Out of the first 4-H club and Future Farmers of America livestock show here Tuesday and Wednesday came some fine calves and lambs. Top view is of a calf fed by Jack Long of Mitchell county, winner in the dry lot class under 375 pounds, a winner over 35 others listed

Frank Morris In Race For Rail Commission Job

Frank Morris, who two years ago was runner-up to Col. Ernest O. Thompson, Saturday announced his candidacy for the place on the railroad commission now held by C. V. Terrell. In making his announcement Morris advanced certain ideas concerning the control of Texas' oil fields which are new to state politics.

He said he favored reasonable regulation of the flow of this natural resource so that the best interest of the operator, land owner, royalty holder, school children and the public in general would have adequate production. The whole purpose of proration is to prevent "physical waste" and to conserve our natural resources, all of which he pledges his support in order not to bring about an injustice after conservation has been cared for.

On the question of proration he purposes to regulate them after conservation has been cared for, as follows, permitting the allowable from wells to be regulated by the expense incurred in developing them until such time as their costs had been returned.

Texas To Honor Heroes Of Alamo In Services At Santone Today

SAN ANTONIO, Mar. 5 (AP)—A bit of world history and a story of courage in the face of overwhelming odds will be commemorated here tomorrow at services in memory of the defenders of the Alamo.

The ceremonies will be held at the grave of Benjamin R. Milam in Milam Square. Milam was killed in an assault on San Antonio on the December 9, preceding the fall of the Alamo on March 6, 1836. On the former date the Mexicans, led by General Cos, were in possession of San Antonio. Stephen F. Austin, commander of the Texas forces, had been called from the army to serve as a commissioner in seeking aid of the United States government. Milam, who had escaped from a Mexican prison and had aided in the capture of Goliad in October, was among the besiegers when Austin went away. The volunteers became restless. There were those who wanted to storm the Alamo; others wanted to go home.

"Who will go with old Ben Milam into San Antonio?" Milam is quoted as having said. Some 300 men responded. Outnumbered three-to-one, on December 9 they marched on the Alamo, with some artillery, but mostly house-to-house fighting. Cos surrendered Dec. 9, but Milam was among the several Texans killed.

The reprisal came in the form of Gen. Santa Ana and his siege of the Texans in the Alamo. The political situation in Texas at that time was fouled. Gov. Henry Smith's call to arms was taken with a grain of salt. It was planting time, anyway. So the garrison in the Alamo was left to the executioners.

The story of the fall of the Alamo is one of those stories of mass martyrdom which transcends the issues involved. It belongs to the history of humanity. Among the defenders of the Alamo were persons who came from Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Germany, Denmark and Belgium. The late Calvin Coolidge, visiting the Alamo, asked what it was built for. Texans who knew the oft-told tale of the Alamo laughed. But it was a question that was easier laughed at than answered.

Mail Carriers End Meeting

Association Will Meet At San Angelo In June

Southwest Texas Rural Mail Carriers closed out their quarterly meeting here Saturday evening by selecting San Angelo as the place for the June 4 session.

Paul Attaway, Big Spring, who served as president of the state association when a carrier at Winnsboro, collected $57 toward the fund for sending the Hardin-Simmons university cowboy band to the national convention in Washington in August. Attaway, who instigated the band idea, said $800 had been raised for the purpose.

Another development at the meeting was the launching of a move to get the state association meeting for Big Spring in 1939. It meets in Fort Worth this year.

Guines and Dawson county carriers were extended an invitation to affiliate with the Southwest Texas carriers unit.

John Green, Snyder, president of the association, presided over the session, and W. L. Fletcher, Hamlin, treasurer of the national association, was the principal speaker. E. E. Smith, Colorado, state vice-president, also attended.

Guests at the meeting, held in the clubhouse, were Irvin Daniels, A. A. Porter, W. T. Sergeant of the local postoffice, and Price Hankhead, local star route carrier and president of the state star route carriers group.

