WOOD FLOOR FINISHES

Several kinds of finishes may be applied to floors and interior woodwork so as to preserve their natural appearance. These are wood sealers, shellac, varnish, or lacquer. Each type of finish has properties peculiar to itself.

Shellac is made from a resin secreted by a tropical insect. The resin is refined and dissolved in alcohol. Shellac dries very rapidly and forms a hard, glossy surface. Shellac will water-stain and turn whitish when exposed to too much moisture.

Varnish is a finish composed of natural or synthetic resins in some type of drying oil. After drying, the film is reasonably hard and tough, and impervious to moisture. Varnish coatings take longer to dry and tend to darken with age.

Lacquer coatings consist of cellulose nitrate or derivatives dissolved in a rapidly evaporating solvent. Resin is frequently added to the mixture. Lacquer dries quickly and is resistant to moisture. However, it is difficult to apply and is generally more expensive than other finishes.

Wood sealers usually consist of waxes, resins and drying oils together with a water repellent. Essentially, they do not coat the wood but shallowly penetrate into the material. When applied, the excess sealer is removed and the wood buffed to provide a pleasing appearance.

Although floors may be beautified and protected with any of these finishes, care must be exercised to select products made specifically for wooden floors and applied as directed.

A PICNIC IS A PICNIC, the Texas Beef Council feels, whether it's served in the back yard or beside a cool stream far from the city. To make a memorable outing in any setting, serve this delicious, inexpensive ground beef Skillet Supper.

Country is Hubert Humphrey never got off the ground - When it is all over, even the shouting, maybe we will wind up with, "Two Dollars," "The Full Dinner Pail," "A Chicken in Every Pot, a Car in Every Garage" which would be a 'New Deal,' then we would not be the "Forgotten Man" and there would be no reason to "Swap Horses in the Middle of the Stream."

How about using this quick barbecue mixed with your political sauce. You use ready cooked canned meat and in about nothing flat, you will have a "cook-out" supper ready.

BARBECUE TREATS

- 2 - 12-oz. cans of meat
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon butter or oleo
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 4 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 4 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 cup catsup
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 cup vinegar

To make barbecue sauce, cook onion in butter until clear, adding remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Slice contents of two cans meat and brush with the barbecue sauce. Broil slices approximately three minutes, turn, brush again with the sauce and broil three minutes more. Serve on toasted buns.

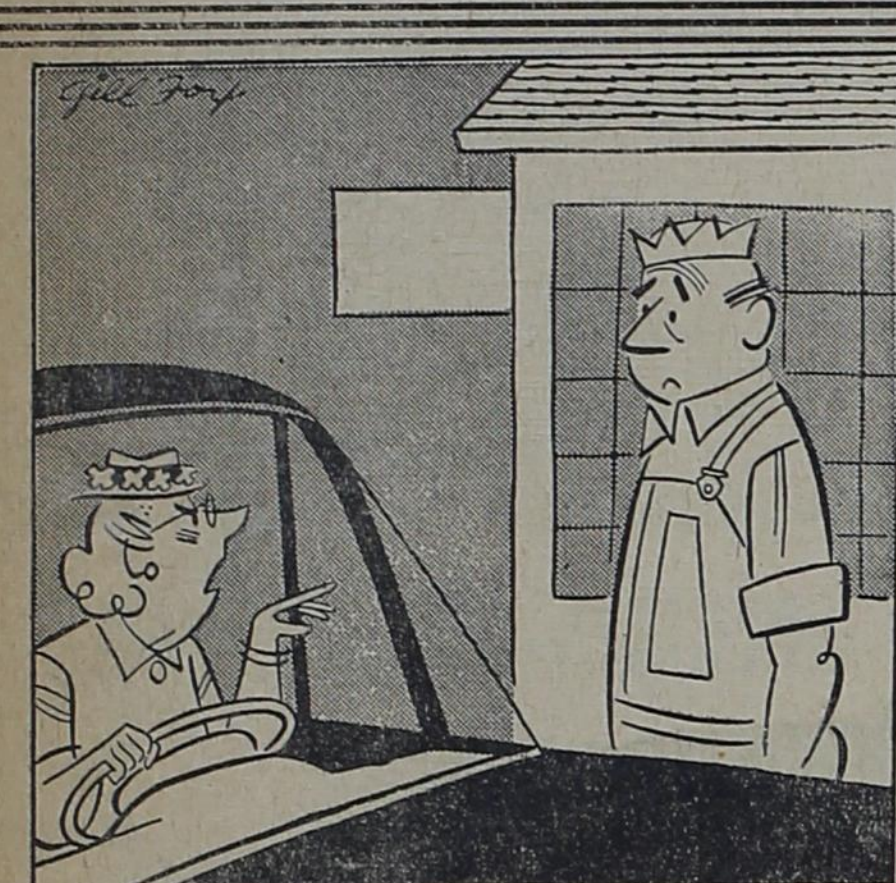

ICE CREAM SUPPER ENJOYED BY FAMILY AND FRIENDS TUESDAY

Relatives, friends and neighbors of Mrs. J. N. Watson gathered at her home last Tuesday evening to enjoy an old-fashioned ice cream supper. There were twenty who had all the cream they could eat. Lots of conversation, too, for Mrs. Watson's son, E. C., and his family from Midland were there. Also Mrs. E. C. Watson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Miears.

