anniversary ahead of time. Anyway, congratulations to the Brooms on being married 65 years.

Dear Joe and all
I am sending a check for the paper. We enjoy getting it every week.

Would like to know if anything is being planned for the Class of 1943. Can't believe it has been fifty years. Would like to know also if anyone knows about the size of this class. I have heard that we had the largest class to finish school at Gorman. I believe there were forty-three of us.
Thank you,

Gladys Meador Isbell
2055 Westview, Abilene 79603

Don't know for sure about this Gladys. But maybe one of your classmates will write to you with the info.

Dear Progress staff,
Enclosed is my renewal for the paper for another year. Finally got around to sending it.

My brother, Charles Browning of Pittsburgh, Pa. said to cancel his subscription as it seems he doesn't know very many people left around Gorman.

Thanks a lot,
Have a good year.

Emma L. Isbell

Be sure and mark your calendar for Thursday, April first for the annual Benefit Games of the Lions Club to support the many civic projects that they sponsor each year. There will be more on this as time goes along. But mark your calendar for the first of April and make plans to be there.

—J—
Guess most folks around here have noticed the building formerly occupied by Brown Feed is experiencing some changes as Farley & Seaton Feed, Inc. has moved into the building and will be selling Acco Feed as well farm supplies. The business opened on Monday and Jim Farley and Jeff Seaton invites everyone to come by for a cup of coffee and a visit. Veronica and Sandra will probably be doing all the hard labor while Jim and Jeff sit around and sip coffee. Please note their ad and article elsewhere in this issue.

It sure is fantastic to announce the opening of a new business in Gorman for a change, as the trend has been the other way for awhile.

We welcome this new business to our town and community.

—J—
Congratulations to the Panthers on their basketball season this year. Oh, I know we didn't get far in the playoffs, but the boys have really worked hard this season, and have had a lot of fun playing basketball, and that's what counts.
Congratulations!

—J—
And remember to smile - - because God Loves You!

Sounds of silence

I heard it one other time. Not far from here. In our county, matter of fact. On the Starr Hollow Ranch about halfway between Tolar and Lipan in the far western part of the county.

Silence. That's what I heard. No cars. No trucks. No telephones. No televisions.

It was nice.

I heard it again during the holidays. The day after Christmas.

My dad called Christmas morning and wanted us to see his weekend place he bought in Comanche County. We met him the next morning in downtown Gorman, bought some groceries at the market and followed him the seven miles to the hideaway.

Now many of you have probably been to Gorman, Texas. It's an old, tiny town in the heart of peanut country. There's an ancient rock wall around the football field.

Yep, you can almost hear the silence standing in the middle of Gorman's main street on a Saturday morning. However, the silence is even more deafening being tucked away in the middle of this mesquite- and oak-dotted land seven miles from civilization.

You seem all alone because you take a farm-to-market road out of Gorman, turn and travel on a dirt road for a few miles, go over a low-water crossing, truck on and then turn at the gate. You still have to wind your way on a pasture trail before you reach the middle of the place.

After settling in the homemade cabin, I walked out on the front porch and marveled at the natural beauty. A high, blue sky; a mammoth cottonwood tree; a thick stand of shady oaks; a small creek babbling over scores of rocks.

No wonder the Comanche Indians thrived in this part of the country. A sidenote about the Indians: A bloody battle occurred in 1864 about three miles northeast of Gorman. Twelve scouts from a frontier military company were attacked by Indians and took refuge in a nearby cabin. The commander and another white man were killed, and three others were wounded, including James Madison Ellison who was the first settler in that part of Eastland County.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch. Of course, there is man-made beauty too. A warm, wood-burning stove; a wooden porch swing; several barbecue cookers; a piece of PVC dug in the ground for a washers game; a huge 42 table and chairs.

There's also history. Other than Indian artifacts, there's an old abandoned water well under a giant live oak tree that has spreading branches almost touching the ground. You have to duck under the branches to reach the huge trunk of the tree. You feel like you're in a large tent. The thick branches provide enough shade where you could set up a few chairs and watch a slide show.

An oldtimer says the well was used decades ago by a nearby country school, now only a memory. School kids, he said, would quickly volunteer to fetch some water because the well was a pretty good walk away, and it took a considerable amount of time to go and come back—especially on a warm spring day.

