EX-TEXAS RANGERS ANSWER TO ROLL CALL

LAW ENFORCEMENT RIDERS ON RANGES AND BORDER PREVIOUS TO 1879 MEET FOR REUNION

Sixth Annual Gathering of the Bold Fighters Against Unruly Indians and Outlaws Being Held in Ranger, Opening Three-Day Session Today.

Texas Rangers of Yore, when the name brought terrors to the boldest outlaws and Indians, were gathering throughout the morning today at the convention headquarters, Pine and Austin streets, swapping stories of experiences and inquiring after friends who had died during the year, as the first morning of the Sixth Annual Re-union of the Ex-Texas Rangers Association being held in Ranger this year, opened the three day session.

With their steps firm and eyes still bright and keen, ex-Rangers, some of them ranging towards the 90's in years and a few above the 90 mark, gathered together for roll call and registration at the convention hall.

The meeting was called to order by Major William M. Green, presiding officer of the association since its organization. Thirty-five ex-rangers had registered prior to calling the roll. Many were accompanied by their families. Many more are scheduled to arrive and a number are not expected to reach Ranger before tomorrow morning.

A memorable one, and then he branched off to telling a few facts regarding the Texas Rangers of long ago and the part they played in the history of Texas. He said: "The Texas rangers were organized for the first time in 1833 by a man named Cole. The original quota that comprised the group of intrepid men who worked for $1 a day are dead, but a number of the rangers who served prior to 1890 are still alive and are now organized into a body known as the ex-Texas rangers."

Due to the work of the organization and the unceasing efforts of Major William Green, commanding officer of the organization, practically all of the members now alive are receiving pensions from the federal government.

Guests of Rotarians. Members of the Ex-Rangers' association and their families were guests of the Ranger Rotary club today at luncheon. Immediately following the luncheon, a speech was given by Russell Kingsbury of Waco, thanking the Rotary club for their efforts to make the visit of the old-timers

Scandal in Congressional Circles of Washington Being Divulged in Divorce Trial by a Woman Spurned

ALPENA, Mich., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Edna James Scott received Gilbert Bensinger, an alleged bootlegger, as a caller in her room at the Lee house, Washington, a deposition by F. C. Sykes, house detective of the hotel, stated at the Scott divorce trial today. Sykes said he watched the two through the keyhole. "They cuddled up together," the deposition said. "Often she was on his knee. It is pretty hard, you know, to see through a keyhole."

Walter M. Lamb of Breckenridge Killed in Automobile Crash

BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 12.—Walter M. Lamb, 38, well known drilling contractor of Breckenridge, was killed instantly when his automobile plunged off the Throckmorton road, 15 miles west of Breckenridge.

Highway Expenditures Cut Down Bank Balances

AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—State highway department disbursements during July accounted for the heavy first-down in the state's bank account, the state treasurer says. Receipts for the month were $2,310,225.94, and disbursements $4,584,246.90.

Coast Guard Cutter Bear Goes on Shoal Off Alaskan Coast

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The coast guard cutter, Bear, 50-year-old veteran of the coast guard fleet, is ashore on a shoal one mile off Prince of Wales cape, Alaska, the navy department was advised today in a telegram from San Francisco naval headquarters. The vessel was reported pounding on a rough bottom in two and one-half fathoms of water.

Dorothy Ellingson Confident of Acquittal

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 12.—Dorothy Ellingson arose today at the county jail here with an expression of renewed confidence of acquittal on the charge of killing her mother. The jury to try her was picked with unexpected ease. Seven married women and five men were accepted. Assistant District Attorney Skillen, prosecutor, said the state would probably complete its case today.

Drought Relief Rates Are Given Setback

AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—The outside connections of Texas railways rejected the request of the Texas railway commission to grant relief rates on feedstuff from outside points to the drought-stricken areas of Texas.

Present Grain Rates to Remain in Force a While

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Proposed rates on grain from western states to Louisiana points were ordered suspended until Dec. 10 by the interstate commerce commission today. Present rate will remain in force until the interim. The commission set Sept. 8 for opening of hearings at Dallas on the proposed schedule.

The wedding will take place early in the winter according to the announcement.

