Temperatures Climb As State Gripped By Severe Heat Wave

Mercury Hits 97, Due To Go Higher Today

All Points In Texas Report Near-Record Heat; Storm Breaks Up

West Texas' widely heralded breezes failed their boosters Sunday, as the section sweltered under a June heat wave that sent temperatures up near the century mark.

All the state reported excessively high temperatures. At Dallas, the maximum of 105 came within two-tenths of a degree of equalling the all time high in 1925.

The highest reading at the Big Spring airport was 97. That was under last Wednesday's 99, but the heat was more oppressive because of sustained high marks.

The weather forecaster gave no promise of immediate relief, predicting continued fair weather for tonight and Tuesday.

Some Crops Hurt
Hot winds from the north, moving toward the low pressure area in the Gulf of Mexico were blamed for the heat wave which gripped almost all the state.

The blizzing sun, with the dry winds, was reported damaging crops in some sectors, but it was not believed that cotton in this area would be immediately harmed.

The weather bureau at Brownsville said the force of the disturbance Sunday had diminished so that it was no longer of gale proportions.

To Make Trips Wednesday, Advertising Holiday Event

Big Spring representatives by the carload will deploy through West Texas Wednesday, visiting scores of towns and inviting their residents to join this city in its first annual water and sports carnival on July Fourth.

Plans for a large group of goodwill cars to make separate trips were mapped at a meeting called by the chamber of commerce at the Hotel Settles Monday morning.

TOWNSEND TO BACK LEMKE IF HE SUPPORTS PENSION PLAN

NEW YORK, June 22. (AP)—Dr. Frances E. Townsend, organizer of the old age revolving pension plan, said today he will personally back the candidacy of Rep. representative William Lemke for president provided the North Dakota accepts unequivocally the old age pension idea.

Britain Still In A Battle On Sanctions

Govt. Would Lift Penalties But Won't Recognize Italy's Conquest

LONDON, June 22. (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the house of commons today that the British government does not recognize Italy's annexation of Ethiopia. He told the house last week of Great Britain's move at Geneva for abolition of the league of nations' sanctions against the fascist nation.

Need Military Strength
The government chief declared military strength was needed for collective security and said: "Let advocates of collective security who are unwilling to provide a single volunteer for our forces or a single shell for aircraft think of that."

Heading for support of the government's rearmament program, Baldwin said: "It risks not to be taken, if we ever have to fight again, see that our own people at all events have the best there is to fight with in quality and quantity."

Before a conservative rally at Wislaw, Scotland, Baldwin explained that an oil embargo against Italy during the Italo-Ethiopian war was impracticable because of the United States' attitude.

32 States Get Pension Funds
Government Aid Now Being Distributed to 65 Pct. Of Aged

WASHINGTON, June 22. (UP)—The social security board said today 635,000 persons in 32 states and the District of Columbia were receiving old age assistance from grants provided by the federal government to bolster state funds.

Officially estimated that this represented 65 percent of the needy aged in the country.

Counted among those whose plans have been approved is also Texas, which will not receive any funds until July 1.

The federal quarterly allotment now amounts to $16,788,854, and the total amount spent in the states approved—federal funds plus state funds—during the three-month period is $23,152,578.

Under the plan now in operation, the federal government pays the state a sum equal to half of any amount up to $30 a month which the state pays to a needy person 65 or over who is not cared for by a public institution. In addition, it pays the state an amount equal to five percent of its assistance grant which may be used either for old age assistance or administrative expenses.

TEXANS IN SPOTLIGHT AT CONVENTION

Posse Close On Heels Of Fugitive Pair

Texas Convicts Sighted On Ranch, Fired On By Deputy Sheriff

COLUMBUS, June 22. (AP)—Possemen were believed today to be close on the heels of Luke Trammell and Forrest Gibson, who escaped from the Retrieve prison farm Friday, killing a guard.

