BANDITS DISGUISED AS PHYSICIANS ROB WOMAN OF JEWELRY

ENTER HOME CARRYING SMALL BAGS

Reluctantly Admits False Doctor When Operation Mentioned

By United Press.
KANSAS CITY, Oct. 19.—Two bandits posing as physicians attending the post graduate medical association meeting here gained entrance to the home of J. H. Mace, in an exclusive part of the city this morning and robbed Mrs. Mace of jewelry valued at $3,000.

Carrying a small black physician's bag the bandits told Mrs. Mace they had been sent to examine her following an operation. Although the operation was performed three years ago, Mrs. Mace dubiously invited the two "physicians" into the house. Attempts to bind and gag the woman were not completed when she agreed to give the men her jewelry.

National Pecan Show at San Saba November 8 and 9

By United Press.
COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 19.—Designed as a purely educational event, the first National Pecan show, to be held at San Saba, Nov. 8-9, promises not only to bring together some of the finest exhibits of pecans in this country but to help materially in bringing about a recognition among pecan growers of the interests they have in common, Dean E. J. Kyle of the school of agriculture, A. & M. college of Texas, who is president of the show, has pointed out in commenting upon preparations for the coming exposition.

Cash prizes representing in the aggregate a considerable sum have been hung up for various classes of exhibits. A regional prize of $250 is offered for the best and most representative display assembled and shown under the auspices of chamber of commerce representing West, East or South Texas. Another prize of $250 has been offered for the best sectional exhibit from any recognized pecan growing section of the United States. County, individual and numerous other cash prizes have been offered and winners will also be awarded certificates and ribbons.

"It is eminently fitting that the people of San Saba should sponsor the first National Pecan show," said Dean Kyle. "San Saba county is the center of the greatest native pecan producing section in the world. The show to be held here Nov. 8-9 is designed as purely an educational event. It is felt that a pecan show displaying representative pecans from every section of the United States where pecans are grown will have a crystallizing influence on the commercial pecan industry."

Assurance has been received from Albany, Ga., that the National Pecan Growers exchange, a co-operative marketing concern, is assembling a special educational display to be shown at San Saba, Dean Kyle said. Until recent years, the pecan industry of Texas was based largely on wild seedling pecans, Dean Kyle pointed out. Recent years, however, have witnessed the expansion of the industry until standard varieties of pecans, or the so-called "paper-shells" are now being produced in commercial quantities in all the southern states.

Officers of the National show are as follows: Dean E. J. Kyle, president; F. R. Eason, A. & M. college, secretary; James F. Rosborough, A. & M. extension service; T. H. Ridgeway, San Antonio; E. E. Risien, San Saba; J. H. Burkett, Clyde; Col. Ike T. Poyor, San Antonio; F. T. Ramsey, Austin; W. J. Millican, Bend; E. C. Butterfield, Winona, vice presidents.

Change Of Venue Motion Brings Up Old Skeletons

The hearing before a jury in the Eighty-eighth district court on a motion offered by the defense in the case of Eastland county vs. Smith Bros., Eastland county road contractors, for a change of venue to Stephens county on the ground that the defendants cannot get a fair and impartial trial in Eastland county, is still in progress. A large number of witnesses from all parts of the county have been placed on the stand by the defendants and a large number are to be offered by the plaintiff. #### FALL SINCLAIR JURY IS GIVEN DEFENSE IDEA

Martin Littleton, Defense Attorney, Indicates Principals Prompted by Patriotism.

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy jury of two women and 10 men was told today by defense chief Martin Littleton, that Harry Sinclair "never passed a bond to Albert B. Fall."

Littleton in an advance summation of the case, for the two noted defendants charged with conspiracy to defraud the government did the following:

1. Credited Admiral J. K. Robinson, naval oil chief, as originator of the oil leasing plan, under which Teapot Dome and Elk Hills were leased.
2. Said Secretary of the Navy Denby knew of every step in the lease negotiation.
3. Said Sinclair never owned a share of stock in the Continental Trading company, the alleged source of $230,500 of Liberty bonds found in Fall's possession following the execution of the Teapot lease.
4. Said that Sinclair's $25,000 payment to Fall in 1923 was made in Liberty bonds because "bonds were easier to send than a check." (This payment was in connection with Fall's trip to Russia as counsel for Sinclair, it was asserted.)

