

ARMED GUARDS PLACED ON DUTY IN PUEBLO

ELEVEN STATES ARE ENGAGED TODAY IN OFF YEAR ELECTIONS

DOMINATING FACTOR IS PURELY LOCAL

National Interest in Mississippi And New York Only

By United Press. Voters balloted in 11 states today in an off year election distinguished chiefly by the bitterness of the local issues being contested in several districts.

In Mississippi, Theodore Bilbo, running for governor, split with the Ku Klux Klan over his refusal to pledge an anti-Smith delegation to the next democratic national convention.

The volume of the "silent vote" against Bilbo may be taken to indicate in some measure the sentiment against Al Smith in the south.

In New York observers were inclined to believe the democrat's gains or losses in the election of 150 members of the state assembly might indicate the trend of Smith's strength in his own state.

In Pennsylvania, interest in local issues over the state was dominated by the contest by independents against the Mellon organization in Pittsburgh and the Vare organization in Philadelphia, both of which are expected to win.

The whole nation watched Kentucky, where a governor will be elected on the issue of abolishing horse racing.

In Ohio, the Anti-Saloon league question was at stake on the vote of the Marshall bill, which would permit justices of the peace to operate under the fee system.

The other congressional election was in Philadelphia, where James Beck, former solicitor general of the United States, was unopposed for election to the seat once occupied by Senator-elect William S. Vare.

New Jersey voted on a state assembly.

San Francisco voted for mayor. The incumbent, James Rolph, has been mayor for 16 years, and seeks another four-year term.

Rare Settlement Of Wendish People Found in Texas

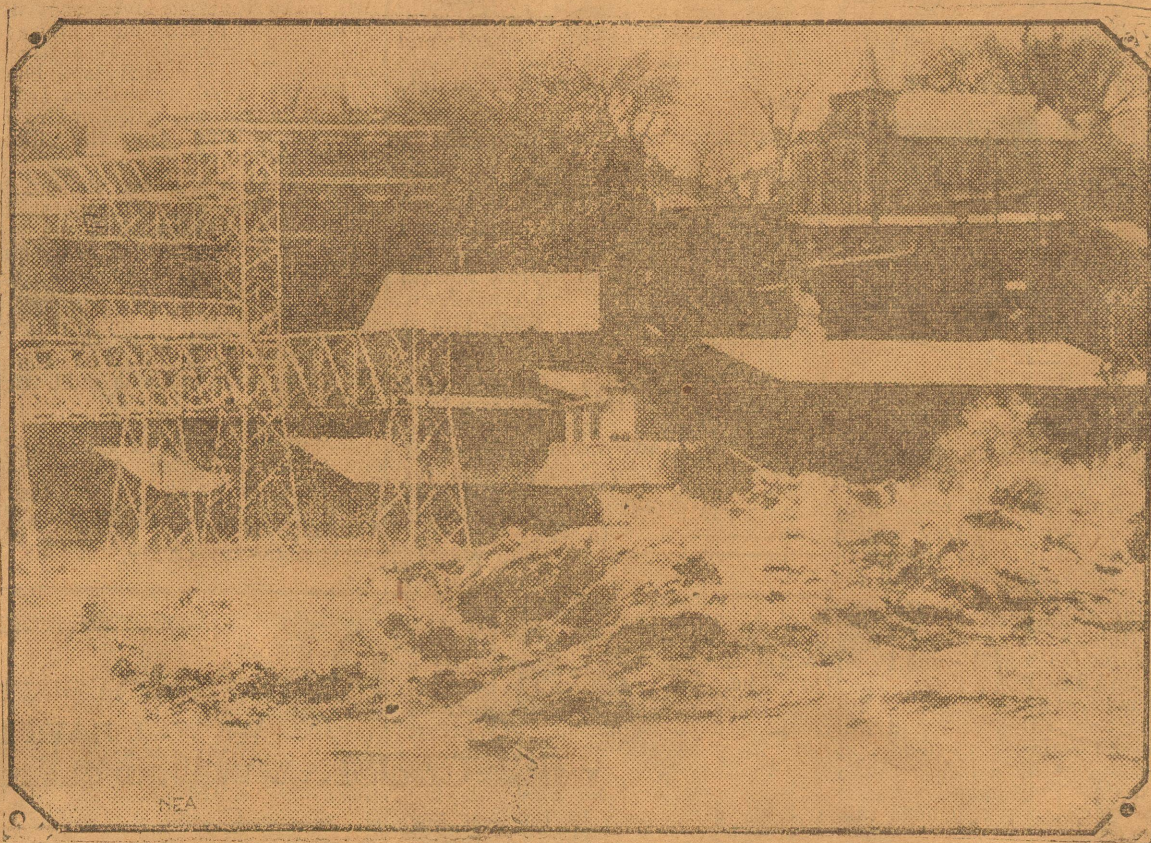

AUSTIN, Nov. 8.—There is in Lee county, Texas, the only settlement of Wendish people to be found outside of Germany, according to G. C. M. Engstrand, associate professor of anthropology in the University of Texas. A history of these Texas people, who, with their ancestors in southern Prussia and northern Saxony, are the last remnant of a race which is near extinction, is to be written sometime during the coming year by Mr. Engstrand.

Students From Many Countries Attend at T. C. U.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 8.—From Egypt from Japan, from Mexico they come to study. This year at Texas Christian University the representatives of three foreign countries are taking undergraduate courses. They are Seddik Wasily Giris of Egypt; Eulalio G. Luna of Mexico and Tadashi Tomimaga of Japan.

These three young men are taking Religious Education under the sponsorship of Britte college of the bible. Giris who comes from the University of Alexandria is studying English and Psychology as well as his religious work. Luna, who comes from Aguascalientes, Mexico, is taking English and French, while Tomimaga, who comes from Tokyo, is studying English.

New England Flood Worst in History

A death list mounting into hundreds, and property damage of many millions were caused by the rampage of New England rivers. Above is pictured the Connecticut river roaring through Bellows Falls, Vermont, where it wrecked industrial plants and inundated parts of the city. It is hammering at the Babbit paper mills here.

NEW ENGLAND BUSY WITH ITS RELIEF WORK

All Flood Danger Passed, Identified Victims of Storm Now Total Eighty-five.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 8.—With all danger definitely passed, relief and rehabilitation work progressed rapidly today in New England. Thousands of homeless, mostly in Vermont, were quartered in churches, halls and other emergency barracks, under the care of soldiers, the Red Cross and volunteers.

Snow storms which yesterday added to suffering had ended and although low temperature made the situation acute at some points, general conditions were reported greatly improved.

Officials directing relief work reported there appeared no danger of pestilence following New England's most disastrous flood.

The list of identified victims had been increased to 85.

Thanksgiving To Be Homecoming At T. C. U. This Year

FORT WORTH, Nov. 8.—Thanksgiving day, which spells to students and ex-students of Texas Christian University the climax of the 1927 football season, will be the clash with Southern Methodist University which will spell also this year T. C. U. homecoming.

Date of the annual homecoming for which several hundred ex-students and alumni of T. C. U. turn to their Alma Mater, has been changed this year to Thanksgiving Day, rather than in June, as has been the custom.

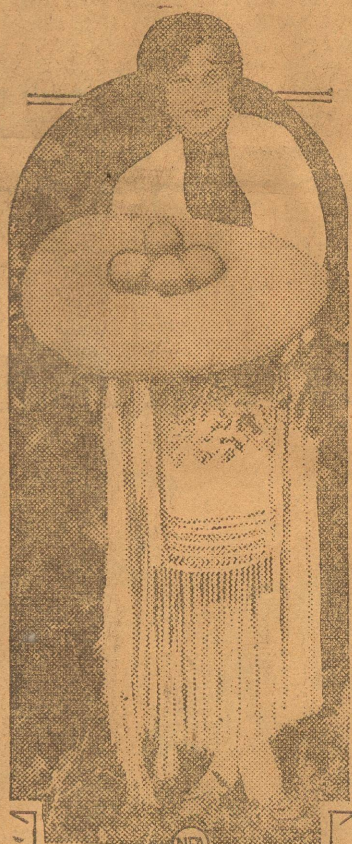

It is expected that the largest group of ex-students and alumni ever to return for a day at T. C. U. will be here Thanksgiving. Mrs. Beulah Bell Shank, general chairman of arrangements for the day, says. The unusual attendance will come as a result of the football game, as well as the fact that the day falls on a statewide holiday, she points out.

