

WILLIE, ONCE 'ALL HIGHEST ONE,' NOW 'NOBODY,' THE VICTIM OF HIS OWN TOO GREAT AMBITION

By C. G. HARPER.

WIERINGEN ISLAND, Holland.—Holland is a quaint and interesting country when you are visiting Dutch friends, and thus seeing it from the inside.

And it is exceptionally interesting just now to inquiring minds because the ex-all highest but one at present interned in that country, fugitives from the fatherland.

Back! Mine is an inquiring mind, and it occurred to me to go to Wieringen island, in the Zuyder Zee and have a look at the German ex-crown prince. No use trying to see the ex-kaiser, at Doorn, because the Dutch government considers him still of some importance and is rather inclined to harass visitors to that place.

But anyone who has the enterprise to go and see the ex-crown prince; he is considered to be of not the slightest importance!

Skill, for whatever reason, the Dutch authorities have thought it well to intern him in a remote situation—in a little island quite off the beaten track.

"What do you want to go and see Little Willie for?" asked my Dutch friends. "He is nobody!"

"Quite! But have you no imagination? He was somebody. He wanted the war, and he got it, and because of that he is now, as you say, nobody."

"Think of it—he was heir to the throne of the German empire, and thus, as future emperor, would have been one of the greatest powers on earth. If the war had been lost by the allies, he would certainly, in time to come, have been the greatest personage. It does not in the least matter that the kaiser and the crown prince were little-minded men in big situations, they had the power, and they have lost it."

My Dutch friends were convinced. "Yes," I said, "it is, in a way, tragic. There is no glory, no martyrdom, no persecution of these fallen personages. They are just nonentities. It is the biggest humiliation possible for those who once had indeed their place in the sun, and got a sort of sunstroke or swelled head by it."

Wieringen Island.

Wieringen island is two miles offshore, in that corner of the Zuyder Zee which lies between Enkhuizen and the Helder. Out-of-the-way, and not interesting, it is six miles long, and rather more than three broad. It is a twenty-five-minute passage from Ewijksilus, in a little steam post boat.

No one will seek to prevent you going there, but one of the four policemen on the island is sure to be on the quay at Wieringen harbor, and will politely conduct you to the nearest village. It is called—get ready!—Hippolitusshoef, and here lives the burgomaster. When he is satisfied that you have a passport and no political mission to the ex-crown prince, you are at perfect liberty.

At Hippolitusshoef there is a decent hotel. Little Willie lives at Oosterland, in the most secluded part of the island. There are two other villages—Westerland and Oever. The scenery is without charm, and there is not a picturesque house in the place. But the population is considerable—about 3,000. The industries of Wieringen are agriculture and fishing. To these has now been added the flourishing one of selling picture postcards of the ex-crown prince. There is a considerable variety—the prince talking to fisher-folk on the quay; being visited by his wife and children, or making horseshoes at a village smithy.

His residence is a humble one. There he lives without his family. The house was formerly the vicarage, and is No. 10, Oosterland.

He Reads the "Golden Ones." I could not resist sketching this abode of fallen greatness, and my doing so was evidently noticed.

Com motion heard from within, and the word "Englander." Then there came out, one after the other, a little girl with toy dog, and walked away up the road; a brown dachshund, which sniffed through the railings, and went back; a man-servant, looking rather she-soiled, and finally the ex-crown prince himself—the former all highest but one.

"Englishman?" he asked affably. "Yes; it hurts your feelings, no doubt," I said jocularly.

He was got up in the sportsman style—white woolen sweater, riding breeches and leather gaiters, topped by a more or less military German flat top cap.

"Ah, an Englishman. And what interest do you find in Wieringen?" "Yourself. I am an English journalist, and one of the papers I write for would like to know—"

"The Daily Mail," he exclaimed with an intense intonation. "Ach!" Somehow I gathered he did not like the Daily Mail.

"No, a better than that." "Ah, I seem to recollect." "Yes," I said. "Fortunately I have a copy in my pocket." I handed it to him and he turned over its pages meditatively.

"Himmel! I mean 'good heavens.' It brings me back to the days I had in London."

"Some people," I said, "would like to see you there now?"

He missed my subtle meaning. "England," he said, "is caput—finished. Civil war in Ireland, coal strike, railways all stopped, everyone ruined, no employment—I know all about it."

"Not really," said I. "The coal strike is ended, the Irish troubles are

MURDER TRIALS KEEP FACTIONAL FEELINGS ALIVE IN COAL FIELDS

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 6.—Factional feeling, stirred by West Virginia's recent mine war trouble, was kept tuned up today when murder trials resulting from the industrial fight at Matewan in May, 1920, were called in circuit court here.

Nineteen defendants were present when the session began today. The two chief defendants, Sid Hatfield and Ed Chambers, were killed in a revolver fight at Welch recently.

RACE RIOT AT NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 6.—Several investigations were under way today probing a race riot at Gretna, a suburb, in which one negro was seriously beaten and several were placed in jail. Police guarded the jail throughout the night, fearing an attempt to lynch the negroes arrested. The trouble started when police attempted to arrest Buster Briscoe, negro, with a criminal record, for an alleged slanderous remark.

MERCHANT DROWNED.

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 6.—Harold Joske, 32 years old, vice-president and general manager of Joske Bros. company, the largest department store here, was drowned late yesterday while swimming in the Guadalupe river, near here. Joske was one of San Antonio's best known younger business men, and was trained for the duties of the position he held in Filene's Sons Co. department store, in Boston, Mass.

KIWANIS CONVENTION.

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 6.—With jazz and pep the second day of the Kiwanis club district convention was opened today. About 500 delegates from Texas and Oklahoma are in attendance. Routine Kiwanis business will be taken up. Yesterday's session was ended with a banquet for all of the delegates. Oklahoma City and Galveston are running neck and neck for the 1922 meeting.