5. Told the government charged that Sinclair gave the bonds to Fall a phantom thing. Through Littleton's summation ran the clear indication that Fall and Sinclair intend partly to claim patriotic motives as actuating the deal whereby Teapot Dome passed from the government's hands to Sinclair's company.

Say, What in the heck do you guys mean? This Jubilee don't start until Friday.

Judging from the appearance of the old main drag you might think it's on right now. The decorations are beginning to loom up all over town and the whole works is taking on a carnival air that you would only expect to be evident during the actual two-days of the Jubilee.

When the original group of citizens met and discussed the idea of a celebration, not one of those present had any idea of it's ever reaching the proportions it has already reached and the end is not yet by three days. They thought there might be a couple of thousand people here from out of town, but heck, it looks like the whole world is going to declare a holiday and come to Ranger Friday and Saturday.

We should be much obliged for the publicity we have received from the big city dailies of our big brother cities on the east. The Dallas News handled a big story in their 210 page paper on the opening day of the Dallas fair.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram gave us a full page banner on the very front page of their paper last night and they had Silmar Evans drop in here yesterday afternoon and wire them a story about seven o'clock that appeared on their front page this morning.

If that's not co-operation, then there ain't no such animal.

That's just the big papers, not even mentioning the generous stories we have received from the Cisco Daily News, the Mineral Wells Index, The Abilene Reporter and 103 other papers in the other towns of the state.

Now, listen, folks, while we get right confidential with you.

Through the generous cooperation of the newspapers of this state and Oklahoma, the story of the Jubilee has been spread to the four winds of the earth.

Various companies handling oil well supplies have thought the thing of sufficient magnitude to send displays here and men to take charge of them. Oil companies and gasoline companies have thought enough of it to help us out in the advertising by contributing large sums of money and sending high priced men here to take part in the program and participate in the festivities.

Local business houses and citizens have given of their time and money to make it the success it deserves to be, although it is several times as big as anyone had any idea it would be.

So much for that. Now what we got to do is to prove to these people that we appreciate the interest they have taken in the Jubilee.

We got to make the visitors feel at home. We have often said publicly that "you can't be a stranger in Ranger" because our hospitality makes everybody feel at home.

Now it's up to you home folks to extend your every effort to proving that you can live up to your reputation by getting into the spirit of the thing and doing your part toward making it the most perfect thing of its kind that has ever been held, anywhere, any time or any place.

Incidentally, the big 90 foot derrick that is at the lower end of Main street was erected through the courtesy of a local manufacturer. The Kinney Manufacturing company, who make the patent derricks right here in Ranger. They are newcomers in a way but they are with us and no foolin'.

Mysterious thefts which have been occurring for several years in the official residence of the finance minister at Nagatacho, Japan, have baffled the Japanese police. ## Hot Biscuits in less time . . .

2 new time-saving suggestions

Whenever I want to serve hot biscuits and haven't the time to roll and cut them, I make drop biscuits.

I use my master biscuit recipe—simply making the batter a little softer by adding extra milk and dropping this batter on baking pans with a spoon. No need to touch the dough with my hands—no table, rolling-pin or sticky hands to wash afterwards! A real saving of time and trouble!

On this page I am giving recipes for both rolled and drop biscuits—also for some fancy biscuits, all variations of the master recipe.

I make all these biscuits with Crisco— for Crisco gives me the lightest, flakiest biscuits I have ever had and in the years I have been cooking I have tried almost everything.

You can mix all the ingredients in the recipe except the milk, keep this mixture in the ice-box and have fresh hot biscuits without taking time to mix them just at meal time. As Crisco itself stays sweet and fresh so long, the mixture will keep a week or longer.

Really I do not know how I could keep house without all the good things to eat that Crisco gives me: Cakes that you cannot tell from butter cakes; tender, flaky pie crusts; light, feathery muffins; and all kinds of wonderful fried foods, without smoke, unpleasant odor or waste.

Master Recipe
for both "Drop" and "Rolled" Biscuits
2 cups bread flour
1/2 cup milk or water (for "drop" biscuits) or 3/4 cup milk or water (for "rolled biscuits")
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons Crisco

Sift dry ingredients together 3 times. Work Crisco in with fork. Add liquid gradually.