Let's see. Barring some raised voices at that 42 table, I heard the following that day:

- A red-tailed hawk's cry.
- Wind barely whistling through the oaks.
- My lure splashing on the surface of a small lake.
- My breathing.
- Broom weeds crunching under my feet.
- The brushing of sand from flint in trying to find an Indian arrowhead.
- Mesquite crackling from a fire built for steaks.
- The sudden fluttering of a covey of quail.
- A distant turkey's gobble.
- Ducks' wings flapping during takeoff from the lake.

It's enough to wake up the senses.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank everyone for their support, their phone calls, get well cards, and most of all for their prayers. Due to my health I, trying to slow down. I will just be selling new medal, oxygen, and atlente. I've enjoyed these last 43 years helping the public and 40 years in the Gorman Volunteer Fire Department.

Thanks again - V. O. Huff

Son and daughter-in-law of Comanche historian die

KERRVILLE — The son and daughter-in-law of Comanche County historian Jewell Dukes Huddleston apparently were killed in a plane crash Saturday evening in Kerrville.

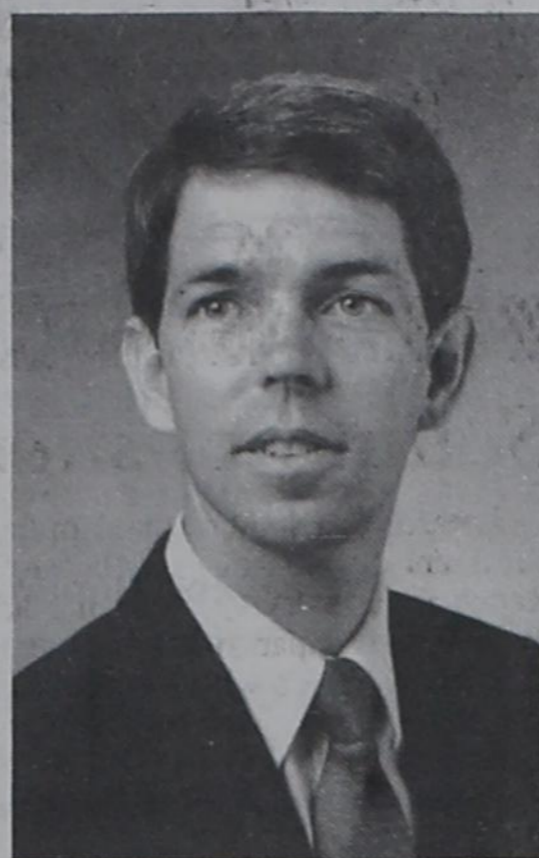

A plane belonging to Houstonians Kenneth Ray Huddleston, 64, and his wife, Bonnie Goodman Huddleston, 62, crashed and burned while attempting to land at Louis Schreiner Airport about 6:40 p.m., a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

Positive identification will have to be made through dental records, the spokesman said.

The Huddlestons' plane was bound from Houston to Kerrville at the time of the crash, the spokesman said. A witness told authorities that the plane was eastbound and was attempting to turn back to the west when it crashed directly into the ground about 400 yards east of the airport and caught fire, the spokesman said.

David Barton To Speak At Albany Church On Monday Night

David Barton, nationally acclaimed speaker, author and historian, will be speaking at the First Baptist Church in Albany on Monday, March 8th at 7 p. m. at the monthly Cisco Baptist Associational Rally. The public is invited to this program.

David has a background in education and private business. While a teacher and principal, David began to research the effects that prohibiting religious principles from public schools has had on the nation. From that research came his first book, America: To Pray or Not to Pray? U. S. Congressmen say that his book is the first objective statistical proof they have seen of the negative effects of the prohibition of school prayer.

His second book, The Myth of Separation, is a look at the much misunderstood concept of "separation of church and state." All of David's research comes from original sources, quotes of the Founding Fathers, and the actual decisions of the Supreme Court from 1795 thru the twentieth century.

Whether appearing on Dr. James Dobson's Focus on the Family, submitting briefs to the U. S. Supreme Court, or answering requests from attorneys, Congressmen, and other policy makers for counsel on proposed legislation, David's ultimate goal is that, as a nation, we can once again say that we are "one nation under God."

If one is looking for inspiration, a challenge for involvement in public affairs, or just a good history lesson, David Barton's presentation will provide a stimulating evening. Admission is free. A nursery will be provided.

Financial Planning Program Introduced To Area Educators

Janet Thomas, Eastland County Extension Home Economist, recently returned from an orientation to a new financial management education program being undertaken by the Texas Agricultural Extension in partnership with the College for Financial Planning. The program is a nationwide effort to teach young people essential concepts of personal finance and sound money management.

