Determined Man Hunt Started For Slayers Of Deputy Sheriffs

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 17.—A man hunt rivaling the search for Marty Durkin, Chicago's notorious "sheik bandit" spread over the middle west today for two escaped convicts sought in connection with the murder of two deputy sheriffs. The bodies of the officers, Wallace McClure and John P. Grove were found yesterday near Covington, Ind. The bodies were covered with a lap robe which has been in the automobile Grove and McClure were using in transferring the two prisoners to the state reformatory.

Jilted Lover Vainly Invokes Mosaic Law

PARIS.—French courts do not recognize the Mosaic law regarding marriage promises. Abraham Linker vainly invoked the aid of the ancient Hebrew books in his breach of promise suit against Rebecca Oulameski, who refused to keep her engagement with the mayor and the local rabbi when Abraham was all ready to go on with the ceremony. Linker's lawyer told the court that the couple broke a plate, according to the old Jewish formula, and signed "in the sole presence of God," a document drawn up in accordance with the law of Moses. Abraham offered by the terms of the contract his business as fur dealer and Rebecca brought a dowry and a linen robe in which she was to be buried when death brought the contract to an end. For this reason Linker demanded damages of 10,000 francs ($400). Mile. Oulameski on her part said she broke the engagement because she felt a "growing repulsion" for Abraham Linker. The court decided that in this day and age the Mosaic law is out of date and, moreover, the marriage contract is not final until the parties have said "yes" to the questions of the civil or ecclesiastical authority. Rebecca was allowed to keep the engagement ring and other gifts.

THE CUSTOMERS OF TOMORROW

An advertisement in the EVENING newspaper today can sell merchandise fifty years from today! This is how it can be done: Children read the EVENING newspaper because it is their means of obtaining an introduction to the outside world. When school is in session, they are away from home all morning and much of the afternoon. During vacation they are at play all day. Evening is their time to read about what "big folks" are doing. Youngsters who get acquainted with the EVENING newspaper remain its friends throughout life. They learn the names of advertisers in youth, and they become customers of those same advertisers in maturity. An advertisement read today may easily exert its influence fifty years from today. The advertiser who wishes his advertising to possess a cumulative effect, chooses the EVENING newspaper. It is the favorite of the youngsters of today—the customers of tomorrow.

Stock Show Pageant Be Held This Year On Friday Night, March 9

FORT WORTH, Feb. 17.—Coronation of Her Majesty queen of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show will be held on Friday night, March 9. In past years the coronation with the pageantry of royalty has been held on Saturday nights and the rodeo has started on Sunday. This year the rodeo will start on Saturday in order to give the public one day more of rodeos. Demand for rodeo seats caused Manager John B. Davis to decide to offer eight instead of seven days of rodeos. Practically every rodeo performance for several years has been sold out. This brought the demand for more shows of this kind. Identity of the queen, as in past years, will not be publicly revealed until she makes her appearance before the coronation audience. After she is crowned queen, she will be seated at the throne where she will witness the pageant, arranged for the entertainment of Her Royal Highness and the pageant audience. Several weeks will be required to produce the courtyard and royal scenes for the coronation. But the scenery will be used for this performance only. After the coronation and pageant, the wrecking crew will take charge of the mammoth arena and clear the way for the first rodeos. Only the ceiling will remain. Pageants and rodeo seats can now be obtained by writing to the management.

TRY TO IDENTIFY MUTILATED BODY OF MAN ON SHORE

Suggestion That It Might Be That Of Dole Flight Entrant Is Scoffed At

OXNARD, Calif., Feb. 17.—Attempts were being made here today to identify the body of a man washed ashore on the beach near Ventura. A black handkerchief of the kind commonly carried by aviators or sailors, found with the body was said to be the most likely aid of identification. Conner Reardon said the body was well preserved although partly mutilated by fish. He scoffed at reports that it might be the body of one of the unsuccessful Dole flight entrants.