FOR "DROP" (Emergency) BISCUITS: drop by spoonfuls on Criscoed baking pan. Brush top of biscuits with melted Crisco or milk. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 10 to 15 minutes.

FOR ROLLED BISCUITS: form dough into shape, roll 1/2 inch thick, cut. For scone-shaped biscuits, cut squares, then diagonally in half. Brush top of biscuits with melted Crisco or milk. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Makes about 12 biscuits.

To use buttermilk or sour milk beat in 1/4 teaspoon soda for each cup of milk. (If milk is very thick, use a little more milk.) Use same amount of baking powder and follow method for either "drop" or "rolled" biscuits.

CHRONOLOGICAL STORY OF THE FAMOUS TEA POT DOME OIL CASE

High points in the story of the famous Teapot Dome oil case in Wyoming, leading up to the trial of Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair in Washington on criminal charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, are given herewith in chronological order:

April 30, 1915—President Woodrow Wilson by executive order created Naval Reserve No. 3—"Teapot Dome," a geologists' nickname originated from the teapot shape of a nearby rock formation. The land had been withdrawn from the public domain in 1909 when they were found to contain oil. The reserve comprised 9,321 acres in Natarona county, Wyoming.

June 4, 1920—Law enacted giving the secretary of the navy power to utilize reserve oil to prevent drainage.

May 31, 1921—President Harding issued executive order transferring jurisdiction of naval oil reserves to interior department.

October, 1921—Secretary of Interior Fall discusses with navy and interior officials report of C. H. Wegemann, one of the geologists who discovered Teapot Dome, indicating danger of drainage.

Nov. 15—A. E. Humphreys, wealthy Texas oil man, his attorney, former Senator Charles S. Thomas, H. M. Blackmer, chairman of the board of Midwest Refining company, a Standard of Indiana subsidiary, James E. O'Neill, president Prairie Oil & Gas company, and Sinclair, conferred in Blackmer's New York hotel room on sale of Humphreys' Texas oil.

Nov. 16—Continental Trading Company, Ltd., incorporated in Toronto, Canada, by H. S. Osler, Toronto lawyer.

Nov. 17—Osler in New York executed contract for purchase of 33,333,333 barrels of oil from Humphreys by Continental company at $1.50 a barrel, Sinclair and Stewart guaranteeing one-half of contract on behalf of Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company, and O'Neill the other half for the Prairie Oil & Gas company.

lease investigation by senate public lands committee, said he was proud of leases.

Oct. 25—Denby said he had not investigated leasing fully.

(The senate oil investigation continued until May 14, 1924, disclosing many details of leasing and a statement by Zevich that he loaned $25,000 to Fall and advanced him $10,000 for a trip to Russia, which the former secretary made with Sinclair in 1923.)

Feb. 8, 1924—Resolution adopted by congress asserting leases executed "under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption" and without authority, and directing President Coolidge to appoint special government counsel to start suits to annul leases and bring prosecutions.

March 13—Civil suits to annul Teapot Dome lease filed in Cheyenne, Wyo., federal court, and similar suit to annul Doheny lease filed in Los Angeles.

June 30—Fall and Sinclair indicted by District of Columbia grand jury on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government; Fall and Doheny similarly indicted; Fall indicted on charge of receiving a bribe; Doheny and his son, E. L. Jr., indicted on charge of giving a bribe.

March 9, 1925—Teapot Dome civil suit trial started in Cheyenne before Judge T. Blake Kennedy. It lasted three weeks, and was marked by sensational testimony disclosing for the first time the government's charge that the $230,500 in Liberty bonds passed from Sinclair to Fall as a bribe for the lease. The fact that Everhart received the continental bonds was established from evidence found since the oil investigation by government detectives, but Sinclair's connection with the transaction could not be definitely proved. Judge Kennedy took the case under advisement and several months later announced a verdict dismissing the government suit for want of equity, holding the leases were authorized and that there was no fraud or corruption.

April 2—Chief Justice Walter L. McCoy, District of Columbia supreme court, quashed Fall-Sinclair and Fall-Doheny conspiracy indictments because of unauthorized person in grand jury room.