The change in date was made because of interest already evidenced by former students of T. C. U. in the climatic football game.

Scientists Work Toward Speeding Growth of Cotton

AUSTIN, Nov. 8.—Dr. H. J. Muller, zoologist at the University of Texas, who recently astonished the scientific world with his discovery that x-ray will speed evolution has been joined by Dr. Frank Hansen, geneticist of Washington University St. Louis, sent by that university to assist in further work.

The immediate investigation will turn to the possible development of a fast growing cotton. If the cotton can be speeded up to develop before the usual period at which it is subjected to boll weevil attacks, the yield can be immeasurably increased.

To devote all time possible to this work, Dr. Muller is being relieved of regular university duties and assigned to the cotton work.

Fall Over Crisis Hopes to Leave Washington Soon

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall successfully passed last night the crisis in a long illness that had kept him in bed since last Thursday.

The 65-year-old defendant in the Teapot Dome conspiracy case was reported still asleep late this forenoon and his condition pointed to a normal recovery enabling him to leave for his New Mexico ranch soon, attendants said.

HEROIC NUNS SAVE LITTLE CHILDREN

Scantly Clad They Carry Small Boys From Burning Building, Freezing Night.

GLADSTONE, N. J., Nov. 8.—Eight heroic nuns, scantily clad, carried 60 small boys into the freezing night, when fire destroyed a dormitory at the Baptist orphanage near here today.

All were saved except three boys who were believed to have died in the flames. Sister St. John was severely burned in the rescue work and collapsed outside the building.

The children between three and six years old were carried half a mile to the main building of the orphanage for shelter.

Fire broke out about 1:30 a. m. in the dormitory, a converted brick stable.

An oil heater was believed to have started the fire. Four nuns, still in their night clothes led the older children out and carried the babies, making trip after trip into the burning building.

All the children's clothing were left behind and they were huddled in the cold under blankets until aid came from the main building. When firemen arrived there was no water and they were unable to save the building. They kept the flames from adjoining structures and away from a thousand gallon tank of fuel oil close to the burning building.

It is reported the automobile in which Lieutenant Theodor was riding contained documents similar to those seized from former Under-secretary of State Manolescu, whose arrest caused the exposure of a plot to place Carol on the throne now occupied by his 6-year-old son, King Michael.

BLAST WRECKS SHOW HOUSE AT HAMMOND, IND.

Police Believe State Theatre Was Bombed, Damage Is Estimated at $2,000,000

HAMMOND, Ind., Nov. 8.—The state theatre was virtually destroyed early today by an explosion which broke the windows for several blocks around and shook nearby residents from their beds. MAMMY KEMP, 101 GIVES TESTIMONY IN LIQUOR CASE

"Mammy" Kemp, aged Cisco negroes, was an interesting witness in a criminal case in the 88th district court in Eastland Monday. More than 101 years old and perhaps the first centenarian to ever testify from an Eastland county witness stand, "Mammy" journeyed to Eastland to testify in behalf of Hester Wilson, Cisco negroes, charged with violating the liquor laws, and her benefactor who had taken her in when she was left alone in the world some months ago when her son, "Daddy" Kemp, himself a very old man, died.

In conversation with W. H. McDonald, defense attorney, "Mammy" said that she did not know in what year she was born, but that she always knew when her birthday came. "I was a slave and I well remember one occasion when a number of us slaves were being auctioned off, a bidder, referring to me, asked, 'How old is that girl?' to which the auctioneer replied, 'She is 12 years old.'"

Although very feeble, "Mammy" readily understood and answered the questions propounded to her by the attorneys. She was asked if the ever drunk beer to which she replied, "Cose I does, when I can get it." As "Mammy" was being assisted from the witness stand County Attorney Sparks asked her if she could see. She replied, "Cose I can see, my legs aint' as good as yours, but I can see all right."

Naval Lieutenant Arrested Charged With Aiding Carol

VIENNA, Nov. 8.—Naval Lieutenant M. Theodoru, arrested at the frontier, was held under close guard today in Boumania, charged with being a courier for former Crown Prince Carol, according to Bucharest dispatches.

It is reported the automobile in which Lieutenant Theodoru was riding contained documents similar to those seized from former Under-secretary of State Manolescu, whose arrest caused the exposure of a plot to place Carol on the throne now occupied by his 6-year-old son, King Michael.

Man Charged With Forgery Is Given 2 Year Sentence

Jack Rose, 46, was found guilty after a plea of guilty on a charge of possessing a forged instrument by a jury in the Eighty-eighth district court today and punishment was assessed at two years confinement in the state penitentiary.

Rose, whom it is alleged passed a check for $236 on the First National bank of Rising Star, asked for a suspended sentence, but the jury did not recommend this in its verdict.

At a former hearing on the case Rose entered a plea of guilty after attorneys had agreed on a verdict of two years in the case. Through a misunderstanding the jury found Rose guilty and assessed punishment at three years. He was given a new trial by the court.

ESTATE TAX SHOULD BE REPEALED

President Coolidge Feels This Should Now Be Left to Various States.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Coolidge favors repeal of the federal estate tax. This was learned at the White House today while the house ways and means committee sought to get facts on alleged lobbying here for the repeal.

The president was reported as feeling that the tax was a good war time source of revenue, but that now it might well be left to the several states to levise if they choose.

Lee Satterwhite, speaker in the Texas legislature told the committee that the association of state legislatures now here supporting the tax repeal move, had developed from the former tax payers league.

His testimony was interspersed with hints from Representative Garner, ranking minority member of the committee that the witness' testimony had been bought.

Bogus Bond Plot Reported, Two Men Are Arrested

PARIS, Nov. 8.—Two men were arrested today after a complaint by the Hungarian minister of a huge plot to forge and market bonds of the former Austro-Hungarian empire.

Barren De Koranyi, the minister, called on foreign minister Aristide Briand and gave information of the plot. Newspapers say that three other arrests will be made.

Eastland County Boy Leaves For Show at Chicago

B. R. Lamance Jr., Eastland county club boy residing at Gorman, who won the trip to the International Livestock show at Kansas City, offered by the M. K. & T. railroad, was in Eastland Monday en route to Gorman where he went to make arrangements to start today for Dallas from which place he will leave Wednesday for Kansas City.

Young Lamance won the prize at the recent farmers' short course at A. & M. college which was offered by the M. K. & T. for highest score in stock judging. The contest was divided in districts of counties touched by the M. K. & T. lines.

Lamance, who is a graduate of the Gorman High school, and at present a freshman in Weatherford college at Weatherford, will be accompanied by five other Texas boys, winners of the contests in other districts of the state, and by County Agent Martin of Hillsboro, Mr. Martin having also been awarded a trip by the M. K. & T. because his club boy made highest score of any in the contest.

County Agent J. C. Patterson of Eastland county is very proud of Lamance's accomplishments. Lamance, he says, is also doing splendid work in school.

AUSTIN, Nov. 8.—The Texas state treasury has cash balances in its various funds totaling $9,856,000, state Treasurer Hatcher reported today. Against this there are outstanding warrants for $3,389,000. The highway fund has over $1,000,000 clear balance.

