Swiss Alps Traver over 5,000 Miles In "Big Happiness," the Robertson-Cole super-special, starring Dustin Farnum, which will be seen at the Temple theatre today, ingenious artistry is resorted to in the achievement of some unusual technical and photographic effects.

One of the most effective sets in the picture showing the Swiss Alps as a background for a mountain inn, was evolved in such an original manner that the story bears.

Farnum's director needed the Swiss Alps in a hurry. The company being in California and the Alps some five or six thousand miles to the east, the director cast about for a solution to the problem other than making a special trip to Switzerland. Fake mountains were barred.

A little thought and considerable searching in Mr. Farnum's "morque" disclosed a beautiful snapshot of the Swiss Alps. This photograph was enlarged to 26x12 feet and the inn built in front of it, and there you are. Clever? Certainly. But costly, too. The stunt cost $2,000.

Over $200,000 Spent On "The Sporting Duchess."

Over $200,000 was spent in the production of "The Sporting Duchess," which will be shown at the Liberty Theatre Sunday. The cast supporting Alice Joyce is one of the largest and most talented that has been gathered in recent years.

The company includes Percy Marmont, J. V. Keston and Capt. Lionel Pope, a noted English player, who served with distinction in the Royal Flying Corps during the war. Several well-known jockeys appear in the racing scenes mounted on famous horses.

The picture was taken in part at Stamford, Conn. Later the company moved to locations near New York and the big Lamb today.

Reducing Cost of Leathers and Textiles By Increasing Their Wearing Qualities.

While marvels have been produced in mechanical appliances, in craft for the conquest of the air, or the depths of the sea, and while methods of electrical communication have made it possible to talk half around the world, yet comparatively little change has been recorded by scientists in improving the commonplace every day things that people wear.

Yet there is every reason to believe that a vast field of usefulness is open to chemists, physicists and scientists generally who will devote their lives to seeking means whereby the wearing qualities of textiles from which garments are made and leather from which shoes and gloves are made, and other articles of everyday use, are bettered. The scientific study of these simple things may seem an humble occupation as compared with the work of the inventor who perfects accessories of warfare, or the scientist who develops some widely heralded elixir from monkeys to make old people young, but which less than one in a million has used. Yet the sum total of benefit to be derived by humanity through this less spectacular work is incalculable. The experts who seek to cut down living costs by increasing the wearing qualities of things in everyday use are working on lines to help everybody's pocketbook.

What can be done by scientists to improve leathers and textiles is indicated by the work of Fred A. Howard, a notable chemist and scientist of South Easton, Mass. Mr. Howard has devoted more than thirty-five years of his busy life to developing of chemical formulae for manufacturers of leather, holding shoes and gloves. By many he is known as the "trouble man" of the shoe industry. He has won a reputation as a good man for shoe manufacturers to consult with when they have refractory or unsatisfactory leathers to deal with. An idea of Mr. Howard's achievements as a leather chemist may be had from the remarks of a belt manufacturer who observed that the changes in leather belts wrought by Mr. Howard's processes would be worth half a billion dollars a year in wear to the shoe wearers of the country should the new methods come into universal use in the manufacture of shoes.

But Howard has not only accomplished marvels in the treatment of leather. His work with textiles point the way for wonderful developments in that line. He has made discoveries of great value to the public health, and has, as a pastime made an excursion into plant breeding with astonishing results.

Mr. Howard's first leather problem was tackled many years ago and was centered on the improvement of hemlock sole leather.

Since the early experiment about a quarter of a century ago, Mr. Howard has developed a number of formulae for retifying and improving leathers tanned by various processes.

Among them is a compound to be used by manufacturers of patent leather shoes. The compound is put on before the shoes are made. The leather, it is said, will never crack or break. He has also developed formulae for making brittle, harsh, dry and imperfectly tanned glove leather flexible and workable. Refractory leather treated by him fifteen years ago is as flexible today as it was the day it was processed. He has made it permanently waterproof and doubled its wearing qualities.