Bell Awaits Browns

COLLEGE STATION, Mar. 5 (AP)—Bulky Beau Bell, St. Louis Browns' slugging outfielder, finished up his last day of drilling with the Texas Aggie baseball team today and prepared to report at the Brownies' San Antonio training camp.

Bell, former Aggie star who led the Southwest conference hit parade in 1931, was a stubborn hold-out with the Browns through the first two weeks of last year's training. His younger brother, Woody, captains the Aggie team.

Pete Dowling, another former Aggie now catching for the Minneapolis Millers, also spent a week working out with the Aggies.

France Not So Anxious For Big Ships

Reported To Be A Brake On Plans Of U.S., Britain

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5 (AP)—News that France is acting as a brake on the rush of the United States and Britain to build larger battleships came today from reliable officials and diplomatic sources.

At the London naval consultations now in progress, France is holding up the movement toward bigger ships, it was revealed. Secretary of State Hull is studying developments there before sending instructions to the American delegates.

France has problems of her own which are now coming to the fore, officials said. She hesitates to grant permission to Britain and America to build larger battleships because of the effect this would have in Europe.

The result would be that Germany and Italy, France's possible opponents in war, also would build them. It was said, and France would have to do likewise.

France is willing to abide by a limitation of 35,000 tons on battleship size, but wants Germany (now bound by treaty with England) and Italy (not bound by any treaty) to do the same.

France is offering a compromise suggestion. She says, let the London naval treaty of 1922 stand as among the United States, Great Britain and France, and keep its limitation of 35,000 tons in effect. At the same time let a new treaty be written whereby the United States and Britain could build larger battleships for their Pacific fleets. France argues that if the mightier warships are made necessary by Japan's reported construction of such craft, then they should be confined to the Pacific. The new treaty would state that the super-dreadnaughts were designed for the Pacific and not the Atlantic or Mediterranean and could not be used in those seas.

New WT-NM Deal In The Ether

From all reports circulating in that area, Hobbs is replacing Roswell as a member of the West Texas-New Mexico baseball league but no official word has come from President Milton Price yet.

Jim Payne, who presided in Roswell a season ago, too, is in the dark as to that city's future plans but Jess Rodgers of the Midland Reporter says that Neal Rabe is in as manager of the Hobbs franchise comes May.

The move would benefit Big Spring more than any other city in that the distance traveling to and from that city would be cut almost in half.

Roswell is almost 370 miles from these boundaries while the distance between Hobbs and Big Spring is only 185 miles or thereabouts.

Clovis, the league's most distant city from Big Spring, is little more than 200 miles, about twice the distance to Lubbock. Wink lies 120 miles west and north while Midland is only 40 miles away.

Better still would be to move the Roswell franchise to Odessa where it should sell better than either of the New Mexico cities.

In that position Lubbock and Clovis would be segregated to the north, Wink and Odessa to the west and Midland and Big Spring only 40 miles apart on the east.

Fans either in Roswell or Hobbs probably don't know what is going to happen yet since any plans the Beaumont ball club and Rabe have are being kept in secrecy but Neal is going to have to make up his mind soon.

Local Trio Invited To Angelo Fights

Don Legge, director of the AAU in the San Angelo division, wants J. C. Wallace, middleweight, Alton Bostick, welter, and Red Wonnack, bantam, to come back to that city next Friday night and engage several of the Concho city's finest prizefighters.

There will be medals at stake in all divisions, Legge states. The trio will probably go since all expressed a willingness to don the gloves once more. All paid a visit to Fort Worth's Golden Gloves tournament two weeks ago.

Ho-Hum

This Gunnar Barland who licked the stuffing out of Budd's Bear Friday night in Madison Square Garden is the same Finn who plastered the Texas white hope, Tommy Beapurs, Dallas butcher boy, several months ago in the same arena. Gunnar gained very little prestige in stopping the younger Bear in the seventh but the forlorn skit Buddy waltzed through proved that neither of the Livermore boys should even be allowed in the ring.

