ACTING GOVERNOR SETS CONVICTS FREE

EASTLAND TAXPAYERS REJECT GAS PURCHASE

Majority Of 69 Out Of 475 Votes Cast Oppose Municipal Ownership Of Plant

By a majority of 69 votes Eastland citizens yesterday voted against the city's owning and operating the Eastland Gas & Electric company. The total number of votes cast was 475, 203 of which was for and 272 against the proposition.

The election was called by the Eastland city commission for the purpose of getting a line on what the people desired done about the gas situation. It could not be learned today whether the commission would proceed with their plans to take over, by purchase or otherwise, the gas company's plant.

In calling the election it was stipulated that only property taxpayers should vote in the election, but it is claimed that a large number of people voted who were not taxpayers.

Proponents of the proposition to have the city of Eastland take over the gas plant say that they do not care who operates the plant, but that the citizens of Eastland are paying too much for gas and that the fight for a lower gas rate is only beginning and will be kept up until that purpose is accomplished.

Ranger Physician Will Soon Open Up Fort Worth Office

Dr. C. O. Terrell, Ranger physician, living on Ranger Heights and having offices with Drs. Lauderdale and Holland in Guaranty bank building, is opening up offices also in Fort Worth. It is announced, and will spend part of his time there in the near future. He will not, however, it is said, give up his Ranger practice but will, even in the event he should later locate his family in Fort Worth, give a considerable portion of each week to that practice.

Dr. Terrell's immediate removal to Fort Worth as a place of residence is not yet determined, he says, although he may take that step later. Dr. Terrell is a member of the Ranger city commission, which office he will retain at least for the present.

BRADY PREPARING FOR HEART OF TEXAS TURKEY STRUT

BRADY, Oct. 30.—"The nation wants a turkey picture during the Thanksgiving season," wrote Fred Bockelman of the Pathe News, who is going to film the Heart of Texas Turkey Strut to be held at Brady, and so the directors of the strut definitely fixed Nov. 13 as the date for the gala event.

The date originally contemplated was to be sometime in December on account of the late opening up of the turkey market this year. Thousands of live turkeys will be used in the picture.

Buffalo Banks Want Bank Robbers Seized Either Alive or Dead

By United Press.
BUFFALO, Oct. 30.—Officers on the lookout for the bank robber who held up the treasure car of the Bank of Buffalo and escaped with $90,000 to $100,000 were aroused today when a hospital reported a young man with a bullet wound in his head applied for medical attention. After the wound was dressed the patient entered an automobile and drove away.

The death of Guard Lewis M. Yearington during the night brought the death toll to two. John H. Myers, the third man shot, will recover, although his left arm has been amputated.

The Buffalo banks today established a fund of $10,000 out of which rewards for any bank robbers captured dead or alive will be paid.

LOWER GAS IN EASTLAND IS END SOUGHT

N. N. Rosenquest Says Fight For Reduction In Rates Will Be Continued

N. N. Rosenquest of Eastland, who took an active part in the campaign to have the Eastland City Commission take over and operate the Eastland Gas & Electric company, declares that Eastland is entitled to a lower gas rate than she is now getting and that he is going to continue to fight for a reduction in rates until we have them. Following is an article on the subject written by him and addressed to the citizens of Eastland:

"I take this method of thanking those who opposed my view and others in the recent election on the gas question for the manly manner in which they conducted their campaign, and I wish to assure those who had a different view to myself that I have only the best of feelings to all and not one bit of hatred in my heart toward any person."

"By talking to a large number of those who differed with me, I find that most everyone believe that our gas rate is too high, but believe that it would be questionable as to whether a sufficient quantity of gas could be furnished under the proposed plan. I, therefore, ask those who believe that the gas rate is too high to join me in continuing the fight for lower gas rates for the city of Eastland. When gas is bought for six cents per 1000 cubic feet, within a reasonable distance from the city, and then sold to the consumer for seventy-five cents per 1000 cubic feet, the difference is too great at the expense of the consumer. I believe that the person on the corporation who furnishes any public utility to the people should have a reasonable return on their investment, but I think it is fundamental that cities and towns cannot thrive and grow with public utilities unreasonably high. I believe in using all legitimate means in accomplishing these results, and ask all those who believe as I do to join me in continuing this fight for a cheaper gas rate. I believe a persistent demand on the part of the citizenship here will get the results desired."