Perhaps most wonderful of Mr. Howard's inventions is korite, a useful chemical agent which he has perfected after forty years in tireless research work. This chemical is said to permanently affect the fibres of the leather, rendering it wonderfully flexible and by tests increasing its durability under friction tests, over 100 per cent. It renders the leather impervious to water, although admitting air.

Many of Mr. Howard's discoveries have originated in a desire to help others. Mr. Howard developed a solution that makes garments absolutely moth proof. The chemical has no odor, nor does it affect the wearing qualities or color of the material, and it cannot be washed out.

Another of Mr. Howard's inventions is a fireproof solution for working clothes. The chemist has brought the solution up to the point where the ignition of the cloth is prevented. A test lasting over a period of more than one year proves that it doesn't rot. He originated a unique chemical solution to be sprayed on fine horses and highly bred cattle for the purpose of keeping flies and other insects from the animal.

Mr. Howard has produced a strawberry plant growing from twelve to fifteen inches high and yielding the strawberries on high stems.

It is said that he knows more about leather than any other man in the world. He would disclaim that statement. But to him a piece of leather is the most wonderful bit of weaving in the universe, and when he finds that its fibres have been macerated or gummed together by the crystals of tanning, or have been rather imperfectly tanned or damaged, he feels an injury has been done to one of nature's most precious products.

TEN-INNING TIE GAME AT LITTLE ROCK

Brilliant Fielding and Close Decisions Hold Down Panther Score.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 25.—Fort Worth and Little Rock battled ten innings to a 2-2 tie here Friday. The breaks were against the Arizonians as they nicked Rube Robinson for eleven hits to seven which Whittaker yielded to the Travelers.

Both teams scored in the opening round. The Fort Worth tally came on successive hits by Sears, Williams and Kraft. Williams went out at the plate on a close play when Hoffman hit to Gleason. Gleason also robbed Haley on what appeared to be a sure single to right. It was the Panthers' best chance to win.

The Travelers tied it immediately on a gift run, made possible by Harper's base running. With two down, Harper walked. He stole second and third. Miller also walked. With the double steal on, Moore threw wild to second and Harper counted.

Little Rock took the lead in the second. Brotten singled to right. Hunter sacrificed; Moore pounded the run across with a liner to center.

This lead lasted until the eighth, when Fort Worth rallied and tied the score. Another close decision at the plate robbed them of victory. After Stow had lofted to center, Sears doubled to left. Williams scored him with a single to right. Kraft doubled to right but Williams was out trying to score from first on the drive.

The game was called in the tenth on account of darkness.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25.—Walter Mills, lefthander from the Coast League, won his fifth successive game here Friday when he recorded the climbing White Sox, 2 to 0. He held the Chicagoans to three hits and was in trouble only once. In the fifth inning he fanned Risberg, then walked Schalk, Faber and Strunk, filling the bases. He fanned Weaver and Eddie Collins, making a rather unique record of three walks and three strikeouts in the same inning.

Cleveland got to Faber for a run in the first inning and another in the second. Both were made on two singles, one being helped along by a sacrifice and the other by a steal. Faber pitched airtight ball the remainder of the session.

SCHOOL-TEACHING COMPENSATIONS.

It is a common jest that school teachers are poverty stricken. Many people believe it is true. It may be true in the sense that a teacher cannot save a fortune from his salary, no matter what it is. For that matter, neither can a man in any other walk of life. If he makes $50,000 a year or more as executive of some large enterprise, he must spend it in maintaining a scale of living commensurate with his importance. If he makes less, in a dwindling stage down to bread and meat money, he must spend it in the upholding of an appearance of importance, in order that he may rise to still higher stages of income. And the process is never ended.