FEAR MINERS ATTEMPT TO STORM JAIL

Rumors Say Strikers To Make Effort To Free Leaders

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 8.—Rumors that striking miners in Southern Colorado coal fields planned to free 10 I. W. W. leaders from the Pueblo jail caused a force of 50 armed guards to remain on duty early today in case of a surprise attack. When 24 automobile loads of striking miners left Walsenburg early this morning a report spread that they were to meet about 100 more car loads of miners and invade Pueblo to free their leaders.

Sheriff H. G. Tiennes immediately threw a guard of 100 deputies around the jail. They were armed with shot guns, machine guns, rifles, tear bombs, fire hose and side arms.

Our Public Debt Amounts To Over $155 Per Capita

WASHINGTON.—Back in the good old days before the war our national debt was around a billion dollars and we could have paid it off by all chipping in $10 apiece.

The debt is now approximately 18 1/2 billions and the per capita share is more than $155.

But at one time in 1919 the public debt, which had jumped 23 billion dollars in two years, was $26,596,701,000 and when that fiscal year closed, the per capita debt was more than $230.

Treasury experts estimate that, barring emergencies or important depressions, the debt can be paid off in a little more than 30 years at the present rate.

At one time, in 1920, the interest on the debt amounted to more than $1,000,000 a year—about a third of the federal expense. Last year it was only $785,000,000. Next year (the fiscal year ended June 30, 1928) it is hoped to get this figure down by 50 million dollars or more.

A rough estimate indicates that in addition to the $25,000,000,000 debt we will also have paid something like $30,000,000,000 in interest when it is all over. That estimate is little better than a guess, however, as the figure is impossible to compute.

These figures are of special interest at this time because there will be some argument in the next congress as to whether some of the treasury's surplus for 1927-28, which Secretary Mellon estimates at $455,000,000, should not be applied to the debt instead of to tax reduction.

One objection to the $400,000,000 or $500,000,000 tax reduction demanded by democrats and business men is that it is likely to result in a treasury deficit because the out will be applied to next year's receipts. The surplus is diminishing because it has been created only by what the treasury calls "non-current and fast vanishing items" such as back payments. Mellon estimates next year's surplus at $275,000,000.

The answer of those who would again use the surplus to help wipe out the debt is that debt reduction is itself tax reduction because it reduces the enormous interest burden now carried by the country. The treasury says that we are paying $65,000,000 less interest this year than last, largely because the debt was reduced by $1,131,309,000.

The 1926 reduction was $872,977,000, which resulted in a saving of more than $36,000,000.

In 1926 a surplus of $377,767,000 was applied to the debt. Last year, when congress again failed to effect tax reduction, the surplus applied to the debt was $695,809,000.

"To the extent that we are able to reduce our public debt and eliminate the vast charges of interest thereon, we are lightening the burden of the people of our country," says President Coolidge.

Perhaps half the saving on interest last year was due to the treasury's refunding operations. The average rate of interest on our interest-bearing indebtedness was brought down from 4.09 per cent in 1925-26 to 3.96 per cent.

Most of the debt is represented by the five Liberty loans, the retirement dates of which were, in order, 1947, 1942, 1928, 1938 and 1923. Those loans raised $21,433,000,000.

Gripings

By GUS

We got plenty of gripe about today, but it wouldn't do to print. Besides that we haven't had a chance to talk to Pat the last few days and get his ideas on a few things we would like to discuss.

The Spirit of Ranger has been quite contrary the last day or so. In fact it has now become necessary to crank it every time you want to start it, and we're just about as soon walk.

Now that the melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year, and all that; and the grass and weeds will be about five months getting started we are thinking of getting a location downstairs. If the landlady reads this it's no fair. She can't afford to kick us out—we're too far behind.

Did you all see that huge pistol that the Legion boys got yesterday? It's pretty badly rusted, but it can be cleaned up and painted and will make a mighty nice decoration for our flag pole if they will leave it out there at the foot of it.

The call for volunteer to climb the flag pole and put the rope through the pulley has not met with the usual success. It does look like somebody would want the publicity had enough to want to do that.

A guy over in Dallas set on top of a flag pole on the Hilton hotel for two or three days. In fact, he sat there until they chunked him down. Did he get his name in the paper? The reporter spelled it wrong then.

The rubbins played the Junior college team a scrimmage yesterday. The college won by four touchdowns. But they should have done that. And more.

TREASURY OFFICIALS URGING MELLON PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—America would face an unbalanced budget in 1928 if congress cut federal taxes more than $255,000,000 this year, high treasury officials declared today.

In submitting the administration's program for a $225,000,000 reduction recently, Secretary Mellon allowed only a $50,000 margin on the government's turnover of $4,000,000,000, it was explained.

Nothing more than routine matters were discussed at the regular meeting of the Eastland city council Monday night, according to City Manager J. H. Cheatham.

Urges Five-Year Marriage Term

Judge Charles Burnell of the superior court of Los Angeles proposes that marriage be authorized for five-year periods with option of renewal. Judge Burnell says his plan is merely to legalize current marriage customs, asserting that 75 to 80 per cent of divorces are obtained by agreement of husband and wife, although the law forbids such an agreement.

Line Men Never Get Credit For Their Playing

By BILLY EVANS.
The football public never gives the forwards the proper credit simply because its entire attention is always centered on the man with the ball.

Last season Mike Wilson, Lafayette's great halfback, was the leading scorer in the east. This year Mike is among the also-rans.

Mike Wilson of this year is just as good a football player as he was in 1926. The answer to his failure to run wild as he did last season is due to the difference in the calibre of the teams.

Lafayette of last year was undefeated, one of the very best football teams in the country. This year it has been tied by West Virginia, trounced 14-0 by Washington and Jefferson and simply slaughtered by Penn State, 40-0.

The failure of the line to hold, the lack of interference and the absence of a good blocking back, explains the failure of Mike Wilson to shine and Lafayette to win.

Watch the men in the line during the progress of some important game, rather than the man with the ball, and you will have a greater appreciation of the worth of the forwards.

Few Extra Points Made.
For years the point after touchdown has been a source of much dispute. Annually there is a movement started to abolish it but it always bobs up in some form or other.

This year, the rule-makers decided to move the goal posts 10 yards farther back, hoping to make goals from the field as well as any attempt to score the point after touchdown by kicking, all the more difficult.

In that respect it has succeeded, for, as I look over my football statistics, I find that goals from the field have been cut down about two-thirds. In addition, failure to score a point after touchdown via the place or drop-kick has been the deciding factor in a number of important games.

Yet there is a wide difference of opinion among the leading coaches as to whether the moving back of the goal posts has helped or handicapped.

A perusal of the results of the games that have already been played show that failure of the kicker has cost a number of big battles.

Yale beat the Army 10-6. Yale's point after touchdown and the Army's failure, really decided the game, the three points scored by the field goal were unnecessary.

In Big Ten circles, Purdue and Northwestern suffered defeats by a one-point margin. Chicago won from the former, Illinois from the latter by 7-6 scores.

Brown lost its fourth straight to Lebanon Valley, 13-12, the biggest upset of the year, due to missing both points after touchdown.

Other games in which the value of the kick figured prominently were Missouri's 7-6 win over Nebraska, Kansas' victory over Drake by the same score, and triumph of Louisiana State over the Mississippi Aggies, 9-7.

All indications point to the point after touchdown getting the usual once over when the coaches meet this winter.

LOBOS COMING TO RANGER TO GET REVENGE

Their Ambition Is To Humiliate Last Year's Oil Belt Champions.

By GUS COLEMAN
The Cisco Lobos, still sore at heart from the sting of their two defeats last year by the West Texas Champion Bulldogs, will come over to Ranger on Armistice Day with a firm determination to pile up enough score to wreak vengeance in full for their last year's loss.

They will come here, first to defeat the Bulldogs, and after they have done that they will want to go the limit and humiliate them. They have won most of their games by overwhelming scores this year and will want to make their record good and beat the Bulldogs by a larger score, if possible, than they have been able to pile up against any opponent this year.

