Here is Lieutenant Commander MacDonald standing beside the little plane to which he pinned his faith for a transatlantic hop. MacDonald's tiny Moth, weighing only 880 pounds and with a wingspread of only 26 feet, is like a midget when compared to Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis which spanned 46 feet and was equipped with a powerful nine-cylinder motor. Below is a map showing the route he planned to follow from Harbor Grace, N. F., to England. Five days have passed since he hopped off and all hope has been abandoned for him.

Little El Ouafi himself went off to America with a broad smile on his lips and his contract in his pocket, no doubt contrasting his change of fortune compared to work long hours in a Paris suburban factory for not too big a reward.

NEW FIRE DANGER. Cigarette smoking in airplanes is the latest possible cause of fires that damage forests and fields. Cigarettes dropped from the planes may start serious fires. THE INDIAN'S BACKGROUND. The tribe of Onondaga Indians, which has its reservation near Syracuse, N. Y., is not going to vote in the coming presidential election, despite the fact that the right to do so was recently conferred on them. For the Onondagas, some 600 in number, contend that they are not citizens of the United States at all. They are citizens of the Onondaga nation, they say, and the Onondagas are an independent people, just as the French and Germans are. To be sure, the Onondaga nation happens to be located within the confines of the United States; but the Indian leaders declare that makes no difference.

But it needn't. Too many of our history books have failed to do the Indian simple justice. Judged by European standards, the Indian a couple of centuries ago was utterly uncivilized. He lived a wilderness life; his agricultural development was scanty, he could not work any metals, and he had a code of life that made him unspesagably cruel to his enemies. It was only natural that the early settlers should consider him fit only for extermination. Yet his way of life suited the conditions under which he lived. It brought him a degree of happiness. If he was cruel, he was brave; if he knew little of farming, he raised enough crops for his own needs. He had a sort of social dignity that helped him to meet life's pitfalls without flinching.

Under the white man's rule the Indian had not, as a general thing, been very happy. Modern civilization came upon him too suddenly. He wasn't ready for a life of motor cars, big cities and settled peace. Is it any wonder he looks back to the old days and decides that he would be happier living then than he is now? The Onondagas' pride in their traditions, and their insistence on their independent, separate existence, are not so hard to understand, after all.

BEER-TASTER TEEOTALER. Edward Hipwell, aged 83, who has been appointed ale-conner for Billingsgate, England, is a teetotaler. His duties entitle him to enter every ale house and tavern within the ward, and test the quality of the beer. Hipwell declares the beer of Billingsgate does not need his testing. If there is any thing wrong with it, he says, the language of Billingsgate would apply the remedy.

BOXER WINS, WEEPS IN RING Because he had badly cut open his opponent's forehead, thus causing him to retire, Jerry O'Neill, of Merthyr, Wales, broke down in the ring and burst into tears. It had gone only four rounds when O'Neill forced young Frank Kestrell, of Cardiff, to quit.

BLANTON AND MRS. W. D. MOORE, ELOQUENT, PERSUASIVE SPEAKERS, ADDRESS LARGE AUDIENCE HERE

Mrs. W. D. Moore of Denton, who is connected with the Texas State Democratic organization and a forceful speaker, addressed a large audience of Eastland citizens and a sprinkling of visitors from Ranger, Cisco and other points Saturday night in the Eastland city hall. She spoke of the strength of Governor Al Smith as a leader in his state and forecast that he would be equally strong and enduring as the national leader. She urged democrats of Texas to remember their allegiance to their party and to subscribe to the principle, "My party, be it right or wrong, my party."

(Eastland Telegram) Mrs. Moore was introduced by Mrs. C. U. Connelley, Blanton Voices Views. Congressman Blanton was introduced by Judge Cyrus B. Frost, who praised the record in the national house of representatives made by the representative from this West Texas district.

For half a century the Republican party has stood for special privilege, Blanton said. The Democratic party has stood for the masses, with equal rights to all. "There must be party government. It is the people's only safeguard. When a party is dishonest, the people have their remedy," Blanton declared. Blanton said he was not for Governor Smith, but since the party had nominated him by a clear majority he is going to support him because, "I am a Democrat, an dam for my democratic party."

