The meeting opened with a regular sing-song, and with two special readings given by Mrs. Ira Thurman. Fred Keating gave a classification talk. Glasscock Co. Assures Road Right-Of-Way

North And South Highway From Big Spring To Big Lake Discussed

LOCAL MEN ATTEND GARDEN CITY MEETING

State Designation Of Highway To Be Sought By Group

Glasscock county stands ready to obtain right of way for a highway traversing the county from north to south and passing through Garden City.

Commissioners' court of Glasscock county Monday afternoon passed unanimously a resolution which in effect offers assurance that if a state highway is designated to pass through Garden City, the court will obtain the right of way.

Action of the court followed a meeting in Garden City Monday afternoon between Glasscock and Reagan county representatives Big Spring representatives were invited to the confab.

Reagan county commissioners' court, previously mildly interested in the proposed highway, now strongly favored it. A representative delegation attended the meeting from Big Lake.

Fauhanle to Border The proposed highway born in the minds of delegates assembled at Post some time ago, would begin at Claude and run almost directly southward to Del Rio, giving a 550 mile straight outlet from the Panhandle to the border.

Among cities to be served by such a road would be Silverton, Crockett, Post, Gail, Big Spring, Garden City, Big Lake, Orma, and Del Rio. The road from Post to Silverton has already been designated as a state road.

Seek Designation As soon as those interested and the suggested route have fortified themselves with resolutions from commissioners' courts of counties touched by the road, they will move on Austin in an effort to obtain designation.

Local men interested in the project were gratified by action of the Glasscock commissioners. Passing of the resolution practically assures right of way from Big Spring to Del Rio. Besides shortening the distance from here to Garden City, the road would shave around 15 miles from the mileage from Garden City to Big Lake.

Plans are on foot to discuss the proposed road with Borden county commissioners in their next meeting at Gail. Should the Borden court act similarly to Glasscock, right of way along the entire route would be in sight.

Resolution Passes Commissioner Steve Caverly moved that the court adopt the resolution Monday. Commissioner Woody gave it a second and it passed without a dissenting vote. The question of paying for the road was raised but failed to block passage of the resolution.

Besides the Glasscock commissioners' court, a number of Garden City attended the meeting, B. Reagan, Tom Ashley, and County Commissioner George White attended from here.

Jones is not only helping himself by making a good living, but he is saving a lot of sheep, calves, chickens, turkeys and quails by killing coyotes.

STRAYING CHILD NEEDS GUIDANCE OF ADULTS

The $500,000 fire which destroyed the Illinois state arsenal at Springfield, the state capital, a few weeks ago, was all the work of a 10-year-old boy who liked to see the flames.

It was the governor of Illinois himself who verified this amazing fact. The youngster readily confessed everything. He told how he had set the blaze, had scamped home to read a school textbook entitled—"Good Citizenship," and then had returned to watch the disastrous conflagration he had caused.

As soon as he had made this bizarre confession, the lad was lodged in a detention home to await the arrival of learned psychiatrists, who were to question him in an effort to find out what on earth possessed him.

In a case like this, we bump against one of the most tragic and puzzling riddles that life can offer. An old-time theologian probably would explain it on the basis of original sin or demonic possession, and a modern psychiatrist probably will have something equally pat to say about complexes, inhibitions and whatnot.

But, in either case, we face one of those queer, incomprehensible quirks that crop out every now and then to bewilder and dismay us.

Such things remind us that we do not know nearly as much about the workings of human behavior as we think we do. Why should an intelligent, pleasant-faced child give way to an insane impulse like this, anyway? How could the adults who have charge of his training have foreseen such a thing?

What can be done, now that the catastrophe has taken place, to keep the lad's life from being wrecked, and made it possible for him to develop into a happy and useful member of society?

We know the answer to none of those questions. But out of the general bewilderment we can, perhaps, draw a new understanding of the obligation that lies upon all adults in respect to children; the obligation to try to understand, to sympathize, to be as wise and helpful as our limitations permit.

The world of childhood is a strange place, and it can be peopled by queer, grisly shadows. We cannot know all that goes on in it, nor can we understand all that we do know. But we at least can be forever alert to help, to advise, to comfort, and to warn.