WASHINGTON LETTER

WASHINGTON.—A hundred years ago American ships carried about 90 per cent of America's foreign trade. Today the figure is slightly over 30 per cent, and dropping. But if there had been no World War, the American flag very likely would have disappeared from the high seas. The high point was 1830. By 1860 our own ships were carrying but 66.5 per cent of our trade, and in the next 20 years it came down to 17.4. In 1910 only 8.7 per cent of our imports and exports were carried on American bottoms. The World War brought a big change and we were forced into a three billion-dollar shipping program because we had no ships of our own. Some European shipping was being sunk and the rest of it was tied up for war purposes. Our own exports began to pile up at the docks at an appalling rate. Shipbuilding was stimulated. The need for ships called for heroic measures. We seized the splendid German ships we had interned and then proceeded to build new ones in an orgy of building which everyone still remembers. When we came out of the war the government had some 2500 ships, of which 1000 were operating and carrying 42.7 per cent of our trade by 1920. By 1926 the percentage had dropped to 32.2, less than a third. These are some of the main facts and figures behind the present sentiment for a government merchant marine. American shipping interests haven't been able to maintain an adequate merchant marine without government aid, and it has proved impossible to obtain a subsidy from Congress. It costs more for various reasons, to build and operate American ships. One menace is the fact that more than two-thirds of ships entering and leaving American ports are of foreign registry and that they carry more than two-thirds of our cargoes, coming, it is explained by Vice Chairman Edward C. Plummer of the Shipping Board, who says of our present one-third and the continued decline: "Experience shows that this is as small a percentage of American tonnage as will insure just treatment of American cargoes by those foreign ships which now carry most of our import and export cargoes." The Jones bill, recently passed by the Senate, looks to construction of such ships as will maintain existing American flag shipping services and meet the needs of our commerce and national security. Senator Jones says that unless a definite constructive policy is adopted at this session of Congress our ships will be hopelessly deteriorated and helpless to meet world shipping conditions within the next two years.

THINKS EDEN MAY HAVE BEEN EUROPE

LONDON.—Europe may have been the Garden of Eden, and the "missing link" which has so far eluded scientists, may be found on this continent, according to the theory of Sir Arthur Keith, one of England's most prominent scientists, one of the leading officials of the Royal Institution and head of the British association. Sir Arthur advanced this theory following the discovery by a German geologist of a "Heidelberg jaw" which the British scientist declared, is the earliest European human now known to science. He declared that the discovery is one of the biggest of its kind concerning the origin of humans. "There thus really seems to be a chance that Germany is going to produce the 'missing link,' and it looks very much as though Europe really was the 'Garden of Eden,'" Sir Arthur declared.

HELMS CASE BE CALLED ON MONDAY

Motion for Change of Venue Overruled Today by Judge George L. Davenport.

Defendant's motion for a change of venue in the case of Henry Helms, alleged member of the bandit gang who held up and robbed the First National bank of Cisco on December 23rd last, was overruled by Judge Geo. L. Davenport of the 91st district court here this morning. The motion, which was the same as the one offered by the defense in the Ratliff case, a companion case, was submitted without argument after the attorneys on both sides had agreed that the testimony in the Ratliff case on this phase of the trial would be adopted in this case. Helms, who is being tried on a charge of robbery with firearms, will go to trial before Judge Davenport Monday, Feb. 20. Due to the fact that the Eastland county courthouse is being torn down to give room for a new building, the trial will be held in the auditorium of the Eastland city hall.

Helms, the second member of the alleged gang of bandits who robbed the Cisco bank and fatally shot Chief of Police G. E. (Bit) Bedford and Policeman Geo. Carmichael, made quite a different appearance this morning when he came into the courtroom than he made a few weeks ago when he was arraigned with Marshall Ratliff, Santa Claus bandit of the gang, who got 99 years in the penitentiary for his part in the robbery. At that time he was suffering greatly from gunshot wounds received in the fight with officers and citizens at the time and following the hold up and had to be supported by two officers, while today he showed no signs of having been wounded. He was clean shaven, well dressed and appeared to be enjoying the very best of health. Officers state, however, that all of his wounds had not completely healed. Helms' wife and four children will be in Eastland Monday to attend the trial, Judge J. Lee Cearley, Helms' attorney stated.

TARIFF LAWS UNDER SCRUTINY IN SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM.—The Swedish government soon will appoint an official committee for revisions and researches on the effects of the present customs tariffs. The minister of commerce will ask the committee to investigate and define the necessary minimum of customs protection of the various Swedish industries, to indicate the best means for obtaining such protection and to devote special attention to dumping competition and to the price policy of trusts. A preliminary report just out states that the total government customs receipts from the Swedish ports during 1927 amounted to $40,684,400 which means an increase of more than 10 per cent over 1926. The Stockholm and Gothenburg free ports both show materially increased figures over last year.

