Humble Is Left Alone As Gulf Meets Oil Hike

HOUSTON (AP)—The Gulf Refining company and the Gulf Pipe Line company Monday advanced Texas, Louisiana and coastal crudes to a top price of 91 cents. It previously had met advances sending Midcontinent oil to a dollar per barrel maximum. Gulf's action left the Humble Oil and Refining company as the only major purchaser in Texas failing to meet the advances.

Mrs. Henry accompanied her husband.

Home Town Talk by Betty

Another illustration of how one's viewpoint may cause preconceived or pre-expressed views on various public issues to change is presented by the Washington dispatch carried in this newspaper today which declares the Big Spring federal building project may be endangered by the economy wave sweeping the U. S. senate.

Few people would declare opposition at this time to government economy. We're all for that. But when it threatens to kill a $165,000 local construction project most of us will follow the usual procedure and protest such economy.

From the Washington dispatch we gather that preparations for building the Big Spring post office are a little more advanced than for the Breckenridge, Cisco and San Angelo jobs and that our project may barely escape the economy axe.

See where President Hoover is reported to be in favor of the six-hour day.

If so, then you've got to give him credit for having one sound opinion. He's got others, of course and in spite of the fact of casting the president that sweeps the country right now.

But if he's in favor of the six-hour day and will step out and say so we Democrats can figure he just made a mighty good political move. Not that we wish to intimate he would not be sincere in such an expression of opinion; but a lot of folks would figure it was done for political purposes only, no matter how sincere he might be.

We want to add our humble voice to that of the growing number favoring the six-hour day.

It is beyond us to figure out how this condition whereunder million go without disturbing what employment there is in the face of labor-eliminating machines, unless you shorten the working week and the working day.

To our minds that is the most sensible way and would be the most effective way of lessening suffering, overcoming anti-American influences that thrive among the idle, and starting business back on the road to health and prosperity.

HOPEWELL, N. J. (AP)—Further statements today clarified the developments in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping. The colonel still hopes the child will be returned, although he indicated the $500,000 ransom had been paid by them. It was revealed that at least seven notes, all bearing markings of the original demand left in the nursery, had been received. State police said only the original kidnaper could have furnished the identification upon which the ransom was paid. They revealed no recognized "Jafate" run in newspaper advertising columns, as messages to the kidnapers written by Doctor J. F. Condon Sr., welfare worker, are in the negotiations. Several days ago notes indicated the kidnapers failed to give proper directions for finding the baby after ransom was paid.

Fish Pond Finished In City Park By Lions Most Interesting Feature Of Kind To Be Seen In West Texas

Big Spring's City Park, already one of the greatest attractions in West Texas, has become doubly valuable as a pleasure and recreation center with completion of the Big Spring Lions Club's fish pond. The Lions' contribution to the park fairly "flows" each person in spending it. Under supervision of Nat Shick acting for the Lions club and as a member of the park improvement committee named a year ago, this feature of the park has been completed as one of the most ingenious arrangements things located in any park in a city, large or small. Far up on the hill, which is studied with large natural rocks and heavily timbered with cedar, a spring bubbles out from under a rock. The water trickles down, over the rocks, between them and under

HOOVER TO HELP SENATORS AND RED SOX OPEN BIG LEAGUE SEASON

President Hoover forgot office cards Monday to toss out the first team in Washington to open the major league baseball season.

Following opening ceremonies at Griffin stadium, Joe Cronin (left) flashy shortstop, and the rest of the Senators took the field hoping for a fast start at the expense of Earl Webb (center), slugging outfielder, and Manager "Shamus" Collins (right), Boston Red Sox. After a single game at the capital, the teams move to Boston to "open" again April 12 when the balance of the major league clubs start the 1932 campaign.

Manager Walker Johnson of the Senators was pleasantly confident of an opening day victory. He thinks his club a strong pennant contender.

Abolition Of Gases, Tanks Is Supported

Hugh Gibson Presents America's Position; Has Supporters

GENEVA (AP)—Hugh S. Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, acts as head of the American delegation proposed to the world disarmament conference, abolition of offensive weapons including tanks, heavy mobile guns, and gases. The British and Swiss delegation supported the proposal. Gibson said abolition of such weapons could not hamper defensive measures. Such a move would bring a great saving, since the weapons sought to be outlawed are highly expensive, he declared. He said the present technique of warfare gave superiority to offensive weapons and invading forces but that their abolition would leave nations as secure as though heavily armed.