A Prohibitionist. "I am a life-long prohibitionist. I have never taken my first drink. I have been on the front firing line fighting prohibition battles for 35 years. I have helped to dry many counties in Texas. For years I helped to lead the fight for national prohibition. I helped to frame and pass the Volstead law, and endeavored hard to make it stronger than it is, and when President Wilson vetoed it, I led the fight on the floor of the house to pass it over his veto. The cause is dear to my heart. I know that Al Smith is wet. But the Democratic party isn't wet. I know that Herbert Hoover and his administration are just as wet, even if they are not frank enough to admit it, and that they can't be depended upon to enforce the law. For eight years Hoover and his cabinet have made a miserable failure without an even honest attempt to enforce Hoover's administration selected Mellon to enforce prohibition when every posted man in Washington knows that Mellon is wet, that he doesn't believe in prohibition and when Mellon himself admits that at the time he owned $25,000 of distillery stock. Many times from the floor of the house Mellon has been denominated "The Prince of Bootleggers." And this man-sized job of prosecuting bootleggers has been shouldered upon one little woman, Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, who told me that she was compelled to move from the Hamilton hotel because she was disturbed by so many wild parties.

Have Inherent Right. "I do not criticize Dr. Sandefor, of Simmons College, Dr. Hunt of McMurry College, or any other of our good ministers or citizens for following their judgment and convictions. They have their inherent right, and I believe that I concede to ministers the right to be heard on the public forum concerning every question that affects our morals, homes and country. I am glad that they are willing to sacrifice and fight when they think danger is imminent. I have worked shoulder to shoulder with these minister-patriots for 35 years and have found them standing for the very best in Christian citizenship. They are as prone to err as other humans. They live far away from Washington. They have not been in close touch with Hoover and his administration. They have not seen what Morris Sheppard and I have witnessed. If they only knew about Hoover and his Republican administration what Sheppard and I know, they would unhesitatingly select Governor Smith as the lesser of two evils, and the one likely to do the most good for, and the least harm to, all of the people. If like them I believe that Smith could destroy our prohibition laws, and that Hoover would remove them, I would unhesitatingly vote for Hoover, because prohibition must not die. It is the achievement and result of fifty years of hard work, sacrifice, self-denial, struggle, tears and prayers of our churches, ministers, mothers and sober fathers. It must not die. But Smith cannot change the 18th amendment.

Only by Two-Thirds. It can be changed only by a two-thirds vote of both houses of congress followed by the vote of the legislature of three-fourths of the states. It would take the liquor interests fifty years to bring all this about. And Smith cannot change the Volstead law. Only congress can do it, and congress can change it only to enforce the 18th amendment, because any attempt to abrogate it would be held unconstitutional. President Wilson tried to kill the Volstead law by vetoing it, but he didn't succeed. Congress wouldn't let him. Hoover's administration has tried to kill it by attempting to pass the Mellon bill sponsored by Green and Hawley to create a hundred million dollar liquor combine to manufacture new whiskey, but congress wouldn't permit it, and congress and the supreme court wouldn't permit Smith to impair it. Near White House. The city of Washington today has in it more places notoriously open for dispensing intoxicating liquors than exist in the entire state of Texas. Some are near

Whoofus Whiffletree's Wooly Wonderings

Football followers of the Oil Belt—and the Southwest—are slowing back to normalcy after a series of upsets so numerous that no week-end has ever before even rivalled them.

San Angelo Bobcats, by holding the Cisco Lobes to a 13-13 count, are right in the race for the district championship. The Bobcats' win was no fluke either. They scored their second touchdown on two plays, a 40-yard run and a 30-yard pass, to come from behind and tie the score.

The fact that the Breckenridge Buckaroos defeated the weak Brownwood Lions only 19-0, was almost an upset. However frequent fumbles and general indifference playing by the Buckaroos, who were below their standard of play, doubtless had much to do with the count.

The failure of the Abilene Eagles to defeat the Eastland Mavericks by a greater margin than 19-0 is somewhat in the nature of an upset, too. The Mavericks, far outwitted, had undergone two hard battles in succession while the Eagles were playing their first conference game. The hard-hitting little Eastland eleven sent Baldwin, former San Angelo star, to the sidelines once more. They put up a brave fight, encouraged by the cheers of several hundred fans who had made the journey on a special train or by auto.

Of course the 0-0 affair between Ranger and Mineral Wells was an upset, too. However, the Mountaineers are fast enough for class A society. The absence of one or two regulars from the Ranger lineup doubtless made a difference.