FRENCH ACTION IN DAMASCUS SURPRISING

Gives Basis, However, For Injured Foreigners To Demand Reparations

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Officials of the government were appalled today by receipt of information that notice of the bombardment in Damascus was given only to French nationals in the city, but it was indicated that no notice would be taken of this action.

Reparations, however, will be insisted upon for all Americans suffering personal injury or property damage.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Old Damascus is like a city of the dead, according to refugees quoted by the Cairo correspondent today. Fleeing from the city, refugees brought reports that shells were believed to have killed 1,200 prisoners in the city prisons and had damaged much property.

They charged that French troops entered the city in armored cars, shooting as they came and looting the city.

COUNSEL FOR MITCHELL PUTS ON WAR PAINT

Indicates May Call President Coolidge and Secretary Davis As Court Martial Witnesses

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A general plea of "not guilty" was entered today by Col. William Mitchell on charges of official misconduct, on which he is being tried by an army court-martial. The pleading was followed by a brief session and the court-martial was then adjourned by Major General R. L. Howze, president of the court, until 10 o'clock Monday morning to afford the prosecution and defendant an opportunity to examine and prepare witnesses.

The plea was made after the failure of Mitchell's counsel to obtain a bill of particulars specifying what part of the flying colonel's San Antonio statement constituted misconduct. Mitchell stood in his place at the defense table and, as the judge advocate read the charges one by one, Mitchell in a clear and emphatic voice answered to each "not guilty."

After the adjournment Frank Reid, republican member of congress from Illinois and civilian counsel for Mitchell, indicated that the defense might demand that President Coolidge and Secretary of War Davis be summoned to testify. Pointing out that it was developed yesterday that President Coolidge and Secretary Davis were the occupants of Mitchell, Reid said that his client should be granted the privilege of facing them.

Three of the Texas newspaper men to whom Mitchell gave his statement at San Antonio were present. It is likely they will be called on the stand today. Lieut. Col. Hicks, adjutant of the corps area, entered the room just before court convened.

Colonel Moreland, judge advocate for the prosecution, opened with a short statement, opposing the defense's claim for a bill of particulars.

"We are practically out on any law questions," said Reid, counsel for Mitchell. "What has happened here? Has the midnight oil been burned so hard that the prosecution has been unable to find any tradition relating to a bill of particulars. The mysterious power still hovers over us. The granting of our request is necessary for us to prepare our voluminous statement?" asked Moreland. "It is the fault of the defense counsel."

"It is the fault of the prosecution," replied Reid.

CARBON GAS CLAIMS LIVES IN HOTEL ROOM

Two Persons Found Dead At Holdenville. One Of Them Identified

HOLDENVILLE, Okla., Oct. 30.—Mystery surrounds the death of two persons, man and woman, whose bodies were found in the Holdenville hotel today. The man has been identified as Lewis A. Gallicieva, about 35 years old, a contractor of Enid; the woman remains unidentified. A letter addressed to "Katy O'Grady, Holdenville," was found in her purse.

William Hutcheson, manager of the hotel, said Gallicieva and the woman came to the hotel shortly before midnight, Thursday, and engaged a room as man and wife. The bodies were discovered by a porter today. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by carbon monoxide poisoning. Windows of the rooms were closed and a gas stove was burning.

Mrs. Stillman May Seek Divorce From Her Erring Husband

By United Press.
NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Lacking for the moment confirmation from either of the principals, an apparently authentic report was circulated today that Mrs. Annie U. Stillman had begun action to obtain a divorce from her banker husband, James M. Stillman, on statutory grounds.

The whereabouts of Mrs. Florence Leeds, who will inevitably be the co-respondent in the suit, was unknown today. So far as could be learned there was no intention to call her as a witness against the banker, with whom she has been living as man and wife and who, she says, is the father of her child, James Stillman.

By United Press.
SEATTLE, Oct. 30.—The motor fishing boat Bowzer, was overturned by a huge wave at Gray's harbor today and all of her crew of seven were lost, according to a radio message intercepted here today.

The message, from the United States dredge Culbera, stated that the Bowzer approached too close to the bar over which huge waves were beating and was overturned. The dredge and other vessels stood by until all hope of rescuing the crew were lost, the message said.

