time and the place, things can reach an awful climax. It seems as if some one sent you out to slay the dragon with a bright and shiny sword that turned out to be made of paper mache instead of steel.

But then when it looks as if the fickle lady whose favors are distributed with such a casual hand, has gone and left you for good, she looks back and sees you floundering. Maybe she tosses a coin but when you win, it's hard to think what it was that had you worried.

We believe in saying our prayers and trying to meet opportunity with a little initiative but we also court favor with Lady Luck. She's a gal that's hard to count on but when she's nice, life is wonderful.

High Score For What-Not Club Is Won By Mrs. Phil Smith Thursday

Music To Be Featured At Easter Services By Church Choirs

Easter Sunday services, both morning and evening worship, will be marked with anthems and cantatas being held by local church choirs. Anthems and solos are being prepared this week for the special day of worship.

First Methodist

At the morning service the First Methodist choir will sing the anthem, "He Is Risen" by Simper with a duet, "Crucifix" by Faure sung by H. G. Keaton and G. N. Crosthwait.

Evening service will be featured with a cantata, "From Cross to Crown" arranged by Alfred Judson. A solo, "Consider the Lilies" by Beethoven will be sung by J. D. Stitcler. Soloist are Mrs. V. H. Flewellen and Mrs. Bernard Lamun, soprano; Mrs. H. G. Keaton, alto; H. G. Keaton and J. D. Stitcler, tenors; and John Vastine, bass. Mrs. L. R. Mundt is organist and G. N. Crosthwait is director.

First Baptist

Morning services at the First Baptist church will be marked with the anthem, "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross", an unaccompanied anthem with Ruby Bell, soloist. The choir will sing "Lord God Omnipotent" as the response and two unaccompanied hymns "Old Rugged Cross" and "Christ Arose."

A girls trio composed of Claire Lou Nummy, Joyce Mason, Sylvia Pond, will sing "He Lives On High." This will be followed by the anthems, "Hail His Triumph" by Holton, and "Hallelujah" by Fred Peace.

A men's quartet will sing "Calvary" at the evening service and taking part will be Alton Underwood, Joe Ratliff, Mr. Jackson, Wayne Matthews.

Mrs. Bruce Franzer is choir director and Mrs. C. W. Norman is organist.

East 4th St. Baptist

The special Easter service at East 4th St. Baptist church is being held Sunday evening with a song sermon written and suggested by the Rev. R. Elmer Dunham, "Thomas, Called Didymus."

The song sermon explains why Thomas was called a doubter and is directed by Dorman Kinard. Orline Hughes is accompanist. Mrs. Buckner is reader.

"Sing to the Lord," "Come Said Jesus' Sacred Voice," and "God Will Take Care of You" will be sung by the choir and a girls' 8

Home Manufacture

"A program of individual development centers around the manufacture of raw materials into finished products."
 So headlines another of the series of advertisements appearing in Texas newspapers under sponsorship of the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association. Texas, rich in raw materials and looking forward to industrial development, well could look with pride upon its oil industry. It could stand as an example while Texas seeks to process its other raw materials.

A glance at the oil industry reveals that 141 Texas refineries manufacture into finished petroleum products 80 per cent of the state's crude oil production.

Governor O'Daniel and other Texas leaders, look forward to the time when other products, including cotton, will be processed in this state. Manufacture of 80 per cent of the state's crude oil is compared with 3 per cent of the state's cotton. Those in the West Texas wool and mohair producing areas realize too well that while Texas is the nation's No. 1 wool producing state, none is processed here.

It is all the more remarkable, therefore, that petroleum refining now constitutes 41 per cent of the value of all Texas manufactures! Of the 225,000 Texans regularly employed by the oil business in the state, 25,000 skilled workmen and 8,000 office employees are employed in this one division of the oil industry—a $50,000,000 annual pay roll.

Oil produced in Texas last year was taxed at an average of 9.8 cents a barrel. Frequent suggestions to increase the tax burden on this Texas product are heard almost constantly. Those making such suggestions could much better serve their state in supporting moves to develop other resources instead of burdening the one industry that stands out as such a splendid example in bringing industry to Texas.