Later two men, believed to be the escaped convicts kidnaped J. W. Casagane, 60, of Columbus, and fled north. A group of negroes reported the kidnapping to the posse.

The farm manager said he was told the two convicts were hungry and appeared to be nearing exhaustion.

The shotguns and pistol they carried were believed to be the same taken from Guard R. L. Steele at the farm a few minutes before Guard Felix Smith was killed with the buckshot slugs. The killing and escape were made in a corn field about three miles from the prison camp.

Opposition Of AI Smith Draws Jeers

Abolition Of Two-Thirds Rule May Develop Into A Controversy

PHILADELPHIA, June 22. (AP)—The new deal hosts rolled into Philadelphia today, shouting cheers for President Roosevelt and jeers for Alfred E. Smith on his statement asking that the Roosevelt policies be repudiated at the convention opening.

Beneath this solid front, however, ran a swelling discussion of how far the struggle over abandoning or retaining the two-thirds vote rule would extend.

Third Party
A strong undercurrent of private talk circled likewise about the newly created "Union party" of Representative Lemke of North Dakota and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit, but, publicly at least, the democratic spokesmen either declined to comment on repeated predictions of a Roosevelt sweep.

More police sirens shrieked as members of the party-high command were escorted about the city. The convention tempo was set high.

Broadly-beaming James A. Farley, chairman of the national committee, pronounced to a circle of newspapermen that a $2,000,000 campaign fund would be sufficient to re-elect Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner. Half, or nearly half of it, he said, would be realized from what he described as 5,000 "nominate rallies" gathered when the president delivers his acceptance speech Saturday night.

Germany After Position As Mediator For Italy And England

BERLIN, June 22. (AP)—German diplomacy hopes to nose out France as a mediator between Great Britain and Italy.

No body will admit this officially, but circumstantial evidence as well as information obtained privately in the Wilhelmstrasse and in foreign embassies all point that way.

Hitler's personal ambassador, extraordinary, is seriously considering accepting the post of German ambassador to the Court of St. James, officials said.

Panny Farmer Defeats Bristow In Hamlin Golf Tournament

Guy Bush Is Replaced By Jim Weaver

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—Fights between ball players on the field furnish a tonic for the average fan. That is the conclusion Thomas Jefferson Hockey, retired president of the American association, has reached after 40 years of experience and observation...

When the Pirates gave up Larry French and Freddie Lindstrom to the Chicago Cubs after the close of the 1934 season, they got Guy Bush and Babe Herman—and, "for good measure," Big Jim Weaver was tossed in...

As so often happens in baseball deals, the big name in the transaction failed to live up to expectations while the athlete who was merely "thrown in" proved very valuable.

When the Pirates gathered at training camp this spring, Manager Pie Traynor planned to use Big Jim as a relief hurler. Blanton, Swift, Hoyt and Bush were slated to start. But it hardly worked out that way.

Blanton failed to flash the form that made him the outstanding freshman pitcher in the National league last season. Swift was slow in rounding into shape and White Hoyt was lost when forced to submit to a major operation.

AVERAGE FAN LIKES FIGHTS AT BALL GAME

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—That is the conclusion Thomas Jefferson Hockey, retired president of the American association, has reached after 40 years of experience and observation.

"Of course, fighting, with an umpire is something else," Hickey explains. "You have to give protection to umpires to uphold their authority. My instructions to umpires, however, were to keep out of the fights between players."

"When Joe Tinker was managing the Columbus club, he protested to me and said: 'You're ruining my club. You're taking all the fight out of 'em.' So I told the umpires to keep away from the players' fights and not to put the athletes out of the game for fighting among themselves."

"Of course, I did not tell the newspapers at the time, as official head of the league, that we were encouraging fighting, but that was exactly what we were doing. We learned that the public liked it."

"Why, the players aren't even allowed to talk to each other any more. Isn't that carrying it a bit too far?" Hickey, retired on a pension and serving as chairman of the board of directors of the association, is immensely fond of baseball. He spends most every afternoon at Wrigley field, watching the National league champion Cubs battle their way through the present pennant race.