May 27—New Fall-Sinclair and Fall-Doheny conspiracy indictments voted by District of Columbia grand jury.

July 3, 1926—President Coolidge signed Walsh act, prohibiting special appeals from District of Columbia supreme court in criminal cases not yet tried.

Aug. 28—Circuit court of appeals at St. Louis reversed Judge Kennedy's decision in Teapot civil case, holding leases obtained by fraud and corruption.

Oct. 2—Under Walsh act, circuit court of appeals dismissed appeals from Fall-Sinclair and Fall-Doheny conspiracy indictments and the Sinclair contempt indictment. The Fall-Sinclair and Sinclair indictment decisions were appealed to the United States supreme court, which denied

RECORDS SHOW BULLDOGS ARE GOOD STUDENTS

Every Member of Squad Is More Than Meeting Scholastic Requirements.

By GUS COLEMAN
 Contrary to the impression held by some people, the members of the Ranger Bulldog squad devote a lot of their time to studies other than football. This conclusion was arrived at after Coach Cherry had listed the grades of all members of the squad and turned them in as is required before each conference game. Every member of the squad made better than passing grades in all four subjects except four of the boys who made it in three subjects. The scholastic requirements for participants in league athletics is that they shall have made passing grades in at least three subjects.

And the majority of the grades are not just merely passing grades either, for there were many A's and B plus and B's. The average of the entire squad would rate something like B which is a grade of 80.

By some it is conceded that football players are not supposed to make good grades but that their athletic activities will carry them along somehow, and for that reason alone the scholastic achievements of the Bulldog squad is something that the entire student body and the faculty have a right to be proud of.

It is gratifying to the coaches too, to know that the members of the team are meeting all scholastic requirements and passing them with flying colors. They realize that in many instances a boy's desire to participate in athletics is one of the biggest factors that holds him in school, and when a boy goes right on and delivers the goods in the classroom as well as on the field, the coaches naturally feel good over the fact that here is positive proof that high school athletics is justifying its right to existence.

Some critics may think that the teachers show the athletes some favors and give them higher grades than they are entitled to, but such is not the case. The grades are not merely guessed at by any means—they are the compilation of daily grades made in the class room and these grades are made up on the basis of how well the student has known his lesson for that particular day. At the end of the month they are averaged and the average is the student's grade for the month. It is practically impossible to favor a popular athlete because the other students often rate themselves on how they compare with the athlete and, consequently the athlete seldom gets the benefit of the doubt.

The Bulldogs have certainly reflected credit upon the school and the coaches for the showing they have made in scholastic work.

Mavericks Take Final Work Out For Friday Game

The Eastland Mavericks managed to get in one more real scrimmage before the impending game with Ranger, Friday afternoon on Lillard Field.

A group of has-beens, ineligible, and want to bes, went down under the terrific attack of the Mavericks Monday afternoon to the tune of 19 to 0 or thereabouts.

The opposition was composed of former high school players and college players who desired to let the Mavericks twist their necks and put water on their knees for the sake of the scrimmage.

The Maverick squad showed great improvement since the last game. The team worked in perfect unison and the light line showed up marvelously. The driving attack of Buil Johnson and Jones, Smith, Omerby and Osborne showed improvement over the Breckenridge game.

The squad is now receiving some of the stiffest workouts that they have received this year under the direction of Coach Pena. They have worked hard and long, they have gone out early and stayed out late, and they have worked their legs off every minute that they have been on the field.

General forecasts seem to place the Mavericks as the under-dogs of the fray, due, in all probability to the prestige of the Bulldogs and the fact that they will outweigh the Mavericks many pounds to the man. However, the game is expected to be one of the hardest ever fought on Lillard field.

It has been estimated by Ranger ticket managers that over 12,000 people will see the game, many of them being residents of both Ranger and Eastland and a large portion of visitors who will be in Ranger that day to attend the opening day of the Jubilee.

Now let us see what actually happened to this alleged wise stuff that was handed over prior to the opening of the series.

Yankees Were Hitting.
 In my lineup of the two clubs, I expressed the opinion that the outcome of the series largely depended upon the mood of the Yankees. That is, if the Pirates found them in the midst of one of their batting orgies, no Pirate pitcher would stop them.

