More Interest Shown In 4th Street Revival

The revival at the East Fourth Street Baptist church continues with much interest. Eleven have united with the church. Rev. Woodie W. Smith spoke Thursday evening on "Sin and Its Blighting Effects." He took his text in Romans 3:23 and 6:23, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." After an appropriate solo by Mr. Bone, Rev. Smith spoke in part as follows:

"There are six things I wish to call your attention tonight concerning sin. First: sin is an opiate. It puts men to sleep. It deadens the consciences of men. The devil knows how to deaden the consciences of Christians and to keep sinners from coming to the Lord. Sin is a rust that destroys the strength of manhood, a magnet that draws men to hell. On the other hand, Jesus Christ is a powerful magnet that draws men towards heaven.

"Second: Sin is destructive. Sin bites like an adder, stings like a scorpion, hisses, the Scriptures say, like a serpent. Sin produces the most deadly influence, the most blighting influence, the most damning influence of anything on earth.

"Third: Sin is selfishness. It constitutes the principal lovers in the world selfishness. Sin drove Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. It made a murderer out of Cain, drove Saul mad, made a traitor out of Judas, and caused Peter to deny his Lord. Sin has no respect for government, for law and order. It has no respect for the sacredness of marriage ties, causes divorces, breaks up the home. Sin nailed our Saviour to the cross.

"Fourth: Sin is man's arch enemy. The Scriptures compare it to leprosy, that incurable disease yet sin can be cured by the application of the blood of Jesus Christ.

"Fifth: Sin is the Transgression of God's law. Sin is in rebellion against God. The crowning sin of all sins is the rejection of Jesus as our Redeemer. 'The wages of sin is death,' but I thank God that the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Home Town Talk by Betty

When one of our home physicians told his service club yesterday that candidates for public office who go about crying that the country is going to hell and that if it is saved they alone will have to do it ought not to receive a vote he said something very true, very significant, and worth heeding.

As that speaker pointed out, our illa are as much mental as physical, the former aggravating illa of the latter nature.

And it is, as he again pointed out, because so many of us talk so incessantly of hard times that candidates for public office figure the best appeal for votes is the alarm-appeal.

The sentiment is "put the in and out the out in."

It is largely because we lose sight of factors that really should be considered in choosing men for public office and try to exhibit our own self-pity by protesting at the ballot box against "these governors and congressmen and the president and all these guys in office who caused these hard times, that the "times" are so hard.

The people at large, both poor and rich, republicans and democrats, northerners and southerners have contributed in some manner to prolonging depression. And winning with the ballot that men the people themselves put into office caused all our ills will only make things worse.

Have the people of Big Spring and Howard county really any justification in any declaration that "the government" has caused any of their ills?

Aside from delay of a republican administration in allowing an import tax on crude oil to be enacted, we have no important complaint that may be made justifiably against the federal government. Until very recently we were paying no more taxes to the federal government than we were before the depression.

The state taxes have not changed. The county tax rate has been

by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

Cherry sat in the window seat and looked out at the only tree in sight. Some of its leaves had blown to the ground but those that remained were bright yellow. They danced in the sunlight, the very essence of carefree gaiety.

Cherry did not even see the dancing leaves though she was staring at them. There were tiny vertical lines between Cherry's brown eyes. Her eyes were brooding and serious now. Cherry's lips pressed together in an anxious line. She was struggling with the most difficult problem she had ever faced.

The situation was terrifying. She had felt it daily for the past week. The thing that frightened her was something you could put your finger on, and say, "This is wrong. We'll correct it." It was something intangible. Something Cherry was powerless to combat because she could not even name it.

In some way a barrier had risen between herself and Dan. She could not see over this barrier or around it. Dan was on one side and she was on the other. There had been no quarreling between them. Ever since the night of the argument about the house cleaning Dan had been meticulously polite. He had the house early each morning and usually arrived late at night. When he came home for dinner he departed almost immediately. Cherry was too proud to inquire how he was spending his time.

She went about the housework, cooked the food he liked, made her own arrangements for the hour when he arrived—and would have died rather than let him know how she was suffering.

It had been five days now since that dreadful night.

