

Miss Ramey To End 40 Years Of Service August 31

Ruth Ramey of Richmond, home demonstration agent in Ft. Bend county since March 1, 1945, will close out what is believed to be the longest continuous record of Extension work by a women agent in Texas when she retires August 31. She will complete 40 years and two months of continuous service on that date.

Her extension career began in Eastland county on June 26, 1923.

RUTH RAMEY

She went to Wharton county Nov. 1, 1941, then transferred to Fort Bend county 18 years ago. She has helped bring about many changes in homemaking practices through county extension education programs spanning the four decades.

"During this period which began during the heyday of the Model T and lasted through the present period of excellent roads and air-conditioned automobiles, Extension programs have been adapted to meet the needs of the people. We have moved away from basic skill-type instruction in cooking, sewing and canning to the family-centered approach, major emphasis now is being placed on involvement of people, the coordinated subject matter approach, and management. We work with people through the county program building process and strengthen our programs by calling on professional and resource people to help us," she pointed out.

There was a time when it was easy to distinguish between rural and urban women, but today the woman who lives outside the city is just as smartly dressed and as well informed as her urban friend, Miss Ramey said. "Today, we work more and more with women who do not belong to home demonstration clubs. The HD members, who are thoroughly trained in leadership, assist on subcommittees of the overall county program building committee and work as adult leaders with the 4-H program."

At the time she began work with the Extension Service, the beef canning program was underway, and agents did virtually everything "but kill the animal." Cutting up the meat was an ordinary part of the job, and the canning was done primarily in a "retort", a large cast iron container in which 15 of the No. 3 cans of meat could be processed at the same time. Pressure canners were being used also, but they could process only 8 cans of that size at one time, so the larger container was more popular.

"When a beef was to be canned, everyone in the family took part. There was plenty of work to keep the men, women and children busy from dawn to dusk and some times later. From 300 to 500 cans a day was a peak performance by using several retorts, Miss Ramey said.

The shift to food freezing began about 20 years ago, when frozen food lockers became available to families, and freezing still dominates the food preservation work. Glass containers have replaced the cans for today's preserved and home canned foods.

Miss Ramey has worked with adults and youths during her 40-year career as a county home demonstration agent. Assistant agents have worked with her in the youth programs of Wharton and Fort Bend counties. Her outstanding work won her the Distinguished Service award given by the National Home Demonstration Agents Association several years ago.

A native of Sulphur Springs, Miss Ramey was graduated from high school there and from Texas Woman's University. She attended workshops there and at Texas A & M College and Ft. Collins, Colo.

Homes Abound with Potential Poisons, AMA Official Warns

Children, supposedly "safe at home," are poisoning themselves at the rate of nearly 1,500 a day.

"When you consider that more than a quarter million home-used products on the market contain toxins, it is not difficult to understand why more than 500 children die each year from self-administered poisons," said F. J. L. Blasingame, M.D., executive vice-president of the American Medical Association.

Children are naturally curious, especially the very young ones. They are prone to stick into their mouths anything they can get in their hands. It doesn't even have to taste good or look pretty."

Most accidental poisonings occur in children under five. Two-year-olds are the most poison prone, with one-year-olds close behind. At this stage in life their curiosity is at its height and their sense of fear not yet developed, Dr. Blasingame explained.

Medicine, especially aspirin, heads the list of items children seem to like to sample, accounting for nearly half of all accidental poisonings. In fact, too much of virtually any medicine can produce serious consequences.

Among the supposed non-edibles that frequently find their way into children's stomachs are cleaning and polishing agents, detergents, shoe polish, cosmetics, waxes, insecticides, paint, turpentine, chalk, bleaches, plant foods, plaster, perfume and decorations.

Medicines account for nearly half of all accidental poisoning in United States each year. Discard unused medicine and keep rest out of children's reach.

A primary cause of such accidents, says Dr. Blasingame, is storing poisonous substances in food containers or soft drink bottles. A toddler just naturally assumes that a soft drink bottle contains a treat. He'll drink whatever he finds in it. "The facts are clear," he warned. "Between 65 and 70 per cent of all poisonings take place because an item was accessible to a child."

"If we're going to live in modern homes with modern conveniences and modern medicines, we have to develop some up-to-date standards that will make home safe for our children."

Among suggestions for lessening the poisoning hazards in the home, Dr. Blasingame suggested:

- Keep potential poisons out of reach and tightly sealed.
- Never transfer toxic materials into household utensils.
- Don't leave your child alone in a room in which you're working with poisons.
- Give medicines only in a lighted room.

If your child might have taken a poisonous substance, call your doctor for instructions at once. Don't wait to see what happens.

NEAT LITTLE TRICK

A short time ago, reports the AP, the Cuban government raised the price of gasoline from 34 cents to 60 cents a gallon (not far from a 100 per cent jump) "in the interest of national economy." The dispatch continue: Premier Fidel Castro had suggested the increase as a means of forcing a greater contribution from the people to Cuba's progress.

This is one of those neat little tricks that are only possible in a totalitarian economy, where the government either owns everything, and competition is nonexistent. You might keep this in mind next time you hear private enterprise raked over the coals, and government ownership of industry lauded as a public blessing.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

The average working person during 1963 will work 2 hours and 21 minutes out of each 8 hour day to pay Federal, state and local taxes.

The same average worker will only work 1 hour and 24 minutes out of each 8 hour day to supply housing and housing operation.

Thus, a roof over the head costs less than half the cost of taxes.

Of course, the great grief in these comparisons is that the average worker is supporting more than one roof. Sen. Robert Byrd of W. Va., on the committee that administers civil affairs in Washington, D.C. picked 236 district welfare cases at random and found about 60% of these cases did not deserve welfare payments in the first place.

And the bitter fact remains that every taxpayer is not only burdened with the welfare load, but also with the salaries and expenses of almost 10,000,000 people employed by federal, state and local government.

While the major attention is focused on the costs of federal government, it is a fact that state and local governmental costs are contributing mightily to the cost of existence.

As the situation now stands, in ten years federal spending on non-defense items has jumped from approximately $23½ billion to $63½ billion, and at the same time state and local spending has jumped from $22 billion to $49 billion.

The nation's independent businessmen, voting through the National Federation of Independent Business, feel strongly that a reduction in income tax rates is essential to preserve a free economy, and to provide more employment.

Yet, the nation's independent business proprietors have also voted strongly in favor of cutting government expenses to offset, at least in part, a tax cut.

As shown by the above figures, there is plenty of water to be wrung out of governmental spending to provide sizeable tax cuts.

On the other hand, reflection on these figures cause wonder if the water must be wrung out of the federal budget alone, or whether at the same time local governments all through the land should be forced to cut back on their expenditures.

Today, the public debt of the federal government is over $100 billion more than the combined public debt of all the free nations of the world combined, yet these nations receive billions of U.S. dollars in foreign give away funds.

Thus, perhaps Castro is not the greatest concern of every American.

Perhaps of far greater concern is the actual solvency of the nation.