It so happened the Pirates found the Yanks in such a mood and not one of the four starting pitchers, the regulars of the Pittsburgh staff—Kroner, Aldridge, Meadows and Hill—were able to finish.

New York looked over plenty of curve-ball pitching, they missed a lot of the "hooks" served them, but in the pinch, they hit enough of them to enable the Yanks to win four straight games.

The Pittsburgh twirlers are now familiar with what the pitchers on seven other American league clubs were up against last summer.

Pennock Was Poison.
 Perhaps Pittsburgh is poison for the ordinary southpaw, but in the trail Herbert Pennock, the Pirates' m.c. an extraordinary left hander.

All Pennock did was retire 22 batters in succession and with one man down in the eighth had pitched a perfect ball game. The Pirates made only three hits and one run off his delivery.

No doubt the Pirates have plenty of speed on the bases, but they seldom had a chance to show it and

Expert Dope On World's Series All Went Wrong

By BILLY EVANS.
 The so-called expert dope was badly exploded in the world series between the Yankees and the Pirates.

Some of the pre-series predictions by those familiar with the strength of the National league champions were that—

Pittsburgh's staff of curve-ball artists will stop the New York sluggers, who are easy picking for that style of pitching.

No southpaw will have a chance to beat the Pirates, for they are deadly poison to that kind of pitching.

Pittsburgh will run wild on the Yankees' catching staff, for the Pirates are the best base-running club in the National league.

Manager Bush intends for his pitchers to really pitch to Ruth and Gehrig and is positive, by properly working on them, the two sluggers

Hikes 3000 Miles

Flights across the continent are getting common, but here is an 11-year-old girl who walked the 3000 miles from Pittsburgh to Los Angeles. In one state (must we tell it?) she lost five pairs of shoes in the mud. Her name is Dolly Maloney. Her parents accompanied her on the hike.

when they did the conditions of the game didn't favor such play.

True, the Pirate pitchers did pitch to both Ruth and Gehrig with very few exceptions. However, their curves failed to stop the slugging tactics of the two Yankee stars.

The extra base hits of Babe and Lou just about spoiled the series from a Pittsburgh standpoint. The pre-series bunk was worthless.

Pirates Outclassed.
 The Pirates were outclassed in the

Keep Kidneys Active!

You Can't Feel Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.

TO feel always tired, lame and achy is too often a sign of improper kidney action. When the kidneys act sluggishly, waste poisons remain in the blood, and are apt to make one languid, stiff and achy, with dull headaches, dizziness and often nagging backache. A common warning that the kidneys are not acting right is scanty or burning secretions. Assist the kidneys with Doan's Pills. Doan's, a stimulant diuretic, increase kidney activity. recent world series. There is no doubt of that. However, the Pirates unquestionably played far below form. Pittsburgh is a much better ball club than it showed in the series.

The Yankees, a truly great ball club when in the proper mood, were at the top of their game. After an ordinary start in the first game, New York always dominated the situation.

All season many of the experts have insisted the remarkable hitting of the Yankees was due to inferior pitching. Yet, in the world series, the Pirate staff failed to stop the Yanks, while the alleged inferior staff of New York had no trouble holding the Pirates in check.

All of which proves it is the wise person who takes nothing for granted as far as the outcome of a ball game is concerned.

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher, swindled out of $45,000 by a confidence ring, resolves to break up the ring. After a short time he lands two of his men in California and hurries to Florida to search for others. After several disappointing experiences with the police in some Florida cities, Norfleet gets a tip that a ring is operating at Sanford, Fla. as a prospective purchaser of a celery farm, using the name of Parkinson, Norfleet meets an out-cast of the ring who introduces himself as Johnson. Johnson induces Norfleet to accompany him to Daytona where the investment opportunities are greater. Strolling on the beach they meet a man named Steel whom Johnson calls a financial wizard. Steel places a bet or two on the horse races and makes a nice winning for Johnson. He then insists on Johnson and Norfleet accompanying him to the "club house" where the facilities are much better for big winners. They were driven to the spot where the "club house" topped a high hill, overlooking the sea. Steel tries to dismiss the chauffeur but Norfleet quietly threatens him and forces him to wait. Inside the "club

Steel, who stood by me, if he had ever seen so much money before in his life. He laughed in a hollow way and remarked that customers' winnings were sometimes so great as to require that much, and more, to be kept on hand for settlements. I asked him what they did when the house did the winning and he laughingly replied that he guessed they could handle all they took in. I asked him how much money he reckoned was in the heap. "Well," he puckered his brow, reflectively. "I should say something like a hundred and seventy-five thousand."