Little do they care if this year's Bulldogs had never seen a football before—all the better for them. It would be a great feather in their cap if they could say they had beaten the 1926 district champions by a larger score than they beat Roby or Gorman or Mineral Wells. They will use every ounce of strength and every play at their command in order to even up the humiliation suffered by them last year when their Lobos went down in defeat twice before the Bulldogs.

Lobos Make Showing.
Their showing against the same teams this year has been much more imposing than that of the Bulldogs. They took Mineral Wells down the line for 68 to 0 and have defeated San Angelo conclusively while the Bulldogs won by the narrow margin of a point added after a touchdown. Hammett's too did the work and it was one of the very few extra points made this year.

The only possible hope for the Bulldogs to hold the score down is in playing football about 60 percent better than their normal ability. If they can do that, it is possible for them to hold the Lobos and if they should get a break in addition it is possible for them to win.

Seventy percent of their playing must go into their defensive, particularly in breaking up passes. They will have to prove to be veritable mind readers and know in advance where the ball is going and have a man there ready to break it up. This will take greater concentration of mind and co-ordination of effort than they have shown this year.

The other 30 percent must go into offensive work. Every man carrying out his assignment to the last letter, ever keeping in mind the fundamentals of blocking, tackling and running interference.

Ranger Has Chance.
There's no question about the fellows' nerve and fight. This has been commented upon by some of the foremost sport writers in the country. Their weakness lies in lack of experience. The overcoming of that weakness is wherein their success or failure with the Lobos lies.

Cisco had only two letter men left from last year. True enough, they have gained an experienced man or so from the forks of the creek. But none of them can make the claim to being old and wrinkled and grey haired, battle scarred veterans. If these Ranger Bulldogs can just force themselves to keep their minds on the task in hand and every man carry out his own respective assignment, they have a fighting chance of beating the famous Cisco Lobos, who, it looks like, will have to battle with Abilene for the district championship.

The Lobos will be vicious. The Bulldogs may as well expect that from the start, and when the play starts the Lobos will put every ounce of strength into every play from start to finish. There's not much danger of their loafing the first quarter, because they know that if they do and give the Bulldogs any show of weakness their name is mud with a capital M.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago cited one of those British history books they've been using in Chicago, in which George Washington was called a rebel. Well, you certainly can't say George was a Tory.

We, The People of The U. S. Not So Dumb After All

RODNEY DUTCHER,
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON.—One often hears that we, the people of the United States, are a dumb lot, incompetent to govern ourselves and hence allowing ourselves to be governed by an assortment of grafters, four-flushers and plutocrats.

The fact seems to be, however, that when we get our hooks into an opportunity for more direct self-government, we generally hang on despite all efforts to loosen our grip. As voters, we may make mistakes, but when we know what we want we get it to the extent permitted us.

These references, of course, are principally to the initiative and referendum system and the direct primary.

Thirty-eight states nominate national or state candidates, or both, by the primary system. Since 1924, Montana and North Carolina have abandoned the presidential primary and Vermont, Iowa and Minnesota had discarded it previously. Courts have acted against the primary laws in Alabama and Texas. But not one of the 38 states has thrown the primary overboard as a whole and it is becoming more and more popular despite the means of professional politicians.

Similarly, 18 states have the initiative and referendum in practical operation and none of them has abandoned it.

The primary allows the voters to choose party candidates instead of being forced to elect hand-picked men and the initiative and referendum allows them to initiate legislation which may be denied by an incompetent or corrupt legislature or to repeal legislation already passed.

Both systems, in operation for years, have shown weaknesses. They are susceptible even to corruption, but not dangerously so. They are sometimes influenced by heavily financed propaganda, especially if there is no effective altruistic mouthpiece to reach the voters. But both leave the decision with the voters and not with a small group of politicians.

The primary has taken a seemingly more important part in the national scene than the I. & R., but it seems safe to predict that the latter eventually will become a much greater influence. Referendums are held on issues. Elections center on men. Today there seem to be no real partisan issues between the two big national parties and the same condition is often reflected in the states.

Such issues as are mixed up in election campaigns only serve to complicate them to the end that it is often difficult to tell which issues the voters repudiated or endorsed, regardless of who was elected. Then, again, many of the important issues are straddled because of their tendency to split parties—prohibition being a classic example, of course. It does seem likely that the people will decide more and more of these issues for themselves at the ballot box, instead of being forced to choose from two hodge-podge conglomerations of issues between insincere candidates.

Voters in 36 states voted directly on 194 measures last year, two-thirds of them proposals to amend state constitutions. Judson King, director of the National Popular Government league, who wrote many of the state I. & R. laws, says that of the measures voted on during 1926 in I. & R. states:

"Thirty-six related to changes in the structure of government or the administration of government, or the processes of political action; 20 had to do with changes in the taxation system or the rate and methods of taxation; four related to public ownership or regulation of public utilities; 10 dealt with education, including both the universities and public school systems; six were anti-prohibition; four were concerned with farm and labor legislation."

National Pecan Growers Hold Meet in San Saba

By United Press.
 SAN SABA, Nov. 8.—The pecan was lifted from the position of one of the nuts here today to the classification of one of the south's agricultural industries.
 Dozens of exhibits at the first national pecan show, which opened today, testified to the development of the pecan from a small, hard-shelled nut into the large, meaty paper-shelled specimen that brings high prices on the market at present. The exhibits were shown in competition for $1,000 in prizes and came from all the states of the union where pecans are grown.
 The National Pecan Growers exchange, a co-operative marketing organization, chose this city for the first show inasmuch as San Saba county is the center of the greatest native pecan producing section in the United States.
 "Until recent years, the pecan industry of Texas was based on wild seedling pecans," said Dean E. J. Kyle of Texas A. & M. college, president of the show, in a speech at the opening of the two-day show today. "Recent years have witnessed the expansion of the industry until standard varieties of pecans are now produced in commercial quantities in all the southern states."
 The second coronation of Pecan, king of the nuts, will be crowned this afternoon as a feature of the show. A huge pecan, five feet tall and made of wood, placed on a throne, will be crowned by Dean Kyle. The crowning ceremony followed a parade in which all neighboring cities will participate with bands and floats.

Eastland Rotary To Hold Meetings At Country Club

Due to the fact that the Elks club building is to be remodeled, the Eastland Rotary club, which holds its meetings and luncheons in the building, will, beginning with the meeting next Monday at noon, meet until further notice at the Eastland country club, one mile north of the city. This was determined at the meeting of the club Monday.
 James A. Beard, chairman of the committee in charge of Monday's program, asked that his program be dispensed with and the same committee be directed to arrange a program for next week's meeting, which was done.
 L. Farg, chairman of a committee from the Rotary club to assist in securing uniforms for the Eastland band, gave a report. He stated that fifty-three uniforms were being purchased for the band.
 At the suggestion of Rotarian "Jinks" Garrett, president Joe Weaver appointed a committee composed of Walter Clark, Harold Smith and "Jinks" Garrett to work out some plans for putting up signs at the four corners of the public square for directing people out of the city. The same committee was also instructed to take up the matter of marking and placing stop signals on the blind streets about the square and other places to assist in avoiding accidents.
 The program committee for next Monday is composed of James A. Beard, Paul Brown, Grady Pipkin and Curtis Hertig.

Ranger Man Buys Houses From The T. & P. Railroad

Mr. A. E. Duncan, Ranger and the Texas and Pacific Railroad company closed a deal today whereby Mr. Duncan becomes the owner of the eight houses belonging to the railroad company and located two blocks east of the present depot.

Mr. Duncan, who has been dealing in Ranger real estate quite extensively, will move a portion of the houses to Pine street where he has property and will make rent houses out of them. Mr. Duncan said this morning that in all probability he would re-see the houses that were not moved to other property.

The houses are large and well constructed and were built by the railroad to care for their employees. The amount paid for the houses was not made public.