School teaching demands no ostentation. Admittedly it does not pay salaries sufficient for ostentation. But it is hardly believable that it does not pay well enough to enable one to live moderately well. Go into the halls of any college next commencement and see for yourself what a large per cent of the graduates are going to teach school because they can earn more for the next years than they could in a business

It is true that experience in the profession does not bring the increases in earning power that may reward expertise in other pursuits. But school teaching is more than a salary-providing job. It is an experience that can be cashed in on other lines of endeavor. Almost every prosperous town can point to one or more men who came there as school teachers and remained to prosper in other pursuits. These men are always working unofficially for the improvement of the schools.

School teaching rewards may not be commensurate with the ability required, but few salaries places are. Teaching does provide an income perhaps in excess of the average salaries drawn by the men in business pursuits. If the hardware clerk or the pharmacist desires to increase his income, he goes in business for himself and takes his chances of gain or loss. The same road is open to the school teacher, with the added advantage, if he has succeeded as a teacher, that he is known and admired in the community and has friendly patrons at the start. He is recognized as a community asset and the townspeople are always anxious to keep him there.

Young women who want their ex-husbands to provide a permanent endowment or royalty for them are rebuked by a western judge. It is strange how helpless a buxom girl becomes after she has married a meal ticket. One wonders what would have become of her if she had never ventured into matrimony.

The teamster who mistook the depot for a livery stable had grounds for his mistake. The Ark was a livery stable, you know, or at least a boarding stable.

Tinker Bob Stories by Carlyle H. Holcomb

TINKER BOB HAS AN INVITATION: "Tinker Bob, Tinker Bob, awake and come out."

And hear what the creatures are singing about; The Locust and Cricket will sing at the dawn.

They tell us that summer is almost gone;

The Robin and Wren have a word in their month;

They bid us farewell, for they're both going south;

Tinker Bob was awakened by this song that was being sung outside his door. At first he thought it was all a dream, but as he listened he knew that the song was real, and there must be at least a dozen creatures singing.

Jack the Wood Rat was so frightened that he had climbed to a place near the peak of the roof. And it was not easy to climb either with a suit of pajamas on that are made of oak leaves.

Mr. Grasshopper Mouse had hid himself under the bed, and Snoopy the Bob Cat was growling about the room, anxious to get out and settle these singers, for he didn't like to be disturbed when he was resting.

Tinker Bob rubbed his eyes and got out of his bed to see what all of this singing was for. It wasn't morning yet, and why all of these creatures were here he could not tell. So he opened the door, and there before his eyes was the Forest chorus led by Mr. Frog, who was standing on a stump. In the moonlight he could see the faces of a dozen of the most familiar creatures of the Forest.

"What does all this mean?" said the King in a surprised manner.

"Croak, croak," said Mr. Frog, "we have come to tell you that Autumn has begun his journey and will soon be here."

"Who told you so?" answered the King.

"The good Moon, the bright moon, the great big round Moon," sang the chorus, as Mr. Frog swung his wand to beat time.

"Tell me," asked the King, "what did the Moon say about the Autumn?"

Mr. Frog did the talking for all. He said: "The moon said she was about to bid us all farewell and when he saw her again she would have a different looking face, and that would be the time for Autumn to arrive. And when Autumn arrives Jack Frost will come also, and then the great North Wind will follow."

Then from the midst of this chorus came Lady Duck. Tinker Bob had not seen her for a long time. Said she: "Oh, King, you have been kind to me and all of the Forest Dwellers and we love you. Now that the time is near when the great North Wind is coming, will you not go with me to the wonderful land of the South and stay till the North Wind goes home again?"

Then there came into the heart of the King the desire to go to the Land of the South.

Mr. Frog Did the Talking for All

Rippling Rhymes by Walt Mason

AMY LOWELL.