"It was my fault—partly," Cherry told herself for the thousandth time. "I shouldn't have let myself get so tired and nervous and I shouldn't have complained about the work."

But that was the matter of pride, too. If Dan had made the slightest move toward reconciliation Cherry would have met him halfway. He hadn't—and therefore affairs were as they stood.

Suddenly Cherry got to her feet. "This won't do!" she scolded. "There's no use sitting here worrying. I'm a little fool to imagine a lot of things that aren't true. Probably that's the whole trouble—I've been letting my imagination get the best of me. Now I'm going to quit it!"

For the rest of the day she was determinedly cheerful. It was not easy but when doubts arose Cherry coaxed her mind to them. Moreover she outlined a course of action. Something was to happen within two days that she felt sure would restore her happiness.

"I won't tell Dan," she thought, to surprise him.

Cherry said casually at dinner that evening, "I've some shopping to do Saturday. Suppose I come down about 12:30 and have lunch with you. Will that be all right?"

Dan did not glance up from the newspaper beside his plate. He said, "Yes, I guess so."

"I'll meet you in front of the library," Cherry promised. "I'll be there at 12:30."

The young man nodded agreement. He did not leave the apartment as usual after dinner but flung himself down on the divan and read a new book. Cherry felt with anticipation. Yes, she was satisfied with her appearance. If she met anyone she knew at Stanley's she need not feel ashamed.

The ride down town on the trolley required only 15 minutes but Cherry allowed herself more than that. She left the house promptly at 12 o'clock and 20 minutes later had reached the library. Naturally Dan was not in sight. He would probably be late.

Cherry walked leisurely along the block. The day was colder than she had realized and she pulled the collar of her coat snugly about her throat. A woman wearing a handsome mink wrap passed and Cherry thought ruefully of the beaver coat that had been a gift on her last birthday. The coat was in storage and if Mrs. Dixon had been at home she would probably have insisted on Cherry wearing it. Cherry promptly forgot about the fur coat. Two young men were crossing the street and for a moment she thought one of them was Dan. He wasn't. The youth turned his head and she saw he was a stranger.

A glance at her wrist told Cherry that it was still too early to expect her husband. Not yet 12:30. She took another turn to the end of the block and back again. The street was filling gradually with the noise of a crowd. Business men hurrying from offices. Tall girls, slim girls, fat girls. They all appeared to be wearing new fall finery. On their way no doubt to meet dates. Youths who would presently meet these girls or others like them. Then the outlines of older women, arranged boys, men with faces worn full by years of routine. Yet all of these faces showed relief. The half-holiday had brought an air of bustle and festivity to the street.

Still Dan Phillips was nowhere in sight.

Cherry searched eagerly from left to right. The crowd swirled past and new faces came into view constantly. It was after 12:30. Cherry took her post directly beside the library entrance and decided to wait there. The alarming possibility came to mind that in this crowd she might miss Dan. She had never failed to meet him before. Today of all days that would be a calamity!

She stood on tiptoe peering over the crowd. Nobody seemed to notice her and she felt as though she were at the center of a merry-go-

Bumpkin' Story Draws Comments From Delegates

DALLAS, (UP)—Texas delegates to the democratic convention in Chicago read with varied reactions today a reference in time, a weekly news magazine, to the delegates as "rusty bumpkins from Texas."

A few appeared highly amused and pointed out almost every member of the delegation was originally a country boy or girl. John Davis, a former state senator who was reared in the piney woods of East Texas, while believing the term not complimentary got a hearty laugh from the article.

"I looked up the meaning of the word 'bumpkin' in the dictionary and it's not very complimentary," the 4-foot political leader smilingly said. "No I don't agree with the time article. It's a fact that almost every man and woman on that delegation was born in the country. But none of them are ignorant. The delegation was composed of cultured, courteous men and women, as fine a representative group as ever went from this state."

The dictionary defines a "bumpkin" as "an awkward, heavy, clumsy fellow; a clown; a country lout."

W. H. Kittrell, Jr., secretary of the delegation, spoke highly of the Texas, saying the members wore white suits and was the "best looking crowd there, except the Maryland delegation, whose members all looked like millionaire country gentlemen."