Second Base To Be Easy Pick For All Star Game

Only Three Serious Contenders Are Listed

(By United Press) This is the fifth of a series of articles comparing players eligible to participate in the Texas league all-star game July 25.

The second baseman who will compete for each Texas league team in the "dream game" at Dallas July 25 appears to be one of the easiest choices voters must make.

In the north, the choice goes to Leslie Mallon, Dallas' second-sacker, with some votes going to Charles English of Fort Worth.

Because Croucher is described as such an outstanding second-baseman it is believed that the remaining "southerners" must bid for the utility job.

The other north players considered possible second-basemen on the all-star team, but more probably utility men, include Del Young of Oklahoma City and Ivan Crawford and Robert Allaire of Tulsa.

Crocheted Insertion and Edgings

By RUTH ORR
Pattern No. 312

Have you looked over your linen closet lately? The summer is such a good time to get things in order and do some of the replenishing of the better things. Here are some crocheted edgings and an insertion that will help to make your nice linens neater. They will add so much to the beauty of your guest towels, bath towels, pillow cases, bureau scarfs and all the other things that can be transformed by a touch of handwork.

The pattern envelope contains complete, easy-to-understand illustrated directions for each of these six designs, with diagrams to aid you; also what crocheted hook and what material and how much you will need.

To obtain this pattern, send for No. 312 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Big Spring Herald, Needlework Dept., P. O. Box 206, Station D, New York, N. Y.

this week, at 2 p. m. each day. Announcement of the school was made today by E. M. Conley, store manager, who extended an invitation to the public. Admission is free.

"Due to scientific advances which has produced modern methods of cooking under pressure, a number of important factors have entered into the science and fine art of cooking," said Conley in commenting on the school. "It is now possible to cook an entire meal in from 10 to 30 minutes and to produce tender, delicious dishes from cheaper cuts of meat because of the pressure cooking method. This school has been organized by Montgomery Ward to provide the very latest information on the subject to housewives and all who are interested."

At the school a well known authority on pressure cooking will not only discuss these new developments in the art of cooking but will give demonstrations showing just how such time saving, money saving cooking can be done. He will discuss the subject thoroughly and an opportunity will be given for open discussion and questions.

How To Give A Bridge Luncheon With Apologies To Emily Post And The Dallas News

(By ONA R. PARSONS)

Emily Post has an article in Sunday's Dallas News that we advise all bridge players to read. It contains some very pertinent advice. It tells how to entertain twelve bridge players at luncheon when your dining room won't seat that many. Big Spring could give Emily Post a few pointers on that score, but yet it won't hurt to read the article and learn what mistakes you are making.

In the first place, said Emily, you send out written invitations. Then, a few days before the luncheon, for fear some of your invitees have run off to New York or Europe without letting you know, you send a second note reminding them that they have accepted. Emily tells you exactly what to say. . . . Big Spring would disagree slightly on that point. Big Spring does not send out reminder notes but if it did they would likely read this way:

Dear So-and-so, if you can't remember that you have had the honor of an invite to my party you can stay at home and I'll manage without you.

Maybe the note would be more politely expressed. What bridge players do in this town is talk about those who forgot to come. It's more effective; it means you don't forget the second time.

Menu

The solution of the lunching problem is to seat the diners around little tables. Emily didn't say bridge tables, but one may infer that. By all means, she said, prepare a menu that suits your kitchen. She recommends a chicken en casserole per table, surrounded by vegetables from your own garden. If you don't have a garden—if you live on top of a sun-baked clay hill you are out of Emily's class; so you have to go to the grocery store. She did not say what variety of canned goods she endorsed.

Linen

You spread the table with luncheon cloths—damask preferred. (Oh, Emily, we are so proud of our Italian cutwork, and our Philippine linen and those colored linens we've won at other parties!) Every cloth should be exactly alike and of course you put felt hotpads underneath so the little tables will have the same feel as the dining table.