FEAR OF OPERATIONS SPARED WOMEN NOW BY USING G. F. P.

Quick and Easy Way Out of Pain From So-called Female Disorders Now Provided.

"Nine out of every ten cases of so-called disorders of women," says one of the nation's foremost authorities on the condition of women, "are caused by an unseen but malignant enemy to their health—Catarrh of the Generative Organs."

Headaches, backaches, pains in the sides and limbs, cramping, nausea and that awful run-down, drowsy and depressed feeling are evidences that this disease has gotten a grip on the delicate generative organs of women, and are warnings which wise women heed by taking steps to rid their system of this menace to their future health and happiness.

Hundreds of beaming happy women are now coming out in public every day and telling their friends and fellow-women of the miraculous changes which this marvelous medicine has made in their condition.

Mrs. Mittie Johnson says: "My doctor told me that there was no hope for me unless I was operated on, but thanks to St. Joseph's G. F. P. I am now up and feeling like a new woman."

Billy Evans Says

THE ROMMEL CHANCE

ONE of the outstanding hurriers in the present American League chase has been Eddie Rommel of the Athletics. The excellent work of the famous knuckle-ball artist has done much to keep the Mackian horde up around the top of the heap.

Not only has he been used in regular turn, but out of it as well. Time and again he's been sent in as relief pitcher in a desperate attempt to pull a game out of the fire. And often he's succeeded. During the lengthy absence of Sam Gray from the activities, it was Rommel, along with Slim Harris, who kept the team in the running.

On the recent western jaunt Rommel was the big noise, beating each of the teams in that sector and not losing a bit.

A GREAT RECORD

IT was in 1922 that Rommel hung up his sensational record of 27 victories with a team that stayed around the bottom of the heap all season. He lost 13 frays. All things considered it was one of the premier pitching feats staged in the Johnsonian circuit in quite a stretch. Winning that many bouts in a season is considered an unusual task nowadays for any hurler, let alone putting it over with a lowly second division outfit.

Since then Rommel has only hurled so-so ball, until this year when he got off to a flying start and has clung to the pace down through the months. During the first 15 weeks of play, Rommel turned in 18 triumphs. And with close to two more months to run, he stands an excellent chance of beating his record of three seasons ago.

Fact is that the Mackian runner may reach the 30-game mark in victories ere the campaign terminates which is a rare accomplishment, indeed, these days.

BOXING BOUTS IN RANGER GET MUCH APPLAUSE

Gloved - Hand Demonstrators Give Clever Exhibitions That Interest the Fans.

Thirty rounds of genuine scrapping on the part of all the boxers in the five bouts held last night in the American Legion athletic stadium on Pine street was the second offering of the American Legion committee to the fight fans of Ranger and surrounding towns last night. Every one of the five bouts was full of action from the first round till the last. A crowd that jammed the bleachers and ringside seats on all sides witnessed the bouts and alternately howled and hooted. Many from Breckenridge, loyally supported two men from that town and shouted approval when one was declared a winner and one match a draw.

The main event of the night was between Ralph Brady of Ranger and Harry Ryan of Dallas. The decision was awarded to the home lad on points with half the crowd howling approval and the remainder yelling for a draw. The two mixed it thoroughly for the entire rounds with one and then the other alternately rushing the other. The ten rounds were filled with action from start to finish, with Brady and his cat like jumps in and out of the defense of Ryan, keeping the Dallas lad on the jump. Ryan, a rushing type of scrapper, pounded Brady into the ropes time after time only to have the smaller man in height imitate a monkey, clinging to the ropes with one hand and letting the other swing at will while he dodged with lightning like rapidity. Ryan was somewhat taller than Brady, but what the smaller man lacked in height he made up in ceaseless activity and skill in footwork. Many of the fans claimed that Ryan should have had sides witnessed the bouts and alternately howled and hooted. Many from Breckenridge, loyally supported two men from that town and shouted approval when one was declared a winner and one match a draw.

JAPANESE SCIENTIST BLAMES RADIO ACTIVITY FOR QUAKES

TOKIO, Aug. 11.—Radio activity is a leading cause of earthquakes and other seismic disturbances, according to a theory brought forward by Dr. Nakamura, seismological expert and professor in the Imperial university. Nakamura has just completed a study of the San-in district, where severe quakes took place this spring, and soon will publish a brochure on the relation of radio active hot springs in this area to the earth tremors.