The Bowzer is now floating bottom side up, the report said.

By United Press.
HOQUAM, Wash., Oct. 30.—A wireless from the government dredge Culbera, stationed at the entrance of Gray's harbor, said that they believed only two men were drowned when the Bowzer was overturned, but said nothing about the rescue of the other five men.

GOVERNOR OF ARKANSAS MUST HASTEN HOME

During Absence From State Prison Doors Open For Pardoned Inmates

By United Press.
LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 30.—After setting a record in issuing pardons, Lieutenant and Acting Governor S. B. McCall today retired from his office, following receipt of a telegram from Gov. Tom J. Terral, who hurried back home from Alabama. The lieutenant governor who took over the reins of the state government when Governor Terral left the state, put a severe dent in the governor's non-clemency policy by issuing nine pardons.

"I am on Arkansas soil," wired Terral to McCall early today. As the lieutenant governor left the capitol he said: "I am glad that even in this small way I was able to correct to some extent the wrong the state has suffered since Terral's inauguration."

The pardons issued by Acting Governor McCall included:

Hamp Hall, former chairman of the state board of control, convicted of embezzling state funds; Monroe Smith, a former member of the state tax board, convicted of embezzlement; A. J. Canley, former tax collector of Miller county, convicted of failure to pay county funds over to the state; W. W. Gillespie, convicted of embezzlement of railroad funds; Leq Mode, convicted of burglary; Mary Odean, a negro woman convicted of second degree murder, and three others convicted of liquor law violations.

Governor Terral, who left the state to attend a governors' conference in Birmingham, Ala., cut short his stay in Alabama and hurried back to Arkansas. He was much incensed by the action of the lieutenant governor. He said he proposed to stay in Arkansas for the next three years.

"If there is any more pardoning done I'll use the pen," he declared. "I am shocked that a man elected by the people should use the powers of the governor, elected by the people. Those interested in obtaining these pardons knew I would not grant them, for I refused several times. It is possible to revoke these pardons if it will be done."

OURSELVES AND INDUSTRY

THE DIVISION OF LABOR
By E. E. Lincoln

If we tried to produce with our own labor alone all the things that we use every day we would find ourselves quite helpless.

It is hard to imagine what sort of house we would be living in if we had to construct it and all the materials that go into it wholly by our own efforts, or what sort of food and clothes we would have if we had to produce these things with no help from the rest of the world. Under such conditions we would be little better off than beasts.

Because of the desire for better living, men in past years came to follow different occupations—one became a carpenter, another a weaver, and still another a baker. After this specialization took place people had better houses, better clothes and better bread, and they also got these things more cheaply and quickly than before.

In modern countries this process of the division of labor is carried still further. Perhaps the following well-known example will illustrate the point:

Adam Smith in his celebrated book, "The Wealth of Nations," first published about 150 years ago, gives an interesting example of the effectiveness of the division of labor in so simple a business as the making of ordinary brass pins. After showing that 10 people, each specializing in certain portions of the work, were able with only the crudest kind of machinery to make 48,000 pins a day he says: "But if they had all wrought separately and independently, and without any of them having been educated to this particular business, they certainly could not each of them have made 20, perhaps not one pin in a day; that is, certainly, not the 240th, perhaps not the 4,800th part of what they are at present capable of performing in consequence of a proper division and combination of their different operations."

About 120 years later a survey was made by the United States Commissioner of Labor in which it was shown that further improvements in the manufacture of common pins, made possible through a better division of labor, had resulted in 50 times greater efficiency than the original hand method just described by Adam Smith. In other words, the division of labor and its results have finally enabled one worker to produce between 21,600 and 432,000 times as many pins as if he had continued to work alone.

This is a true case, and equally striking examples in other fields of industry might be mentioned. The division of labor made possible by the cooperative action of many people has resulted in such advantages as the following:

1. When a workman concentrates on a single operation he acquires greater skill than he would if he devoted only part of his time to it.

2. Moreover, when one man did all the work on such an article as a shoe, for example, part of his tools were always idle, and he lost time in frequently changing from one set of tools to another. With the division of labor in a modern factory this loss is eliminated.