T. C. U. by defeating the Aggies at Kyle field contributed the outstanding surprise of the day, in university circles—unless it was the one-sided manner in which Baylor walloped Centenary.

Figure this out: University of Mississippi defeated Arkansas, 25 to 0, a couple of weeks ago. Arkansas defeated Baylor a week ago—the score was 14 to 0, we believe. Then Baylor the past week meets Centenary who have not been defeated or tied in a season and a half, and are flushed with a victory over A. & M. the preceding week. What would you think would be the outcome of the Baylor-Centenary game? Centenary, certainly; and by a margin of several touchdowns probably. But the answer is: Baylor, 28 to 7.

Hereafter forecasts should be made something like this: Yale

OUT OUR WAY

has defeated every team by overwhelming scores, Jones Military academy has lost to everybody just as overwhelmingly, Yale should win easily over Jones Military academy, therefore Jones Military academy will win.

Former Texas high school stars distinguished themselves in big university games Saturday. Buster Mills of Ranger fame scored the only touchdown of the game and Oklahoma university ruined Creighton's home-coming celebration. Roy Lumpkin, once Oak Cliff luminary, had a big part in Notre Dame's defeat 13 to 0 at the hands of Georgia Tech.

Fort Worth's hopes of a district championship went glimmering when their best team—Fort Worth Central—lost 20 to 7 to the Sunset Bisons of Dallas. They fought on even terms the first half but a break—a fumble that was scooped up and carried 43 yards for a touchdown—started the Bison's momentum. Oak Cliff has a second Roy Lumpkin. In defeating Fort Worth Polytechnic 51 to 6, Sprague, kid brother of Captain Bud Sprague of the Army team, had a huge part.

Zarafonotis, former Ranger halfback, comes in for praise from Flew Hall of the Star Telegram. George is defensive fullback for A. & M. and "reminds one of Chris Cortemeglia who played with S. M. U. a few seasons ago. The Eastland boy (?) is smaller than Chris but built along the same lines and plays about the same sort of game except "Zarrie" is more elusive in an open field and can forward pass. Like the "Wonderful Wap," George can back up the line in fine style and run great interference."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