According to the Nakamura theory the earth, instead of constantly contracting as it cools toward the center, is expanding because of radio activity which sets up an internal pressure. It is this pressure from the interior of the earth outward which causes disasters such as the Toyooka quakes in May in which more than 200 were killed.

The theory is described by such widely known seismologists as Drs. Imamura (ex) and Yanagaki, who assert the Toyooka disaster and all other earthquakes in Japan are correctly ascribed to dislocations of earth, usually in the great faults which exist off the Japanese coast.

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes—but no work or children.

Dick borrows his mother's maid, Maggie, to teach Gloria to cook. But she refuses to learn. She gives a housewarming, and asks Stanley Wayburn, an actor with whom she once was in love, to be one of the guests. When he comes Dick is instantly jealous of him. After the wild party,

Maggie, disgusted, quits her job. Then Gloria hires Ranghild Swanson, although Dick tells her they can't afford a maid. And she buys $400 worth of clothes and insists upon a new car. Dick goes into debt to buy it. About this time Gloria begins to be jealous of Dick's secretary, Miss Briggs. Gloria and Wayburn go riding in the new car and are seen by Mother Gregory, who begs Gloria to mend her ways. She manages to have Gloria elected to the Home Women's club, but "blackballs" May Seymour, wife of Dr. John Seymour, because of her love affair with Jim Carewe. May, determined to keep the friends she has, gives a card party. Gloria quarrels over the game with Lola Hough, who tearfully gets up to go. To Gloria's consternation, Myra Gail, whose friendship she values, takes sides with Lola.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

With utter dismay, Glory watched Myra Gail get up from her table. It was one thing to quarrel with the shabby Lola, who had few friends—and quite another to have Myra for an enemy!

For Myra was a born leader. And the rest of the women were sure to side with Lola against Gloria if Myra did. Women were such sheep! They had no minds of their own! In a flash Gloria was on her feet. "Please don't go," she pleaded, laying one hand on Myra's arm. "I'll run upstairs and tell Lola I'm sorry for what I said. I'll bring her back."

She ran upstairs to Myra's bedroom where Lola was pinning on her unfashionable old hat. "Gloria begged, 'I'm awfully sorry for what I said to you just now. You know I didn't mean it. Please come on downstairs with me. Do!'"

Lola shook her head. "No," she said. "The things you said were too true, Gloria. I haven't any business trying to play cards with the rest of you girls. You're all crackerjacks—and I guess I'm no good for anything but housework. Don't ask me to play any more today—I couldn't face the bunch, downstairs."

At that moment Myra Gail came into the bedroom. She turned to Gloria, furiously. "It's you who ought to be ashamed to face the crowd!" she cried, "after what you did to Lola! It was the meanest thing I've ever seen one girl do to another! Believe me, I'll think twice before I play cards with you again—Come along, Lola, and I'll drive you home."

She marched past Gloria without another word or look. Lola followed meekly. Dazed, Gloria watched them go. "Gloria!" Myra called her from the hall below. "Come on down so we can go on playing."

Gloria tossed her head and went down. No one greeted her as she came into the room. Gloria could feel the chill in the air. She knew that the other girls were down on her because Myra was. Well, what did it matter? What did the friendship of women amount to, anyway? Gloria told herself she would have given up a dozen card parties for one drive with Stan Wayburn—She wished she had gone riding with him this very afternoon!

She picked up her cards. She was what may be called a "mean" player. She played for the prize. She sat there now, tightlipped and hard-eyed. She gathered in her tricks, intent as a kingfisher killing fish at a river's edge.

Gone was the Gloria of the limpid eyes, soft lips and babyish chin—the Gloria whom Dick loved. "Well, Gloria Gregory's won the prize, as usual," little Mrs. Wing cried, when the scores were added up, two hours later.

"And it's one that will suit her to a T!" May added. She went into the dining room, and returned carrying a dusty bottle of French brandy.