T. W. Davidson, former lieutenant-governor, was another delegate who didn't agree with Time. His views were similar to those of Mrs. W. C. Martin, who said "we had a better looking delegation than state. They didn't impress me as country bumpkins. I notice where Time refers to country bumpkins from Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Texas Topics

By Raymond Brooks

AUSTIN—A woman's Sterling-for-governor state campaign committee has adopted the old method of a chain letter to spread its appeal to women voters throughout Texas to rally to the aid of its cause.

But it will forsake the old curse that was supposed to be called down upon the head of the one who broke the chain.

"Not to invoke a curse but to avert one" seems to be the campaign slogan of the chain-letter appeal.

"Appeal to your friends," the letter invites, "to work with such determination that Gov. Ross S. Sterling will be overwhelmingly nominated July 23, thus obviating a second primary, Aug. 27. Gov. Sterling has made Texas as efficient, honest and courageous government; has saved taxpayers millions of dollars. It might have added, 'responsible governor.'"

Signers are: Mrs. Ethel Hilton Johnson, women's chairman; Mrs. Henry Drought, San Antonio; Mrs. Stone J. Robinson, Dallas; Mrs. W. R. Chapman, Abilene; Mrs. R. W. Rogers, Galveston; Mrs. R. M. Traylor, New Waverly; Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, Austin; Mrs. Fred H. Minor, Denton; Mrs. Floyd Cooper, Amarillo; Mrs. Noyes D. Smith, Austin; Mrs. Alex Spence, Dallas; Mrs. Florence C. Flores, Cleburne; Mrs. W. H. Wentland, Manor; Mrs. Maude H. Gerhardt, Corpus Christi; Mrs. Julius Mehlitz, New Braunfels; Mrs. Chansler Weymouth, Amarillo; Mrs. J. L. Brock, Bryan.

Texas needs a new deal in politics, Railroad Commr. Ernest Thompson, newly-appointed member of the commission, who is running for his first elected term, said here. "The big issue in Texas is cooperation to obtain more pay-rolls, more smokestacks, growth of industries, development that will keep everyone busy—an issue that transcends prohibition, foreign debt, candidates' personalities and stump oratory. With industrial welfare, the people of Texas will have much less occasion to worry about the depression, taxation, low prices of farm products, or prohib-

Kingfish Huey Long of Louisiana. The Texas woman delegate went on to explain the delegation had its "ups and downs." She told of an incident when during a struggle for the state banner she was accidentally knocked down.

"The delegates were all gentle, Christian men and women," she added. "And I didn't see any drinking, card parties, personalities and stunts."

Maury Hughes, Dallas attorney who was stopped in his speech for the minority report of the liquor plank by announcement the Texas delegation stood for repeal as voiced in the Democratic platform, said:

"Blah! Baloney."

Every congressional redistricting bill that was introduced in the last Texas legislature, none of which passed, provided for a new congressman for West Texas. The people of the state generally think West Texas should have another congressman.

There is only one candidate for congress for Place No. 1 from West Texas and that is Senator Pink Parrish of Lubbock.

Senator Parrish is essentially a westerner having been on the plains for thirty years. He has been cowboy, county school teacher, county judge, mayor and state senator, all of which positions he has filled with extraordinary ability and distinction. During all these years he has handled stock more or less.

Senator Parrish is just in the prime of life. He is large in mind, as well as in body, being of the Jim Hogg type and weighing around 200 pounds. He is active and virile and has a brilliant mind.

The people of West Texas have been more or less discriminated against, when it comes to representation in the Legislature and the House of Congress. If West Texas will do as much for Senator Parrish as it did for Senator Small two years ago, we will have another representative at Washington who is our kind of folks and who speaks our language.

Many of our friends in East Texas are telling us now that if West Texas does as much for herself as East Texas is going to do in voting for Senator Parrish for congressman-at-large, Place No. 1, that he will be elected.

Let's demand more representation in these matters and stand solidly behind one of our kind of folks. Pink Parrish of Lubbock for Congressman-at-Large, Place No. 1. Yours very truly, Tom Garrard, Parrish Campaign Manager