George Tucker

Man About Manhattan

NEW YORK—Mr. Elliott Nugent, famed Ohio State University alumnus, old classmate of Jim Thurber, old friend of Bob Benchley, ex-news reporter, actor, film director, co-author of "The Male Animal"—a Broadway hit—lay billowed and pillowed in his wife's boudoir at 520 East 86th street, an aura of benignity playing about his thin, blond head.

A number of things had conspired to bring about this salubrious state of contentment: (a) he had a slight cold; (b) he had just read in the papers that he and his wife, the former Norma Lee, were debating a divorce; and (c) the comedy which he and Thurber had co-written on trains and in west coast hotels and on ships passing through the Panama Canal had just been sold to the movies for $150,000.

That's a lot of money, $150,000. That's a funny thing to debate, a divorce. That's a good excuse to take a rest, a cold.

Let's debate that divorce first "Norma and I were flattered," Nugent confessed, "because nobody ever said that about us before. We've been married 14 years, we've raised three kids, and for years we've lived in Hollywood. But nobody ever rumored that the Nugents had pff! We'd about made up our minds that we were nobodies, because almost everybody who is important gets rumored about. But now that we have finally 'arrived' we're very pleased, and we hope all our friends read it, too."

Now the play. When you co-write a play you blend your ideas with the ideas of someone else. You work them around until they take form.
 "Jim had an idea to start with which sounded pretty good to me, and I had a few ideas, too, and we finally got together. We talked it over and sketched the thing out last February, but it wasn't until much later that we got down to work. You can't co-write a comedy when one of you is in New York and the other is in Hollywood. Finally Thurber and his wife came out and we got going.

"We wrote different parts, and then re-wrote each other's stuff. Some of it he wrote on trains to and from New York. Some of it I wrote on the coast. Jim even took a lot of notes and wrote some of it on the ship coming back through the Panama Canal. That's the way it was. All the pieces seemed to fit. Then we tried it out on the coast."
 Q: "But can you tell anything about a coast try-out—whether it will go across in New York?"

A: "Sometimes you can, and we were pretty confident that we had a good property. We thought if we had a good cast that we'd do all right, but of course no one can anticipate a smash hit, or even dream that you can sell the movies for $150,000. Pretty good, eh?"

When Nugent is feeling pretty satisfied he accompanies his remarks with a quick, sly sort of grin—happy wink. This wink takes the place of a smile, because Nugent is no cheshire cat. He doesn't grin too much. This wink is just his way of expressing exuberance.

After reading this over I find that I haven't explained that cold. It wasn't a cold, actually. Nugent just thought he might get a cold, and as it was an off day, with no matinee, and as his own quarters were occupied by Herbert S. Duffy, a pal of old Columbus, Ohio, days, who is house-guesting this week, he decided to seek out a quiet comfortable haven where he could relax and enjoy the sun-light streaming in through the south windows.

So he leaves the boudoir of Mrs. Nugent, all reports of imminent separation and divorce notwithstanding.

Leap Before You Look

Chapter 16

'MENTAL INCOMPETENCY' A hoot went up from the jury at the Major's statement that Tom conducted a lemonade stand at the age of eleven. The bailiff stepped for order. The judge tapped for order. Bartell's face went into his hands and Doty's shoulders shook.

Bartell arose, his cheeks scarlet. "Your honor, the incident is completely irrelevant, except that it shows an inclination for business at that early age."

"Proceed with your witness, Mr. Toland, and kindly ask him to keep to more pertinent testimony," ordered the judge.
 "Proceed, John," murmured Austin, wiping his glasses furiously, "and keep to incidents of later dates."

"Very well," agreed the Major in an injured tone. "But that did show that she did not reverse other people's property. I always had lemon and claret before retiring."

The Major continued, and as he talked, Tom's head dropped lower and lower.
 There was the time she had given the Major's second best overcoat to a man who was looking for work and needed something to cover his shabby suit."

The time Great-aunt Hannah had outfitted her for the school semester, then allowed her to visit a Toland in Cleveland, only to have her return in alp and sports coat. The clothes of the little girl down the block had been destroyed by fire.

On he went until Bartell jumped up. "Your Honor, this only proves conclusively the warm, generous heart of Miss Toland, and it is not Miss Toland who needs defense. This is a contest of Timothy Toland's last will and testament. My worthy opponents are basing their contest upon the mental incompetency, avowed, of the deceased, by attempting to show he would not have left the property to one equally incompetent. So far the witness has not proven mental incompetency."