3. Again, the division of labor makes it possible for different types of workers to obtain the kind of work that suits them best.

4. The greatest benefit, however, comes from the incalculable increase in all kinds of enjoyable goods that results from the specialization of work and the use of modern machinery. In fact, practically none of the important work of civilized society could be carried on without the division of labor.

These improvements have been of immense benefit to the worker. They have shortened the working day and have greatly bettered conditions. Also, a large amount of labor has been set free for the production of desirable things, of which otherwise we should have to deny ourselves.

As a result, the average man now enjoys many comforts and luxuries that even the wealthiest a generation ago were unable to obtain.

Meet the new boss of the Chicago Cubs, Mr. Joseph McCarthy. He has just been appointed pilot of the wavering Windy City machine. During the recent American Association season, he led the Louisville Colonels to the pennant in one of the most one-sided races in that organization's history. McCarthy has been with the Louisville club for several seasons and has enjoyed pronounced success.

New Motion Picture Masterpiece Has Hero Rescued By Woman of Streets

By FREDERICK KUH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
BERLIN, Oct. 24 (United Press). Germany has produced another film to rank with those European classics, "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," and "The Last Laugh." The new production, created by Heinrich Zille, is called "The Outcasts."

The hero, an engineer of a well-to-do family, drifts into prison through perjury, committed in order to shield his wealthy fiancée from scandal. Released after serving his term, he finds his father's door slammed in his face and his fiancée married to a stock exchange gambler. He seeks a job.

Sub-titles are rarely used; nor are they needed. The man's dejected expression, growing more pathetic with each refusal, and his overcoat, more tattered each day, reveal more eloquently than any sub-titles the hopelessness of his search for employment. He wanders into a "flop" and is robbed by his fellow-victims. He walks to the river and is about to throw himself into the death-bringing waters when a painted girl

Overwrought Nerves

YOU never heard of a red-blooded person—man or woman—becoming a nervous wreck! And you never will. You never saw anybody with healthy, rich, red blood, get wearied by the activities of daily life. Did you?

No! Its weak blood—lack of healthy, rich, red blood. That's the whole trouble with those whose nerves are overwrought. They lack the resisting powers—the stamina that healthy, red-blood-cells give that enable us to stand up under the strain of daily life. S. S. S. is the salvation of these unhappy people. It is just the thing needed to strengthen the nerves, restore muscular power to the body, and increase the endurance of weak, failing, run-down women and men.

Don't keep on going down simply because your blood is starving for want of healthy, red-blood-cells. You can get back your nerve power with S. S. S. You can do it just as surely as thousands have done for the past century. S. S. S. also clears the skin of pimples, boils, eczema—hollow cheeks fill out and firm flesh takes the place of flabby muscles. Why, you'll begin living all over again. Get S. S. S. today from any good druggist. And get the larger bottle. It's more economical.

PARK SITE IS GIVEN NEAR TO CEMETERY SITE

Widow of Dr. J. M. Nicks Donates 23-Acre Tract Near Evergreen, In Ranger

The removal of all that is mortal of a one time well known and highly esteemed Ranger physician, from the old city cemetery to a permanent resting place in Evergreen cemetery, brings to light, a story of human interest and civic munificence. Dr. J. M. Nicks, died years ago. His remains now rest on his old home farm very near to a plot of ground donated by his widow, Mrs. Branch Isbell, now of McKinney, Texas, who after having sold the 25 acre tract to the city for a cemetery, donated a plot of something more than 23 acres additional to be used perpetually as a park.

The gift was unconditional, save as to the purposes for which it is to be used. However, it is known that Mrs. Nicks, at the time of its donation earnestly desired as she does now that it be beautified and made one of the most pleasant places in or around Ranger. That this has not been carried out is believed not to be for want of desire on the part of some of the many civic organizations of the city, but from letting it pass out of mind, particularly during the boom days.

That it has passed out of the minds of vast numbers of the older citizens who knew Dr. Nicks, is revealed in efforts to interview them in regard to Dr. Nicks and his widow. Few were found that knew them. Few knew who owned the farm where the cemetery is now located and very few indeed knew of this gift to the city of what is very properly named Nettie Nicks Park. No sooner was it made known than it aroused discussion among members of civic organizations in regard to which or who would be first to sponsor a movement for its beautification and care. This plot is not to be used for burial purposes at any time, it is stated but as a pleasant place for those who visit the cemetery.