"What do you know about that for a claim!" She gives me liquor and says it will suit me to a T!" Gloria shrieked. "What am I going to do with the stuff, girls? If I take it home to Dick, he'll put me out—he's so pure!"

"Don't take it home to Dick. Take it home and hide it. You may need it some time, yourself, for a party," Myra advised.

But Gloria knew that she wouldn't dare to have another party soon in Dick's house—Then, suddenly, she thought of Stan. She would give him the brandy! He liked a nip now and then.

She telephoned him from the coat-closet under the stairs when she put on her wraps. "Meet me outside Dick's office building in fifteen minutes," she said. "I'm driving downtown to bring him home, and I want to give you something, first."

Stan waited a moment before he answered. "In front of your husband's office building?" he repeated. "That's not so good. What if he should look out of the window and see us?"

"Coward!" Gloria cried. "You should be willing to take a chance if I do!"

She hung up. Stanley was waiting on the edge of the curb when she drove up beside him. "Get in a minute," she said. "I want to talk to you—or rather, I want to ask you something? Were you out driving with Myra Gail yesterday afternoon?—Now answer me, quick! Just like that! Yes, or no?"

Stan shook his head. But his cheeks were mantled with a dull red flush. Gloria was sure that he was not going to tell her the truth.

"Of course, I wasn't," he said. "Let's see, where was I yesterday afternoon? Nowhere in particular, I guess."

He broke off and took her hands in his driving gloves in his. He smiled down into her clear, amber eyes. "What a jealous little thing you are!" he said. "I wonder what you'd be like if you were married to me. Would you be jealous then?"

"Would I?" Gloria breathed. Stan's touch, even through her gloves, was comforting. "I'd camp on your trail—I'd be so jealous! I wouldn't let another woman look at you or speak to you, even!"

"Do you feel that way about Dick?" Wayburn asked. He was vastly amused by her fury.

"No, I can't imagine being jealous of Dick, I wish I were," Gloria said. She did not wish that she were jealous of Dick—that she cared for him wildly and longingly, as she was sure she loved Stan Wayburn.

It must be wonderful to marry the man you loved! To be wife, his pal and his partner—to have all of him, his moods, his tempers, his worries, as well as his love!

To have the right to smooth away the tired lines around his eyes with your fingers—to be a haven of rest and peace for him at the end of his long work day!

For Gloria could see that this was the way to be a wife, the kind of wife she had never been to Dick. Poor Dick! She had given him anything but rest and peace.

"It's getting dark. I'm going to kiss you," Stan said abruptly. But Gloria turned her head away from him.

"Here's what I wanted to give you," she said wily. She handed him the bottle of brandy. "I won it playing cards."

"Some prize, I'll remark!" Stan said with enthusiasm. He took her face between his hands and kissed her savagely, again and again.

"Don't!" Gloria cried. "You must not kiss me! We're forgetting I'm married!"

"Good Lord, how I want you!" he muttered in a thick voice. And then he was gone.

Gloria rubbed her bruised lips with her handkerchief. What did Stan mean when he said he wanted her? That he loved her? Surely he must!—If he didn't, would he kiss her that way?

And with the memory of those kisses on her mouth, Gloria went up to Dick's office. In his private office Dick was dictating to Miss Briggs. The door stood open.

Gloria didn't go in at once. She tiptoed over to the mirror that hung above Miss Briggs' desk, and looked at herself in it. She wondered if Stan had mussed her hair or knocked her hat awry when he kissed her.

"Please let me telephone for a taxicab to take you home!" she was pleading with Dick.

"No, no, my wife's coming down for me in her car," Dick answered shortly. His voice was muffled. I'm just dizzy—be all right in a second. Gloria went softly to the door between the two rooms, and looked into Dick's office. He was bent forward over his desk, with his head on his folded arms. Beside him stood Miss Briggs.

One of her hands was almost on his shoulder. But she did not quite touch it. Even as Gloria watched her, she drew it away and picked up a pencil. Then she backed away from Dick.

"Look here, Mr. Gregory," she said sharply. "It's none of my business, I suppose. But have you had a doctor? You know, you've had three of these spells in a month."

Dick raised his head. His eyes were dark and circled with pain. "Oh, don't keep talking, Susy," he groaned. "My head's thumping like a trip hammer." He dropped it into his hands again.