Resurrection Very Touching Story Of Love and Romance

"Resurrection" is in our tableaux or acts. The first takes place on the estate of Anna Pavlovna, aunt of Prince Dimitri Nekudoff, who has taken into her home the young Katiusha, the child of an unmarried village woman. She has been brought up half lady, half servant. In her 16th year when Dimitri first knows her, she exerts a physical charm that stirs him and two years later, while visiting his aunt, on his way to rejoin his regiment where he is an officer, he is thrown with her again. The old physical charm, again calls to him and Katiusha, the young and ardent, falls desperately in love with him, yields herself to what she thinks is love and the curtain descends on the lovers in each others arms. The second act takes place at a rural railway station, where Katiusha, cast off by Dimitri's aunt when her approaching motherhood is discovered, waits to talk with him as he passes through on the train. In despair she looks through the window of a compartment and sees him with a woman and is kept from him by a guard, who closes the gate before she can get through. She sees her hope of moral redemption fade away, as the train pulls out with Dimitri and the curtain falls on her disconsolate figure walking from the station. After the death of her baby, Katiusha follows follows a life debauchery until in her degradation she inhabits the lowest places of vice and is imprisoned and falsely convicted of the murder of one of her drunken patrons. Dimitri, who has left the army is on the jury that tries Katiusha and he recognizes her and realizes he is the cause of her degradation and a fierce and complex struggle begins in his soul. He does all he can to save her, but through an error in technicality, through which the jury is misunderstood by the court, she is condemned. Dimitri, who has had a change of heart, resolves to devote himself to the redemption of the girl he has betrayed. In the third act he visits her in prison. She is so degraded by her former surroundings she misunderstands him when he offers to make her his wife, and being under the influence of vodka she becomes inviting and then begs him for money. When he finally recalls to her the scenes of her girlhood, she turns from the maudlin sorrow to bitterness against the man who has set her on the path to such depths, and falls on the floor in the violence of her grief. Dimitri places in her hand a photograph of her he has kept through the years. Holding it she reflects upon the past and falls into grief weary slumbers as the curtain falls upon a scene which has encompassed the gamut of human emotion.

In the fourth act Katiusha is traveling with the political prisoners where she has been placed through the political influence of Dimitri. Dimitri has followed her into exile, still trying to atone to her. It is Easter morning and as Dimitri receives word that Katiusha has been pardoned by the Czar, Simonson, a political prisoner, announces to Dimitri he wishes to marry Katiusha. Dimitri offers Katiusha her choice; Simonson or himself. She tells Dimitri for the final time she loves him deeply, but chooses to cast her lot with Simonson. As the prisoners move away singing "Christ is Risen" Dimitri and Katiusha exchange the three symbolic kisses of the Russian Easter-tide and Katiusha, slowly shouldering her baggage and without looking back at the man who seduced and redeemed her, follows Simonson toward Siberia.

A Boston boy confessed he tried to burn the school house. The strange part of that is the baseball season has not begun.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

A sensible solution to the difficulty of finding a logical opponent for Gene Tunney would be to have the champion fight each of the contenders.

One fight a month would keep the heavyweight titleholder in condition and funds.

There is nothing silly about the suggestion. In the old days, Tunney would have had to do that very thing, or he wouldn't have been recognized as champion. Any fighter who could get the necessary backing could challenge for the title, and the champanion either fought or was branded as afraid.

Nowadays, a champion laughs when he is accused of being afraid. He knows the public will overlook his running away from dangerous opponents if he provides glamor of a little fight with a "set-up."

Take Gene Tunney's case. Would he fight George Godfrey, for example? Certainly not. Moreover, he would have no shame in evading a match with the negro. And he would go somewhere to fight Jack Dempsey, the easiest kind of a push over for him, a third time. And then talk over the radio about uplifting the sport of boxing and about what it can do for the youth of today.

It is fortunate that the youth of today is too busy to develop perceptions.

There are six prominent contenders for Tunney's title: Godfrey, Paulino Uscudun, Jack Sharkey, Jack Delaney, Tom Heeey and Johnny Rieko.

Instead of trying to figure out which of the lot can help earn him $1,000,000 for 30 minutes' work, what would be more reasonable than for Gene himself to decide which of the challengers he would like to fight first, and proceed to do so? Then, if still champions, he could take on the next one, and so on, down the line, until the name of Tunney became a by-word for the heavyweight boxing champion of the world, and not for that of a rather bored student of Shakespeare.

There is, of course, an essential difference between a champion of today and yesterday. In by-gone days, a man was heavyweight champion of the world because he liked to be, because he was a fighter, and chose to storm and swagger through the speak loudies of his period. Nowadays, why is a heavyweight champion? Perhaps my occasion correspondent, Mr. J. Carupa of Harrisburg, Pa., can furnish the answer.

With these few unkind words, I must now go on record as being firmly convinced that the heavyweight champion could go through with a program of one fight a month against his more dangerous challengers and whip them all with comparative ease.

Tunney would knock Godfrey's head off within a few rounds, and Lieperville would join Harlem in the limbo of discarded haunts of black menaces. Gene would beat Delaney with an ease which would distress the admirers of the Bridgeport boxer. The champion could whip Risko and Heeey in the same evening.

What then of Sharkey and Paulino? In a short fight, the latter would give the titleholder plenty of trouble. In a short fight, limited to six rounds or so, Sharkey would do the same. By choosing his distance carefully, I think Tunney could make Sharkey quit and outpoint Paulino.

Then there would be less derision in the voices of those who have occasion to refer to the heavyweight champion of the world.