Ranger Officers Make Number Of Arrests Monday

Ranger police were big winners Monday night when they interrupted a fast moving crap game and caught five of the offenders. The followers of the cubes paid fines in the amount of $20.75 each and were released. It was a mixed crowd of negroes and whites.

A Mexican who seemingly forgot to remember the exact way to drive on Main street, Ranger, was fined $11.70 for reckless driving Monday night. The Mexican ran into a car at the corner of Main and Austin streets and after considerable argument paid the fine and was released.

The police picked up a boy who had escaped from the hand of the law about a month ago and placed him in jail. The boy was working out his fine by cutting weeds during the summer but he seemingly grew tired of the work and dropped his hoe and departed. He was placed in jail last night and will have to serve 70 days in jail unless he again takes up the weed chopping.

THREE ARMISTICE DAY FOOTBALL GAMES IN OIL BELT DISTRICT

RANGER/CISCO TILT PROMISES TO BE FIERCE

If Dope Is Right Abilene And Eastland Should Have Easy Sailing.

By BOBBY CAMPBELL.
Armistice day will see three of the stronger teams in the district in action with the three combatants for the cellar position. Abilene tackles the Buckaroos at Breckenridge, Cisco will have its annual grudge battle with Ranger in Ranger, and the Eastland Mavericks will play San Angelo at San Angelo.

Probably the hardest fought of the three games will be the Ranger-Cisco fray where both sides will be out to draw blood. Cisco is favored to win the game but the Bulldogs will be fighting harder for that game than they have all the other games together. As a matter of fact it seems as if everyone had rather see the Lobos jerked down the ladder than any other team and Ranger is going to be doing everything in its power to beat the Lobos. The chances are against them and they will be stacking up against overwhelming odds but they will stack up against them with a determination to knock Cisco from her throne.

The game at Breckenridge should be easy for the Eagles. The Lobos piled up enough points on the Buckaroos to call for an auditor to look over the score, and Abilene is at present being rated just a little over the Lobos.

Mavericks to San Angelo.
Coach Pena will take his crippled crew to San Angelo to meet the Bobcats who haven't been able to get going so far. The Mavericks looked like they had been through the civil war, after the game with Abilene. They showed signs of hard battling in the form of wrenched shoulders, broken toes, broken fingers and a removal of the top surface of skin from the faces. However, none of the injuries to the Mavericks are serious and they will all be in shape for the game with San Angelo. Cisco and Abilene are leading the race with undefeated teams. Cisco has put the skids under Breckenridge and San Angelo in their two conference games. Abilene helped shove Ranger down and then mounted the shoulders of the Mavericks and again applied the force. They have been scored on only once this season, Eastland turning the trick last week when she got a safety.

Should the Breckenridge-Eastland game be awarded to Eastland on the 20-yard line ruling it places the Mavericks in third place. In their three conference games the Mavericks have beat Ranger, tied with Breckenridge 0 to 0 and went down in defeat at the hands of the Abilene Eagles. However, if the tie game is given to the Mavericks it will show a two won and a one loss for the Eastland squad.

Ranger has won one and lost two of her conference games. Eastland was the first to knock the hopes of the Bulldogs and they were followed close by the Eagles. Last week the Bulldogs beat the Bobcats from San Angelo to the tune of 7 to 6.

Eagles Look Good.

Breckenridge has also one game to its credit. The Buckaroos beat the San Angelo Bobcats, lost to Cisco by an overwhelming score and tied with Eastland, but stands a chance of losing the benefit of the tie game to Eastland. San Angelo brings up the rear with nothing. They went down under the drive of Breckenridge, went farther down when they met Cisco and didn't help themselves any when the Ranger Bulldogs journeyed their way.

The way things look now it is going to be between Cisco and Abilene for the honors. However, the Mavericks are holding on by a thread, a mighty weak thread it is true, but nevertheless a thread. Should the Mavericks by chance knock the Lobos over, or should Ranger by chance get a win over the Lobos it would place the Lobos and the Mavericks at the same rating. Then should the Abilene Eagles fail to get going against the Lobos and lose, it would throw the three teams in a tie for the district championship.

However, it is not expected that the Bulldogs or the Mavericks will be able to stop the Lobos unless something awfully unexpected happens. The game that will probably decide the championship holders will be the Abilene-Cisco game and from the standpoint of football that should be the best game in West Texas.

It will be Keys against Walters, Little against Sellers, Pippen against Smith and B. Pippen against Siskeld. When that combination gets together on the same field there won't be any mammoth score stacked up. That is unless the Lobos have been very much overrated. It is impossible to overrate the Eagles, because they are everything that is claimed for them. They indeed have a sure enough football team and it is going to make a name for itself or dope is all wrong.

The laurel wreath as a symbol of personal victory is derived from the Greeks who crowned victors in the Pythian games with it, according to an answered question in this week's Liberty.

This Suggestion Promises To Get Little Support

Yale has suggested that the colleges of our country return to unpaid football coaches.

It is a nice thought, savors of the old college spirit, but there isn't a chance in the world that the suggested reform will make any noticeable headway.

Twenty years ago certain colleges were fairly successful using the unpaid coaching system which thrust the responsibility on the loyalty of the alumni and also makes a hole in the bank roll of the old grads.

The coming of the new concrete stadiums, seating from 50,000 to 100,000 sounded the death knell of this system of unpaid coaches. Too much is now demanded of the modern football coach, artistically and financially, to ask mere loyalty to carry the burden.

College football has developed into big business. It needs one man control to be successful. With unpaid coaches there is always a difference of opinion that plays havoc with results.

Coaches Earn Salaries.
Keute Rockne, famous Notre-Dame coach, is a wise king about more things than football. He is a good business man always.

It seemed to me that his answer to a query as to what he thought of unpaid football coaches was full of logic, and typically Rockne.

"When the colleges have a free gate to the football games, then I will be more than willing to donate my services as coach," he said.

"Just so long as the colleges charge an admission, I feel the man or men who set the stage for the football games, the coaches, should be compensated, and rather generously."

I like Rockne's wisdom. He spoke more than a mouthful of common sense. The football coach has a tough job and earns every cent he gets, for he must deliver.

Rockne has the right dope. No college should ask a coach to work for nothing unless the gate is free—and why not the refreshments also including the hot dogs?

Grange Was Criticized.
This matter of taking money for your services and thereby joining the professional class often produces unusual situations.

Several years ago, when professional football began to lure college stars away from the strictly amateur class, there was much ballyhoo about lack of loyalty to one's alma mater.

When the much advertised "Red" Grange joined the pro class, he was widely criticized for his act in certain quarters, one or two holier-than-thou coaches firing a number of broadsides at him.

"I helped make several hundred thousand dollars for Illinois and received nothing in return, so why shouldn't I have the right to capitalize my athletic assets after I have finished my college career?" was Grange's answer.

So He Kept Quiet.
In this connection, when the subject of pro football was being discussed at the annual meeting of the football coaches, one certain coach, after attacking the professional player in the strongest terms, had the wind taken out of his sails when a far more broad-minded mentor said: "If there was ever a professional you're one. Tell me any single instance where you have passed up a chance to make money by capitalizing on your football prestige."

Since the coach in question is one of the highest priced mentors in the game, his argument against professional football lost much of its conviction.

Unpaid football coaches would have to be men of wealth in order to give up so much time to their work and there are not enough to go round.

EL PASO.—Police here are seeking two gypsy maidens, "charm workers" who fleeced a young foreigner out of $1,000 with one of the oldest "son" games.

The youth came here from New Jersey after arriving in America from abroad. He had $1,000 and a paralyzed arm.

The girls offered to cure the arm for him. Their "cure" included taking his money and sewing it in the lining of his coat. Three days later he was to remove the money. The secret pocket contained, however, only some paper and stage money.

The pigeon-blood ruby is the most valuable of gems, according to an answered question in this week's Liberty.

The world's record for throwing a baseball is 381 feet and 2 1-2 inches, held by R. C. Campbell of North Adams, Mass., according to an answered question in this week's Liberty.