MONTANA FACES HEAVY LIVESTOCK LOSS FROM COLD

HELENA, Mont., Oct. 29.—Montana faces today huge losses of livestock and crops, on account of heavy snows and extreme cold weather, and only a warm wind in the next 24 hours can prevent a great loss, bankers said today.

Snow 16 inches in depth has fallen and below zero temperatures prevail. Many stockmen will probably be ruined, most of them having been on the verge of bankruptcy since the war, it is stated.

The Woman Who Knows

Houston, Texas—"Because of my father-in-law having been benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery while living with us, I knew about Dr. Pierce's remedy. I knew about his poor health and how he gained strength, could rest and sleep better and was more active and cheerful. Later on it became necessary for me to take a woman's tonic, and I chose Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After the first few doses I felt better, and now recommend it very highly for women during middle age.—Mrs. Fannie Disher, 2211 Center St. All dealers. Liquid or tablet form.

of the streets restrains him.

He goes home with the girl—to the sordid surroundings of Berlin's north-side slums. Here he lives for weeks, months, amid grind-organs, sewing machines, laundry buckets, children, children, swarms of children. He learns the life which leads from cradle to factory, from factory to tuberculosis and then to the graveyard. Having found employment in a factory himself, coincidence brings him to the notice of the boss. At his employer's home, he tells his story to the manager and his sister. They listen, understandingly.

On the verge of his rise to immense success and power, an old friend of the tenements finds him and leads him to the bedside of the dying girl who had once thwarted his suicide.

It is the exquisitely pictured, the scenes amid Berlin's slums are unforgettable. They abound with the irony, born of hunger, and the laughter born of tears. Squads, dangers, playing children, rickets, love and alcohol, mingle in a kaleidoscope of life among the "fifth estate."

It is by his mother, Mrs. Charlotte Kibbee, after James' arrest in 1914, imprisoned for shooting Detroit to Sergeant August Tompkins. Mrs. Kibbee and the boy are shown above. "I saw I meant to kill him" the boy told officers, then offering his own blood to save Tompkins' life.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

KNOW TRAFFIC REGULATIONS Too much can't be written and said about the need for thoughtfulness and carefulness on the part of both motorists and pedestrians. There are certain basic rules of behavior for motorists and pedestrians which could be printed and reprinted many times for the good of all concerned. Motorists should study regulations for street traffic. Before leaving the garage examine brakes. See that lights are in good condition. Learn hand and directional signals. Avoid left turns as much as possible. Don't cut in or out of traffic. Keep in line. Slippery pavements are dangerous; drive slowly; use chains. Remember that pedestrians have rights in the street. Pedestrians should observe traffic before stepping from the curb, and cross street or roadway at a right angle—not diagonally and if rea-

Look to the left when stepping off curb to street and then do not step in front of a car. Pedestrians should keep out of traffic whirlpools. Pedestrians should watch traffic officers' signals and heed traffic signs and limit lines. Pedestrians should stand on sidewalk or within safety zone while waiting for a street car or a bus. When stepping from the curb, pedestrian should look to the left.

Pair of Aces

Most Lewis Scott of the Hillcrest Country club, Los Angeles, who recently broke into the spotlight by getting a pair of holes-in-one the same day. For a golfer to get one ace in a lifetime is considered quite a feat. But to smack two in one day is something very much out of the ordinary, indeed.

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town after a year's absence. She sells her property and with her small fortune sets out to find and marry a man with money. She tells her lawyer, Dick Gregory, and Gloria his wife, that love means "nothing in her life."

At Atlantic City she meets a divorcee, Carlotta Froking, and her friends, Herbert Waterbury and Dan Sprague. Both men pay court to May, greatly to the distress of Carlotta, who has been in love with Dan for years.

But May sets her cap for Waterbury, who, she thinks, is the rich husband she is looking for. In her efforts to "land" him she spends a third of her little fortune on clothes.

But as time goes on and he doesn't propose, she accepts Carlotta's invitation to winter with her in California. Then suddenly Waterbury asks her to marry him, and May promises to be his wife at once—before he has a chance to change his mind!