Horned Frogs Primed For Week-End Fight With Longhorn Boys

Special Correspondence.
FORT WORTH, Feb. 17.—Still clinging to the hope of finishing their Southwest conference schedule with at least .500 per centage, the T. C. U. Horned Frogs seemed primed for a real battle this week-end as they completed workouts for their cage contest with the Texas Longhorns here Monday night.

The Longhorns likely will be just as determined to carry off a victory here as the Frogs are to improve their standing inasmuch as the Austin quintet dropped both games to the Frogs in 1927. The Christians opened the season in Austin last year with the Steers the heavy favorites to win. The game played here was a 28 to 24 for the Frogs. The second game played here was a 32 to 27 triumph for the Frogs.

Texas is now in third place in the conference race and stands a good chance of ending up second if they win the remaining games on schedule. They have one more shot at the S. M. U. Mustangs, having dropped their first encounter to the Ponies and lost two games to Arkansas.

The Frogs and Longhorns will be meeting for the first time this year Monday night; their second game to be played in Austin on Feb. 28, ending the season for both. The Frogs' probable lineup Monday night will be Steadman and Parrish, forwards; McDonnell, center, and Matthews and Wallin, guards.

GIANTS' BIG PROBLEM, NO HORNSBY

McGraw's Pennant Chances Don't Look So Rosy Minus Former Card Pilot.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The New York Giants will make their bid for the National League pennant this season minus Rogers Hornsby, who batted .361 last season and drove in 125 runs.

Surely a team which finished third in 1927 and was a dangerous contender almost until the very last few days of the campaign ought to be one of the favorites for 1928, but it was Hornsby—the man who's gone—that spurred the Giants on with his dynamic leadership and his deadly bat in their last wild dash which almost carried them past the Pirates and Cardinals.

Hornsby was traded to the Boston Braves "for the good of the team," as President Charles A. Stoneham maintains, but it may develop along in late August that Hornsby's absence will hurt "the team" more than his presence ever did.

Undoubtedly the problem that weighs most heavily upon John McGraw's furrowed brow is the replacement of Hornsby.

Andy Cohen, the Hebrew stripling who performed sensationally for the Buffalo Club in the international league last season, may fill the gap in the defense at second base, but there is no one in sight who can bat .361 and drive in 125 runs.

In place of Hornsby the Giants have Francis Hogen, a promising catcher with only one year of major league experience, Jimmy Welsh, an ordinary outfielder with a bum leg, and a flock of rookies some of whom may strengthen the club.

The Giants will assemble at their new training camp at Augusta, Ga., on March 1. Some of the battery men will report to Roger Bresnahan at Hot Springs, Ark., shortly after the middle of the month.

Twenty-three new players are on the Giants' roster.

Forgetting Hornsby, the other three-quarters of the Giants' infield looks to be about as sweet combination as any manager could wish for. Bill Terry at first, Travis Jackson at short, and Freddy Lindstrom at third, are all capable, if not great ball players.

Jackson is rated the peer of National league shortstops. A finished fielder and a timely hitter, Terry is one of the best first basemen in the league. With his spinal ailment well, Lindstrom should develop into a star this season.

McGraw banks on Cohen to play second. Andy batted .353 at Buffalo last year and prived an all-around star. Andy Hogen, the youngster who subbed at third for Lindstrom last season, may be shifted to second if Cohen proves a failure.

The outfield prospects are good. Ed Roush is almost certain to play center and George Harper right. Lefty O'Doul, the most valuable player in the Pacific Coast League, and Welsh are apt to fight it out for the left field berth. O'Doul hit .278 with San Francisco last year, and Welsh hit .287 with the Braves. Melvin Ott, a youngster who was with the Giants last year, and Art Jahn, who was with Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League last year and formerly with the Chicago Cubs, may offer strong bids for a regular outfield berth.

Hogan, the husky kid from the Braves, Jack Cummings and Zach Taylor are expected to form the catching staff. Cummings and Taylor were with the club last season. Hogan looked good last year and he may be the Giants' first string catcher. He has a rifle arm and is a heavy hitter.

The Giants have 17 pitchers who will try for berths. Burleigh Grimes, Virgil Barnes, Fred Fitzsimmons, Larry Benton and Dutch Henry are the veterans who are back. Benton led the league in games won and lost last season with 15 victories and 4 defeats.

Three of the best pitchers in the International League last season figure prominently in McGraw's plans for his pitching staff.

They are Jim Faulkner, a tall left hander who won 21 games and lost 10 for Toronto; Jess Doyle, who won 14 and lost 10 for Toronto, and Leo Mangum, who won 21 and lost 7 for Buffalo.

Bill Clarkson, who was with the Giants last year; Ben Cantwell, a right-hander from Jacksonville who showed well on the last Western trip with the Giants; Bill Walker, a left-handed strike-out artist from Denver; and Chester Nichols from Jersey City who was up once before with the Pirates are the other leading prospects.