Next week in the very same ring, the senior partner of the fighting brothers will attempt to raise the batting average of the Bear family but Maxie, like Dizzy Dean's fast ball and Brevity's stretch drive, is gone.

He fights Tommy Farr in what probably will be a repetition of the battle they put on in London last season. If Farr wins, and he's expected to, fandom will probably pass it off with an "Oh, well," and if Bear cops the duke then they can be expected to chime in with "Oh, well," which means six one way and a half down the other.

When Farr won the consolation prize in his bout with Jimmy Bradcock a while ago he lost his face. Mike Jacobs is going to have to look elsewhere if he really is looking for an opponent for Joe Louis.

MEET RECORDS BROKEN

WAR ADMIRAL COMES THROUGH TO WIN WIDENER CUP RACE,

Beats Zevson By Length And Half

Crowd Of 23,000 See Son Of Man-O-War Come In

By PAUL MICKELSON

MIAMI, Fla., Mar. 5 (AP)—War Admiral sailed into this tropical port with his tenth straight victory today in the Widener challenge cup race—and sail he did.

The mighty mile of the horse world, running over the treacherous racing strip of beautiful Hialeah where favorites have been biting the dust of defeat for 46 days, simply made his field of a dozen rivals look like selling platters. His margin as he crossed the wire was a length and a half over Mrs. E. H. Bartlett's Zevson, with War Minister third.

It was a perfect performance of great horseflesh and jockey that the crowd of 23,000 saw on this balmy day. When it was all over, the crowd gave the little brown son of mighty Man O'War a tremendous ovation. The Miami Jockey club gave the proud owner, Samuel D. Riddle of Philadelphia, $40,500 and the faithful received the short price of $2.70 for each two-dollar ticket backing the champ to win in the mutuels.

The triumph, the 13th in 16 races for War Admiral, increased his total bankroll to $231,625, which is just $17,840 shy of the winnings of his great father in 21 races in 1919 and 1920. One more race of the type he won today would send War Admiral past Man O'War's winnings, though 20 years ago they didn't have many $50,000 stakes.

FD'S BATTLE FOR REFORMS IS SHIFTING FROM CONGRESS TO THE ELECTION FRONTS

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5 (AP)—The zone of President Roosevelt's battle for reforms has shifted from congress itself to the congressional election front.

While he still hopes for further reform action before adjournment of the present session, he is prepared, if not reconciled, to see much of his program left over for the 76th congress which meets next January.

And it is that congress, not this, which will usher in the presidential campaign issues of 1940 and which may produce the candidates of 1940.

To most Washington observers this is the explanation of the curiously paradoxical exposition of presidential policy and tactics which marked the last week of Mr. Roosevelt's fifth year in the White House.

From the president himself came a written contention that it was reform, not recovery, that was lagging; that reform was as essential to permanent security in 1938 as in 1933. That was the central theme of the foreword published in a magazine to his story of the five years of the New Deal.

In sharp contrast to this evidence of fixed resolve to carry forward with reform against all opposition or obstruction, White House intimates who should know have argued for weeks that the president was keeping hands of congress except to retaliate his general objectives.

Not since the special session assembled last November have there been White House demands on congress for action. Always the president has phrased his requests as suggestions. It was and still is being left to congress to work out details.

Yet it is always added, as a part of this White House strategy explanation, that congress will be held responsible for failure to advance toward the objectives.

Into Congressional Elections This contrast between presidential objectives and tactics appears to many a positive indication that the reform fight will be carried into this year's democratic congressional primaries first of all, then into the election this fall.

It also underscores the increasing activity of the administration in senatorial primary contests, in Kentucky, Florida, Wisconsin, Idaho, and elsewhere, in behalf of incumbents who have been loyal to the president's leadership. Just how far the president intends to go in aiding his supporters has not been revealed, but there have been hints of much traveling during the campaigning months ahead.

Publication of the White House story of the New Deal provides campaign ammunition for New Deal stalwarts, as observers see it, both in party primaries and in the election campaign itself.

