Lint Program Up To A Vote

700 Farmers In This County Due To Ballot On Quotas

More than 700 Howard county cotton producers are expected to ballot Saturday on whether they sanction marketing quotas posted for cotton in 1939 by the secretary of agriculture.

M. Weaver, county AAA administrator, said Monday that possibly 1,100 persons were eligible to vote in the referendum. Voting will be possible in four boxes in two districts of the county. The eastern district will ballot in the east side of the district courtroom and at Vincent, and the western district on the west side of the same courtroom and at Knott. Weaver said he expected complete returns from the referendum by 7 p. m. since poll time is from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

The referendum was called after cotton quotas were set by the secretary next year upon ascertaining that the production in 1938 would exceed normal supply and demand by more than seven per cent.

If farmers over the southland approve the quotas, a two-thirds majority, those in compliance with to all reports available, was the largest deer killed this season by a local hunter. He is Wesley Deats, 12-year old son of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Deats, and is shown above with a big 10-point buck he felled while his father was shooting the smaller 10-pointer on the left. The larger buck weighed an estimated 225-250 pounds. Wesley, on his first deer hunt, dropped the buck at 80 yards with a 20-gauge shot gun. The gun, costing only about $9, used a solid slug. He got one shot at the other buck before his father brought it down with a rifle. Because of the inaccessibility of the place they were hunting in south of Alpine, they were only able to retrieve the heads, back-traps and hind quarters of the deer.

the quotas may market without penalty in 1939. Those not complying will be penalized three cents a pound on production. If the quotas are rejected, the bars will be down on production in 1939 and compliance for benefit payments will be optional.

Chapter One The Little Princess

Once upon a time in a far-away land lived a little yellow-haired princess who was both very, very poor and very, very rich. She was very poor because her mother had died and her father had married the mean and selfish Queen from the next kingdom. And she was very rich because she lived in a palace and had hundreds of dolls and two pure, white ponies all her own.

Her name was Hulda. She was slim and fair and graceful. Her yellow curls hung to her waist, and her blue eyes shone very bright when she smiled. But when this story starts she wasn't smiling at all. She was sitting on a rock in her father's woods weeping so that her pretty white chiffon dress was quite damp. She had taken off her bright red shoes and thrown them as far as she could.

But as she wept a fairy lighted on the heart of a wild rose at her side, and said, "What is so very wrong?"

Hulda peeked through her white hands and sobbed, "She's so mean to me."

"Who?" said the fairy.

"My stepmother."

"Oh, yes. We've heard of her," said the fairy.

"Look at those pretty red shoes," sobbed Hulda. "She gave them to me. But they're too small. They hurt and she makes me wear them. I can't tell my father, the King."

Happy in Toyland

The fairy looked puzzled. She sat down in the rose and thought very hard while Hulda wiped her eyes. Suddenly the fairy popped up. "I know," she said. "You could live with Santa Claus in Toyland. He's so kind you'd be happy."

Hulda looked frightened. "Then she smiled. 'Why, I've always wanted to go far away. My father, the King, is always sailing far away. And when he's not sailing, he's riding far away. The Queen won't let me go with him, and when he's gone she sends me to the scullery to work hard all day.'"

"Yes, we've heard," said the fairy. "You'll be happier in Toyland, and the woodpecker will help you go there."

But while they were talking they failed to see a wrinkled witch go riding by on a snail. She had listened and then tittered through her snagged, yellow teeth, "Oh, I'll go tell the Queen." And that's what she did. She whipped up the snail she was riding, and went rustling through the woods to the palace. She hitched her snail at the door, and rode right into the throne room on her broom. There she lit on the Queen's shoulder.

The Queen wasn't much surprised because mean people see a great deal of witches. So she snapped, "Well, what now?"

"The Princess, Hulda, is planning to run away," whispered the witch.

Quite Frightened

"Wha-a-a-!" snarled the Queen. "I'll box her ears. Where is she?"

"Down in the pine woods," said the witch.

"Men," shouted the Queen banging on her throne with her fists, "bring me the Princess from the pine woods. Quick!"

The palace guards rushed out so fast they stumbled over their spears. They ran through the rose garden down by the pond and into the woods. But Hulda and the rose fairy heard them coming. Hulda trembled, but the fairy tapped on the ground three times and through the tree-tops came a whole flock of wind fairies trailing long, gray veils behind them. They made a sound like a long, silky whisper, "Wh-wh-u-sh-sh."

"Here, Sisters," said the rose fairy. "Pick up the Princess quick and take her to Toyland. The Queen's men are after her."

So just as the Queen's soldiers came stomping through the woods Hulda was picked up by a hundred small gray arms and lifted high into the sky. She was quite frightened, and held on tight to a dozen little fairies. But they chuckled and said, "Bounce around. You won't fall."