This great and gifted woman in judgment often sits; her genius superhuman equips her, she admits. The bards of epochs olden, she says, were merely punk; we thought their words were golden, but now we know they're junk. Oh, music filled their verses when those bards used to write; but Amy rears and curses when rhythm is in sight. She lectures in her attic to poets gone to seed: "Lines must be lame, rhematic, before they're fit to read. If lines are clear as water, and like fine bright water flow, why, then, it's time to slaughter the bard who made them so. Old poets were dead ringers for mockingbirds and wrens, but now our truest singers must sound like guinea hens. It seems so strange," says Amy, "that people once read Keats; not only read him, blame me, but thought his verses treats. And Tennyson! His twaddle was once accounted grand, and held up as a model for bards throughout the land. But we have traveled greatly in these high modern times; we balk at all that's stately and fine in poets' rhymes. All verses must be halting, or I will shoo them hence; no psalter must be psalting that shows a lick of sense."

In the next chapter I will explain the strange dreams of Bleeding Hearts.

New President of France

Premier Millerand, France's New President.

Premier Millerand was elected president of the French republic practically without opposition. His nomination had been decided on by a committee from the senate and chamber of deputies and was the only one formally presented. Millerand has been in politics for thirty-five years. He is 61 years old.

A dream in which the sleeper accompanies a relative or friend on her honeymoon is a sign of an unhappy love affair. In all likelihood, she will be jilted. When a girl dreams that she is accompanying a strange woman on her honeymoon, the dreamer will live through the sad experience of seeing the man she loves marry another.

In the next chapter I will explain the strange dreams of Bleeding Hearts.

a big box. In some mysterious way she got babies, and bundles tucked into one narrow seat, facing backward, and out of the turmoil she unearthed a quieting bottle of milk.

Past her wended the wealthy rich, assisted by maids and porters galore. Vainly they had tried to buy, bibs or bully their way into the parlor cars ahead, and grudgingly they followed their luggage into the day coaches, filled with cinders and a child blessed democracy that shoved over a bit grudgingly to share what there was left of the seating capacity.

Still bathing, mentally, in the aristocratic aloofness of private coaches, they denounced the railroad as the train chugged unfeelingly along. There was no hope this side of the Grand Central station—New Haven and Bridgeport yet to come, but everybody getting on and nobody getting off. They heaped burning words of condemnation upon the innocent conductor. They grumbled to each other. They mumbled to themselves, and finally unresignedly assumed the role of martyrs.

Meanwhile the flaxen-haired young woman dealt out answers to endless questions, handkerchiefs, bread and butter sandwiches with calm and content. When a paper cup of water capsize and drenched the baby and the tentative consumer she smilingly dabbed up the mess and reached for more hard-boiled eggs.

"This is simply terrible," complained a freckled debutante, and her escort balanced on the edge of her seat, declared that one should never travel except in a private car.

"Really annoying," remarked an absolutely correct young man. "Positively beastly."

"The rottenest road I ever saw," whined a stout matron across the aisle. And from the narrow seat, where two at least lay sprawled in sticky slumber, came a piping, ecstatic voice: "Oh, mamma, don't you wish we could travel forever?"

A Helpful Burglar. On returning home from a shopping expedition in the city the other night the Suburban Lady found a box of eggs and a pound of butter, not to be accounted for, lying on a chair in the living room. And later when she went to get supper she discovered that the silver in the downstairs closet and the purse she used for the house money were missing and that the back door had been neatly jimmied.

Still that did not explain the eggs and butter. Nor were they accounted for until the next day, when the dairyman-came for her order. To her question he replied, "Yes, ma'am, I was here yesterday. There was some kids kind of foolin' 'round my horse, so I just stepped up and rung the front door bell so's I could keep an eye on 'em. A right nice lookin' young feller come to the door. I asked him if you wanted anything and he said he'd see, and pretty soon he came back with that little purse you always pays me out of and said, 'Yes, you'd take a pound of butter and a dozen eggs.'"

"So I got something for my money, anyway," said the Suburban Lady, who is philosophical, "and at that I don't believe there was much left in the pocket-book after he got through paying for a pound of butter and two dozen eggs."