Just when the president made his indicated decision to await another test of public sentiment before a vigorous renewal of the reform campaign is a matter of dispute. Administration spokesmen are inclined to picture it as a recent development, due to happenings during the special and current sessions of congress. Most observers believe it dates back to the bitter party revolt in the senate that wrecked the administration's court bill.

will be a series of explanatory meetings in the county. First will be Monday at 7:30 p. m. at Knott. Another will follow at Gay Hill Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. with a second meeting scheduled for Vincent at 7:30 p. m. the same day. Cos-homa will have its meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. and Big Spring Thursday at 2 p. m. in the courthouse. Meetings at Vealmoor at 7:30 p. m. Thursday and at Lomax at 7:30 p. m. Friday will complete the series.

Voting will be on the issue: "Do you favor marketing quotas on cotton for the year 1938?" Producers will vote either "yes" or "no."

Control Program Approval of quotas in excess of 10 million bales in 1938 by a two-thirds majority will throw into motion a crop control program of compulsory compliance in cotton states. This would open the way to allotment of cotton quotas to states on the basis of cotton history and to counties on the same basis. Within counties, however, the allotment will be on the basis of titled acreage after deduction of wheat acreage. All wheat not designated as cover-crop prior to March 25 will be considered commercial production and subject to deduction.

Many observers believe the new crop control measure will result in much larger benefit payments to southern producers, particularly those of this section. In Howard county it was estimated that benefit and soil building payments would approximate $300,000 and that subsidy payments would be well over $100,000.

One of the radical changes under the program would be the payment of benefits on base production of cotton planted instead of on retired acreage as is the procedure under the old order.

Both Bucharin and Alexis Rykoff, former premier and a fellow defendant, said they had nothing to do with the assassination of Sergi Kiroff, Joseph Stalin's right-hand man, in 1934.

"Bucharin and Rykoff lie," reported another defendant, Genrikh G. Yagoda, one-time head of the dread secret political police. "We did not want to do it, but we yielded to Trotsky's insistence."

Before the crowded courtroom heard Bucharin and Yagoda, the former Soviet ambassador to Great Britain, Christian Rakovsky, declared he and his fellow conspirators "played three cards—German, Japanese and English."

Rakovsky said he worked for overthrow of Stalin's regime in co-ordination with Japanese and British intelligence service, adding that Trotsky too was in service of the British organization.

Miss Hollie Watson Arrives For Visit With Her Father

Miss Hollie Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Watson, 1509 Main street, arrived last week from San Francisco to be at the bedside of her father who is in the Big Spring hospital. Mr. Watson was seriously burned in an explosion at the Cosden Oil Refinery Feb. 13 but his condition is reported to be improved. Miss Watson graduated from the local high school in 1936 and since that time has been employed by the Abbott Laboratories of San Francisco. She is living with her sister, Mrs. H. E. Gillette, formerly of this city.

thy. If you or I are disappointed, we understand that money had something to do with the situation, but children find it more difficult to comprehend. Spring! Knif, Knif! The birds are all a-twitter, the grass is looking greener and real estate has gone up—all of which are sure signs in West Texas. While lying in bed one morning just wishing I had a million dollars and could spend the remainder of the year on the Florida beach building sand houses, I heard a faint voice in the next room say "Don't let your wishbone take the place of your backbone." I have a secret notion that it was only the voice of another radio announcer filling in the gaps on a program, but nevertheless, the thought sent me scurrying to work. Too many of us today are using our wishbone instead of the original backbone. The big problem is that a lot of people are too smart to work but not smart enough to live without work.

A Sketch Of A Pioneer Woman

When Mrs. R. B. Zinn of Big Spring was born in Pettus county, Missouri, August 19, 1846, the western limits of the United States were the Sabine and Red rivers and the Rocky mountains; the population of the country was about 20,000,000; the Mexican war was just beginning; the all-absorbing questions of our country were states' rights and squatter sovereignty; Abraham Lincoln was an unknown country lawyer; and James K. Polk was serving as the eleventh president of our republic. Though the world has moved up many notches since that date and our country has made great progress in civilizing and modernizing agencies, yet Mrs. Zinn is still with us, a connecting link of the simple past with this complicated, rapidly-moving present.