The orange, lemon, and grapefruit are not native American fruits, having been introduced into California and Florida by the Spaniards, according to an answered question in this week's Liberty.

AMBITIOUS PROGRAM.

The laundrymen of this country have adopted one of the most ambitious business programs of modern day business. The remarkable thing about this program is the size of its advertising budget.

During the next six years the laundrymen of the United States are going to spend $24,000,000, or $4,000,000,000 annually in telling the people about their business.

It is needless to say that nearly all this vast advertising budget will be spent in general advertising, or foundation advertising. Only a small percentage of it will be spent for individual advertising.

Correspondent Didn't Follow Tip, Lost Out

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON—A few nights ago the National Press club held a meeting to vote on its new constitution. A newspaper correspondent was called out of the meeting to answer a telephone call.

The voice on the other end of the wire was of such quality that the correspondent thought a drunken man must be talking to him.

It advised him that he and the mysterious caller were not known to each other, but that the correspondent was known to the latter by reputation.

According to the correspondent, the other man talked vaguely and not very coherently.

The other man said he had something to tell about the "Sinclair trial." But he was so mysterious and ambiguous that the reporter became impatient, after vainly trying to learn what it was all about.

Finally, he hung up, asking the mysterious stranger to come to his office and see him.

That correspondent has been kicking himself ever since.

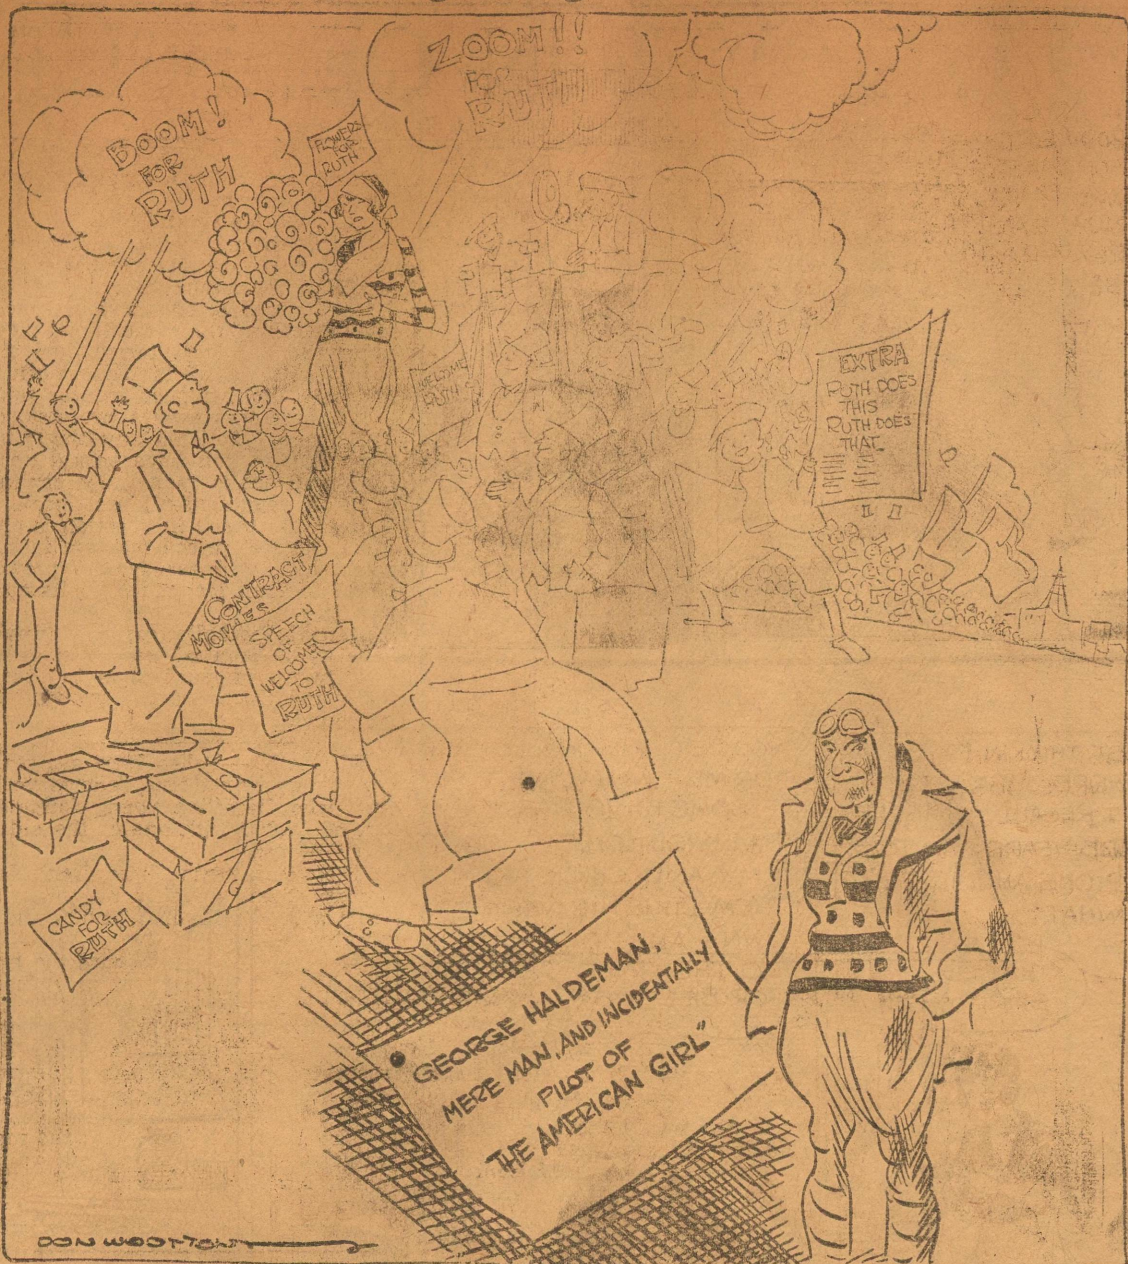

Later that evening, a desk man on a Washington paper received a telephone call from one J. Ray Akers, a street car conductor, who asked whether the newspaper was interested in "a new lead" on the Fall-Sinclair trial.

There was considerable hesitation and hemming and hawing before Mr. Akers, according to subsequent affidavits, added that there would be a "hang jury" and that he had been so informed by Edward J. Kidwell, one of the jurors.

The newspaperman succeeded in making an appointment with Akers. According to subsequent affidavits, they went to a barroom on Southwest 4 1-2 street, where Kidwell indulged in indiscreet conversation about the possibilities of reward in case Sinclair and Fall were acquitted.

The newspaper which Akers had interested in the story subsequently put over a tremendous "scoop" when it announced three days later that the government would ask that a mistrial be declared and that the evidence was such that the mistrial would be granted.

CHARM CHATS
 with Mrs. Janette Soree

There was a time when the masculine gender frowned upon talcum as effeminate. Not so long ago, it was a hideous crime for the male animal to submit to any other odor than bay rum. To accuse a man of using a powder puff was to pin skirts on him! He would as soon have put axle grease on his face as cold cream.

But, listen! The druggists are selling cleansing and soothing creams to day to men who have learned that too much pride is discouraged by sunburn and windchop. They are selling special powders to men who wish to allay after-shaving irritation. And toilet water is now as often found on the shaving stand as on the female dressing table.

You can open your husband's eyes to the comforts and joys of the dainty and medicinal aids to your toilette. Here are some of the wifely kindnesses you can do him. When he comes to the drying wind and hot sun of the first warm days, offer him your cream to cleanse his face. Tell him to keep soap and water away from it for the once, and he will quickly learn the lesson. If his lips are dried and chapped from exposure, teach him to protect and soften them with white pomade or heavy cream. After shaving, let him sample some of the daintiness of your toilet water.