2,176 Persons View Ford V-8 In Wolcott Motor Company Showroom During Heavy Sunday Windstorm

What is believed to be a record for a Sunday showing of the new Ford V-8 in any city of the country was established here Sunday at the Wolcott Motor Company showroom when, by actual count, 2,176 persons came, in one of the most windy and dusty days of the year and in unseasonably cool weather, to view the new model. To demonstrate the claim of having achieved in the V-8 a "vibrant" car a cigarette was placed, on end, on a fender and the motor raced. The cigarette remained upright. Monday morning, in company with Bruce Malcolm, zone representative of the Ford Motor Company, a reporter went for a ride in the new car. The most interesting demonstration made by Mr. Malcolm was the showing the ease with which the

Golfers Win Off Colorado

Robbins Takes 3-Stroke Victory From Bob Scott, Southpaw

The Big Spring Country Club niblick wielders opened the Sand Belt Golf Association in a blaze of glory by turning back the Colorado linksmen 34 to 42 Sunday afternoon, winning six out of eight individual matches and finishing in all four twosomes. Shirley Robbins, playing No. 1 for the local forces, headed the victorious parade with a three-stroke decision over Bob Scott, Colorado Southpaw. Robbins battled a high wind to negotiate the local courses in 74, three over par figures, while Scott was forced to be content with a 77. Palmer, Colorado, defeated Lih Coffee, Big Spring, in the No. 2 match, but Robbins' margin over Scott was enough to give the local golfers the decision in twosome scoring. Fred Stephens, playing No. 3, came home with a fine 78 to defeat Richardson of Colorado and to give him and his partner, Theron Hicks, an advantage over Richardson and Shelly Shelton defeated Hicks in the individual match. Bristow and Porter, playing No. 5 and 6 respectively, widened the margin by winning both individual matches with Martin and Mosser and running up a nice lead in the twosome standing. Doc Atkins and V. W. Latsch, No. 7 and 8, respectively, cast the lineup, followed gulf with a win over Billingsley and Hughes, Colorado. Both Big Spring players won their individual matches. The local golfers led all the way in the low ball scoring.

—And Nothing Can Be Done About It

First Lynching Since 1930

THE FIRST lynching in Texas in nearly two years took place near Crockett when four unidentified white men lynched a negro farm hand for insults offered a white woman. The negro was not in possession of officers at the time of his abduction.

The last previous lynching in Texas took place on June 17, 1930.

The state has a right to be proud of the excellent showing it has made in reducing these crimes against justice. Most of the victims of the mob richly deserve their fate, but they should be punished by due process of law. The greatest sufferer in a case of mob action is established justice—the duly constituted courts to which the people look for justice for themselves and protection against tyranny.

That Texas has been able to reduce its lynchings to a negligible number compared with former years is a tribute alike to the courage and efficiency of Texas peace officers and the power of public opinion. Texas courts are prompt to mete out punishment to the type of criminals usually made the object of the mob's wrath.

If we can be proud of our lynch record, there is no cause for pride in our homicide record. There have been 88 homicides committed in Texas since the first of the year. Killings are frequent in Texas because the killer is seldom punished in proportion to his crime.

CORRECTION
In the article contributed by E. P. Ribble Sunday on "How To Grow a Lawn" there was a mistake, saying that lime was one thing we want. The very opposite is what Mr. Ribble said. We do not want lime. Not only the water but a great deal of our soil is too heavily impregnated with lime already, he says. The question is to break it down.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
SUSAN CAREY, 19, finishes her course at a Chicago business school and secures her first job as secretary to ERNEST HEATH, prominent architect. She has had several discouraging experiences before this. Applying at one office, Susan was terrified by the advances of her would-be employer. At business school she has become friendly with ROBERT DUNBAR, good-looking millionaire's son, also a student. MRS. MILTON, a neighbor, rails at Susan for insisting on earning her own living and asks why she does not encourage the attentions of a moody suitor, BEN FLANNERY, stenographer in the office across the hall, and is amused by her. Susan makes a mistake in copying a letter and is in tears when a helpful stranger appears. "I'm Jack WARING," he says. Susan has no idea who he may be.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER VIII
Dreadfully the girl regarded the stranger, "Jack Waring"—where had she heard that name before? It meant nothing to Susan. She tried to regain her composure. Waring seemed oddly at home. Having deposited his rickish panama hat on the empty desk he straightened his black-tinted and diamond-rimmed eyes more jovially. "What's up? Can I help? Come, tell Papa all about it!"

If the ruination of the freshly typed sheet of bond paper in the letter press had not already engrossed the girl's mind she might have smiled at this sally. As it was she could only stare at him with dewy eyes which threatened at every instant to brim over again.

humor and how to please her just but demanding employer.