DAYS OF CONTENTMENT IN PICTURES OF OLD

Probably it would take a psychologist to explain just why this nation has grown so fond of looking at photographs taken a generation ago.

Part of it, no doubt, is the same half-melancholy sort of kick one gets out of a peek into the old family album. The clothes and customs of a former day always look pleasantly grotesque, if you get far enough away from them; there is a unique sort of pleasure in looking at some gawky, fantastically garbed youth and realizing, suddenly, that is yourself as you used to look. But there's a little more to the present popularity of old-time pictures than that.

These collections of photos that date back to the 1890's and beyond give us a spy-glass through which we can peer through a door that time has closed and see an era which has gone from this earth forever.

The oddest thing about it all is that most of us, as we look on that era, have a sneaking, half-conscious wish that we might get back there.

For that bygone era—that time when gay blades rode perilous high-wheeled bicycles, and women's bathing suits were more voluminous than their street frocks are now, and minstrel shows were a popular diversion, and motorists were linen-coated pioneers who rode in frail juggernauts which were useful principally for frightening horses—that era, whatever its faults may have been, seemed at least to be a time of certainty.

We know where we were going, then—or we thought we did, and that was about as good—and we had no doubt at all that presently we should get there.

Human society seemed to have reached a static phase, and, while its organization had certain faults that everybody recognized, it still seemed to be a pretty well-arranged and stable affair.

Radio crooners and agricultural allotment schemes were alike unheard-of. There were no traffic jams, and neither were there any Hitlers or Mussolinis or Stalins.

NRA, RFC, CWA, and all the rest were just letters in the alphabet, and the staggering emergencies that were to call them into being still slumbered peacefully in the lap of time.

It was, in short, a simpler age than this one, and it contained far less to worry about. We can't get back to it, and if we really could we probably should think twice about it.

But at this distance it has a sort of halcyon look. It is, with enchantment, because it was a time when the problems which beset us now still were below the horizon.

Large Crowd Hears Rev. Bickley In Sermon To Mothers, Daughters

Rev. C. A. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist church, brought a message to mothers and daughters Monday evening. The church auditorium was crowded to capacity. The pastor, conducting a revival in his own church, read scriptures from Matthew 15:22, Mark 6:22-26, and Esther 4:14-15. His text was "Who Knows but that thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?"

Rev. W. M. Culwell, Stamford, song leader, sang "His Eye Is On the Sparrow."

Tuesday evening Rev. Bickley will speak to high school students and young people on "Causes of Failure before and after Marriage." His sermon Monday evening follows:

"I have read you about two mothers and two daughters. In one case the mother was deeply concerned about her daughter, and she went to the right place when she came to Christ and said, 'Have mercy on my daughter.' There were many difficulties between her and help, it seemed—racial and social barriers—but she was willing to face anything—take the crumbs and let Christ call her 'a dog'—in order that her girl might have help. And the daughter was saved. The other daughter came to her mother for counsel, but this woman was unfit and unworthy. Reproach has been upon her and her daughter even down to this time.

Defend Truth
"Now let us think of Esther. It was said to her, 'If you will hold your peace—if you will keep quiet. That temptation comes to us often and just when we should speak out. We are not to keep quiet and fail to defend the truth because we are afraid for our position in society and in the business world.

"This story of Esther calls attention to the seriousness of neglected duty. 'Destruction will come to your father's house.' I do not believe there is a girl here tonight but would like to do her part, and I believe that God has a purpose in each of your lives. Who knows but that thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this? Sure, we have difficulties now, just as Esther did. What are we to do in the face of these difficulties? How are they different from those of long ago? When Esther faced a condition that threatened destruction she turned to God for help. God reigns now just as He reigned then, and the source of help that came to her is our source of help today. Of course our times are modern times, but conditions are just what we parents have made them. Specifically then, what are some of our problems?

Freedom—New Freedom
"Today, we have freedom that would have been impossible a few years ago, and that freedom has brought new problems along with its great possibilities. There is the question of our amusements and our literature. How are we going to solve these problems? Are we going to keep quiet and thus fall in our duty? What about this great problem of religious indifference? Young people of today as a whole do not find church ser-

It also includes a return ticket from New York City and payment for the banquet which will be given in Washington honoring President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and the cabinet.