Major Toland stood up and, ignoring the Judge's protest, "It proves she has a soft brain as well as a soft heart. She'll let any fellow with a hard luck story work her out of this money. Timothy knew that, and that is why he sent you, with your good looks, to destroy any Toland participation in his estate."

Above the Major's voice came the rammung sound of the gavel and the Judge's voice. "Austin Toland, if you cannot restrain this witness I will call officers who can!"

The Major was restrained. He was also disarmed.
 Depositions of each member of the family were read, then Austin sighed wearily that he would "rest."

"Your Honor—" Bartell was up again, his charm reflected in the faces of the jury in the relaxation of the Judge—"I will, though it is not necessary, prove the efficiency of the young lady. I will call to the stand the persons, one of her own volition, has hired to carry out this project. And I will admit here that I fought her each time. I hadn't her vision."

"Her executive ability is shown by her insistence upon hiring the best available, but obtainable. I can take you to the farm, and by exhibiting photographs of it as it was prior to her assuming temporary charge, two months ago, show the improvements she has made within that short time. I will prove that by making Miss Tomi Toland his heir, the late Timothy Toland established his mental competency."

Presentation of the witnesses was deferred until the afternoon session and a recess called. Tomi was first out of the courtroom, scurrying through the corridors to the haven of her car. As swiftly as noon traffic would allow, she drove home, to hear the telephone ringing as she hurried up the steps.

"Go on and ring," she spat at the instrument. "You folks thought you'd be through testifying and back here, by noon, didn't you? You'd have been ready with explanations of shopping, or something. Well, you're going to have a nice time explaining this evening."

Heartrending Sobs And because she had been trained by Great-aunt Hannah, she removed her suit, hung it up carefully, and donned a robe before throwing herself on the chaise longue to cry.

The Major had used that childish story to turn a jury against her. "And I only tried to make money because I heard Augusta say she couldn't have a new suit because of the expense of a child."

Tom sat up and mopped at her eyes and nose. "Why couldn't they ever understand? And why don't they want me to have this place when they don't need it?"

And neither the Major nor Austin had come to see her. They hadn't even telephoned.
 Allen had sounded nice, but as Doty had said, he could turn his charms on and off as it suited him. It suited him to keep the will intact, or he would surely lose in the long run.

Had he been truly interested in her, he'd have called into court. "That's where I should have been," she cried indignantly. "Don't they realize that I am the one to be considered? Not that sheaf of papers with a red seal stamped over Great-uncle Timothy's signature."

She cried again, deep heart-rending sobs. There wasn't anyone in the wide world she could trust. Even A. J. Morris had gone over to Bartell's camp the moment Allen had smiled at him.

The persistent ringing of the telephone alarmed her. Perhaps she had better answer. Could she keep her voice clear, gay, nonchalant?

She could. At Mrs. Dougherty's worried: "Where were you?" she replied, laughing, "Oh, Doty, I carried seventy pairs to the new pool. Isn't that wonderful?"

"Humph!" grunted Doty. "Did you find your lunch lit's ready for you, in the refrigerator. And, Tomi, I'll be a little late. I'm trying to find a figured print that doesn't make me look like the auditorium done up for the spring garden show."

"Take your time," returned Tomi. "And tell Abe if he comes home wearing a flower print, I'll plant him in the market pen where the bees can find him."

Doty chuckled and Tomi replaced the receiver. From now on she was alone, hedged in by sneezes. Well, she'd take it, chin up. She shared her lunch with Pickles and Pepper, the cat and dog, then wandered into the yard. She didn't want to work.

Down at the foot of the kitchen garden, hidden from the house by a hedge of salt cedar, was a tiny cove. She would don a sun-suit, the brightest, happiest one she had, and lie in the sun.

Scarlet suit with white sails, scarlet hat. "And a scarlet nose," added Tomi as she hurried to the shelter.

It was nice there. The water spread away from her feet like a huge fan, with narrow "ribbles of white lacy foam."
 Pepper discovered her and dug industriously in the sand, sending it over her in sheets, then, weary of this, ran into the water and came out dripping to shake himself as soon as he reached her.