And here's a worth-while secret: get him to dust a little of your face powder on his neck, right where the top of his collar rubs the closely cropped hair. He will be delighted to learn that your powder doesn't rub off so quickly as plain talcum, that it remains to protect and heal. You will find that after a while he will own a powder puff also, and will have purchased a similar powder especially packed in a can for masculine use.

Then, too, if he comes in on a hot day from hard work or exercise, add a few drops of perfume or some bath salts in his before-dinner bath. He may grunt and protest, but he will finally admit the real refreshment in his pleasant touch of fragrance. It isn't hard to teach men that your aids to beauty and toilette now are something more than paint and kalverine, that they have honest value in healing, protecting and comforting!

MEN ADMIRE HEALTHY AND ACTIVE WOMEN

It is not only beauty of face and form that men admire in women; very often it is the youthful energy and radiant health that enables them to be joyfully active.

Men admire women who take an enthusiastic part in the activities of modern life; and women who possess the necessary health and strength for such activity invariably win and hold the admiration of their family and friends.

If you are leading a monotonous, shut-in existence because of that "tired-feeling," due to physical neglect, why not start taking a good tonic? Thousands of women who were run-down, weakened and discouraged have gratefully testified to the help they have received from St. Joseph's G.F.P.

This rich, vegetable tonic contains Nature's own medicines in the form of roots and herbs which have been used for over a century to invigorate and strengthen women.

NORFLEET
The Manhunter's Own True Story
As told to Gordon Hines

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher is swindled out of $45,000 by a gang, headed by Joe Furey and he resolves to break up the ring. Various vague clues lead him on exciting chases back and forth across the continent. He located Furey's home in Glendale. Hearing that Furey is soon to be home, he stations two officers to watch the place. After some time he gets a tip that Furey has gone to Florida, and picking up his young son at the ranch, he follows to Jacksonville where they find Furey in a restaurant. After a bloody fight they capture their man and to avoid local complications start to drive to the Georgia line. A deputy sheriff suggests that they stop at a flag station a few miles away and flag a limited train. Furey begs for a chance to reimburse Norfleet and gives Norfleet's son a note to the secretary of the fake exchange in Jacksonville, ordering him to pay the young man $20,000 "on account." Pete returns to Jacksonville and Norfleet and Furey wait in the woods near the flag station. Furey confesses that the two Los Angeles officers captured him at his home in Glendale and he bought his freedom for $20,000. As they talk there is a rustle in the brush nearby and Norfleet discovers several men with sawed-off shot guns, evidently sent to the spot by the deputy in an effort to release Furey. Norfleet plants a gun at Furey's head and the man screams frantically for the men not to start anything and to go back. After the exciting time in the woods, Pete returns and they go over to the flag station where they learn that the Limited will not stop.

CHAPTER 34 "Pardner, my son and I are officers from Texas. The man in the car is our prisoner. We've gone through hell to get him. A Jacksonville deputy advised us to come out here to catch the train. See those seven men down the road there—the fellows with the riot guns? Well, they followed us out here to take our man away from us. That Jacksonville deputy was the only man in the town who knew where we were coming. "We're going to hold our prisoner now if you have to shoot a path down the road. If anything happens to us, I want you to inform the governor of Florida." The man wished us well and I got into the car. The chauffeur said we could get another train out of Jacksonville if we hurried. I tried to get him to take us across the Georgia line but he declared the road was impassable, so we circled and started back to Jacksonville. The gunmen had got into their cars, three in one and four in the other. Their automobiles were headed toward Jacksonville, but they sat there, one car to each side of the road, where we must pass directly between them. We gripped our guns, the coon stepped on the gas and we dashed between the cars. They immediately took in after us and a race was on. "How fast can this bus go?" I asked. "I doan know, sub, boss man. But this sho' is a good time to 'fin' out!" The Cadillac seemed to leap forward. I looked back and the two pursuing cars were rocking with speed. We were gaining on them. I glanced at the speedometer. Seventy-eight! I dreaded to think what might happen if we struck a rut. Another mile or so elapsed by what seemed a blur. Suddenly we were outdistancing the other cars and I settled down in my seat feeling much more at ease than I had during the last few hours. It was fine to be able to relax and rest for a few minutes. My head dropped and I must have nodded sleepily for a moment, but I came to with a start when I felt the car lurch and saw Furey's great paw on the wheel. He had jumped up quickly and lunged over the front seat, grasping the steering wheel with his manacled hands. With a mighty yank he plunged the roaring car into the woods to the right of the pike. By this time, Pete was in action and he crashed the barrel of his gun into Furey's head and he fell in a limp heap in the tonneau of the car. The negro chauffeur was making a desperate effort to keep the car on its wheels, dodging stumps and brush piles, with the car still going at a terrific speed. One big stump loomed up just ahead and it seemed that we must strike it. The coon gave the wheel a mighty jerk to the left, the car struck a rut which threw the front wheels into the air, it came down and, with its wheels twisted, it veered wickedly, its two left wheels in the air, threatening a mean spill. The husky coon's quick thinking was a credit to him. He threw his weight toward the rear side, gave the wheel a straightening twist and the car settled. Then, by adroit dodging, we crashed through small brush to the road again and the driver stepped on the gas. We were again speeding down the smoky highway and I glanced backward. The pursuing cars had gained some ground during the short interval of our wild detour, but we were now leaping ahead and each instant lengthened the distance between us. Furey lay a limp, helpless bulky mass in the bottom of the car and Pete was trying to shake him into consciousness. We reached Jacksonville without further difficulty. The coon took charge of the suitcases, Pete stayed close by Furey's side and I rushed to buy a drawing-room on the New Orleans train.

which was due to leave within five minutes. We barely reached the train and shoved Furey aboard as it began moving.

In the drawing room, I drew a long sigh of relief and sank into the soft cushions to enjoy the first respite of many weary hours. I felt so contented, so entirely satisfied that we were now safe that I had great difficulty in keeping my mind alert and my eyes open. Pete settled Furey as comfortably as possible and it was here that he told me of his experience when he had gone back to Jacksonville to look for Furey's men at the Mason Hotel.

When he reached that part of his story where he told of how the men had slipped away, one by one, Furey cursed vehemently, charging his pistol and firing with having double crossed him. He paced back and forth, wringing his hands. We watched him closely. The hand-wringing gestures were largely affected and we could see that he was maneuvering to get the chain which bound his wrists into a twist so that he might snap it with a quick jerk.

"Dad, don't you think we'd better put an extra pair of bracelets on him?" Pete suggested.

"I nodded that we should and started to open a grip to get the handcuffs and forth with my warty hand a trapped animal. It occurred to me that we should chain him to the arm of a seat, but I felt that he was under as great a strain as we were and I did not want to deprive him of the bit of exercise he might get pacing back and forth in the small room.

As I started to pick up the extra bracelets, Furey sidestepped through the door which led into the aisle of the car and cried out in a whining voice:

"Women! Men! Oh, my God! Help me!" he begged, his voice trembling in agony.

I watched his face distort and twitch and I would have been moved to compassion myself had I not known that the man was pretending. Every person in the car had looked up.

"Why don't you help me? These men have abused me! I am suffering. They are starving me. For God's sake help a dying man!"

His voice rose dramatically and broke into a splendid sob of appeal. I had to admire his acting ability. "Two old ladies ran to his side, showering him with questions which he answered in a pitiful voice. I glanced down the aisle of the car and saw my old friend, Mrs. Streeter, seated at the rear. Another queer coincidence. It also seemed strange that the two old ladies ran to his side, sympathizing upon Furey's case, dear, sympathetic soul. Perhaps she had her order, for she did not look up and I did not feel, at the moment, like rushing to greet her. I was beginning to be suspicious of her.

"Oh, you poor man!" cried the female Samaritans, as they gazed at Furey's hands with motherly care and shot contemptuous glances at Pete and me. It made Pete angry to see such sweet sympathy misapplied and he gave the prisoner a jerk which landed him in a seat within the room. Then he sat beside him, next to the door. I stood in the doorway, holding back the women who would have rushed inside to smother Furey with their well-meant attentions.