ALIENS RETURNING TO EUROPE BY THOUSANDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Thousands who rushed here from Europe after the war are now leaving. When the Belvedere sailed on Sept. 2 she carried home over 1,000 Italians and Spaniards. The Presidente Wilson, which sailed Saturday, had 1,360 third class passengers; as compared with 780 she brought here Aug. 17. More than 300, mostly Italians, were unable to get passage.

THE SINFULNESS OF HOARDING.

It is common enough to find bankers and writers in financial papers advising farmers to patronize the banks, and the advice is doubtless none the less valuable because of the banker's financial interest which is involved. But no self-interest attaches to a sermon against hoarding which is preached by a farmer's pastor, Wallace's Farmer (Des Moines).

This editorial on "The Sin of Hoarding" is prompted by the writer's conviction that there are in many communities men who are sinning against themselves and their fellows by keeping from $200 to $10,000 around the house; "they are laboring under the impression that things are going to get worse and worse until the final crash comes and that then they will be at a peculiar advantage because they have a stock of hard cash on hand." The point is that—

Cash kept around the house is dead money. Cash deposited in the bank is live money. A dollar of cash deposited in the bank serves as a source of from $5 to $10 of credit. The man who keeps $1,000 around the home is, in effect, preventing five to ten other men from borrowing $1,000 each from the bank. We suspect that there is at least $5,000,000 in the state of Iowa being kept out of circulation by timid hoarders. This $5,000,000, if it were put in the bank, would serve as a source of from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of credit, and would go a long way toward relieving the present critical situation.

Never keep more than $50 in cash around the house, and if you can get along with as little as $10 by all means do so. If you have large quantities of money on hand, there is always danger of losing it by robbery and fire. But the biggest reason why all surplus money should find its way into the bank as promptly as possible is that the banks are credit factories, and the raw material of credit which they manufacture is hard cash. Remember that the bank makes out of every dollar of cash deposit, from $5 to $10 worth of credit. We are satisfied that if only one-half of the money which at present is being hoarded in the United States were deposited with the banks that credit could be increased to such an extent that prices would rise from 5 to 10 per cent. The man who keeps his money about the house is helping to hold prices down.—Literary Digest.

HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS TO AID AGRICULTURISTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Hundreds of millions soon will be advanced to aid in the exportation of farm crops by the war finance corporation, managing director Eugene Meyer said today.

Plans have been virtually completed for carrying out the bill recently passed by congress, directing the corporation to protect agricultural interests in this manner. Loans on exports up to $1,000,000 can be made under the act, but this figure probably will not be reached for several months.

DOG HILL PARAGRAPHS

Where Mr. Langston got the idea that the Times is aligned with the "forces of graft and corruption," if there are any, is unknown. We wish he would tell us. For frankly, we are unable to find the pocket in which bur share has been put. Possibly he formed this impression from regular perusal of our publication. More probably not. At any rate, his name is not on our subscription list, and we fancy the minister sometimes goes home before the Sunshine which carries the Times reaches Eastland.

To sum it all up: The Times, like other reputable newspapers, strives to be an actual photograph of what is going on, and not a cartoon, intended to convey a certain view of what has occurred. Some persons prefer the cartoon, if it is on their side. They may not like the photograph because it is not out-and-out evidence for their contentions. However, we will continue as near as possible, to mirror the doings of the time as nearly as possible, and those who wish may draw their own cartoons.

ENTERTAIN PRINCE VISIT TO INDIA

Although the news dispatches tell of serious rioting in India, there has been no cancellation of the trip which the Prince of Wales is to make to the Hindu peninsula. When he arrives this beautiful matron, the Countess Cromer, will be his chief hostess. Her husband will be chief of the Prince's personal staff.

GRANTE'S SON ON SWINDLE RING'S LIST OF BONDS

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—A nationwide search was launched here today for a score of "millionaire victims" of the frenzied financial operations of Charles W. French and his alleged $50,000,000 "swindle trust." The finding of a new sucker list, including the son of a former president, led to the new angle of the investigation.

The search for 'millionaire victims' included the sending of telegrams to federal agents in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Santa Barbara and Hollywood. Agents in these cities were asked to interview men whose names appeared on the "sucker list." It was reported several motion picture "stars" appeared on the "sucker list."

New evidence showed that U. S. Grant, son of President Grant, was among the men approached in San Francisco by French and his agents. Federal agents said that Grant had "listened favorably" to French's dream of a "world combine." The plan collapsed, however, through French's arrest here.

Authorities in Eastern cities meanwhile were reported probing other names on the list. Coleman du Pont, the powder king, was among those named. He has denied having any dealings with the band.

The "rubber trust," sponsored by C. W. French as part of his alleged swindle scheme, went to the wall. The American Rubber company, which occupied a modest storeroom here and sold raincoats, but which under French's magic wand was soon to become a $2,000,000 rival of the United States Rubber company, was forced into bankruptcy.

SAYS INDIAN REVOLT IS AGAINST UPLIFT

International News Service

COLUMBUS, Sept. 6.—"There seems to be a silent revolution among Indians against the British government by native fanatics, led by educated natives who are against the uplift of the lower classes," said W. E. Bancroft of this city. Mr. Bancroft served in India fifteen years as a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal church.

He believes the extensive movement against British rule in India is a cleverly disguised conspiracy against western Christian civilization. "For the last thirty years the leaders of the extremists have been striving hard to check the onward progress of western ideals and civilization in India," Mr. Bancroft continued.

"It may be these leaders hope to secure control of the natives to exploit the illiterate masses. Only 10 per cent of the male population and 1 per cent of the female are literate," he declared.