"The Texas Press 'Full-House' special, is being conducted to Washington on a two fold mission," Mr. Martin said. "The first is to take the message of returned prosperity to the north and the east, and the second is to compliment President Roosevelt and his staff on the remarkable job they are doing toward restoring confidence and prosperity.
"Texas has a full house. It has fields full of oil, its gins are full of cotton which is selling at a price higher than in several years; its pastures are full of foodstuffs for the family and its barns are full of feed for livestock.
"We are in good shape, and we want to tell the world about it. The Texas Press feels that now is the time for the world to know about it, and not have to wait for several years more before knowing the advantages of investing in the natural resources of that state."

Phils Change Team Line-Up

Boss Nugent and Manager Wilson Trade and Sell

BY HANK HART

Since the termination of last season, the Philadelphia Phils, through the dealings of Boss Gerry Nugent and Manager Jim Wilson, have changed the personnel of their ball club to what it had rarely resembled the club which had difficulty in keeping out of the cellar position last year. Gone is the mightiest slugger the Quaker City ever possessed. In his place came a good player in Mark Koenig, one or two minor players, and a handsome sum of money. Pitchers Ad Laska and John Berry returned to the minors. Flint Rhem was taken over by the St. Louis Nationals. Houston, of the Texas league, received Mittman Harry McCurdy.

In trading and selling these stars, Wilson did not ruin his ball club. The money received from the deal involving Chuck Klein will go a long way in rebuilding the needed positions of the Phils. Koenig, with his injuries healed, should prove a better ball player than the Cubs first thought. The former Yank will make a valuable utility man if he does not become a regular.

Don on First

Don Hurst will probably cover the initial sack. The big first baseman is undoubtedly capable of playing better ball than he showed last year. He hits .267 and appeared best at two base blows with 27 to his credit. The Phils appear weak at second base, as they have for some years. Last year, among the players they used were Johnny Warner, Eddie Dalko, Mickey Finn, Mike Haslin, and Will Knothe. While several of these are in training again this year, it appears as if new comer Jeffries will get the call. Another strange face will be seen at third base. Young Hopkins has showed up well in spring training and it is probable that he will get the call over McKeloid. At short, the fast Dick Bartell will fill in. Dick is no slouch when it comes to picking up line drives and tossing them to first. For a short stop, his batting average is good. He swung the hickory at a .271 clip, and 25 doubles, 5 triples and 1 home run were among his collection.

Wilson has such sluggers as

Homicides Squad Member Answers To Sobriquet Of Sally And Preacher

HOUSTON, Tex., (UP)—Preacher and Sally are two of the names to which Detective L. C. DeWesse of the police homicide squad answers.

Besides being a manhunter, DeWesse is secretary for the department. Hence the sobriquet of Sally.

At one time he was a preacher with Evangelist Raymond T. Rich, traveling all over the United States.

Besides there are many monickers which friends give him for his once profitably practiced art of dice shooting while a doughboy in France.

He recognizes his cue when addressed with reference to any of his former professions but keeps on making medicine for law violators who like to play hide-and-seek with officers.

SPORT SLANTS
By ALAN GOULD

Jimmie Foxx's salary debate this spring with Connie Mack has brought up a number of interesting angles bearing upon the future of the Maryland mauler as well as upon comparisons with the fading king of the clouters, Babe Ruth.

To what extent, for instance, will Foxx build up as the successor to the Big Bam, not only as a producer of climax blows but as a public favorite whose every move or remark becomes a matter of moment?

FOXX HAS GOOD START

At the age of 26, Jimmie is at least as far along the road to playing fame as the Babe was at the same stage. Two years ago Foxx hit 48 home runs with a ball some what less lively than the one that Ruth belted out of the park 54 times in his first spectacular year, 1920, when he was 26. True, the Babe notched 69 homers the following year, but he has had more and bigger setbacks or off-years than Foxx is liable to experience.

Both have had ability to play almost every position. In fact they have pretty well demonstrated it. If it's granted the Babe has that flair for showmanship, the knack of doing the highly dramatic thing at the critical moment, who is there to say that Jimmie may not show the same ability?

It may not have been so superbly thrust but Foxx's home run that broke up a tense pitching duel at St. Louis in the 1930 world series was fully as thrilling to me as the wallop Ruth parked in the centerfield bleachers of Wrigley

HOW ABOUT A BUILD-UP?