Tom was debating whether to return him to the house and lock him in, or suffer his violent attentions, when he thrust his black snout close to her, flopped down, and slept. The warm, damp little body was comforting. But even he belonged to Doty.

Tears stung Tomi's eyes. "It's being so alone," she whispered. "Little pictures of her childhood returned. First Mimi, a wan white shadow. Tomi couldn't remember her face, only her arms and her hands, clutching hands which tried to hold her from harm and want. Then that lonely period when there were no hands and there was want."

Julie came next in memory. Julie was Mimi's friend. She had fought to keep Tomi from the "Tolands" when they eventually traced her.

Tom could remember Julie's words: "You said you did not recognize your brother's marriage to Mimi. Why then do you want this child?"

Tom, it was explained, was half Toland.
 As soon as she could speak English, she had asked, "Half Toland, I am? What does it mean?" They couldn't explain satisfactorily.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON—This is the story of a big stink in the United States senate.
 Sedate senators, walking through the second floor halls of the capitol past the door of the senate military affairs committee, sniffed the odor and scowled. The noses of senate guards, catching the pungent aroma, twitched. Everyone around looked apprehensively at the closed committee room. No one dared investigate. The committee was in secret session.

It smelled like something burning. It was something burning—a fistful of stenographic abracadabra that told what may have been one of the strangest secrets of the day—the exact formula of Lester P. Barlow's liquid oxygen-carbon aerial mines.

It happened the other day. Here's how. Senators Nye and Gillette and Representative Church of Illinois are sponsors of a resolution to look into the possibilities of the Barlow bomb. The resolution came before the senate committee. Mr. Barlow was called in.

Mr. Barlow is an inventor and temperamental. On occasion, he can be very outspoken. On this occasion he was so outspoken that he had the senators gasping. He not only described the death and destruction which his invention will cause. He declared that the nation which owns it will be impregnable and create in the world a sense of the utter futility of war. And then Mr. Barlow tossed a verbal bomb, just to give the senators an idea of his capabilities. Without even lowering his voice to a whisper, he recited off the chemical formula of his invention.

Agast committee members asked: "Have you told this to anyone before? To representatives of any foreign nation?" Mr. Barlow said emphatically no. The committee passed a motion to have the testimony burned. A wastebasket was placed on the committee room table, the stenographic report dumped into it. A match was applied and while the committee looked solemnly on, Mr. Barlow's secret went up in smoke.

Reporters smelled the smoke and a story but when they arrived, grim-faced senators shook their heads through the haze and held up shushing hands to silence questions.

The liquid oxygen-carbon aerial mine is not the first occasion of Mr. Barlow's dealings with the government. A few years ago, the U. S. court of claims allowed him something like $600,000 for his inventions on engines and arms of death during the World War. Before that, he worked with Pancho Villa, but not after the United States took a hand in the affairs of that colorful Mexican.

Mr. Barlow wants to demonstrate to the government the killing powers of his new bomb. The committee wants the army and navy experts to look on. Mr. Barlow says he will use live animals to prove killing radius of the waves of death that spread for unheard-of distances from the bomb explosion.

He assures the committee that, in no case, can there be any suffering to the dumb animals trotted out for this little show.

Mr. Church reports: "He says the death of such animals will be much quicker than any means used in the packing houses. By using dumb animals in these detonating tests, he has stated that it will be very deplorable that war is futile."

Some of the boys in the ordinance division of the army are skeptical. They insist such bombs are not practical. They might go boom while being handled, they claim.
 Mr. Barlow says not. He says his new bomb can be toted about with as much safety as if it were a cap-pistol.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

HOLLYWOOD—Easter, Resurrection. Life renewed.

In Hollywood, every actor knows that his career can die and still find a personal Easter.

All that it needs is one good picture.

If any actor doubts it, he has but to look at the list of box-office leaders. He has but to look, more briefly, at the death and resurrection of one Mickey Rooney.

Mickey is No. 1 today. Once Mickey was, professionally and legally, a "corpse." One day he was Mickey McGuire, a flourishing kid actor in comedy shorts, and the next day, by court decree, he was no longer Mickey McGuire. He was Joe Yule, Jr., forbidden by law to use the screen name he had adopted. Out of that "death" came Mickey Rooney.