By that time if you have enough ingenuity left to think of something to eat and enough money to buy it you feed your guests.

What puzzled me about Emily's article was the woman who was writing it for . . . a woman who has attended bridge luncheons knows that good taste demands that she not vary too greatly from prevailing customs and she knows what those customs are. And a woman who never attended a bridge party has no good reason for inviting people in . . . but Emily never explained that.

R. C. Fyeatt has gone to El Paso with officials of the General Mills company to conduct a school for bakers.

Vita-Ray Demonstrator To Meet Women This Week Who Care For Skin

Miss Betty Henderson, representative of the Vita-Ray toilet products, is giving demonstrations of this unique output in the cosmetic line this week at Cunningham and Phillips drug store number one. Facts You Should Know About Your DOCTOR

Fifteenth of a series of articles devoted to the Medical profession and public health. Published through the courtesy of Jack Frost Pharmacy.

75% OF DOCTORS DIE FROM EXHAUSTION

Every Doctor goes through the experience of having friends and patients ask why he does not "take his own medicine" and protect his health. The average Doctor is a good example of what his patients shouldn't do, in the way of burning up energy faster than it can be replaced by nature.

Directly, or indirectly, in the case of 75% of the Doctors who die each year, plain exhaustion is the cause. Depletion from overwork, worry and lack of rest induces heart trouble, kidney disorders, acute gastric conditions.

The physical and mental demands on a Doctor with a busy practice, would spend the average business man.

He simply would not be able to understand why the Doctor does not systematize his practice better and insure himself a more healthfully rounded out routine. Sickness and accident do not wait upon routine, therefore, a Doctor cannot always work on a pre-arranged schedule.

However, the patient can often help, by being on time to appointments, telephoning only when necessary, calling at night only in cases of emergency and co-operating with the Doctor's treatment.

Usually when it is necessary for you to wait on a Doctor, someone has been late in an appointment, or some unexpected emergency has arisen.

Chapter 22 NEW MYSTERY

Logan was a quiet man, gifted with what was almost a protective coloring. Looking at him, one could easily fall to notice him. Noticing him, one found him not unlike one's idea—seldom realized—of a county parson.

Dinwiddie, his younger companion, was stocky and muscled, and had trained as a boxer. One noticed him inevitably, but his genial smile, and rosy, boyish face was disarming.

Dirk sat talking with them both in the darkened car. They had not wired him in connection with Martin's adventure.

"Though that has its significance," said Logan, "in the light of what's happened since."

"Last night at ten o'clock Dinwiddie and I were sitting here opposite the gates, when some one came down the drive. I couldn't be sure at first that it wasn't a shadow, but it looked like a woman's figure. It seemed to disappear once or twice, and then it came and stood in the open gates, and waved a hand."

"It was just a flash, just a flicker, that wave. No one not looking for it, or watching the gates, could have seen it. A few seconds later a taxi slowed up at the curb, out of range of the lamp there by the delivery-entrance."

"What color was the taxi?" Dirk asked.

"Green. Green and black. The figure that had waved got in without seeming to speak a word. It was Mrs. Joris. She wore a raccoon coat, and a small dark hat. Our instructions were to follow, and we started at once. The taxi went through Yonkers, into Manhattan, along the drive and the ramp."

"Did you lose it?" asked Dirk.

"We did not. We stayed with it till it stopped at a brownstone in Forty-sixth Street. Here's the number. There's a speak in the basement, called the 'Araby'."

Dirk knew. It was the house at which Hope had stopped the night before, and which she had left on Monday night.

"The lady got out," said Logan, "and went up the front steps. Pretty soon the door opened and she disappeared inside."

"I had no instructions to go further. I had followed her and I saw the place she went. You hadn't spoken for more evidence than that. But in the light of what had happened the night before, assuming the best of evidence you might be after, and you being away..."

"You went in, I take it," said Dirk.