And Then the Sun Set. They had come suddenly from a back road upon an open state highway that stretched straight ahead—straight ahead into the sunset, it seemed. And what a sunset!

The Woman in the back seat of the touring car thought suddenly of pale pink June roses, of a baby's fingers—of all the lovely, fragile, pink things she had ever loved.

Evidently the Very Modern Girl had also been thinking. Her voice, spicily sweet, floated back from the seat beside the chauffeur:

"What a sunset! Gorgeous! Exquisite! Just like a strawberry ice cream soda."

Although she is not yet thirteen years of age, Miss Helen Koch, of New York City, will this year enter Hunter College for the five year course.

JOHN-A-DREAMS

CL. DREAMS OF HONEYMOONS (2). This chapter is for single women only.

The moon—the moon, so silver and cold. Her fickle temper has oft been told. Now shady—now bright and sunny—But of all the lunar things that change. The one that shows most fickle and strange.

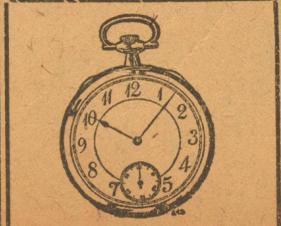

And takes the most eccentric range 's the moon—so-called-of honey.

Right here you have the general meaning of a single woman's dream of a honeymoon, in which she figures as the bride-fickleness will be the outstanding characteristics of her dealings with men for at least one year to come. Like a honey bee, she will flit from sweet adventure o sweet adventure—always seemingly eady to settle down to the serious business of marriage with its early honeymoon glamor—and always will she shrink from the final step and seek another amour.

This meaning applies when the man with whom the girl is on a dream-honeymoon is single. If it happens to be a married man, her fickleness will have the evil consequence in its wake that people will begin to gossip about her and her flirtatious laughter will change to angry tears.

If a girl dreams that she is on her honeymoon but in the midst of its enchantment suddenly remembers that, in reality, she is single, she will wed within the year.

A dream which shows the girl returning from her honeymoon and being reproached for having been absent, is a certain omen of an ugly quarrel over a love affair.

What's Your Hurry? "DESERVES THE CREDIT," SAYS MEMPHIS WOMAN Mrs. Maude Miller Says Tanlac Has Made Her a Perfectly Well Woman Once More.

"Tanlac acted altogether different from other medicines I have taken, for it went right after my troubles at once, and now after taking only three bottles I am a well woman," declared Mrs. Maud H. Miller, 641 Dempster street, New South Memphis, Tenn.

"About three years ago I began suffering from stomach trouble, which continued to grow worse until at times it seemed like I could not live. I had indigestion so bad I couldn't eat a single thing without its hurting me, and my liver was very inactive. After every meal I would bloat up with gas until I could hardly breathe, and my heart acted so queerly that at times I was actually frightened. I was extremely nervous, could not stand the least noise around me, and it was simply impossible for me to get a good night's sleep. I felt tired and worn out all the time, and was so badly constipated I had to continually take something for this as well as my other troubles.

"Some of my friends and relatives had taken Tanlac with such fine results I decided to try it myself. Well, sir, I now have a splendid appetite, can eat just anything I want and never have a sign of indigestion. My liver is active, my nerves in fine shape, I sleep well and have regained my strength so that I can do my housework with greater ease than in years. To tell the truth, there has been such an improvement in my condition I am actually surprised at it, and as Tanlac deserves all the credit, I can never say enough for it."

Tanlac is sold in Ranger by Phillips Bros., and in Eastland by Butler Drug Co.—Adv.

DRAKE'S 'HEIRS' WOULD RECOVER MYSTIC MILLIONS

There Are No Heirs, There Are No Millions, But "One Is Born Every Minute."

WICHITA FALLS, Sept. 25.—The search for the legendary fortune of Sir Francis Drake, English naval hero of the sixteenth century, which has been carried on by organizations formed in various parts of the United States in the last fifty years, has been renewed by residents of Towanda and Benton, towns of east of Wichita.