One thing she could not seem to master. That was the problem of keeping Mr. Jack Waring in what Aunt Jessie would have called "his place."

Jack Waring, 28, divorced, agreeable, fond of dancing, sport cars and feminine companionship, refused to believe Susan would no flirt with him.

Waring was not used to being snubbed. In fact, he didn't know what snubs were. His turned an invincible armor to them. He laughed at slings. Susan seemed to him a delectable piece of femininity, incredibly innocent, a toy to be played with. She provided a piquant sauce for his sophisticated palate.

Her very difference from the women he knew interested and attracted him. Some days he would scarcely have called her pretty. Her skin was ordinarily too pearl pale to win his admiration. But those eyes of hers, so melliflously black, black and gray by turns. That dark, soft, curling mass of hair and those childishly pink lips untouched by lip salve. That deliciously merry laugh! All these enchanted and exasperated him.

Jack Waring had been married young—at 22—to a girl he had extravagantly adored. At 35 he had gone through the painful and disillusioning business of the divorce courts. He had been fiercely and angrily wounded both in his pride and his love. He had for the space of six months thought that life was a futile and grievous burden. Then abruptly, to the surprise and delight of his friends, he had taken a new lease on living. He had decided to laugh at the slings and arrows, had shaken off seriousness and had begun ardently to pursue pleasure. Light amours were his, snatched kisses. He had become a dancing man after 13 years of sturdily and rather monotonous domesticity. He had come to enjoy the novel sensation of being free.

Susan seemed to Waring a pretty and welcome diversion. He could not be made to understand that to her the snatched kiss and hurried compliment in office hours were things to be despised.

His continued cheerful pursuit in the face of the rebuffs never failed to astonish her. When he should have been hurt and angry he merely smiled. Susan became adept in the art of avoiding him. When he sought tete-a-tetes with her in her little cubicle she always made an excuse to leave. And Waring continued to smile at her—a sly, wise, rather cynical smile which seemed to say, "All women are alike."

He thought her scruples merely silly and childish. A kiss was a kiss, nothing more. All the sweeter if stolen. Susan thought flirtation on the sly both undignified and stupid. She said so.

Jack Waring merely laughed. "You're still in the baby stages, sweetie. Some day you'll wake up, and then—"

"Yes. And then?" Susan was prim, but Eve's curiosity danced in her eyes.

The man shrugged. He reached for the slim, long-fingered hand that lay on the desk before him. Susan gasped. "Do stop teasing me. You promised!"

"All right. But you must come out with me one day. How about the races on Saturday? Driving out with some people. Like to show you to them, you pretty thing, you."

A flap flared in the girl's cheek. Dangers talk, this, for a man to pour into the ears of young-and-so Susan didn't know how to answer. It wasn't what she had dreamed of love from the lips of a man jaded and disillusioned, but it was more tempting than she dared to admit. And what, after all, had she to do on Saturday? Oh, she could have a sandwich and glass of milk on the way home. She would sway wearily from the strap in the packed and crowded street car and spend the rest of the afternoon ironing or darning the stockings Aunt Jessie had saved for her.

All around her in the expectant bustle of downtown's half holiday girls would be clinging to their escorts. Girls in white, their bathing suits bundled in brief cases. Girls in floppy hats. Girls with ear-muffled lips going to the beaches, the parks, the amusement places. She, Susan Carey, would be alone.

She wondered even as she answered this man slowly and deliberately why she hesitated. There was something in her blood warning her against him though her pulses leaped to the temptation. She was young. She was alive and eager. It was little fun to spend her free time alone as she usually did or, worse still, listening to Aunt Jessie's complaints.

"Why don't you answer me, miss? Getting above herself, she is, since she's got a job. Forgets that I raised her?" Aunt Jessie's voice rained to a whine, would-draw-out-and-on. Yes, Jack Waring's company would be a change from this. Still she refused. "Not this time," she said. She fibbed. "I'm busy Saturday."

Unacknowledged and in the back of her brain lay the admission that she would not dare to go for fear of what Mr. Ernest Heath might say. His lean, aristocratic face rose before her. She thought of the distaste his fine eyes would express if he heard she was "gadding round" to cheaper Jack Waring. Susan felt. Other girls did it—yes. Somehow she could not.

But Waring was not finished with her yet. Impudently he plucked his shaven, mocking face so close to Susan's that she could smell the scent of the lilac lotion he used. "Watch out," he whispered. "We Waring usually get what we want."

Almost those audacious lips grazed the girl's flaming cheek.