MRS. R. B. ZINN

Mrs. Zinn was born during the period of perilous problems. Our republic, which had not yet proved itself in the eyes of the doubting kingdoms of the world, was being rent asunder by sectionalism brought about by the slavery question. The foolish minimized the dangers, but the wise lived in terror of what the future might hold in store. No incidents and experiences in her long life stretching over most a century are recalled with more spirit than those incident to the Civil war. Missouri was a border state that had been born into the Union with the pangs of much travail. There remained many slumbering hatreds that only awaited an opportunity for expression, and the fratricidal strife of the Civil war furnished that occasion. It was hard to distinguish enemy from friend. While the better class of citizens were either fighting with the Federals or Confederates, the Bushwhackers and Jayhawkers were terrorizing the country with robbery and pillage.

Mrs. Zinn's father, Isaac Moon, owned a 160-acre farm, well stocked and improved. Such farms and such homes offered just the opportunity desired for pillage. Quoting

Mrs. Zinn, "The Jayhawkers threatened my father's life. They would break into the house in the middle of the night and call out, 'strike a light', but before we could strike a light they would be in, all armed with guns and pistols, and sabers. They would go through our trunks and boxes and even turn up our beds looking for things. They even took little things like pins. They stole our horses and cows, even took off our oxen, old Tom and Darb, but we found these animals tied in a creek bed. They went into our smokehouses and carried away our meat and fruit, and anything they wanted that was good to eat, and we had plenty of it. The 'Whackers would hide out on the creeks and in the woods in the daytime and rob at night."

To deter this robbery, in 1863, Gov. Ewing of Missouri ordered the people living in the border counties to Kansas to vacate their homes and move farther into the interior. This placed a great hardship on the homeowners of that region. Mrs. Zinn states, "Our bins were full of wheat, our smokehouses were full of meat, preserves, lard, and cider; and our corn was in good roasting gear. Besides we had forty stands of bees full of honey, yet we had to leave it all. My mother loaded us six children in an oxwagon, all crying, and set out for Sedalia." At the close of the Civil war the family returned to find the home and all outbuildings, and even the rails that fenced the farm, in ashes. The father split new rails for a fence and Mrs. Zinn, then a girl of nineteen, hauled them and distributed them to their places. She said, "I was the oldest child, had no brother except a small child, and could hitch up a team as quick as anybody, and could ride the hounds of the wagon and drive in a sweeping trot."

In the elections that brought Kansas into the Union, sectionalism ran high and murder was the common method of revenge. Again we quote Mrs. Zinn, "The Kansas Jayhawkers, by some method, had secured a list of the people who had voted for slavery in that state and they would cross over into Missouri and burn those people's houses, pile all the furniture and clothing on the bed and set it on fire, not even leaving the family a change of clothing. My mother saw three houses on fire at one time. The father was usually away in the army, but if he were an old man and at home they would kill him too. That's what started Jesse and Frank James to robbing. I lived about twenty miles from them. They were bad men, but they didn't do all the mean things they were accused of."

tle to Missouri in 1869, but he returned with more than the products of his sales. He had met, wooed and won the heart of Miss Moon, and brought her back to Texas as his wife. They arrived at the little village of Ft. Worth — the town didn't even have a railroad — May 12, 1873.

But not every cattleman made money during those days. The year of 1879 was very dry. The cattle Mr. Zinn brought to Young county either died of starvation or were stolen. This left the new family on rockbottom again. They had heard much talk of Big Spring. It was a young bustling town and was building rapidly. They decided to come west and start life over again, and arrived here April 16, 1883. It was still largely a town of tents and shacks. The first home of the Zinns was a four-room house located on the present site of the First Christian church. This house represented about the best in town. The family bought the lot on which the present home is located on Nov. 10, 1883. At that time it was on the edge of the town. A three room house was moved on it, brought from Colorado. It is part of the present structure.