I must have gasped, for he grinned at my consternation. Undoubtedly, the money was there. I stood turning the packages over, covetously. "It takes money to make money," Steel remarked casually as he excused himself to look over some telegrams. He left my side and I took advantage of the opportunity to size up the place as to exits. I might need one badly, I reflected, and I hardly wanted to make a new one through one of the thick walls. I walked over to the two men sitting on the bench. They were busily jotting down figures and scanning the board. I stood directly in front of them. "I've never seen so much money in my life, gentlemen."

They ignored my remark and leaned sideways to look around me at the board, where figures were being changed rapidly. I was letting their faces register themselves in my memory and I could hardly stare so intently without saying something, so, in spite of their coldness, I went on: "Just think of it, gentlemen—on that table is one hundred and seventy-five thousand in cold cash! Can you realize how much money that is?"

They turned to me and relaxed their tense faces slightly, then resumed their figuring. Not so good, I thought. These men were green and having been coached in but one thing they could not vary their characters enough to be natural.

I moved toward the window and looked out over the sea. The breakers were pounding with a great booming, upon the rocks. I looked back across the room and noted that a little door opened into a hall and that, opposite it, another large window looked out over the distant valley. I walked over to it, opened it wider and pretended to admire the view. Steel and Johnson were standing near and I felt their eyes upon me.

"What a wonderful view," I exclaimed. Johnson nodded casually and spoke: "Yes, it's fine. Just look around and make yourself at home; it's still early, Mr. Steel says, for things to begin."

How long, I wondered, anxiously, must I endure this suspense? I would have welcomed any crisis as relief, but I could not rush it. I stepped in to the little hall, out of their view, and hastily examined my guns, whirling the cylinders to make sure they were clicking. I drank in the beauty of the valley for a moment, then turned toward the room. As I walked toward the center of the room, my gaze was on the sea, through the large windows. I saw a little white boat speeding toward the landing. Its nose was high above the water, and its sides cast a sheet of spray in both directions, as the gull-wale split the water. There was a lone man in it and he seemed very much in a hurry. I strolled on to the window and watched him. The others must have seen him, too, for the room became quiet and the putt! putt! of the boat's engine was causing questioning glances and unrest.

Johnson must have sensed the tension, for he announced, in a loud voice, that he looked over the horses and that he was ready to place a few bets.

"I'd rather take my chances with a live animal than with a bunch of green celery, any time," he chided. From my remarks Johnson and Steel had gathered that I must have a considerable sum with me and they were ready to start the wheels moving which would clean me out.

I had doped out my position pretty well. There were nine of us in the house. Eight of them against me, with the nigger outside probably neutral. It seemed that the rest of the house was boarded up and that I had little chance of learning anything about Furey and Spencer.

Perhaps an attempt by me to leave would start the fireworks, but I had about concluded to make my getaway. I crossed the room toward the front door and I could see the coon sitting in the car. Steel was watching me and he came over near me, blocking my way to the door.

I glanced over my shoulder and saw the man of the boat running up the steps toward the house. He was bounding up, three steps at a time.

"We have an ideal location for work, haven't we?" Steel asked. I answered that it seemed perfect for such a business.

Each of us must have caught something significant from these brief words. We understood each other. He was making it especially plain that I should get nothing particular and I let him know that I understood him.

Then the panting man entered, through the back door. He stood at the door and looked hastily about. Steel stepped over toward him and he came to meet him. A scrap of paper passed between them and Steel's fingers closed over it stealthily. I pretended not to see the transfer and the bearer of the note went over to Johnson. They spoke in low tones and walked, together, into a little side room.