A voice broke in on the tableau. Ernest Heath's voice. Sarcastic and cold as ice it fell on Susan's startled ears.

"Very charming, indeed! And now I should like to know what you're going on here if you're not too busy to tell me!"

Scarlet, aghast, Susan leaped to her feet.

She was speechless. No words came to her defense. She twisted carelessly, looking in her angry innocence the various pictures of guilt Ernest Heath's thin lips drew together in a straight, forbidding line. He strode into the private office without another glance at the girl. Over his shoulder he threw these words:

"I'd like to see you at once, Waring. Alone."

Shoals Fight Draws Nearer
Congressman Thomason Is Leading Figure In Work On Bill

WASHINGTON — Congress is preparing for one of the most bitter battles of the present stormy session with the recent completion of work on the Muscle Shoals bill here, a task in which one Texan Congressman R. E. Thomason played an active part.

The huge power and nitrate plant in Alabama has stood practically idle since the days of the World War while Congress has been trying in vain to enact legislation which would meet presidential approval. The present bill provides for leasing the giant project, under certain restrictions, and in the event a satisfactory lease cannot be negotiated government operation would be inaugurated.

Congressman Thomason, only member from Texas on the Military Affairs Committee, which has been handling the bill, was described by newspaper men here when he was appointed on the committee as "no friend of the power trust."

"I favor leasing the plant to private enterprise so that the project may be developed and its tremendous power resources made available to the public," Congressman Thomason said, "but in the event a satisfactory bid cannot be obtained I am unwilling to allow the project to stand practically idle as it has for so many years."

"Nearly $200,000,000 of the taxpayers' money was sunk in Muscle Shoals and so far no advantage have been received. The plant was built to supply nitrate during the war. It can easily be utilized in the manufacture of nitrate for fertilizers and in power production. One of the nitrate plants, costing millions of dollars, is already obsolete and it has never produced a dollar's worth of nitrate. If the project is allowed to stand indefinitely without operation all of it will eventually be nearly worthless. To allow it to remain idle forever would constitute one of the greatest wastes of public money in the history of the republic.

"It is not a question of investing public money in private business but of taking action to salvage something of the tremendous fortune which the public has already invested."

The Military Affairs Committee started hearings on Muscle Shoals shortly after Congress convened last December. It has heard witnesses from all over the country. Edsel Ford was one of the men who testified before it. The committee members have read literally scores of pamphlets, charts and surveys going into all phases of the problem.

Congressman Thomason has been studying the problem carefully for months and has expressed himself as favoring the bill as presented to the House and hopeful of its passage.

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Way Formed

That the deflationary movement has not yet been stopped is attested by the fact that during the month of March the value of all shares on the New York Stock Exchange declined another seven percent and wholesale prices have continued to decline. This is a negation of the policy which Congress, the Administration, and the banks adopted at the beginning of the year when they established the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, passed the Glass-Steagall bill, and declared for a balanced budget. Our declared policy is to stop the deflation of credit and thus to arrest the fall in prices and lay the foundation for a rise in prices. We are compelled to ask ourselves why this policy is not more effective.

It is fairly evident that although the Federal Reserve System now possesses the legal and technical means to do its part in executing this policy, the necessary confidence is lacking to carry it out boldly. A policy of credit expansion depends not merely upon the will of the central bankers to create credit, but also upon the willingness of commercial bankers and business men to use it. The question, therefore, arises as to what are the controlling causes of this lack of confidence.

They are to be found in part, we may suppose, in an infection within the Federal Reserve System due to divided councils. A policy of deliberate credit expansion is not orthodox banking and if current reports are reliable there is within the Federal Reserve System itself important opposition by reputable but ultra-conservative individuals. This hesitation is reinforced, we may assume, by the fact that although the policy of expansion in the United States is ardently desired by most of the outer world, the Bank of France is believed to be controlled by old and highly orthodox gentlemen who are greatly alarmed at the idea. Their power to withdraw gold is still sufficiently great to make their opposition embarrassing.

Thus it may be said that the policy is stalled by the failure as yet to arrive at unanimity in the central banking cities of France and America.

But this position, this resistance by the very orthodox, is not merely theoretical, is not merely devotion to ancient principle, and is not selfish calculation. It is due essentially to fear arising out of wider and deeper causes. The policy of credit expansion has for its aim the resumption of production and purchasing. Everywhere in the world governments are pursuing policies which destroy trade, deflate prices, and make the payment of debts difficult. Not much hope can be placed in a policy of expanding credit while the nations are engaged in the suicidal efforts to strangle the trade which would justify the use of credit.