Mr. Zinn's father was a Presbyterian minister, was educated in Germany, and was president of the first college founded in Austin, Texas. Mr. Zinn himself was a school teacher and a surveyor. Soon after his arrival in Big Spring he was elected county surveyor, and he assisted in making the main surveys in twelve of the neighboring counties to Howard. He died in 1917.

During those pioneer days there were no conveniences, but people seemed happy without them. Frank Baze was the public waterhauler. Water came from the big spring and cost 25 cents a barrel. The Fisher brothers were the principal merchants of the town. Mrs. Zinn says, "The Fishers carried everything, from a threshing engine to a paper of pins, and they were accommodating and as honest as they could be, as straight as a string." The family physician was Dr. W. W. McIntyre. There were no church buildings in the town. There was no school building, but a small wooden structure was being built on the present site of the public library. This was used by the various churches as a place for worship.

No story of the life of Mrs. Zinn would be complete without reference to her religious life. Some facts are best related in her own words. She said, "I was converted when a small child at a Baptist Association. My grandfather, Jesse Moon of Virginia, was a Baptist preacher and my father, Isaac Moon, was a Baptist deacon and a good Christian man. The Jayhawkers destroyed his property, but he didn't hold any ill will against anybody.

"At the close of a big revival meeting, on January 3, 1865, I was baptized with 24 others in Knob creek when it was snowing and where they had to cut the ice which was about two feet thick. You know, that preacher wrapped up in a blanket and drove two miles before he changed his clothes, and came back and preached that night. I believe the Lord protects people when they do their duty."

This scribe's eyes possibly showed a little skepticism at the thought of two foot ice, for Mrs. Zinn added, "You know it gets mighty cold in Missouri."

R. B. Zinn organized the first Sunday school in Big Spring and was the first superintendent. Since there were neither Presbyterian nor Baptists churches in the town the family attended the Methodist church. The Methodist minister made an appeal for the union of efforts of all Christians and invited members of other churches to come in with them and worship until their respective organizations were perfected. Mr. and Mrs. Zinn talked the matter over and decided to accept the minister's offer to "board" with them. As the children grew up they joined the Methodist church and "Mother Zinn," as she is affectionately called, is still "boarding." But in truth, she is not the boarding kind. She has made a happy active Christian. She has been a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union for 40 years. She was president of the Woman's Missionary Society of her church for 30 years, and taught a Sunday school class for twenty-five years. Advanced age has impaired her hearing so that she cannot enjoy church services as formerly, but she said, "I enjoy my religion. Sometimes I get almost shouting happy here all by myself."

Longevity in the Zinn family is characteristic. Her mother reached almost the century mark. Mrs. Zinn is very active for a person of her age, which is now 91. People marvel at how she trips up and down the church steps and at her activity in general. She says, "I have worked all my life. I used to spin and card and weave. I could weave any kind of cloth and make any garment I wanted to. I made my husband's and my children's clothes. I can cook. I don't ask any woman any odds when it comes to cooking. I sleep well, never have a pain." Her many friends in Big Spring are hoping she may reach her century mark.

Floyd R. 'Pepper' Martin said Saturday that he would seek the democratic nomination to the office of sheriff of Howard county.

In announcing his candidacy for the office, Martin said that he was basing his appeal on a program of law enforcement. "I believe I can give the people of this county honest, impartial enforcement of the law, enforcement with fairness and justice to all," said Martin. "If the people of this county elect me to the office, I will devote my entire time to see that the duties of the office are discharged as the citizens want them carried out."

For the past nine years Martin has been a resident of Howard county. During the past six years he has been employed at the Corden refinery and prior to that time at the Howard County Refinery. He is a man of family and urged voters to make "the fullest investigation of my record as a dependable citizen."

Two years ago he met most of the voters in his campaign for treasurer. In entering the race for sheriff, Martin said he planned an active campaign and requested serious consideration at the hands of the voters in the county.