Navy Has Best Game
The Army plays Nebraska, the Navy meets Princeton—that's the latest probably the final bit of news for the next few months on the Army-Navy squabble.

The Navy certainly did not look for an easy opponent to take the place left vacant through inability to agree with the Army. It is an assured fact that they would not have knocked up with Princeton if they had had such a thought.

Neither did the Army seek a easy game or Nebraska would not have been scheduled.

Princeton boasted one of the truly outstanding teams in the east last season, losing only one game and that to the powerful Yale team. A salient feature of its team was the number of sophomores who were labeled as stars in their first year of college football, and those stars will be back next fall, bigger and better than ever.

Nebraska has had one of the outstanding teams of the middle west for several years, and is certain to be a tough team to beat when it plays the Army.

At this time, it looks like the Army might take the Cornhuskers next fall, but one can't say the same for the Middies. They more than likely will lose to Princeton eleven.

Fans Suffer Most
One can't help but regret that the two government schools were unable to get together and iron out their troubles. But both assumed positions which could not be deviated from without suffering the loss of prestige.

There are some who think the attempts of Washington politicians to patch up the trouble, the efforts to force the government officials, even President Coolidge, in taking a hand in the matter, did not aid any in settling the dispute.

They Demand Dry Planks

Among the leaders of national organizations and professions who will meet in Washington February 28 to demand prohibition enforcement planks in the platforms of both parties are the well-known women and men above. Nomination and election of a dry candidate for the presidency will be sought.

That, one is inclined to believe, might have made both military and naval authorities a bit more stubborn in their stands and given each group a fuller determination not to back down an inch from their first announced stand.

But it is the fans who have regarded the Army-Navy games as one of the greatest of each year who suffer in their not meeting this year and who will suffer if they never meet again.

The Princeton-Navy contract is understood to be for three years. Nebraska has only a one-year agreement with the navy. That may indicate something, but just what no one has said.

It is hardly likely that any attempts will be made to reconcile the two schools before the next football season is over. Then we can expect lots of bosh about getting 'em together, and something may come of it.

WOMEN MAYORS OF ENGLAND IN SESSION

LIVERPOOL.—The first meeting of England's women chief magistrates was held here recently.

At the invitation of Miss Margaret Beavan, the first woman lord mayor of Liverpool, women mayors of nine cities in all parts of England, each wearing her official robes and chain designating a chief magistrate, met to discuss their common problems of city administration. The other four women who are chief magistrates of English cities were unable to attend due to pressure of business in their respective cities.

A huge crowd, composed mainly of men, watched the arrival of the visiting magistrates at the town hall.

PARIS.—Judging by the age of retired navy officers in France the calling of the sea leads to long life. Admiral Touchard, who lives in Paris, can be seen strolling in the Bois or along the Champs-Elysees without an overcoat in the biting winds of Paris winters. He is 83. Admiral Foucaud de Fourcroy, dean of the retired officers, is 96. Admiral Fourier, at 83, writes articles for the institute.

TOURISTS MAY SLIDE ALONG TWO-MILE ROPE

TRENT, Italy.—Dangling on a slender rope, 1,300 feet over a deep rocky ravine will be the thrill offered to tourists through a daring piece of engineering about to be begun in the construction of the Alpine tourist ropeway from Fai, near here, to the summit of Mount Paganella, 6,000 feet above sea level.

The big thrill comes in passing over the chasm of Val Manara where the line supported by Alpine cables permits the tourists from their suspended car to look down upon the awful gorge extending to a seemingly bottomless pit, surrounded by rocky crags on all sides. The line, besides producing intense emotion also affords a superb panorama giving a magnificent view of the Dolomites.

The ropeway will be two miles long and the trip from Trent to the station of Mount Paganella will take 50 minutes. The new line will open up a fresh field for winter sports.

The new airport at Croyden, near London, England, is declared to be the finest in the world for commercial purposes. The construction and equipment cost $1,250,000. The huge hangars can accommodate 70 of the largest planes now built.

According to reliable information, another of our suggestions meets with favor among the members of the proper committee and we are to have a nice flower bed under the derrick at the corner of Main and Commerce. There will be an 18-inch concrete curb built around it and it will be a sight that will no doubt attract the attention of many tourists this summer and cause them to remember the little city out in West Texas that had its coat of arms towering to the skies on a prominent street intersection and with a bright flower bed at the base of it.

It will be so unusual that it will create a permanent impression in the minds of lots of people and will, therefore, be good advertising. The derrick may be plainly seen for a far piece the 15-cent shine and they are still 15 cents and by heck we guess they will always be 15 cents. We still think it's too much money and think that it casts a bad reflection on the town and don't get our shoes shined except when we absolutely have to.

