FOREIGN BOXERS DO NOT LIKE TO "TAKE IT"

By HENRY L. FARRELL (United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 29-Paul Sampson, Ike McTigue, who left the United States with little rep and some ambition, is back in this country with a title, quite a little money and a lot of opinions.

Sampson is the heavyweight champion of Germany. In the words of Sam Langford, who said after he won the heavyweight championship of Mexico: "It ain't so much, but it's sumpin'," Paul is admitting that his laurels won't get him much around American rings, but he's going back soon where they do.

"The fight game is booming in Germany and I'm in on the ground floor. If I can't get a few matches around here I'm going right back," Sampson

He would like to get a match with Mike McTigue or Gene Tunney.

"McTigue may be the recognized light heavyweight champion on this side, but everyone in Europe still regards Siki as the champion. He won seventeen rounds in the fight with McTigue, and no fighter ever earned a decision on three good rounds," he says.

While he was in Germany and Austria, Sampson won ten fights with knockouts and he piled up an accumulation of marks that will go a long ways where he could buy hand-made shoes for the equivalent of two dollars and a banquet for twenty-five cents.

Sampson shipped over on the Reliance, and he got a discharge in Hamburg with a month's pay and twenty dollars. That was enough to keep him for two months in Germany, and he hit for Berlin, where he stumbled into a fight with Hans Breitonstrater, the German champion, and knocked him out.

After he had cleaned up all the German and Austrian heavies he had a fight arranged with Siki, and was negotiating with Paris promoters for a fight with Carpentier, but he lost both matches when the French went in the Ruhr section.

"The boxing commission then put a ban on all bouts against French and Belgian boxers and, being as I am a German, I lost the chances for some good money," he said.

"This fellow Siki isn't as bad as you think on this side. He's just like a monkey. He drinks like a fish and does all kinds of dissipating, but he's hard to figure," Sampson said to the United Press.

Carpentier is all through. I doubt if he ever comes over here. I saw him one night in a cafe in Berlin, and I didn't know him, he was so thin and white. He's been hitting the pace, too. Smoking and drinking all the time. Dempsey took the little out of him that he had.

"Criqui is the best fighter over there, but I don't believe he can beat Kilbane. Those fellows over there don't like to take it the way they will have to when they box with Ameri-