Give Foxx the same benefits Ruth has enjoyed from favorable publicity over a period of years and you might find the big Maryland farmer boy emerging as a more whole-souled favorite of the crowds than the Ruth of his magnificent prime.

Perhaps I have been influenced by 10 years or more of observing how well the Babe has fared at the hands of baseball writers and his affiliated publicity agents but I can not escape the conviction that Ruth has had at least his full share of the "breaks". The answer, of course, is that he has made most of them himself, that his ability to come through in the "clutches" transcended any artificiality.

But it might be fun to five Foxx the size salary his ability warrants, install a business manager and staff to "steer" him profitably through the byways and byproducts, turn on a typically metropolitan blast of personality stuff and see what would happen.

Persian Grocer Certain He Could Find Remnants Of Ark In Native Land

FORT WORTH (AP)—David George, a 32-year-old Persian grocer here, is convinced that if he could return to his father's estate in Mesopotamia he could find remnants of Noah's Ark on the summit of Mount Ararat.

A shy, retiring man, George, who was born in Mesopotamia, lives alone in an upstairs room across the street from his store. As he talked, a Bible lay on his pillow.

In it were numerous underscored lines and verses, especially in the book of Genesis, where he has found what he believes to be proof that he is sole heir to the Ark.

The young Persian was reared in Mesopotamia. His parents were Presbyterian missionaries and as a youth George studied for missionary work. While he was engaged in his theological study both his parents, his two brothers and two sisters were massacred by Turks. George came to America in 1917.

He continued his studies, later graduating from the Presbyterian seminary at Austin, Texas. He came here to enter the ministry in 1926, and later began his business career by selling apples at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Quietly and with characteristic confidence, he pointed out his reasons for believing that he could find remnants of the Ark on his father's estate, if any remnants survive the 6,000 years since, according to Biblical conception, Noah landed his Ark.

The town of Hasboun, near the base of Mount Ararat means "eight" when translated. George pointed out, probably founded by eight human occupants of the Ark and the end of the flood when they descended the mountain.

On the east side of Ararat is Sesphin, which means to "give thanks." Noah and his family gave a burnt offering to God for deliverance from the flood, George pointed out.

George also recalls olive trees at the base of the mountain near his home, which he believes is Ararat. It was from similar trees that Noah's doves plucked leaves to bring back to the Ark, telling him the waters were receding.

The young minister-grocer has hopes of returning some day to the land of his birth to make explorations or perhaps to head a searching party. His two greatest difficulties at present, he said, is because the tribes of Mesopotamia are barbarous and vicious and because he does not yet have sufficient funds to finance such an undertaking.

What A. T. & T. means to your Telephone service

(American Telephone & Telegraph Company)

Good service at fair cost is the aim. The men and women who furnish your telephone service here could not do that job so well without the help of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, parent company of the Bell System.

Operating Methods are Improved

If a better way of doing a job gives better telephone service on the Pacific Coast; it may work equally well in the cities and towns of this state. A. T. & T. staff experts and engineers search constantly for these economies and improvements... test them... study them. The perfected result is offered to aid the 24 Bell operating companies give a nation-wide telephone service, uniformly good and fair in cost.

Construction Projects are Financed

To give good service, millions are spent each year to keep pace with the public's constantly changing demand for telephone service. Instead of obtaining the funds for scores of such projects individually, the operating companies bring their problems to A. T. & T., where the combined projects are financed on a nation-wide basis at substantial savings in interest rates and financing costs.

Faster Long Distance Service

Nation-wide long distance service, fast and dependable, would be almost impossible without the long distance lines operated by A. T. & T., which owns and maintains the trunk lines that link the territories of the operating companies.

FOR YOU... Good Service at Fair Cost

THE many services of which these are typical, mean an actual saving of millions of dollars to the operating companies... and to telephone users. For the telephone service is planned for the long pull, and such savings have for more than 50 years been devoted not to swelling profits, but to hold low the cost of good service to the telephone user.

This policy springs, in a sense, from self-interest, since it is based upon the belief that what is best for the telephone user is in the end the policy that will bring us the surest, most enduring measure of success.