On the part of the debtor nations the difficulty of meeting their old obligations at current prices has forced them into a drastic curtailment of their purchases abroad. An extreme illustration of the plight of the debtor countries is provided by Bulgaria: in 1931 the weight of her exports was nearly doubled over 1929 but their value in gold was actually less. The only way for the debtors to keep relatively solvent is to cut down their purchases. On the part of the creditor nations, like the United States and France, the doctrine that the home market should be monopolized has produced an unwillingness to buy. It has, of course, been followed by an inability to sell. With every nation, debtor and creditor alike, trying to cut down imports the exports of all nations have been cut down too.

For, though it is hard for the average voter to understand it, such nation's imports are the exports of other nations. If all nations simultaneously attack foreign imports they are bound collectively to bring world trade to a virtual standstill.

There is, in short, an economic war raging in the world and during a war men have little confidence for enterprise. What each man aims at is security and liquidity for himself, which means simply that he will not buy or lend if he can avoid it, and prefers to indulge in some one of the many forms of hoarding.

The economic war is accentuated by the political tension arising out of the uncertainty as to what Europe will do about reparations and the United States about the war debts. For while it is perfectly possible for the governments and voters to say what they will not compromise and settle, the price of this irreconcilability is the destruction of confidence.

Finally, the tension is increased by the fact that in the three nations which occupy a central place in the situation today—in France, Germany and the United States—the people are deeply and bitterly divided by section; and class conflicts which paralyze them in trying to make national decisions. The most dangerous division is, of course, in Germany where, until the Prussian elections at the end of the month have been decided, the very existence of the Republic is in doubt. The French position is not remotely of the same order. Nevertheless, the impending elections are being fought with increasing bitterness and, therefore, cause great uncertainty as to the future. Finally, there is the situation in Congress which undoubtedly reveals the pent-up sentiment of the country, and there it has been shown since the collapse of Mr. Garner's leadership that in the absence of a national program which inspires hope for the future there is a strong disposition to resort to vindictive and punitive measures.

Only the boldest and most resourceful leadership all along the line can open a way out of this destructive deadlock. On the main objective there is general agreement: there must be an expansion of credit based upon a restoration of confidence, which in its turn must rest upon the prospect of an economic and political truce. To say that is easy. To achieve it is hard. For in order to achieve it bold and generous actions have to be taken simultaneously and in coordination on several fronts: by the bankers in the realm of credit, by business men in the realm of enterprise, by Congress in the realm of commercial and fiscal policy, by the State Department in the realm of political security, and by the president as the field marshal of the whole campaign. The problem has to be seen as a whole. The task is to justify credit and to provide it, and this cannot be done by sitting around and waiting for someone else to move. All the responsible agencies need to move together if their separate actions are to take effect.

A unified effort of this sort is possible only among a people who have taken themselves in hand, have written off the losses of the past, and have seen that their common concern in no great crisis transcends all their separate interests. In the name of patriotism much evil has been done in this world. Yet there come periods in the history of peoples when they must resort to their common loyalties and there remember that beneath all their differences is a common life. This is such a period. This is a time when the nation is at war not with an enemy outside but with encroaching disorder and chaos, and it may well be asked of every man that he keep order in his own spirit, and shut the door in no other man's face. Purpose of Sorrow. Every sorrow, he reminded his listeners, had its purpose and because human beings could see hardly farther than their hands, they could not therefore see their own growth under trying conditions.

He declared that if a church had but 12 members and every member was faithful their influence would build a church; not necessarily a fine church building but a great church spiritually.

One of his most striking illustrations was the story of a visit to a sugar mill in Louisiana. Some people there had acquired the idea that quantity and not quality counted in their industry and so they almost lost it. They finally had to import a fine species of sugar cane to rebuild their former prosperity.

Work in Union. On this trip Mr. Webb was shown a sugar mill. There was one giant wheel and 11 small ones. While he was looking off at some person remarked on the ability of that wheel to turn the machine. He looked at it and noticed a small wheel, almost invisible. It occurred to him that this scene was typical of human life. If the small wheel refused to function when the next wheel turned, it would not find the proper cog waiting for it and the result would be that the giant wheel would be helpless.

The problem before every church member, he said, was to do his part, no matter how small, because it was as important to working of the whole as the greater parts.

Although to the casual observer the fact that this rock has by erosion taken on the form of a lion, with the head especially plainly formed, may not present itself. Closer view of the rock, however, discloses this fact. Upon the smooth 'side' of the natural rock the Lions club will place the brass tablet or 'cornerstone' of the bond.