"No, I sent Dinwiddie. He put on his telegraph messenger's cap, we fixed up what looked like a telegram. Then we drove down the street a way, and Dinwiddie went back on foot."

Dinwiddie took up the account. "It was a private house broke up into apartments, two on a floor. I knew that from the bells on the mail-boxes, and the cards under 'em. The Cockspear Billiard Club was on the first floor, and I rung that bell. When the boy from the club opened the door I said, 'Telegram for Strum.' That was a name I'd seen on one of the cards. When the boy groused, 'You run out hell,' I said, 'Finger skidded.' He said, 'Third floor, rear.' And I run up on the stairs. I knew she wasn't on the first floor."

"I didn't find her on the second either. Nobody answered one door, and I was kinder worried."

"Well, anyhow, the second-floor front was dead, and there was just a crowd of fellers playin' poker in the rear. None of 'em was named Fruhlingspenning."

"Fruhlingspenning was the name on the telegram," Logan explained. "My own invention."

Dirk, who had slight experience with the professional detectives' version to a brief tale, said to Dinwiddie.

"Get on, will you?"

"We'll skip the third floor then," said Dinwiddie. "I'd just started up the last flight when I heard some body behind me on the stair. On the top floor I knocked at the first door I come to, and a voice—a man's voice—said, 'Come in.' Like that. No questions, or nothin'."

"So I opened the door, and there she was—Mrs. Joris. She had off her coat and she was sittin' on the couch. The man was sittin' beside her, and he had hold of her hand."

"What man?" asked Dirk.

"Well, he looked kinder foreign. He was about my age—around twenty-five or so—and slim, and his dressin' gown was black with gold snakes on it."

"Dragons," said Logan.

"All right. Anyhow, he was surprised when he saw me. He'd thought it was the man behind me, the waiter or whatever it was."

He grabbed the telegram out of my hand, and gave the waiter an order—in Italian, mostly. There was some English swear-words in it, like he'd run out of Italian ones. And I understood 'Fazzini cocktail!'

"The lady... Mrs. Joris... had gone over to the window, and stood there with her back to us. The window was covered with curtains, and the shades were down. She couldn't see a thing through it, but she stood there like she was lookin' out."

"It was a sort of den where they were... battle-axes, and humidors, and sofa-pillows. There was a door leadin' out of it into another room. It was open a ways, and I was tryin' to see through it, when all of a sudden I saw the man had bust open the wire, and was mad as the devil."

"If blazed out. This telegram's for..." He couldn't pronounce the name. He hadn't looked at it before he opened it, and he'd spent a good while spellin' out the message. It said, 'Willy has mumps,' and was signed, 'Aunt Susy.'

"He jammed it back at me. Mrs. Joris had turned around, and was looking at me. The man said, 'There's no one of that name in the house.' He seemed to know, so I went downstairs, and out."

"We waited across the street," said Logan. "And in exactly half-an-hour Mrs. Joris came out. She looked up and down the street, then stepped into the green cab which had waited for her."

"She was suspicious, of course," said Dirk.

"Of the telegram perhaps," agreed Logan. "But not of our car. She drove straight home, and we followed her. Of course we may assume she had not stayed as long as she had intended. Even so, all things considered, we have evidence of a type."

Logan cleared his throat. The young gentleman did not seem to relish the facts now that they had been brought to him. He remained silent, not moving, till Dinwiddie, who sat with him in the dark tonneau of the car, pulled out a notebook, and turned his flash upon it.

"A list of the people in the house," Logan explained. "We've looked them all up, but it was Fazzini himself she called on. Tony Frazzini. He's the owner of the Araby, and of the house; rents out bachelor-apartments. Lives alone on the top floor... that's where she went... and seldom appears in the speak."

"Decent chap, so far as anybody knows. No record. There was a fight once in the Araby, that's all. A brother of Tony's got mad at something somebody said to a lady, and cleaned out the place so fast the police had to come in."