But the new name meant about as much as Joe Yule, Jr.—nothing.
 Mickey Rooney got into "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and he was good. He got into other pictures and he was good. He got into the Hardy Family pictures and he was sensational. "Love Finds Andy Hardy" was the final mark of his "resurrection."

Tyrone Power has yet to know a lull in his career. He is a darling of the fans (who count), although the critics (who don't) have had unkind things to say. When Tyrone gets his, finally, and Zanuck finds somebody new, young Tyrone has but to remember that his own father was a successful actor long after he became an old man.

Clark Gable never "died," but his imminent fade-out was predicted freely. But it happened one night that "It Happened One Night." And now he is set.

Shirley Temple, the commissionerators have been moaning, is "through." Didn't she "lip" last year— from first place to fourth or fifth? Think of it! There are three or four other actors who draw more people to the box-office than she does, so Shirley is "through."

Absurd, of course. Shirley needs a good picture, and she'll get it, sooner or later.

Robert Taylor hit the skids last year. When they counted the ten-best, Bob wasn't around. But, today, the boy is standing on "Waterloo Bridge," in the good company of Vivien Leigh.

You can look over the lists of the stars and you'll see that most of them have had their downs as well as ups. Claudette Colbert sagged with "Maid of Salem" and "Zaza" and redeemed herself at "Midnight." Jackie Cooper was bowed out of the picture and refused to stay out. Ditto Freddie Bartholomew. Ditto Garbo. How often has that girl been "washed up"? Ditto the director Lubitsch. And W. C. Fields and Mae West. Warner Baxter and Ronald Colman. Edward G. Robinson.

Adolphe Menjou was "finished" long ago. See "A Bill of Divorcement" as latest proof of his many "resurrections." One studio "finished" Deanna Durbin before she started.

But "resurrection" of a career takes time. The former stars who now are playing extra roles all bank on that—those who still care. They're remembering that yesterday's withered rose can be today's Easter lily. And Marie Dressler is their patron saint.

Deacon Unruffled By Yarns On Rivals

By HILTON GRAHAM
TAMPA, Fla., Mar. 22 (AP)—Mild Will McKechnie, the smart deacon from Pennsylvania, doesn't perturb easily.
If he did, he'd probably be chewing his cigar into shreds as he listens to forecasts that his Cincinnati Reds will finish second or third or fourth.

But what about those Cards? They came awful fast late last year.
'The Cards are a fine ball club,' Will conceded. 'But I like my club. Don't forget that when the Cards were in first place we challenged them and took over the lead. And we held it all season. Down the stretch when they came up to our necks again we knocked them back, didn't we? The Reds are going to be all right.'
'I don't figure they've got any more power than they had last year and we had power enough to beat them.'
'The Cards have a fine carry-over pitching staff and some good newcomers, too.

Ben Hogan Is Favorite At Greenboro

Texan Roms To Easy Win At Pinehurst, Shoots Record 277
By BILL BONI
GREENSBORO, N. C., Mar. 22 (AP)—They were beating the big bass drum for Ben Hogan as golf's winter caravan moved into this textile city for the $5,000 Greensboro open which starts tomorrow.
As newly crowned North-South champion, Hogan had taken rank with the two local favorites, Sam Snead and Clayton Hearner, as prime choices for this latest 72-hole test on the pro's program.
Comparatively speaking, it has taken a long time for Hogan to crash into the first-place money winners. Actually, this is only his fourth season on the tournament trail. The reason victory has seemed so long in coming is that Ben so often has come close to triumph without quite getting there.

Cronin Predicts Red Sox Can Win Pennant, He May Be Right

We enjoyed Joe Cronin's feature "We'll Beat The Yanks" in this week's edition of the Saturday Post. The Boston Red Sox skipper succeeds in creating the impression that he has the club to dethrone the champions and Joe isn't the kind to brag unless he has something to back him up.
It might be the Red Sox who can get the job done. Again it may be the Cleveland Indians with their amazing Bobby Feller. But if the Yanks are stopped it will have to be one of those two clubs. The Detroit Tigers can't do it. There's too much dissent within Del Baker's ranks. Certainly Washington or the White Sox can't hope to get on the high road.
We saw the Yanks play in 1937 when they won the title with yards to spare. We saw them again last season. They were a better ball club in 1938 than in '37. Possibly they will be as good this year. Certainly Charles Keller and Joe Gordon will improve.