Those who pass up North Rusk street are much obliged that the lake has been drained. It really wasn't such a job after the work was started.

Somebody said that the Hamon-Kell was fixing up their crossing a little bit too. Mind you, we claim no credit whatever for any of these things except that of giving conditions the publicity. We don't have a thing to do with the fixing thereof.

There's only one crusade that we have ever attempted and it was a miserable failure. We set out to combat the 15-cent shine and they are still 15 cents and by heck we guess they will always be 15 cents. We still think it's too much money and think that it casts a bad reflection on the town and don't get our shoes shined except when we absolutely have to.

RIO DE JANEIRO.—An immense club containing two ball rooms, extensive gardens, balconies, restaurants, bar, luxurious waiting and lounging rooms, and promenades will open its doors to the public during the three days of the annual carnival which opens Feb. 18. They then will close until King Momo, ruler of Rio de Janeiro's fun festival, returns to this city in 1928.

The institution, the "High Life Club," is the largest and most famous in South America. Originally, it operated regularly, but after gambling privileges were restricted to one hotel of the city, the large club could not meet expenses and was closed. It has been opened only during carnival.

BAD PAINS IN SIDE

Spells of Nervousness Also Troubled This Lady Who Gives Cardui Credit for Helping Her Get Well.

Depew, Okla.—"For six years," says Mrs. Edd Burton, of this place, "I suffered as bad as a woman can suffer and still keep going."

"I was good for nothing, was lifeless and pale, unable to eat anything. Nothing agreed with me. At times I had such bad pains in my sides and back I would have to go to bed. I had cramping spells and would faint if I stood on my feet any length of time. My nerves would become upset at the least little thing and I would have spells of crying that were so exhausting they left me prostrate."

"Several of my friends suggested that I take Cardui. They told me of their experiences with it, how much they have been helped. At last I decided to try it."

"In a few weeks, I could see that I was improving, so I kept on. I did not expect the troubles of years to disappear in a few days, nor did they, but in time I was much better. I kept up the Cardui treatment for several months and thanks to it I am a well woman now."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR SUNDAY

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 19

"Two Miracles of Power." Mark 4:35-41; 5:15-19. By H. W. Wrye. Golden text: "Who then is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?" Mark 4:41.

All the parables recorded by Matthew, thirteenth chapter and Mark fourth chapter, seem to have been spoken during the remainder of that day, on which the friends of Jesus became alarmed at His unwearied zealous labors; yet, having persisted in them till evening, He put to sea, even as He was, in the ship which He used to preach from, and without any peculiar attention to His health, ease, or indulgence, after so great fatigue ending one of the busiest days which we have any record of. An example for us of enduring hardship, and avoiding all needless regard to ourselves, while employed in doing good to the souls of men.

Jesus' Power Over Nature.

Lake Galilee lies in a deep basin 600 feet below sea level, surrounded on all sides by lofty hills excepting only the narrow entrance and outlet of the Jordan at each extreme. It is about 16 miles in length and 6 miles wide. Leaving the mighty throngs which had witnessed His work and listened with deep concern all the day, He, accompanied by a number of His disciples, went toward the eastern shore of the famous little sea. Before going very far Jesus had lain His weary body down for a brief rest while traveling. He was sleeping the calm sleep of those who are at peace with God; but even that sleep, so sorely needed, was destined to speedy and violent disturbance. One of the fierce storms peculiar to that deep hollow in the earth's surface, swept down with sudden fury on the little inland sea. The tempest was furious and the danger was extreme. The boat was buried under the foam of the breakers which burst over it and was fast filling with water. The terror-stricken travelers awoke Jesus "and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? And He arose, and rebuked the wind and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm." O what power. They He inquired of them "Why are ye so fearful? how is ye have no faith?" Jesus had said before starting "Let us pass over unto the other side." It was a decree of heaven's representative, to pass to the other side of that sea and the combined powers of destruction could not stop that order. Jesus said "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The grand old ship of Zion, has been in thousands of dreadful storms. In the early history of the church, civil government lashed into furious tempests against the disciples of Christ. Infidelity has raged and surged. Atheism has beat upon the Good Ship. Evolution has swept down a whirlwind hurricane, false prophets have led in a fearful storm of devastation. The devil has stirred up one dreadful storm after another against the ship of Life since it was launched, but it moves on majestically towards the ever green shore of a never ending happiness. When Christ says "Let us pass over" and "the gates of hell shall not prevail" who are on board need no worry or be afraid. Satan will especially endeavor to obstruct our course and distress our souls by raising some tremendous storm, but the Lord has said "I will be with you." When conflicting with the winds and waves of temptation or persecution, and apparently ready to be overwhelmed; yet His presence infallibly secures our safety.

The Gardens Demonic.