Susy! So that was what he called her when they were there alone, was it?—Gloria thought. Not even Susan—but Susy! The sedate Miss Briggs!—And she had all but patted Dick's shoulder, when she had hovered over him a moment ago! Was she in love with him—this "day-time wife" of his?

Probably she was, Gloria decided. A tiny pin-prick of suspicion staid her. And then it was gone, almost before she felt it.

For Dick was a one-woman man, Gloria knew. And she was for him, the One Woman.

Why worry about Miss Briggs, when Gloria was sure that Dick wouldn't have looked at a prize-beauty when she, herself, was in sight? Sometimes Gloria wished he would look more at other women. It would give her more freedom. . . .

She pushed the door wide open with foot, and walked into the room. The minute Dick saw her his face changed. His eyes lighted up and he grinned.

"Hello, old lady," he said. Gloria did not so much as grin at Miss Briggs. She walked coolly past her into Dick's waiting arms. As he bent his lips down to hers, Gloria heard the secretary closing the door behind her.

Secretely, she smiled. She would show Miss Briggs how like any woman meant in Dick's life except herself, Gloria!

Some women might have to worry about their husband's stenographer's, but not she. That was for unattractive women, middle-aged women—not for Gloria Gregory, with her face that was like a pansy.

And yet . . . Dick had called Miss Briggs "Susy." . . . imately, almost as if she had been his wife! The memory had been most disquieting to Gloria. While she was not actually jealous of Dick, she didn't want him to care the least little bit for anybody else. . . . and especially for Miss Briggs, who perhaps loved him. (Continued Tomorrow.)

NAVASOTA—Seventy-five miles of high-tension transmission line have been completed between Beaumont and the South Liberty oil field to serve intervening towns in the system of the Southwestern Public Service company.

PIMPLES CAUSE FOLKS TO SHRINK FROM ATTENTION

Whenever you go out, you can't help but pity the many folks you see trying to have a good time, but are so shrinking and backward about coming near others where pimply, blotchy and eczemic skin can be seen.

You almost feel like going up to them and telling them that they ought to begin using Black and White Ointment, and Soap, which so many thousands of happy people are depending on to keep their skin clear, smooth and good to look at.

Black and White Ointment, and Soap, are selling at the phenomenal rate of more than two million packages a year, and the fact that they are so economically priced is largely responsible for this record. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and the Soap.—Adv.

Menus for a Family
SISTER MARY

BY SISTER MARY
Breakfast—Stewed prunes, cereal, thin cream, crisp graham toast, waffles, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—cream of tomato soup, croutons, stuffed cucumber salad, brown bread, cottage cheese, red raspberry and current jelly, milk, tea.

Dinner—Jellied bouillon, steamed halibut, shrimp sauce, baked potatoes, lima beans, fruit salad, toasted water crackers, Roquefort cheese, rye bread, milk, coffee.

Children under six years of age should not be served the luncheon salad, the shrimp sauce nor the Roquefort cheese. However, a well-balanced and varied diet is provided for them without the forbidden foods.

The stuffed cucumber salad is a bit out of the ordinary and might be served at a high tea during the summer months.

STUFFED CUCUMBER SALAD
Two short cucumbers, ½ cup diced sweetbreads, 4 tablespoons minced raw carrot, ½ cup green peas, mayonnaise to make moist.
Pare cucumbers and cut in halves. Scoop out seeds leaving a cup. The sweetbreads should be boiled and blanched before dicing. Combine sweetbreads, carrot and peas with mayonnaise to make moist. Fill cucumber cups with mixture. Serve on a bed of shredded lettuce and garnish with radish roses and celery curls. The cucumbers should be thoroughly chilled before using.

CHANGING SEASONS

- Some merchants are already showing their fall lines.
- Our line is popularly supposed to go out of style with the advent of football season.
- But you will find that the use of ice longer into the fall will prove a wise expenditure.
- If one roast spoils from trusting to atmospheric temperature to keep it, you will have wasted a week's ice bill at that season of the year.
- This loss in addition to the many other duties a piece of ice in your refrigerator would have performed.
- Consider this before deciding to "cut expenses."