A few days before the marriage, May turns over to Waterbury all the rest of her money, so that he can invest it for her. But she immediately regrets this when Carlotta, leaving for California, warns her not to trust Waterbury.

Worried, May goes to Waterbury and demands that he return her money to her. She waits for him to bring it to her in the lobby of the hotel, but he never returns; and May whom she had seen but once in her life.

"Perhaps when I go back home, I'll see him again," she said to herself. Somehow the thought was very comforting. She sighed as she got into her bed with its icy sheets and lumpy mattress.

Three days later she had shaken the dust of Atlantic City from her feet and started home.

Home! She hadn't realized what home meant to her until now!

But, as she whirled through the familiar streets, under the familiar trees, on her way to Dick Gregory's house, she discovered a tenderness in her heart for these things.

After all, the place of one's childhood always remained the best-loved place! "And yet," thought May, "I never can live here again. People will always remember that my husband shot himself because I ran around with another man!"

At that moment the taxicab slowed down as it rounded a corner, and she found herself looking into two cold gray eyes, set in a face she knew—the face of one of her oldest friends, Myra Gail.

She stood on the sidewalk waiting for the cab to pass, staring at May, but giving no other sign that she knew her. And May shrank back on the leather seat, trying to shield herself from the cold, sharp gaze.

She was still trembling when the cab drew up before the green-shuttered house where Gloria and Dick lived. The door opened, and Gloria came out and waved her head toward her. "Oh, you, darling! It's so good to see you again!" she cried, and May flew into her arms.

Oh, she needed this! This knowledge that someone in the world cared whether she lived or died! She clung to Gloria, crying as if her heart were broken, while Gloria drew her up the steps and into the little house.

"Why, May, what in the world's the matter?" Gloria asked, patting the shoulder of May's hated black coat. "Don't cry like this—you'll make yourself sick!"

"Oh, I am sick—sick and tired of everything!" May sobbed wildly. "Everything, I tell you."

Her voice thickened; she choked, slipped out of Gloria's arms and dropped down upon the bottom step of the stairs, with her head buried in her arms. Huddled, she sat there, sobbing. And Gloria stood, looking at her helplessly, not knowing what to do.

Then, as if a brilliant thought had just struck her, she ran up the stairs, past May, and returned in a moment with Dicky Jr., on her arm.

"Here, Aunt May—hold your neevy!" she said with a sunny smile, laying the small creature in May's lap. He looked up at her with his bright eyes, blinking like a little bird.

And, as if by magic, May stopped crying. The maternal instinct that is buried deep in the heart of every woman under the sun, stirred within her, and she held the baby close to her, as a mother holds her child—mysteriously comforted.

Without speaking she looked up at Gloria—and Gloria felt almost ashamed because she had so much happiness and May had none.

She rang a bell in the wall and presently a very young nursemaid appeared and took the baby upstairs again.

"It's time for his nap," Gloria explained, "and besides, I have the most wonderful breakfast ready for you—cooked it for you myself with my own hands."

Chattering, she sat down opposite May in the sunny little dining-room and poured coffee for her. Then she brought shirred eggs and a thick T-bone steak from the kitchen.

"Here's toast," she purred, lifting a snowy napkin, "and honey—and, oh, dear! I forgot I had orange juice for you."

Frowning, she dashed back into the kitchen and brought a tall glass of finds herself penniless. She sells her jewelry to pay her hotel bill, moves to a cheap boarding-house, and tries to steel herself to go back to work as a stenographer to support herself. But 10 years of ease have softened May and made her lazy and she finally decides to sell her fur coat, rather than get a job at once.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

The next morning May sold her fur coat.

The furrier gave her a thousand dollars for it—only a third of what she had recklessly paid for it 10 days before.

As he pointed out, it would have to be repaired. May had stained the rich silk lining with her favorite narcissus perfume, and had burned a hole in the fur collar with a cigaret. The coat had not seemed such a precious thing 10 days ago when she looked forward to marrying Waterbury's money.

The future then had promised fur coats galore, and diamonds, and all the glittering luxuries that money could buy.

On the way back to Miss Agnes Mimmy's boarding house she provided herself with an inexpensive black coat. She hated it, but it was all she could afford.

But, by an entirely right instinct, she had picked out the very thing that best suited her. It set her off as dazzlingly fair, as more delicate than she was. It was more becoming than ever the mink coat had been.