From one storm to another. No sooner had Jesus landed in the "country of the Gergesenes" than He was met by an exhibition of human fury, and madness and degradation, even more terrible and startling than the rage of the troubled sea. Bursting forth from among the rocky cavern-tombs came a man troubled with the most exaggerated form of that raging madness attributed to demonic possession. Amid all the boasted civilization of antiquity, there were no hospitals nor asylums; and unfortunates of this class were driven from among their fellow men, and restrained by measures inadequate and cruel. They could take refuge in those holes along the rocky hill sides which were used as tombs. The foul and polluted nature of these places, with their ghostliness would tend to aggravate the nature of the malady. This man was beyond control. Attempts to bind him had failed, because in the paroxysms of his mania he had exerted supernatural strength which is often noticed in such forms of mental excitement. He had succeeded in twisting away or shattering the fetters and chains that bound him. This naked homicidal maniac was frightened as he burst upon our Lord at early dawn. Jesus had exhibited marvelous power over nature while on the raging billows; is He equal to this demand?

Yes, with that supreme authority used on other occasions, He drives the demons from the unfortunate life, and lo and behold a new man. His body clothed, his mind clothed and worshipping his great Benefactor. Marvelous miracle. Power over nature and power over human life. No wonder the people exclaimed, "What manner of man is this?" No wonder "they were afraid." O why do men in this modern age, deliberately refuse to bow to the Son of God? Even devils believe and tremble. The poor man in this story had been tormented by a legion of demons we know not how long, but the Word of God is powerful, full of power, and

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

CHARACTERS
Philo Vance
John F.-X. Markham, district attorney of New York county
Margaret Odell (The "Canary")
Charles Cleaver, a manufacturer
Kenneth Spawoods, a manufacturer
Louis Mannix, an importer.
Dr. Ambroise Lindquist, a fashionable neurologist
Tony Skeel, a professional burglar
William Elmer Jessup, telephone operator
Harry Spively, telephone operator
Ernest Hoath, sergeant of the homicide bureau.

THE STORY SO FAR
A scream had come from Margaret Odell's apartment. The man who had just left rushed back to her room and knocked. "She answered," said Jessup, "and told him everything was all right and to go home." Earlier in the evening, said Spively, another man had called for the "Canary," but had been told she was out. He satisfied himself by knocking at her door and then leaving. The next morning the strangled body of Margaret Odell was found in her apartment. The side door to the alley was bolted on the inside; the murderer must have left the front way. Both phone operators said no other than the men they mentioned had called. "But a man's voice answered from her apartment when someone phoned about a quarter to 12," said Jessup.

CHAPTER XI
Markham, clearly annoyed at the interruption, cut in sharply with a demand for the operator to proceed with his description.

"He wore his hair smoothed down," Spively continued, "and you could see it was kind of long; but it was cut in the latest style. And he had a small waxed mustache; and there was a big carnation in the lapel of his coat, and he had on chamois gloves."

"My word!" murmured Vance. "A gigolo!"

Markham, with the incubus of the night cluding him heavily, frowned and took a deep breath. Vance's observation evidently had launched him on an unpleasant train of thought.

"Was this man short or tall?" he asked next.

"He wasn't so tall—about my height," Spively explained. "And he was sort of thin."

There was an easily recognizable undercurrent of admiration in his tone, and I felt that this youthful telephone operator had seen in Miss Odell's caller a certain physical and sartorial ideal.

This palpable admiration, coupled with the somewhat out-of-place affected by the youth, permitted us to read between the lines of his remarks a fairly accurate description of the man who had unsuccessfully rung the dead girl's bell at half past nine the night before.

When Spively had been dismissed, Markham rose and strode about the room, his head enveloped in a cloud of cigar smoke, while Heath sat stolidly watching him, his brows knit.

Vance stood up and stretched himself.

"The absorbin' problem, it would seem, remains in statu quo," he remarked airily. "How, oh how, did the fair Margaret's executioner get it?"

"You know, Mr. Markham," rumbled Heath sententiously, "I've been thinking that the fellow may have come here earlier in the afternoon—say, before that side door was locked. Odell herself may have let him in and hidden him when the other man came to take her to dinner."

"It looks that way," Markham admitted. "Bring the maid in here again, and we'll see what we can find out."

When the woman had been brought in, Markham questioned her as to her actions during the afternoon, and learned that she had come out at about 4 to do some shopping, and had returned about half past five.

"Did Miss Odell have any visitor with her when you got back?"

"No, sir," was the prompt answer. "She was alone."

"Did she mention that anyone had called?"

"No, sir."

"Now," continued Markham, "could anyone have been hidden in this apartment when you went home at 7?"

The maid was frankly astonished, and even a little horrified.

"Where could anyone hide?" she asked, looking round the apartment.