Dirk said, "Frazzini probably has a side-line, whether he's got a record, or not. Looks as if he might be doing a nice little business in blackmail."

"Hardly," said Logan, stung by this aspersion on his thoroughness. "Tony's been there ten years. There'd have been some smell of it."

Logan went on, "Besides, Frazzini's something of a prince in his own world, and it's not the underworld, either. There's a rumor that he comes of a fine old Florentine family, and that Frazzini's not all of his name. It's not as if he were a common wop... though one of his brothers is chief in a downtown hotel, and another, the one who cleaned out the Araby, is said to belong to some traveling circus. Which reminds me..."

"Dirk broke in. 'Do you know this Frazzini when you see him?'

"Oh, yes," Logan replied easily. "Do you?" Dirk asked Dinwiddie. "Well, I've seen him. I'm sure this was him."

Indian Chief Revealed As Licensed Plumber

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22. (UP)—Research workers of the federal writers project have brought to light the only Indian chief in the United States who is a licensed plumber.

His name is Red Horse. A chief of the Mohawk tribe of the Iroquois, he was born in Milwaukee 66 years ago, and has lived in San Francisco the past 17 years.

When Red Horse isn't wielding his steam-fitting tools, he is equally adept at bead stringing and Indian handicraft. His particular hobby is making gauntlets, moccasins and rugs worked in designs symbolic of the history and mythology of his tribe.

Detroit Judge Warns Slow Motor Drivers

DETROIT, June 22. (UP)—Detroit, one of the unhealthiest cities in the nation for automobile speeders, has turned thumbs down on the slow road hog.

Traffic judges have asked Police Commissioner Heinrich Pickett to stamp out the practice of slow-moving vehicles holding their own in the center of busy streets, blocking several lanes of traffic.

"These slow movers are causing other motorists to dodge in and out of traffic, thus increasing the hazard," Judge George T. Murphy said. "They are as much a menace as the speeder."

Construction Of Bridge Part Of Boy Scouts' Work In Pioneering

CAMP FAWCETT, BARKS DALE, June 22.—When Boy Scouts earn their pioneering merit badge during camp, they really do some pioneering.

One of the requirements for the badge is that they construct a bridge capable of holding up 200 pounds. Six boys working on pioneering this week decided to combine their efforts and build a bridge on the bank of the river. They were required to place ledgers and transoms to standards and brace on the banks and then lower

Demo War Chest Of Two Millions Sought By Farley; Rallies Planned

PHILADELPHIA, June 22. (AP)—A money-raising goal of $2,000,000 has been fixed for the 1936 campaign by Chairman James A. Farley of the democratic national committee, with the added assertion that that was the amount spent by the party in 1932.

He told reporters he expected "a million people" to attend "Roosevelt nominator" rallies throughout the country Saturday night when the president is scheduled to accept his renomination at Franklin Field here. Tickets for these rallies are selling at $1 each. The proceeds are to go to the national committee.

Switching then to a discussion of civil service, Farley said he favored placing all postmasters—but not the postmaster general—under civil service.

"You'll never see that in our time," he said.

Farley predicted that the party platform this year would be only slightly longer than the one adopted in Chicago in 1932.

"My own guess is about 2,000 words," he said. "What was the 1932 one—1,600?"

He also predicted that John N. Garner would be the only person entered for the vice-presidential nomination, and that Governor Tammidge of Georgia would support the ticket in next fall's election. He reiterated several previous predictions that Roosevelt would carry every state.

MANY BRITISHERS PROTEST LIFTING OF ITALIAN SANCTIONS

LONDON, June 22. (AP)—Thousands of letters swelled parliamentary mailbags today in protest against the government's decision to support lifting of sanctions against Italy.

Many persons, at home and abroad, wrote and cabled their opinions to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Anthony Eden, foreign secretary.

Mail trucks rolled through London streets bringing other letters to parliamentary representatives in the house of commons.