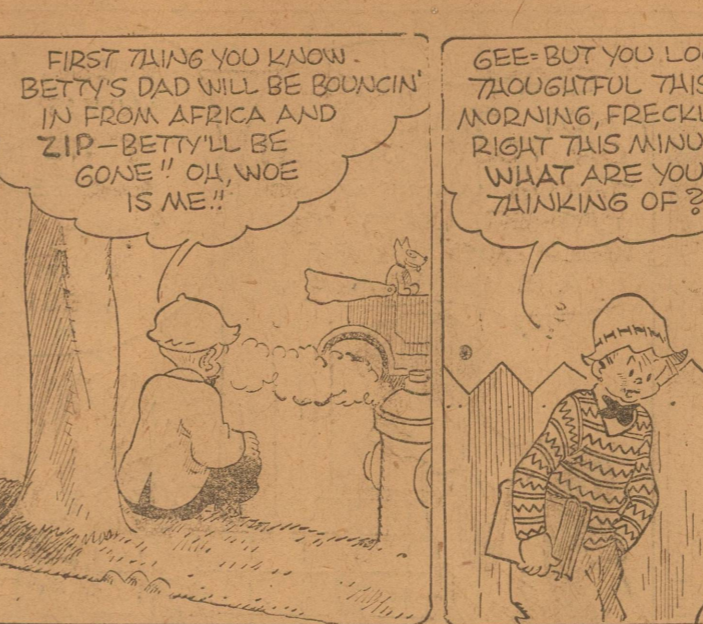

MOM'N' POP

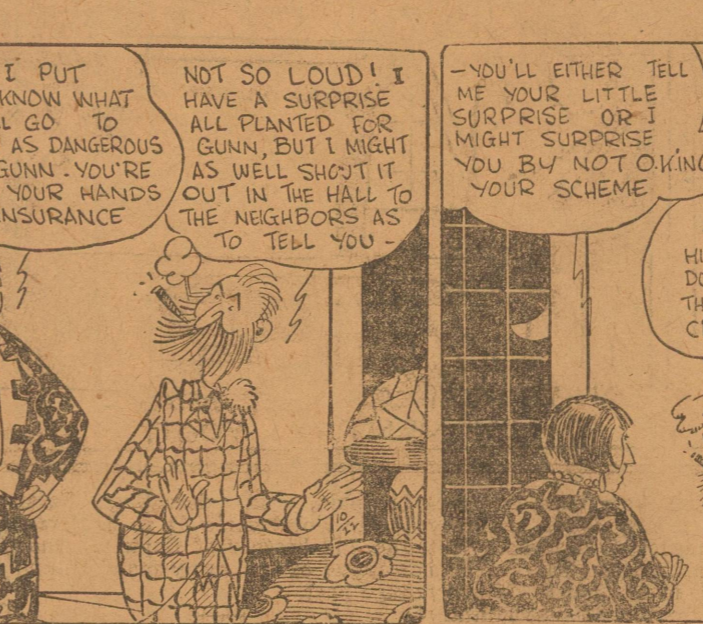

WHIRLWIND by ELEANOR EARLY

CHAPTER XXVI
It was difficult for Sybil in the months that stretched ahead. Mrs. Thorne devoted most of her time to quiet and systematic weeping. She sat in her dead husband's chair, his little hassock beneath her feet and the balsam pillow he had liked at her back, and there was something more piteous about her than there ever had been before.
"I suppose it's a dreadful thing to say," confessed Sybil to Tad, "but, honestly, I think mother gets a positive kick out of being sad. There she is—simply crying herself sick—and enjoying every minute of it."
"Why, Tad, she doesn't want to be happy. She's made up her mind that she's going to be miserable—and that's all there is to it. Anything else she regards as positive heresy. The other night I tried to drag her out to the theater and, my dear, you'd think I'd absolutely insulted her!"
"Poor ma," Tad looked very compassionate. "I wish there was something we could do."
"Get her to go to a psycho-analyst," suggested Valerie. "I'll bet Mr. Crandon would do her a world of good."
"Psycho-analyst?" Tad hooted disdainfully. "Psycho-my grandmother!"
"That's right," sulked Valerie. "Make fun of everything I say. What do you know about psycho-analysis, Tad Thorne?" Mr. Crandon's one marvel for lots of people, and I know he could help Mother Thorne, but just because it happened to be my idea—"
"Now Val," Tad was always conciliatory with his touchy little wife. "Don't go flying off the handle. If you know anything about this here psycho stuff, go ahead and explain it. Any idea you can sell Ma, to ease her out of that rocker and persuade her to turn off the weeps—Sib and I are all for it. Aren't we, Sib?"
"Lordy, yes!" Sybil put her arm placatingly about Valerie's shoulders. "Do try to interest her, Val. It might, as you say, do her a world of good."
A few days later Valerie drove her mother-in-law to Mr. Crandon's office on Commonwealth Avenue. He was a dark, rather oily little man, with well greased manners and hard, bright eyes, who took her hand and held it softly and promised to help her with all that troubled her.
He talked of repressions and such, which he promised to release and divert. And bad complexes to be sublimated.
He asked her the most absurd questions. Which, for instance, she had preferred, her father or her mother. And if she remembered her baptism. Then he sent Valerie from the room and asked her exceedingly personal questions about love and marriage. Mrs. Thorne blushed for the first time in 30 years and found herself enjoying the sensation.
Then he began to interrogate her about her dreams. They sounded quite harmless to Mrs. Thorne as she recounted them. But to Mr. Crandon they savored practically of indecency. He scribbled constantly as she talked, murmuring from time to time, "Bad. Very bad."
"My goodness!" she quavered, miserably, "I can't see as there's anything bad about that."
She had, at the moment, been discussing a most trivial little dream. Michael, the gardener, was mixed up in it. There was something about radishes and roses. Mrs. Thorne wasn't quite clear about it herself. She wanted Michael to pick the roses, but he had insisted upon picking the radishes instead. And there they were on the dining room table, looking as silly as you please, with their long stems sticking foolishly up in the air, and their little red heads buried in a pewter bowl.
Michael and the radishes, it seemed, bore a terrible significance. Then there was that dream about Valerie falling downstairs—she'd had it three times already. Mr. Crandon said that Mrs. Thorne wanted Valerie to die, so that she might have Tad all to herself again.
Mrs. Thorne gave a horrified gasp, and turning quite pale, got up, as if to leave the room. But

"All she needed was a new interest in life," declared Sybil, "and Mr. Crandon supplied the need."

"It's a pity," snapped Valerie. "If that was all there was to it, you couldn't have done the supplying yourself, Sybil! Just because it was my idea—"