"There are several possible places," Markham suggested: "in the bathroom, in one of the clothes closets, under the bed, behind the window draperies."

The woman shook her head decisively. "No one could have hidden," she declared. "I was in the bathroom half a dozen times, and I got Miss Odell's gown out of the clothes closet in the bedroom. As soon as it began to get dark I drew all the window shades myself. And as for the bed, it's built almost down to the floor; no one could squeeze under it." (I glanced closely at the bed and realized that this statement was quite true.)

"What about the clothes closet in this room?" Markham put the question hopefully, but again the maid shook her head.

"Nobody was in there. That's where I keep my own hat and coat, and I took them out myself when I was getting ready to go. I even put away one of Miss Odell's old dresses in that closet before I left."

THE CANARY MURDER CASE

By S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR OF THE BENSON MURDER CASE

reiterated Markham, "that no one could have hidden anywhere in these rooms at the time you went home?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"Do you happen to remember if the key of this clothes closet was on the inside or the outside of the lock when you opened the door to get your hat?"

The woman paused and looked thoughtfully at the closet door.

"It was on the outside, where it always was," she announced, after several moments' reflection. "I remember because it caught in the chignon of the old dress I put away."

Markham frowned and then resumed his questioning.

"You say you don't know the name of Miss Odell's dinner companion last night. Can you tell us the names of any men she was in the habit of going out with?"

"Miss Odell never mentioned any names to me," the woman said. "She was very careful about it, too—secretive, you might say. You see, I'm only here in the daytime, and the gentlemen she knew generally came in the evening."

"And you never heard her speak of anyone of whom she was frightened—anyone she had reason to fear?"

"No, sir—although there was one man she was trying to get rid of. He was a bad character—I wouldn't have trusted him anywhere—and I told Miss Odell she'd better look out for him. But she'd known him a long time, I guess, and had been pretty soft on him once."

"How do you happen to know this?"

"One day, about a week ago," the maid explained, "I came in after lunch, and he was with her in the other room. They didn't hear me, because the portieres were drawn. He was demanding money, and when she tried to put him off he began threatening her. And she said something that showed she'd given him money before. I made a noise and they stopped arguing, and pretty soon he went out."

"What did this man look like?" Markham's interest was revived.

"He was kind of thin—not very tall—and I'd say he was around 30. He had a hard face—good-looking, some would say—and pale blue eyes that gave you the shivers. He always wore his hair greased back, and he had a little yellow mustache, pointed at the ends."

"Ah!" said Vance. "Our gigolo!"

"Has this man been here since?" asked Markham.

"I don't know, sir—not when I was here."

"That will be all," said Markham; and the woman went out.

"She didn't help us much," complained Heath.

"What!" exclaimed Vance. "I think she did remarkably well. She cleared up several moot points."

"And just what portions of her information do you consider particularly illuminating?" asked Markham, with ill-concealed annoyance.

"We now know, do we not," rejoined Vance serenely, "that no one was lying hidden in here when the lady departed yesterday evening?"

"Instead of that fact being helpful," retorted Markham, "I'd say it added materially to the complications of the situation."

"It would appear that way, wouldn't it, now? But, then—who knows?—it may prove to your brightest and most comfortin' clue. Furthermore, we learned that someone evidently locked himself in that clothes press, as witness the shifting of the key, and that, moreover, this occultation did not occur until the abigail had gone, or, let us say, after 7 o'clock."

"Sure," said Heath with sour facetiousness; "when the side door was bolted and an operator was sitting in the front hall, who swears nobody came in that way."

"It is a bit mystifyin'," Vance conceded sadly.

"Mystifyin'? It's impossible!" grumbled Markham.

Heath, who was now staring with meditative pugnacity into the closet, shook his head helplessly.

"What I don't understand," he ruminated, "is why, if the fellow was hidden in the closet, he didn't ransack it when he came out, like he did all the rest of the apartment."

"Sergeant," said Vance, "you've put your finger on the crux of the matter. You know, the neat, undisturbed aspect of that closet rather suggests that the crude person who rifled these charming rooms omitted to give it his attention because it was locked on the inside and he couldn't open it.

"Come, come!" protested Markham. "That theory implies that there were two unknown persons in here last night."

Vance sighed. "Harrow and alas! I know it. And we can't introduce even one into this apartment logically. Distressing, ain't it?"

Liquor Charges Are Filed Against Two

Charges of possession of liquor were filed in Justice of the Peace McPatter's court late yesterday afternoon against two Ranger men.

The charges were filed after Sheriff John Hart and Policeman Sam Vire raided a sandwich shop located just west of the Hamon and Kell railroad crossing.

A half gallon of whiskey was said to have been found in the possession of the two men.

While Congress is trying to do something about the flood situation, wouldn't it be a good idea to see about some of this watered stock?