Labor leaders, sponsoring the protest campaign, left for weekend speaking tours by which they hope to increase the volume of protest against the cabinet's action.

The liberal party passed resolutions proclaiming the government's declaration "a political disaster of the first magnitude" while the league of nations union urged its members to "use all constitutional means" to obtain reversal of the decision.

FARMERS IN DAKOTA SEEK DROUTH RELIEF

BISMARCK, N. D., June 22. (AP)—Drought-battered farmers assembled in county mass meetings throughout North Dakota today to discuss means of relieving their plight.

Governor Walter Welford shaped a request for advice on how to surmount the problem of withered crops for a radio broadcast to the gatherings from Fargo.

He planned to compile their suggestions, fly to a Washington conference with President Roosevelt and seek federal funds for sustenance for the farmers and feed for their livestock.

All Aliens To Be Taken Off WPA Lists

WASHINGTON, June 22. (UP)—The Works Progress administration set out today to purge federal work-relief rolls of 120,000 aliens illegally in this country or who have not declared their intention to become citizens.

They must be discharged from their government jobs as soon after June 30 as Administrator Harry L. Hopkins starts spending the new $1,425,000,000 fund, and face possible deportation in wholesale numbers.

The move represented a complete change in relief policy. Under the current $4,000,000,000 program, WPA gave relief to aliens as well as citizens.

Hopkins will follow this course in dismissing work-relief jobholders who have no legal right in the country:

1. President Roosevelt will use part of the new money financing a nationwide survey of employable needy to discover the aliens.
2. Aliens will be discharged if they did not file declarations of intentions to become citizens prior to June 18, date of passage of the new work-relief act, or if they entered the country illegally.
3. The department of labor will cooperate with WPA in its campaign, possibly deporting many of those discharged.

Officials said most of the aliens dismissed would be found in New York, and through the Southwest where Mexicans are centered near the border.

The new policy was made mandatory by congress.

Hopkins estimated four per cent of the 8,000,000 needy working under the $4,000,000,000 program are illegal aliens. He figured two-thirds of the 120,000 have dependents who are regular American citizens, but congress' amendment did not provide for that contingency.

Parties Call Joint Causes
MOUNDVILLE, Kan. (UP)—Something unusual in politics was observed here when a caucus call was signed jointly by G. Haldebrecht and J. Wedel, republican and democratic township committee respectively. It summoned Turkey Creek township voters to an independent caucus to nominate candidates for township offices.

Taylor Anderson is spending a few days with relatives and friends in Summitville, Tenn. He expects to return to Big Spring June 28th.

Opposition

This rule is an historic one. Its genesis was in the "solid south," where powerful figures first pushed it across so that the northern and western states—far outnumbering them—could not dictate without effective opposition the choice of a presidential and vice-presidential candidate.

Has Led To Deadlocks Under it, just as the name implies, two thirds of the voting delegates must cast their ballots for one man before he becomes the convention's choice. The rule, adopted anew by each convention after it meets, has led to prolonged democratic convention deadlocks.

The question of a possible plank advocating a constitutional amendment to legalize specifically state wage and hour legislation also went unanswered by Farley. Some close to him, however, shook their heads in the negative.

It was taken as certain here that the 1932 democratic money plank would be reworded. It was written by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia.

At Cleveland last week, the republican platform drafters lifted it also entirely. The plank's keynote was "sound money."

How Cardui Helps Month After Month

Where there have been severe pains every month, from functional disturbances resulting from poor nourishment, Cardui has helped thousands of women to obtain relief. These conditions in Cardui makes them eager to recommend it to other women needing such a medicine.

"I suffered a great deal with pain in my side and a weakness in my back," writes Mrs. Walter Page, of Evansville, Ind. "This made me so nervous I couldn't rest. Each month I would suffer all over and would have to go to bed. One of my neighbors told me how Cardui helped her, so I took it and it helped me. After taking eight bottles, I was much better. I surely can recommend Cardui for weakness and pain."

Of course, if Cardui does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.