So she bounced, and fell as though she were riding a feather bed. She was so comfortable she peered down over the cloud of fairy wings to the earth below. It was a wonderful sight. Tall towers, wide rivers, great green woodlands and soft green fields. On and on she rode.

SPREADING THE ROADS

More than 5,230 miles of federal aid highway projects were completed in the United States within just the four months from July to October, inclusive, of this year. The total cost was $115,833,321, slightly more than half of which was contributed by the federal government. These figures are from the current magazine of the American Road Builders' association.

They indicate that the average cost of a mile of high-type main road is upward of $22,000. At the same time, the government is also contributing on a smaller scale to construction of secondary or feeder road projects. Of these, the average cost during the same period was only about $9,750 a mile. Yet only about one-fourth as many miles were built with federal assistance as of main highways.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

(Miss Thompson's column is published as an informational and news feature. Her views are personal and are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the editorial opinion of The Herald or Editor's Note.)

THE FRENCH SITUATION

In a new little book called "Our Battle," Henry Van Loon says that autocracy is the result of bad democracy.

That is certainly true, and France is an example of it. Back in February, this column attempted an analysis of the French economic situation, which has been continually interesting and significant for this country, because France suffered under the Popular Front government from all the fallacies of New Dealism, with its perilleous ideas of achieving prosperity by drastically raising labor costs and disarranging the public finances, while diminishing all incentive to capital and without regard to increasing production.

A careful watch on France has been most wholesome as a basis of criticism of our own current procedures. But the French situation has been much worse than ours, first because its New Dealism went much further, there was a much more serious increase of the public debt there than here, and, added to all her other troubles, France has suffered from a disastrous flight of capital, which amounted to a real hemorrhage.

M. Paul Reynaud's plan of financial and economic reform, brought forth early last month, has the prestige of coming from the one financial expert in France who knows what he wants and is usually right, and the "Journal Officiel," which carried his decrees, was prefaced by a most lucid and brilliant general report which turned a pitiless light on the economic situation and made it perfectly clear that if France were to recover her economic health, which, in turn, is a prerequisite for revived military and diplomatic prestige, she must first secure the means for making sacrifices.

However, such conservative publications as the "Spectator" and "The Economist" assert that too much of the burden falls upon the workers. "The Spectator" predicted on November 18: "The opposition of the socialists and the trade unions, even if restrained, will continue."

M. Daladier becomes increasingly concerned to spare the susceptibilities of the workers, and may thus prevent any possibility of creating the period of political calm which is essential to the success of M. Reynaud's plan—which is the last chance of saving France from totalitarianism.

Mr. Thomas Balogh, who as a banker's economist will hardly be suspected of radicalism, stated in the October 15 "Economist" a thesis advanced in this country by Alexander Sachs, that "the abolition of the social laws alone will not restore confidence... A wholly one-sided sacrifice imposed on the workers will not lead to social peace. It demands the end of the scramble for wealthy individuals to protect their personal fortunes... But M. Bonnet is more interested in protecting the liberty of French capitalists than the liberty of Europe."

I went up the stairs after Adam. Barney, in pajamas and dressing gown, was a dark huddle under the front window.

Barney stared. "What are you talking about?"
"Mean to say you don't remember this thing hitting you?"
"Nothing hit me," Barney protested irritably. "I couldn't sleep—dozed off, woke up—too hot in here. I got up, put on my dressing gown, was going to look for you. Then I saw Fowler had forgotten to open this front window. It stuck, but I got it open, was reaching for that screen to put in when I passed out cold." He appealed to the doctor. SHORT TALKS ON ADVERTISING (FIFTH SERIES)

Prepared by the Bureau of Research and Education, Advertising Federation of America Culture On The Payroll

Number 5 000,000 students are registered in our educational institutions. Among the greatest media for disseminating culture in this country are newspapers, magazines, and radio, in all of which we lead the world.

Contrary to the impression among many scholars, culture in this world is absolutely dependent upon economic prosperity. It was no accident that the Periclean Age came at a time when ancient Greece was very prosperous and had established a thousand trading posts in all parts of the civilized world.

The great Augustan period of Roman literature flowered when the Roman Empire enjoyed its peak of commercial prosperity and collapsed when the economic system collapsed. The same was true with the Italian Renaissance, that golden period of art and culture.

At every age in history it was the material wealth of industry that stimulated and supported cultural pursuits. As a result, culture today is most widespread in those lands where industry is most productive.

In the United States we have had 150 years of unparalleled productivity. With only 7 per cent of the world's population living here, we have produced one-half of all the wealth on this globe. That is why, in these same 150 years, we have been able to build more schools and colleges than all the rest of the world combined.