Chapter 44 THE PLUNGE

Swifter plunged the current. The cavern seemed wider, but the roof was lower. A down-projecting stalactite struck his head. Half stunned, he struggled to keep his hands above his head to guard against a repetition.

He was thrown against wall projections, and sucked away into the greedy current. He became dazed with an ever-increasing dizziness. It was an effort to breathe with the spray lashing his face.

His arms ached with the effort of upholding them. He put his elbows upon the top of his life-jacket and clasped his hands above his head. He realized that he was growing weak with the buffeting.

But the minutes, he knew, were rolling into precious hours. Soon he hoped to be sprayed into the daylight—into the quiet waters of some mangrove-fringed lagoon that joined the sea.

Gray daylight showed above him. He was being shot down-stream between creper-hung walls. But half-conscious, he realized that although he was in the main channel the width of it was diminishing.

The stream was branching variously. A danger lay in that. Sucked into one of the branches he might be forced into a swamp from which he might not be able to extricate himself.

He must keep to the main channel at all costs! Only the main channel would have water-force enough to have cut through the swamps to be shouted with hope.

Suddenly he glimpsed on either side of a jutting spur of rock that thrust upward from the seething water about it, were low grass-covered banks backed with palmetto and mangroves. Further on was a turquoise bluesness. The sea!

Frank's nostrils twitched with the tang of beach peat rotting in the sun. That flaming disc burst, as he looked, through a layer of clouds lying low above the horizon. It was nearing sunset.

As the current twisted him toward the divided channel, he felt a tugging at his legs, an inexorable suction that pulled his feet away from the surface current while the buoyancy of the life-belt tended to float it toward the peaceful lagoon.

Subconsciously he struggled a little as if the attempt could relieve his legs of some clinging, unseen menace. The suction pulled harder.

Sudden realization swept him. The underground river discharged here at sea level; but also it plunged into the hidden chasm that could have no outlet except in the floor under that glittering, turquoise sea ahead!

Frantic now, he flailed his arms. He kicked and thrashed with his legs. Striving to free himself of the life-belt so that he could flatten himself on the surface and swim to the safety that was now just a few yards away, he found that the fiber knots were swollen beyond loosening.

The breath gasped in his lungs. Deeper the suction pulled him. He was spun about in the inflexible grip of a whirlpool.

Lower he sank. He clawed for a support that was denied him. Down he was dragged into a vortex. He felt the water closing about his head.

Gasping for a last despairing breath, he was shot down into a great funnel. A crashing and roaring sound filled his ears. His body was hammered and flailed against the rough sides of this terrible aqueduct. His lungs were on fire—no, they were bursting.

There was a blinding flash on the mirror behind his eyes. Then the darkness of oblivion. Janet Kent walked slowly back to the little clearing where their ever-burning fire smoked amid its rocky bed. She seated herself upon the back-log and stared apathetically at the glowing embers.

Something had gone dead within her—something that in dying had left a void that yet was capable of aching. Her mind was too confused for analysis but that very confusion released a swarm of queer mental figures that seemed to gesticulate at her mockingly.

She had told the man she loved that she loved him, and he had, upon the telling, pressed her away from him and was gone, perhaps, to his death. This was incredible because she knew, instinctively, that this man loved her.

Was a man's love different than a woman's? All her life she had avoided what was calling falling in love as a matter of expediency—a measure of safety against an emotion that she felt would demolish a career and a position in it that she had worked so hard to achieve.

She knew her avoidance was not based upon repugnance, but on timidity. She had played too many roles wherein the woman gave all for love not to appreciate that there was a sound basis of fact for this instinct.

During the weeks that Frank and she had been companions, she came to a fuller appreciation of the enormous timidity that had held her that night in Hollywood when Frank had asked her to marry him.

She had struck him, gripped with that instinct that is as old as Eve which causes the female to flee before the advancing male. She had paid for that unreasoning gesture since with many a heart-ache.

Was man's love different than woman's? How could Frank have left, loving her, without some word for her alone? "Billy will explain why I'm going—" Then he was gone—like that last night in Hollywood.

She was scarcely conscious that Billy Langton stood before her. Gently he bent forward and took one of her hands in his own.