The news-butcher came through with a basket which was heaped with fruit and the sympathizers besieged him. Furey sat back from the door and the women could not reach him, so they began piling fruit into my hands until it was necessary for me to hold my arms tight together to keep the heap from scattering over the floor of the car. All the time they kept up a barrage of rebukes to Pete and myself for our inhuman treatment of the man. I stood, my hands filled with fruit, rather nonplused by the scathing remarks of the women. I could never contend with an indignant woman. Pete looked up at me and smirked; the sentimental glare of the women amused him and he was enjoying the humor of the situation. I must have looked rather funny, now that I think of it. We allowed our attentions to be drawn to the sympathizers when we were suddenly jolted back by a crash of glass. I looked around quickly and saw Furey's feet disappearing through the shattered pane. I dropped the fruit and it rolled in all directions. Women screamed and I reached the window barely in time to throw my gun to Pete who had dived through the jagged hole after our ex-prisoner.

The conductor pulled the bellcord and the train jolted to a sudden stop. I sped through the rear Pullmans and leaped from the platform of the last one. A porter threw our cases off after me and the train puffed away. We had rounded a curve and I could see neither Pete nor Furey. I stacked the cases near a pile of ties and ran down the track. In another moment, I saw Pete and he beckoned to me to hurry. The conductor of the last one, "Dad!" he gasped, as I reached his side, "Furey's caught a switch engine back to town." He pointed down the track in the direction the engine had taken. It had rounded another curve and was out of sight.

We were standing almost beneath a tall signal tower and I saw a man leaning out of a window watching us. I called to him:

"Do you have a telegraph wire here?" He nodded that he had. "All right," I shouted. "Wire W. B. Cahoon of the City Detective Bureau, Jacksonville, thru Furey—Joe Furey is headed his way! He jumped from our train and caught a switch engine that's headed toward town. Tell him Norfleet said to meet it! Norfleet—he'll know."

The man nodded, pulled his head back and closed the window. I was not sure that he had understood me or that he would do as I had asked, but it was a chance. It was growing dark and we must think fast.

A little way down the track we saw another engine, snorting and steaming like an impetuous race horse. We ran to it and I explained our problem to the engineer.

"Do you think you could catch him?" I asked challengingly.

The engineer squinted at me for a moment, looked at the signal tower, then nodded.

"You bet your life I can catch him!" he answered.

He loosened the engine from two coupled cars and steamed down to the tower, calling out to the towerman to open the way back to Jacksonville. In another moment his throttle was wide open and we were speeding after the fugitive engine.

We swung around the curve and sighted our quarry some distance ahead. Our engineer signaled to his fireman to give her all he had and the iron monster plunged down the track, the steel rails disappearing beneath us as if the giant which bore us were swallowing them.

Enjoy your food as it nourishes your body

If your appetite is not keen you owe it to yourself to take S.S.S. regularly before each meal. It will give you a good appetite.

In these days of fast competition, only full-blooded, robust, healthy people can keep to the front, and success comes to those who have the snap, vigor and magnetism that go with a wholesome, healthy life. Don't despair because others forge ahead of you. Start right now to regain the health which will help you progress. A hearty appetite will restore your energy, build you up and give you "pep." Thousands have benefited themselves and kept their bodies in good repair by occasionally taking a course of S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles and it improves the processes by which the body is nourished. S.S.S. is time tried and reliable. It is made from the roots of fresh herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Philadelphia was not the only Pennsylvania city which served as the capital of the United States in the early days of our government. In 1777 when the British occupied Philadelphia, the records and funds of the Continental congress were shifted to York, Pa., which became the temporary capital, according to an answered question in this week's Liberty. Only one session was held there.

RANGER LEGION POST WILL CELEBRATE NEXT FRIDAY

Armistice Day Parade in Forenoon and Dance At Country Club At Night

The American Legion boys of Carl Barnes post No. 69, Ranger, are planning to have their day Armistice day, Friday, Nov. 11. The activities of the post will start at 10 o'clock Friday morning and will continue until the late hours of Friday night.

The main feature of the Armistice day celebration will be the parade of all ex-service men and the presentation to the city of the big German gun by the local post of the American Legion.

The men will form at the club rooms over the city hall at 10 o'clock and the parade will start soon after. The line of march is short as the boys go down Pine street to Commerce, over to Main and up Main to the Gholson hotel. Uniforms will not be worn in the parade, however the members of the 40 and 8 are asked to wear their regulation chapeaus.

The big 77 mm. German field gun will be presented to the city of Ranger at the close of the parade. There will be two selections by the Ranger band and this will be followed by the presentation speech given by Dr. Harry A. Logsdon.

The most impressive part of the celebration will follow the presentation speech, when the members of the legion turn to the west for one minute in remembrance of the many boys who died in action during the world war. Silence will reign while the legionnaires, with heads bared, send a silent prayer of the legion to those who went over, never to return. The morning's activities will be closed by a benediction given by a local pastor.

All the ex-service men are requested to be present at the meeting Wednesday night when the final arrangements for the celebration will be made.

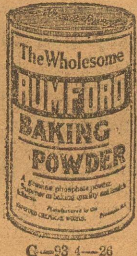

The annual legion smoker, to be held at the Country club at 8 o'clock, Friday night is given for ex-service men only. It is a general get-together meeting and is an annual social event of the legion. The dance to be given Thursday night is also under the auspices of the legion post and is strictly an invitational affair. A buffet luncheon will be served in connection with the dance. The music will be furnished by Leonard's Coloradians.

Just where the gun that the government furnished the Carl Barnes post will be located has not as yet

Takes Bride to Island "Kingdom"

Except for Jack London's visit, Ray Dean of Los Angeles is the only man ever to live on Pearl Island, in the South Seas. The natives made Dean a king when he visited there in 1923. Now he has returned and married and Mr. and Mrs. Dean are preparing for a trip to the island.

been decided. However, it is thought that it will be placed upon the lawn of the Texas & Pacific depot until spring and then will probably be removed to the Willows. If a definite location is decided upon a concrete base will be constructed by the legion.

The gun is one of the light field guns that were used during the war by the Germans. It weighs 3,000 pounds and is of the 77 millimeter variety with a recoil. Along with the gun will be presented two 185 millimeter shells that were obtained through the post.

Felton Brashier, who has been commander of the Carl Barnes post for a year, will turn over his office to the incoming commander, Dr. C. C. Craig, when installation services are held the night of Nov. 17.

During the time Commander Brashier has been in office there have been over 60 new members added to the post and new club rooms have been built and the building remodeled in every way.

Simplex Machine In Ranger Office Of Western Union

As far as the Ranger office of the Western Union is concerned the old metallic "click, click" of the instrument is gone forever, for Ranger has taken its place with the larger cities in the march of telegraph progress.

Day before yesterday, George A. Hargus, local manager of the Western Union, sat before the Morse key and the sounder and "pounded brass" as the old telegraphers say. Today he has installed in his office the new Simplex machine to serve him.

NEWS, TOPICS and FABLES

The machine resembles a typewriter and as the operator types the message on a keyboard the machine transmits corresponding electrical impulses to the telegraph line. As these impulses flash over the wire they are instantaneously picked up and translated into the proper characters by an automatic receiving printer in a distant city. Telegrams are received upon strips of paper tape which are pasted across the face of the customary receiving blanks.

The machines are capable of operation at a speed of sixty-five words per minute or one hundred and fifty telegrams per hour.

According to Mr. Hargus the machine entirely eliminates mistakes and makes the work of the operator speedier and more efficient.

Mr. Hargus says that the Western Union has established a training school at Tyler where a thorough course of instruction in managerial duties, automatic operating and the handling of telegraph equipment is given. The school, which has been in operation for one year has graduated more than 100 employees.