Steel snatched out the paper and glanced down at it, guardedly. Evidently, the writing was almost illegible, for he lifted it close to his eyes and squinted as he made it out. His face blanched and his trembling hand dropped to his side, clutching the paper. I could almost feel the electricity of the silent moment which went about the room. Steel's hand shook as if palsied. I had never noticed its ugly peculiarity before, but now I saw the heavy scars which marked it. On three of the fingers, the hair grew in a swirl in the wrong direction. I'd known that hand anywhere. He tried to speak, but the words stuck in his throat. I was convinced that the note had brought him some sort of information about me, for his very looks told it clearly.

Perhaps, after all, I was to learn something of Furey and Spencer. Who else could have caused such excitement? I was sure that no one else knew me as Norfleet. My determination to get away was given another incentive and I felt that I would soon know my fate.

I took a step toward the door. Steel, who had recovered some of his poise, deliberately stepped aside to block me, moving backward as I moved toward him.

Johnson called across the room to me urging that I get into the game and do a little betting on some of the fast horses. I could see that they were working together to get me at a disadvantage. If Steel could get me in the right position, the caribines would probably get a signal to speak. I was somewhat relieved at the thought that Steel was not armed. It was a business matter, watching all of them and, at the same time, affecting nonchalance.

I couldn't make out the situation. What had the note said, to so suddenly electrify the atmosphere? As far as I knew, not one of the men in the crowd knew my real identity. It seemed most probable that I would not be concerned, but that the crowd was much concerned over my not getting away before I had been rolled for whatever money I might have on me. At first, I had intended that Steel and Johnson should believe that I carried a considerable sum. This was working against me now.

Steel echoed Johnson's invitation for me to get into the game, taking at the same time, another step to block me. Keeping my eye on him, I asked whoever might care to answer.

"What day of the week is this?" One of the wooden images sitting on the bench replied that it was Sunday.

"Sunday!" I exclaimed, regretfully. "Well, that's too bad. Gentlemen, when I was a young man I promised my mother that I would never bet a dollar on the Sabbath. I've always kept my promise. That lets me out today. I'll have to see you all again!"

I evened my distance with Steel so that he was on a lone with me, not in front or behind, but exactly at my side. He instantly edged toward my back. His movement flashed a warning—a recollected warning my wife had given me before I left home: "Don't let them get at your back, Frank! keep your back to the wall and make them fight fair, if you get into a tight!"

I was in a "tight" all right. I realized the old Western policy of acting before the other fellow could get organized would be my best hope now. I recalled that my father had often quoted: "A strong attack is the best defense."

I backed closer to the wall, turning slightly out from Steel, to go around him. He quickly tried to cut me off by getting in behind me. As I cut him off, I said:

"I appreciate you men's hospitality a lot, but I must be leaving." I made a sweeping gesture of adieu with my left hand. My words and the motion brought the room to a tense silence. The clerk at the bulletin board turned, chalk poised in mid-air. The two bench-warmers eyed me threateningly, then glanced at Steel, as if for instruction. The telegraph instrument stopped clicking.

CHENEY NEWS

Special Correspondence.
All is well around Cheney we are having some pretty weather for peanut harvesting and it is greatly appreciated by Cheney people. Peanuts will soon all be dug and we have two thrashers running so we will soon be done with our nut crop.

School started Monday at Cheney with Roy Cypert principal, Miss Connie Parks, intermediate teacher and Miss Bertha Lewis, primary teacher all present and about 45 pupils and a few patrons present. School started off in good shape and looks as if we might have a good school this year at Cheney.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Weeks and two sons of Ranger were visiting at Mr. T. W. Howard's Sunday and while there helped Mr. Howard thrash his peanuts. Mr. T. W. Howard, J. O. Snell and Luther Pirren all thrashed last Sunday. Made good nuts and fine hay.

Carl Climmer of Merriman and family were at Cheney last Sunday.

We are all trying to get through thrashing this week early so we can attend the jubilee at Ranger Friday and Saturday. Eugene Ferrill's baby that's been so low with whooping cough is reported some better just now. Mr. Ferrill has been confined of his time. A bunch of his friends and neighbors turned out Monday and dug and shocked his peanut crop for him, got through before night and did a fine job for which Mr. and Mrs. Ferrill thanks all that were present. This is the spirit of Cheney and Hunter communities.