'Caves'. Around the side of the pond are numerous small 'caves' extending back into the bank. At the north end a flat rock is so placed that a wide recess is formed under it.

One visitor to the park Sunday wondered how the 'spring' up the hill from the pond was discovered. So natural had the artificial spring been constructed that he thought it was a natural vein of water. The pipe feeding the stream to the pond is so hidden under a rock that it cannot be seen as the water bubbles around the rock base and into a small, clear pool that makes one wish to kneel and quaff a drink of the pure, sparkling water.

The Fish Pond is located a few yards to the southeast of the park drive that leads along the east side of the main picnic grounds. Until one reaches the very edge of the pond the rocks forming its sides appear only as a part of the natural landscape of the hill. Then the sparkling stream flowing from above catches the eye and the pond itself, with maximum depth of 30 inches is seen.

Water flowing into the pond passes through a drain and flows into the park irrigation pipes below, thus serving a double purpose.

The Lions club committee in charge of the project, which had the cooperation of the city manager, and to which Mr. Shick has devoted much of his time for several weeks, was composed of Dr. C. K. Bivings, Tracy T. Smith and Dr. W. B. Hardy.

Selfert & Dibble's No. 1 T. M. Blackburn in Scurry county, 2,310 feet from the north and west lines of section 163, block 97, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey, has drilled to 4,480 feet in dark, sandy lime.

Eighteen hundred feet of 6 5/8-inch casing had been run in H. L. Warrick's No. 1 Ibbetson, Ector county, when the string collapsed. It was being pulled to be re-run. Total depth is 3,275 feet, the test having been shut down there for about a year. Charles Messenger has taken it over to deepen. Location is 330 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the west line of section 163, block 97, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey, has drilled to 4,480 feet in dark, sandy lime.

Speed without shifting gears. And, then, Mr. Malcolm demonstrated the 75-mile-per-hour speed which it is declared can be maintained on paved roads in the V-8 with safety. When the speedometer registered 75 miles per hour he "slowed 'er down." It was obvious that higher speed could have been easily obtained.

The new Ford's attractiveness to such a large number of people led representatives of the manufacturer to repeat the words of a Detroit man who declared that "Other cities may refer to the day of the great wind or the year of the great fire. Detroit will remember this as the week of the great automobile sales drive."

Important Event. Never in history, it has been declared, has the spotlight been so effectively thrown upon automobile products. In popular comment it has been said that the Ford was long overdue. In the vocabulary of Henry Ford there is no such phrase. The new Ford was ready when it had met the tests, not of Ford engineers but of Henry Ford himself. Ford would have been happy to see signs of improvement on the business horizon before putting his new models in the hands of dealers. He was in no hurry to anticipate economic recovery.

The story is told in Detroit that when Ford made his big preliminary announcement last February, he did so at the suggestion of President Hoover. Ford, it is said, would have preferred to wait. The White House believed an announcement would stimulate business and Ford consented to reveal his plans. Other manufacturers benefited little, however, as the announcement acted as a broke upon sales of low priced cars.

"We do not demonstrate this car in price class but in performance class," declared Mr. Malcolm Monday morning.

Home Town. (Continued from Page One) beneficiaries for a hundred years from the protective tariff, refuse to consider the just request of the Michigan continent independent oil men for adequate protection against the flow of cheap foreign oil for use as cheap fuel along the Atlantic seaboard.

My friends, I am frankly alarmed at this growth of sectional feeling. I am afraid of it. I implore New England to look beyond its own immediate self-interest, and take a national view of the economic problems we face. I implore the people of the Middle West to suspend judgment on New England; the people of New England are like the people of the Middle West, like the people of the Northwest, the Southwest, and the South. Industrial and political leadership in New England has not been of the wisest, but as New England comes to understand the extent and growth of the country since the days when New England was the country; comes to realize the interdependence of New England and other sections, I have every confidence that New England leadership will take a broader view, a national view and work for the best interests of the entire country. If the present leadership does not rise to the situation, then I have every confidence that the people of New England themselves will repudiate that leadership.

15-Year-Old Girl Loses Long Fight Against Illness

Mildred Irene McCormick, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. McCormick, sadly Monday morning lost her three and one-half year fight against an illness that was caused by an apparently slight injury to a bone in her foot which she received while driving to Big Spring to attend a ball game.

The little girl was able to go to school for a year after her injury but for fifteen months before her death had been confined to bed. A bone infection, spreading from her toe through the bones of much of her body proved fatal.