A company has been formed by persons living in the two towns who have been convinced that they are heirs of Sir Francis and who are not daunted by the experiences of similar "heirs" in Bloomington, Ill., St. Louis and other places, if indeed they have ever heard of those occurrences.

The usual fiction about the Drake estate has been related to the Benton and Towanda folk. They believe there are millions of pounds sterling waiting for the American heirs of Sir Francis, descendants of his two sons, John and Francis. The estate has been compounded itself for more than 150 years and has reached an almost incalculable total, having been all the time in possession of an English chancery court. Such is the glittering tale.

Hoax Exposed in 1912.

The facts about the matter were shown by an investigation made by the Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph, a daily newspaper, with the help of a member of the London Times staff, in 1912. Authentic English records show that Sir Francis died childless and left his property to a nephew. Since that time it has descended in a more or less direct line, has been in constant use, and has never been pigeon-holed in chancery court to compound itself and await American claimants. At last accounts it was worth about $200,000 and was in full possession of a tenacious Englishman who had no idea of turning it over to any cousin across the sea. Americans could no more get a penny of the Drake property than they could walk into the Tower of London and carry away the crown jewels.

The Sir Francis Drake estate affair occurs in some parts of the United States with about the same regularity as the visit of locusts and insect pests. It is not unlike them in its effects, and it has made a clean sweep of the savings of worthy persons in some communities. The false story of the Drake wealth has been used to collect thousands of dollars from persons who have been persuaded that they were the heirs. The organizer usually gets a commission on the money raised to prosecute the claim of the "heirs."

Despite repeated exposures, the delusion has continued to thrive. Organizations of "heirs" have sent representatives to England. Some of these investigators, nevertheless, persons have returned and reported the facts, thereby only convincing their neighbors that they have been bought off by some corrupt official in the chancery court in England.

Shares Sold to the Public.

In Bloomington and later in St. Louis, in 1911 and 1912, shares in the Drake estate claim were sold, not only to the "heirs," but to all who would purchase. The character of the scheme was exposed in Bloomington by the Daily Pantagraph, and in St. Louis by the Post-Dispatch. The Drake estate fever raged in New York state in 1870, and later in 1902; in South Dakota in 1906, and in New Jersey in 1909; and in 1910 in Minnesota where postoffice inspectors stopped the operations by mail on a large scale. The Minneapolis organizer, Simon M. Drake, estimated the estate at $10,000,000,000 in value, and his claims included not only English holdings, but all of New York City below Twenty-third street, and a considerable section of Philadelphia.

CINCINNATI'S BIGGEST CHECK.

International News Service. CINCINNATI, Sept. 25.—The largest check in the history of the city of Cincinnati has just been received by City Auditor Carrel. It represents payment of a deficiency to the city of $2,580,000 for the issue of deficiency bonds authorized by the city council.

GOOD GROCER GOOD MEDICINE

An East Nashville Grocer Says He Has Used Black-Draught for Years, Whenever Troubled With Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.—"You ask me about Black-Draught. It is without doubt the best liver medicine made, and I don't believe I could get along without it," declared Mr. W. N. Parsons, recently.

Mr. Parsons, who is a prominent grocer at 243 North First street, says further: "I take it (Black-Draught) for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver. I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Theodore's Black-Draught, which has been in successful use for more than 70 years, is a medicine especially adapted to the treatment of many liver troubles. It has proved helpful to thousands and thousands of persons suffering from stomach and liver complaints, and should be helpful to you.

Black-Draught is easy to take and has not the bad after-effects, so common with many mineral drugs.

Most good druggists sell it.

PURITANICAL LAWS, BASED ON SENTIMENT, WILL FOLLOW WOMAN SUFFRAGE, THINKS ENGLISHMAN

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 25.—"The ratification of your suffrage amendment means, among other things, that prohibition is hardly likely ever to be amended," said W. L. George, the famous English feminist, in an interview at the Hotel Statler.