But May, of course, didn't know this. Like most women she thought she couldn't be beautiful unless she wore expensive clothes. She cried as she opened the door of the boarding-house. Cried because she hated the smell of boiling corned beef that filled the place, because she was poor, but most of all because she hated the black coat.

She spent all of that day in the Slough of Despond, pitying herself with all her soul, grieving over her ruined hopes—and she woke to find herself crying, in the middle of the night, when everything seemed even more hopeless than it had in broad daylight.

Then, being practical at heart, she suddenly jumped out of bed, put on her dressing gown, and sat down to make her plans.

First of all she wrote to Carlotta and told her that she had decided to spend the winter with her in California, after all—that is, if Carlotta still wanted her.

Then, after much biting of the pen, she wrote to Gloria Gregory to tell her that she was coming home and would stop at the Gregorys. It was the one place in the world, she said, where she was sure of a welcome.

Before her mood could change, she dressed, slipped out into the night, and posted the letters.

Coming back to her ugly little room, she stood with her back against the door, wide-eyed—wondering if she dared to write to Ulysses Forgan, and tell him how she had been robbed of all her money.

But why should I? she argued with herself. "I hardly know the man."

Curious thing—this warm and friendly feeling she had for a person it, set in a bowl of cracked ice. May hadn't had such a meal since she had left the hotel in Atlantic City—nor such an appetite, either.

By the time she had had her third cup of coffee she felt more cheerful than she had since the night Herbert Waterbury had disappeared with her money.

And presently she began to tell Gloria about him—all about her Atlantic City adventure from beginning to end.

"But, May, surely you weren't going to marry this Waterbury in cold blood—when you didn't even love him, were you?" Gloria asked when she had finished.

May nodded, unashamed. "Of course I was going to marry him," she answered frankly. "Why not? The thing I was after was money, and I thought he had it."

She crossed both arms on the table and looked straight into Gloria's wide brown eyes. "Listen to me, Gloria Gregory," she said, "I was dead tired of having people snub me. I wanted to be treated like a human being again—to be respected instead of being shunned like an outcast."

"Well, I figured that the one thing people do respect is money. They do, you know. They kow-tow to it. They bow down and worship it. Not only that, but they worship the people who have it. So I made up my mind to get money, if I had to go out and steal it. I had mine stolen from me. Poetic justice, I suppose, you'd call it!"

"Poetic nothing! It's the wickedest thing I ever heard of!" Gloria cried, jumping up. "And I think this Waterbury ought to be found and jailed! Let's go down to see Dick. He could do something about it, I'm sure! And we'll get him to take us out and buy us lunch at the hippest place in town!"

She caught May's hand and raced her upstairs.

"Here are your bags—all unpacked in the guest room, and everything put neatly away! Don't you think I'm a perfect hostess? Why, what's the matter?" Gloria asked, for May stood drooping in the doorway of the dainty, chintz-hung room.

"I can't," May answered. "I just can't—go out and face people in this town again. Now, don't tell me I'm silly! This morning as I drove out from the station I passed Myra Gail and tried to speak to her—and she looked right through me, as if I'd been so much thin air!" She groaned.

"Myra Gail—what she does is hardly what I'd call the cat's pajamas. She doesn't matter!" Gloria said loftily. "You powder your face and buckle on your armor, and we'll go out and face the town without the flicker of an eyelash."

Then, as she saw that May was going to refuse, once more, she went on:

"The only way to face life, May, is to face it—not to run away from it, or turn your back on it! Life's a hard proposition, and you've got to be hard stuff if you're going to meet it properly. Come on—let's go!"

And so May braced herself to meet her world.

"SOME BABY," SAYS ROAD FORD CALLING ON YOUNG AIR FORD

Here are two views of the first Ford airplane, J. W. 1, to be put on public sale. Inset is the pilot who drove the J. W. 1 from Detroit to Mitchell Field, New York, in 6 hours. Some idea of what a wing spread of 58 feet, 4 inches means is gained by the minuteness of the Ford car seen nesting under one wing, with room enough left over for three or four more, without crowding.