Someone made the statement, "Why don't we do this more often?" And it was agreed that they would try to do so.

SHORT STORY
Good Actor
By F. L. Rowley

MRS. ELEANOR Ingalls lived next door to us. She talked a lot. Her favorite subject was her nine-year-old nephew, Edmund E. Ingalls. Edmund E. was an actor - in the movies, you know. My wife Lucy said she saw the kid in a couple of pictures; said he wasn't bad either. I don't go much for movies myself. My eyes ain't what they used to be. Even have trouble reading the labels down at Joe's sometimes.

But I started to tell you about this Edmund E. Ingalls. The first time I saw him I wrote him off as a stuffy little squirt. Looking back though, I'm forced to admit that Edmund E. had something on the ball. Maybe it was that extra "E" that got my back up; I don't like to see a kid slipping an extra initial in on an old timer like myself.

One evening about supper time Eleanor Ingalls came steaming into our place with her nephew Edmund E. in tow. I can't imagine how she ever bribed him into visiting her; even a kid can stand just so much chatter.

He was sitting on the familiar milk crate.

"Well, this is a pleasant surprise!" sang out Lucy. "Imagine, Henry, a movie star in our house!"

"Hm--nice," I mumbled. I continued to stare out the window. Lucy's father, in his watchman's uniform, could be seen from this window. He was sitting on the familiar milk crate next to the big iron gate of the Miller Furniture Company across the street.

"Henry!" cried Lucy. "Eh? Oh--sorriv. I was watching your father, dear. Hello Mrs. Ingalls! And who is this young man?" As if I didn't know!

Edmund E. came over to the window to introduce himself. He looked about as puffed up as a '300' bowler. After giving me the fish-eye for a few seconds he let his gaze wander to the window. "Who's the character on the apple-box?" he asked.

I was drawing back my fist when Lucy came up. "That's not an apple-box, dear, it's a milk-case. And the character is my father."

He had the decency to say he was sorry.

"How is your father, Lucy?" asked Mrs. Ingalls. "I know you were worried about him."

"We're still worried," said Lucy. "He's so listless these days. Says he's no good to anyone, in the way, and other foolish things."

Without another word Edmund E. bolted across the room and out the door. We watched him cross the street and approach Lucy's father. At first nothing much happened. Then the old man stood up, shouldered an imaginary rifle, and strode smartly back and forth like a sentry. Suddenly he stopped before Edmund E. and laughed outright. A minute later they were both pointing at one of the twin towers of the Miller Furniture Company.

"He's certainly got dad interested in something," said Lucy happily. "That nephew of yours is a bright boy, Mrs. Ingalls."

"Isn't that what I've always told you?" said Eleanor Ingalls proudly. We heard the rest at supper time. Lucy's father ate more than he'd eaten in a week. His eyes fairly twinkled.

"Do you realize that I have a pretty important job over there?" he asked nodding toward the window. "One hundred thousand square feet of floor space and only one guard--me! Nobody can get in or out without my say-so. It's almost like guarding a castle. I guess it's even more important. Few castles have all that furniture in them."

Lucy and I laughed. It was good to see the old man himself again.

"My vacation's coming up next month," he went on, "Thought maybe I'd like to take a trip this year--to some place like Hollywood. Never did see how them pictures are made."

Lucy gave me a quick glance. "That's a wonderful idea, dad," she said. "Think you could get me some autographs while you're there?"

"At least one," he promised. And we knew he was speaking of Edmund E. Ingalls, the actor.

of Lamesa states that they are vacationing in Hawaii to see what our 50th state looks like. Mrs. David also included a clipping from the Lamesa newspaper about their son, Bill, vice president of the Lamesa National Bank, graduated from the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking at SMU recently. Bill has become quite active in civic, church and The Young Farmers and is also a director of Boys Ranch at San Angelo.

Friends of the Davids in Gorman are always glad to hear from the Davids and send congratulations to Bill on his achievements.

Attended the SWPGA meeting at Stephenville Saturday. Have been unable to get full details of this meeting so am holding the article until next week. Mr. Duncan of Georgia, guest speaker, raised a controversial issue while I was taking pictures and I did not get to write down the full details. Mr. Pat Cagle of Comanche challenged his statement and I am hoping to have an article by him also. I believe this story will be of interest to all peanut growers and Farm Bureau members and I want the facts before it is published.