Bosox Depend On Youth To Share Load Of Foxx, Grove

The Soxers don't have any thing in the way of an outfielder or a hitter to compare with Joe Dimaggio, rightfully acknowledged to be the greatest ball player active today. Neither do they have a pitcher to compare with Charles Ruffing or a catcher with Bill Dickey.
Cronin's Bob Grove, the perennial mound leader, and Jimmy Foxx, the peer of all active first sackers, may suffer slumps over the form they exhibited in 1939. Grove cannot be expected to keep going. He won 15 and lost four and had an earned run average of 2.54 which is something. But the wronglander celebrated his 40th birthday anniversary recently, which is old for a pitcher.
Cronin claims he has as good a second sacker as the Yanks' Joe Gordon in Bobby Doerr. The figures bear him out. Bobby outdid Gordon by 34 points last year. Cronin himself batted .308 and can be expected to do as well this year. He overshadowed the New Yorkers' Frank Crosetti at shortstop.

A superstition, still believed by many folks, warns farmers never to plant potatoes in the dark of the moon, because the eyes wouldn't sprout.

course, don't pick varieties that aren't suited to your locality. It's a good idea to consult a local seed dealer, the state agricultural college or county agent about planting dates.

In general, garden crops may be divided into four groups: Those that can be planted before the time of the last killing frost in the spring; those that can be planted about the time of the last killing frost; those that cannot be planted until the danger of frost is past and those that cannot be planted until the ground and the weather are warm.

It is important also to know the average date of the first killing frost of the fall in your community. MONDAY: Planning a hot bed.

MONDAY: Planning a hot bed. The time required for each variety to mature should be noted on the garden plan and compared with the length of the growing season in your locality. And, of

COME TO CHURCH Easter Sunday

Perhaps as a youngster with so many other things to do regular Church attendance was an allegiance not of your own choice. Now you are far enough along the highway of Life to realize more clearly the comfort and peace to be found in His word. There is Strife and hatred on other shores. Your own responsibilities and cares may have increased many fold. Find the hope, the composure you seek in your Church this Easter Sunday. No doubt, you were planning to attend. But we would like this message to achieve another purpose, too; more frequent attendance at your Church to find the guidance and encouragement you want.

torily; nor why the same stigma was not attached to the other children, merely because the marriage of their parents had been sanctioned by the presiding matriarch. "I don't care," thought Tom, lying on her back and watching a squadron of army planes maneuvering overhead, losing themselves momentarily in wispy clouds gathering in the west. "I'll just hoe my row. I'll prove my ability by making the farm pay."

She sat up suddenly. Make the farm pay? Didn't she realize that after the jury came in she might not have even a chance at the farm? That she could be evicted this very night?

"I should have stayed right there in the courtroom," she cried. "Then I could have fought for myself. I wonder—oh, it's too late now. Why didn't they tell me? Why didn't Allen let me know? Why couldn't he have been sporting enough to give me a chance?"

She cried into the sand now, with Pepper nuzzling her neck and whimpering with her.

"Oh, Pepper, and I did like Allen in spite of his cussedness. Oh, Pepper!"

Pepper, finding his pink tongue inadequate to wiping up the tears, sat down on his haunches in consternation, then flattened out and waited.

The sobs quieted, stopped; Tom slept.

The sun disappeared behind gathering clouds, the tide came in little waves nibbling at Tom's toes. They brought her up with a start. It was late and she was chilled through, miserable, aching with fatigue and with some inner ache of desolation. Even Pepper had deserted her.

"Cherie. There you are!"

Pierre slid down the little cliff and came to Tom. "We've looked everywhere. Then the dog kept leading me this way. Why, Tom, what is wrong? Your eyes, I mean."

"Sunburn, probably," sighed Tom. "I went to sleep here, and—"

Pierre's steady blue eyes were deep wells of sympathy. He had discarded his role of employee. He had taken her cold hands in his, was tucking the robe about her, returning to warm her hands. "Tell me, you know?" he questioned.

Tom nodded miserably.

"That Bartell," snapped Pierre. "I do not like the way he is handling these affairs."