THE first Ford airplane to be manufactured by the Stout Metal Aeroplane Company, a division of the Ford Motor Company, for individual purchase, is on public sale at Wanamaker's, New York, in the first retail aeroplane department ever to be established.

The plane is named J. W. 1. It was flown to Mitchell Field, New York, from Detroit, in six flying hours and marked the 300th trip of a Ford aeroplane. Of these trips 298 were made between the Detroit, Chicago and Cleveland plants of the Ford Motor Company. The 299th trip was a special reliability test in which the Ford plant won out over sixteen other competitors, all operating under very unfavorable weather conditions.

The fuselage and wings of the Ford plane are made of duralumin, a metal alloy combining aluminum,

SPECIFICATIONS OF THE AIRPLANE J. W. 1.

- Will carry 4 passengers.

- Height, 11 ft., 10 in.
- Weight empty, 3,600 lbs.
- Liberty motor, 400 h.p.

- Cruising radius, 6 hours.
- Carries 150 gallons of gasoline and 15 gallons of oil.
- Speed 116 miles per hour.

copper and one or two other metals in small proportions. The wings will not buckle. Because duralumin provides much greater lightness than steel the Ford plane is easier than a steel plane to handle upon landing. Everything on the ship is fireproof, except the leather upholstery on the seats.

The motor is equipped with a self-starter which eliminates the dangerous procedure of spinning the propeller by a ground mechanic.

This airplane has no complicated guy supports on the wings and only six on the tail. Its weight is 3,600 pounds, which is some four to six hundred pounds less than other planes of similar power. It is especially built for gliding so that if, for any reason, such as leakage of water or fuel, the motor stops and a forced landing is necessary, the plane can easily be guided to the ground and can make a safe landing anywhere where there are no considerable obstacles, such as large trees and buildings.

By THE FENCE RIDER.

"Off to Abilene!" "On to Abilene with a winning team!" With these two cries mingled with school yells, jubilant notes of the band and the shouts of something like 400 fans, the six-coach all-steel special Texas & Pacific train steamed out from the Ranger depot this morning at a little after 8:30 carrying the team and Ranger's hope to victory or elimination.

There is still a little ice outside. Inside all is aglow. There is some frost in the air. But none inside—the hearts of the staunch supporters of the Bulldogs. Warmth from a glow of pride at the spirit that is Ranger's—the spirit that is Ranger. That indomitable, unconquerable spirit that meets defeat like sports and goes right on fighting.

People along the way are rubbing their eyes and looking with wonder on the spectacle of a special train for a recently defeated team. Ranger is telling them that is one lesson Ranger has learned—to take heavy losses and come right back and fight—and win. It is that spirit which buoyed the "city of flowing gold" on when she saw fortunes fade, financial institutions fall by the way, prospects of becoming a metropolis overnight vanish—and has shaped her into a solid, stable, substantial city, having cheap fuel, key position on trunk line railway at the beginning of the west, where building stone, brick, potters clay, paving material and glass sands abound, where underground reservoirs of oil and gas on all sides and underground reservoirs of water on many sides offer all that a city could ask to make it reach out and encompass and merge and become a part of that metropolis as sure to be built here as time is to roll on.

Never before did people see a special train run by a loser. Never before did people see a city come back like Ranger has come back. Never before did people see a team of healing—not healed—cripples go out to fight as the Bulldogs were scheduled to fight today.

If Ranger loses today, Ranger is eliminated, and then if Eastland wins over Cisco today all other teams except Eastland and Abilene will be eliminated.

Of the big four in the district, Ranger has had one loss, Cisco, Eastland and Abilene, none. Another loss puts Ranger out of the running. A win today keeps Ranger in the running in the event Cisco beats Eastland. There would then be four teams—the same big four, each having sustained one loss—except Cisco—with Cisco yet to meet Ranger and Abilene. And even should Ranger win over Cisco after Cisco wins over Eastland (if it does today) that would compel Abilene and Cisco to eliminate one or the other (and it is pretty safe guess in that event it would be Abilene which would be eliminated) and then the three Eastland county teams would have to play off the tie. And that, in all probability, would mean another Ranger-Eastland game, the one thing the Bulldogs and their supporters long for exceedingly.

Jack Marshall, trainmaster, of Fort Worth, and B. A. Tunnell, freight and passenger agent of Ranger, have charge of the special train.