Funeral services were to be held at 2 p. m. Monday from the McCormick home on the C. E. Talbot (Lester Fisher) farm north of Big Spring, where Mildred Irene died at 1:40 a. m. Monday. Rev. W. D. Hall of the Assembly of God church here, was to officiate. Arrangements were in charge of the Charles Eberly Funeral Home.

Surviving the child are the parents, three brothers, Lee, Weldon and Jerrald, and a sister, Jeanette.

Advances In Fight Against Cancer To Be Seen In Films

Public presentation of motion pictures being shown throughout the country by the National Council for Control of Cancer, with a lecture by Dr. Charles H. Harris, head of the Harris Clinic-Hospital has been announced for 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Settles hotel by members of the local Medical Society.

There will be a banquet at the hotel at 7 p. m. Wednesday for members of the medical society of Howard, Ector, Midland and Martin counties, with dentists and nurses as guests.

The motion pictures include three reels, with some lantern slides giving statistical reports on deaths from cancers in the past thirty years.

One of the reels shows the hazards and disastrous effects of quick cancer cures, with a love story woven into the picture. For two scientific reels show self-development and the influence of development under radium and x-ray. This is declared to be a very interesting demonstration.

Medical men of Howard and neighboring counties are very anxious that a large number take advantage of this opportunity of learning what is being done to combat cancer.

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

The Steer thirty-clads lost some of their prestige in the invitational meet at Abilene Saturday as they scored only 24 points to 30-1-2 for the Abilene Eagles, annual winner of the district carnival to be staged on their home track this week-end. And on the same day the Snyder team, who is due to be the party of the third part in this three-cornered duel, walked away with honors in the Lubbock invitational meet, with Buford McClinton, who almost became a Bovine this season, doing a bit of fine sprinting and hurdling.

Nevertheless we stand pat on our selection of the Steers as winners of the district meet. The Bovines are not, we confess, such high-powered athletes. They do have, however, one or two men who can enter almost any event on the program, and against ordinary high school competition come out with a large total of points. Howard Payne and Abilene Christian College submitted freshmen in the Saturday meet that were able to beat out Dennis in the weight events, and to hold Forrester practically scoreless. Abilene High has no such men. Snyder will offer competition in only the events in which the Eagle speedsters are strong. Cordell and the other Abilene sprinters will have their hands full trying to beat McClinton and Howell.

The San Angelo Bobcats have been booked as the opponents for the dedication of Abilene's new stadium next October 8, and Bloddy Cross is contemplating upon the possible outcome of the game already. Angelo is due for a good club next year, and unless Abilene retains a good many of her 1931 gridsters may find it hard to turn back Harry Taylor's charges. The sentence was written in appreciation of the Concho city's hospitality over the week-end. We do not think such a thing at all.

Cross incidentally advances a new idea concerning the coaching career of Oble Bristow. "He won't be at Big Spring very long, and he will not be at Oklahoma." "Where then," we timidly inquired, worshipping at the great man's feet, "will he be?" "He may be," Cross retorted, "at San Angelo."

Sometime in the near future the San Angelo and Big Spring noters are due to clash in an inter-city match, which will mean the first defeat of the season for a Howard county athletic squad in competition with a Concho team. Angelo is blessed with players like Clinton, Pettis, and Williams, and could no doubt clean up upon any city in the portion of the state.

The major league baseball races get off to a flying start Tuesday with the Cardinals, defending champions, opening against the Pittsburgh Pirates, who haven't done so well for a good many years now. Flat Riden is picked for service on the mound. The St. Louis Browns met the Chicago White Sox, with either Walter Stewart or Dick Coffman to be tossing them over. The Cleveland Indians meet the Detroit Tigers with Wes Ferrel due to take the box, and the Cincinnati Reds play the Chicago Cubs with either St. Johnson or Red Lucas to make up the battery along with Lombardi.

The Texas League marathon will get underway Thursday, and Fort Worth as usual will open against the Dallas Steers. Texas scribes seem to be unanimously of the idea that Dallas and Houston will battle it out for the title this summer, with the latter favored over the two. Which isn't a bad prediction at all. The Country Club nibblek wielders got off to a flying start in the Sand Belt Golf Association by defeating the Colorado linksmen 24 to 13 in the first matches of the season Sunday afternoon. A nice little wind gave the golfers something to think about, but Shirley Fybbins blasted home in 74, which is good enough. Fred Stephens had a 78, which is very good, but no other local scores were below 80. Oble Bristow entered as the No. 3 man and in spite of practically no practice at all defeated his man, Martin of Colorado. Six of the local players won their individual matches and all four twosomes finished ahead of the visitors. Results from Texon, Midland, and other places were not available.