The financial planning program materials are geared to the 16- to 18-year-old group and emphasize such concepts as understanding the financial planning process, earning income to meet your goals, protecting your assets, saving, and planning to meet your financial goals.

The High School Financial Planning Program was developed by the Denver, Colorado-based College for Financial Planning and is provided without charge as a public service of the College. The program has been implemented in several states but 1993 will be the first year for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of Texas A&M University System to join in partnership with the college. The college is an independent, nonprofit educational institution that offers educational curricula to professionals in financial services. One of its most well-known programs a rigorous, two-year course of study, can lead to certification as a Certified Financial Planner, or CFP. The College, a pioneer in educational programs in the financial services industry, also sponsors workshops, seminars, and conferences on a variety of financial planning topics.

For more than 70 years, Texans have relied on Extension for the most current, reliable information to solve every day problems of living. Extension professionals conduct educational programs to help people use scientific information to solve practical problems and utilize available resources. Through Extension's educational outreach, many Texas youth and adults have gained new knowledge and skills in financial management.

Teachers and Certified Financial Planners interested in learning more about the High School Financial Planning Program can contact Janet Thomas, who will serve as local sponsor for the program in Eastland County. Contact her at 629-2222.

Additional information may be obtained from Nancy Granovsky, Extension Family Economics Specialist, who serves as the State Representative for the High School Financial Planning Program in Texas 213 Special Services Bldg., Texas A&M University, College Station, TX 77843-2141 (Phone 409-845-7227) or the Program Director at the College for Financial Planning, 4695 South Monaco St., Denver, CO 80237-3403 (phone 303-220-1200).

AGRICULTURE VIEWPOINT

By M. Davy Vestal

CONTAINERS RECYCLED, pesticides collected during march

Farmers and ranchers in Texas may voluntarily dispose of unwanted or unusable agricultural pesticides and chemicals and recycle empty pesticide containers at three sites during March.

There is no charge and no questions will be asked at these collection days held on March 16th in Beaumont, on March 22 in Plainview and on March 26 in Dumas. Sponsors are the Texas Water Commission, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Pesticides and rinsed containers will be accepted from 8 a. m. until 3 p. m. at the Jefferson County Airport in Beaumont, the Ollie Liner Center in Plainview, and at the Dumas Municipal Landfill in Dumas.

The chemicals that will be accepted are herbicides, insecticides, nematocides, fungicides, seed treatments, rodenticides, bactericides, growth regulators, harvest aid chemicals, livestock pesticides, and other miscellaneous pesticides or herbicides.

Not accepted will be fertilizers, treated seed, waste oil, petroleum products, paints and solvents, herbicides containing 2, 4, 5-T or Silvex, pesticides and wood preservatives containing Pentachlorophenol, or explosives.

Containers to be recycled must be triple rinsed or high-pressure rinsed. Metal and plastic containers only will be accepted.

During the first pesticide collection program in the spring of 1990, more than 27 tons of unwanted pesticides were collected from a 37-county area of West Texas.

All eligible waste chemicals will be examined at the collection sites and then transported to permitted hazardous waste disposal facility.

Further information available from County Extension Agents.

PASTURES NOTES

People generally do not understand the importance of managing their nativegrass pastures during the winter. Most people think they can use all of the dry standing forage in the pasture during winter months. For the most part this is true; however, they should determine what is needed for ground cover and realize the rest is available dry standing forage in the pasture.

When pasture managers use the word "available" in a grazing sense, they do not mean everything clear down to the soil surface. This is true no matter what time of the year the grazing is to occur. Care should be taken during the winter grazing season just as it should during the spring and summer. The type of management you impose on your pastures during the winter can have profound effects on the next growing season or seasons.

Native grasses are tough and can withstand some abuse for short and infrequent periods. Over-utilized native range (table top slick) through the winter months can be detrimental to the grasses. This exposes the soil for next season's weed problems. When the grass is completely removed (down to soil surface) the crowns (the grass's growing point) remain exposed to the weather. During extremely cold weather, especially for extended periods, these crowns can freeze and the result is a dead plant. This opens up new keep the soil covered to guard against erosion and weedy plant invasion.

The best thing to do while grazing native grass in the winter is to plan the grazing so that by spring green-up, you leave about three inches of residue in the pasture. This helps to protect the plant crowns and