"He'll be back, Janice. Frank is resourceful. Why, he's got as many lives as a—" He broke off slightly confused as if he realized the implication of his words. But the import of his phrasing was lost upon the girl.

"He left me, Billy. He left me without a word." Tears welling uncontrollably dimmed her sight. "Because he loves you, Janice." A thin mist began to fall; it glistened on the shrubbery about them. The tall palms appeared to droop, as if in cringing expectation of a heavier downpour. Janice hunched her shoulders in a slight shrug.

"It's so dreary today... Billy, if he loved me he would have taken me with him."

"Nonsense!" Langton attempted to make his tone brisk. "What sort of a man would Frank be, if he made you share a risk like that? Any man would have done the same..."

Janice nodded her head in dull agreement. "Any man, perhaps, Billy, but not a woman—" Langton smiled slightly. He drew the girl to her feet. "Come, Janice, let's go inside. The rain is going to soak us. The raft's finished and I've stacked some balsam in the shack. We can work on the life-belts inside."

A distant rumble sounded. The noise of the rain increased to a steady drumming on nearby leaves. They passed through the shack into the cave. At the entrance a small fire was burning. Frank had made it that morning. Again Janice's eyes misted; a lightness grew about her throat that was impossible to relieve.

She cooked a little food and served it in the crude utensils that Frank had devised for them. She put bits of venison into her mouth and chewed mechanically; it was an effort to swallow. A tear ran down her cheek and splashed on the back of her hand.

Later she attended to the abkin. The high-priest stared at her curiously, she thought. She seemed to detect a mocking glint in his eyes. Despite his helplessness there seemed to be an indefinable air of triumph about him—a subtle sense of success.

Her mind was too dull to speculate upon this. Days of association with him had made her immune to the constant hate in his eyes; that this mad priest's hate should increase or wane was a matter of indifference to her.

They worked on the three life-belts until far into the evening. The downpour outside made a continuous sound that seemed to flatten her eardrums. The very air within this closed place was tangily depressing.

Finally she took down from a peg a tattered khaki coat—it was Frank's—and took it to the cot he had made for her—hide things stretched across a framework and covered with skins and soft grasses.

John Davis Probable Successor To Adams

AUSTIN (UP)—Former State Senator John Davis, Dallas, is picked here as probable choice for Texas member of the Democratic National committee to succeed J. G. Adams, also of Dallas.

The chairmanship of the State Democratic Executive Committee is expected to fall upon Ed Huson, Houston, present secretary of that committee.

Both "pickings" are based upon the conclusion that Ferguson forces still are in control of the state Democratic committee.

Ferguson Man

Davis recently represented the Governors Ferguson in land litigation at Dallas. He has been a loyal Ferguson supporter and was for a time considered their choice for state highway commissioner.

Huson, too, is an ardent Ferguson supporter and an active ally of the governor on the state relief commission. He recently went to Washington for the administration to gather first hand information on the political situation.

Roy Miller, Corpus Christi and Houston, is pick of many prominent Democrats for national committee, but it is not believed he will either seek or accept the post. He is connected with waterway and sulphur interests which must deal with government agencies. His acceptance of the national committee would be contrary to the Roosevelt policies, unless he withdrew from these activities.

Miller Successful

Miller's outstanding success at the head of the Texas committee which aided the national campaign for Roosevelt and Garner emphasized his qualifications for the national committee and politically entitles him to the honor should he desire it.

Senator Margie Neal, Carthage, who has announced that she will not seek re-election to the legislature, is mentioned as likely to succeed Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier as national committeewoman from Texas.

weikin ring with the 'crimes' of the Eighteenth Amendment, although we knew—and they knew that those were the crimes of its violators and their customers.

"Not one dry in any number of millions broke the law or encouraged lawbreakers, through his urging that the amendments be respected. But millions of wets did all they could to destroy it.

"Now, I'm sorry to say, it's going to be our turn to protest against the consequences of a law, though we shall do it lawfully. We couldn't do it otherwise, if we were so minded.

"It is our business, then, to keep the subject alive. When the president of the United States Brewing company says, 'We have the saloon today. Whether whisky should be sold with beer is not up to the brewers to decide, but I don't see how you are going to keep whisky out of the saloon,' we need to brand the statement as a pretty thinly veiled suggestion to the saloon-keeper that he might as well lay in a stock of whisky.