"The average woman is strongly in favor of prohibition and measures of a like nature, and you may expect to be facing an increasingly large number of puritanical laws once she has begun to take an active part in politics."

"A woman has very little political intelligence, and until she becomes educated to the issues of the day she will vote after the dictates of sentiment and passion."

"By this I do not mean that woman will never vote intelligently. Indeed I believe that after a process of whole-sale assimilation of political doctrines the feminine vote will be cast with far more intelligence and with less respect for tradition than has heretofore characterized the male vote."

Will Increase Discussion.

"One of the most positive benefits of universal suffrage will be an increase in political discussion and a proportional increase in interest in politics. The women will talk politics in the home, and will not be satisfied with the evasiveness of their husbands on questions of importance. Where a man is satisfied with a hazy idea of a land appropriation bill or the League of Nations, his wife, with her new-born enthusiasm, will want to know exactly what it all means."

George for fifteen years has been an ardent worker for universal suffrage.

"It was queer," he said, "that I should land at New York on the day of the ratification of the suffrage amendment."

Unlike the majority of European men of letters who have recently "done" America, George is not confining himself to New York and Boston. He is looking for the real America, for what to him can only be the real America—the American spirit. This he realizes he cannot find in the sophisticated New York nor the snobbishly intellectual Boston.

Has Published Book.

George is touring America in connection with his literary work. His "Impressions of America" is soon to be published in Harper's.

"What I want," he said, "is to find what there is that unites the man from Florida with the man from New York. Once I have that I shall have America, for then I shall have the American spirit."

He is spending two days in St. Louis. Then he is going to Nashville. He has already been to Kansas City, Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he visited the oil fields, and to Minneapolis, where he went through the flour mills.

"In Tulsa," he said, "my hotel was next to a vacant lot, flanked on the other side by the largest bank in the city. In the evening this lot was the rendezvous of swarms of insects and their singing kept the night alive with the noises of the country. That struck me instantly as typically American. There was industry and the plains together—there was the elemental West and a monument of financial America side by side."

Feminism, according to George, is far more advanced in America than in England. It is so far advanced, he said, that the granting of the vote to women is merely a recognition of a position the American woman has been holding for some time.

In England woman suffrage is but the start of the fight for the leveling of the sexes. The American woman, according to him, has on the other hand been admitted to industry, to the law, to medicine and into active competition with men in other more or less masculine pursuits.

WARD SCHOOL WILL SOON BEGIN FULL DAY CLASSES AGAIN

All factors delaying the Ward School buildings have been done away with and the school will be ready for occupancy within a short time, according to E. G. Walsh of the firm of Walsh & Barney, who have the contract.

Much of the delay has been caused through the contractor's inability to secure hardwood for the floors. This material has now been secured.

With the completion of the buildings the half-day sessions which had to be resorted to at the opening of the schools because of lack of housing facilities, will be done away with and the sessions placed on a full day basis.

However, if the pupils do their full share no one will suffer from the present arrangement. Pupils are expected to prepare their lessons at home and come to the schools for recitation under the present rule. Half-day sessions do not allow for any study periods.

WEATHERFORD MULE BARNS BURN WITH CONSIDERABLE LOSS

Special to the Times. WEATHERFORD, Sept. 25.—The long scists of the Weatherford fire department was broken last night just about dark, when fire of an undetermined origin was discovered in the hay sheds and mule barn of Morton brothers, a block off the public square. The department responded promptly but were only able to prevent the fire from spreading, the flames having gained such headway when the alarm was given that the building in which the fire started was quickly consumed. The loss is about $2,000.

A conference is being held in Brussels under the patronage of the Queen of Belgium where problems incident to the rehabilitation of disabled war veterans of the allied nations will be discussed.

Less than $100,000 worth of the street bonds remain to be sold. With the money from recent sales coming in the city's paving program will go through to completion without any delay due to lack of funds.