The city municipal course, while we're on the subject, is being rounded into shape and is a pretty swell layout at that. It winds in and out among the hills of the city park, you know, and is just a few hundred yards beyond the Country Club links. It should boost golf as a game considerably in Big Spring, for a number of ambitious Bobby Joneses. Robbins no doubt enjoyed his three-stroke victory over Bob Scott of Colorado considerably. They are arch-rivals of the links, and it is not every day that golfers in this portion of the state can win over the Mitchell county ranchman, who shoots 'em left-handed. Scott has won several tournaments in the last few years in West Texas and is due to win one or two more during his lifetime.

Merchandiser's Bulletin

Stating his pleasure in optimistic reports concerning the "Save and Spend" drive sponsored by The Ladies' Home Journal, Mr. C. P. Woody, manager of the local Montgomery Ward store, commented today upon the tremendous local approval of Ward Week, intended as a merchandising contribution to better times.

"Ward Week, our tie-up with the various prosperity drives, has every prospect of smashing victory before Saturday night, the final close. Have been pleased to see large paper currency, which has been out of circulation for some time, presented for merchandise values at the new, low price levels for this week," stated Mr. Woody. Numerous out-of-town visitors have been attracted to the local Ward store for a copy of the "Save and Spend" program. "They also want to see the tie-up between Ward Week values and the prosperity movements," continued the local manager.

The Ward manager commented that an amazing number of people are trading hoarded dollars for six months' supplies of outstanding bargains. "I certainly am happy," he said, "that Ward's is lined up for this week in the prosperity campaign by offering fresh stocks at slashed prices." Ward Week, planned for several months, began on Saturday, April 9 and will end Saturday, April 16. The local store is employing many extra local people to help with the daily arrivals of new merchandise.

American Girls Need Trained Leadership Outside Their Homes

MRS. NATHAN L. MILLER

"The girl outside her home," says Mrs. Nathan L. Miller, "is very often a different person from the girl at home. Then she needs a leader who can win her confidence and hold her interest, and such a leader, we realize now, must be trained."

Mrs. Miller, who is the wife of the former Governor of New York State, is chairman of the Personnel division of the Girl Scouts, the division which is responsible for the training of the leaders.

"I think most psychologists agree now," said Mrs. Miller, "that the very close contact existing between mother and daughter frequently repels rather than encourages frankness. The girl is often afraid of falling below the standards set by her parents. She has no such fear with an outsider whom she respects but with whom she feels a greater sense of equality."

The ideal Girl Scout leader, Mrs. Miller has found, combines the best features of a confidante, teacher and companion.

"But such a leader needs not only interest in girls but knowledge of how to handle them. Girl Scouting has technique based on the best principles of modern progressive education, and this technique it imparts through its training courses."

The first and most important of the Girl Scout training camps is at Camp Edith Macy, situated at Briarcliff, N. Y., which is under the direct control of Mrs. Miller's division. This camp opens on May 11th and remains open until October 3rd. The standards set there are now being established in all other camps through the country "Girl Scouting," Mrs. Miller explained, "depends for its success on the greatest degree on the leader. Her task is educational in the very broadest sense of the word, and education is one of the things which we can not afford to disregard even in the hardest times."

Church Visitor To Speak To Episcopalians

United Thank Offering Field Worker In City For Few Days

Miss Helen Whitehouse, United Thank Offering field worker for the Episcopal church, was the principal speaker this afternoon to the Auxiliary members and will speak tonight to the men and women of the church.

Her evening topic will deal with the work of the church and will be illustrated by a missionary map, showing the locations of the missions and revealing some of the work done in each by the United Thank Offering.

The local church entertained Miss Whitehouse at noon today with a luncheon at the Settles Hotel.

The United Thank Offering is an offering given by the women of the church, every three years. Its last amount totalled one million dollars.

It is used for the support of domestic and foreign workers and is the only support which these workers have.

Miss Whitehouse is one of the workers whose salary is paid from this fund. Others are student workers, missionaries, both domestic and foreign, all field workers, correspondence workers. In short, practically every woman worker whose field is related to missionary work and religious education is supported by the United Thank Offering fund.

Other purposes to which this fund is put is the building of student centers in college towns. The erection of Seaman Hall at Lubbock is being financed by this fund.

Miss Whitehouse, whose home is in Helena, Montana, is one of five United Thank Offering field workers. She has been in this work since last September, when she obtained her M.A. at the University of Chicago. She received her B.A. from the University of Montana.

Miss Whitehouse spent January in Massachusetts. She came to Texas in February where she has been working under the direction of Bishop Seaman in the Panhandle. She goes from here to Mid-