"When we see the Keeley Institute increasing its advertising for liquor addicts to come and be cured, we can let people know that the Keeley people expect the sale of this habit-forming drug to develop into a big trade, with big profits to them.

"When a 'slightly' stimulated driver kills people on the highway, or gets himself killed, half an hour after his last drink, we may as well tell what did the damage. It will not always be played up in the newspaper reports.

"When high license fails, we are the people to call attention to the failure. When regulatory laws about screens, hours, sales to minors, and all the rest are disregarded, as always they have been, our course is plain.

"When the Canada plan, and the Swedish plan, and the British plan, and the Rockefeller inquiry have all been weighed and found wanting, the wets will not advertise the result. And yet it will have to be spread abroad by somebody. We shall have to do it.

"I had sort of looked forward to an old-age vacation from actively against liquor. But they say an old Irishman will obey the well-known signal, even though he is hitched to a milk wagon. And I seem to be hearing a familiar warning bell."—(Contributed by local W. C. T. U.)

Midland Woman's Son Killed In Wreck

MIDLAND—John A. Woods, Jr., 24, son of Mrs. S. R. Weaver of Midland, was killed in an auto collision three miles north of Memphis on Highway 8 late Saturday night. Lois Del Richardson, Woods, his companion, was seriously injured. The car driven by Wood had a head-on collision with one driven by Otto Taylor. The Taylor car had four occupants but none was seriously injured. None of the occupants of either car seem to know how the accident happened.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver and daughter, Rebecca Ray, left for Memphis immediately after receiving the news.

Funeral services for Wood were held from the First Baptist church at Memphis Sunday.

Barstow Man Killed As Car Strikes Gate

Accident Occurred Late Saturday Night West Of Midland

MIDLAND—Howard Miller, 20, of Barstow, was fatally injured, and Luther L. "Ding" Spears, 21, received injuries that have confined him to a Midland hospital for treatment, in an automobile accident near the airport late Saturday night.

Miller died soon after being carried to the hospital, his death attributed to bleeding of the sinuses, and a brain concussion. His skull was fractured.

Spears' condition was slightly improved this afternoon. He has a broken jaw and had cuts on the head.

The youths were driving eastward near the port. Spears said Miller, driving, suddenly shouted "Duck, we're going to hit!" Spears ducked under the dash just as the car struck a gate erected by high-works to mark construction work, and was rendered unconscious. When he regained consciousness he found the car upright, with the driver unconscious at the wheel.

Spears shoved his companion over into the right side of the seat and taking the wheel, drove to the home of Section Foreman W. T. Chandler and asked the whereabouts of W. H. Frantom, apprentice foreman of the section gang and a personal friend.

"I've been in an accident," he said, "and my buddy is out there asleep."

Chandler thought little of the matter, he said, and directed the youth to the Home hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. Frantom have an apartment. That was at midnight.

Frantom said Spears came to his apartment only a few minutes later. The youth was in a dazed condition and scarcely able to explain his predicament. Frantom said. Frantom drove the two to a hospital, where Miller expired after a few breaths.

Frank Angley, foreman of the Warfield section, said the youths were at his home at 8:30 and in-

Grant To Make Possible More Explicit Research Of Texas Earth Strata

AUSTIN, Texas, (UP)—More explicit knowledge of earth strata in the Lone Star state is expected to result from a $3,000 grant for research in geology to the University of Texas.

The grant was made from the Penrose Fund of the Geological Society of America. Dr. E. H. Sellards, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology, proposes to use the money on six sub-projects which will require all of 1934 to complete.

The national geological society is seeking more satisfactory criteria for the stratigraphic correlation of the Mississippian, study will be submitted that society for publication.

"THIS, AT LEAST, IS THE DRY'S JOB"

"Justus Timberline" in the Christian Advocate has very cleverly, as follows, given a new admonition to the days as to their future program, and expressed the attitude of many of the older workers:

"There is some debate, I find, over the place which drys should take in the new lineup on liquor. To help or not to help, in the making and enforcing of laws which will regulate the business, that is the question. Good citizens take sides.

"But there is no question about what drys should do to keep the subject alive.

"The wets taught us something. During the whole prohibition period they made the well-known
