Howard Co. Crop Outlook Best In Years

If Market Upturn Continues, Farmers Will Realize Full Benefit

Howard county boasts one of the best prospective cotton crops she has known in many years.

Feed stuff the county over is in fine condition, most farmers making enough and more than is needed to care for their stock.

Cotton prices now are little better than at the same time last year, but the outlook is much better.

Howard County Honor Roll

One of a series of sketches on careers of former boys and girls of Big Spring and Howard County who have gained unusual success in their chosen professions.

ELINOR PANCOAST.

Back in the days when the Cole Hotel was the center of the town's activities; when swank was determined not by the cut of one's riding breeches or the amount of skin exposed by one's bathing suit but by the length and thickness of one's motoring hair; when the town's social scene was posed for snapshots seated in open-topped Buicks; there was a studious scholarly-minded girl in the center of all this fashionable buzzing whom it touched not at all.

She was a tall, slender type with a head of bronze-colored hair rather quiet eyes and a faintly smiling mouth. She might have led the Buick-escapes if she had been so inclined. As it was, she dwelt in the calm dead center of the storm, her mind on her books and an A. B. degree from the University of Chicago.

This summer that self same girl, her bronze hair lined with gray, served as educational director, a two-word term for president of Goucher College, one of the six women's colleges in the United States rated as a class I educational institution.

This responsibility she was well prepared for. For two years she had served as acting dean of the college. In 1929 she supervised a tour of Europe of graduate students interested in her favorite study economics.

Now a Doctor It is almost needless to say that she is now Dr. Pancoast. She obtained her Ph. D. from Chicago five years ago and in the East is a recognized authority in her field; her speciality is social insurance.

In sketching her activities the Big Spring Herald is merely following the example set by the New York Times which considered one of her political speeches criticizing the unemployment statistics of the U. S. Census Bureau of enough appeal to deserve a front page account. The Times heads the list of a large number of papers, including those in Baltimore, where Goucher College is located, that gladly promote her views on such matters as child-age pensions.

She has taken active parts on unemployment insurance committees and workers' education committees in Baltimore. For two years she was chairman of the International relations department of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs.

Economics is usually associated with dull absent-minded men professors. In this charming woman it has found its proper maternal lodging place. Her interests in its many sidepaths has led to a humanizing of its values and promises to lead to practical laws in the city of Baltimore, if not in the state of Maryland.

Literary Experiences In addition to lecturing, conducting tours and invading politics, Dr. Pancoast has written the following books: "History of the Photo-Engravers' Union"; "A study of old-age dependency in Baltimore; editorial

City Provided With Electric Clock On Methodist Corner

The Methodists have provided the city with a town clock—the only one of its kind in town and the only of its kind allowed in town, according to Dr. J. Richard Spann, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

The clock is part of an electric Neon sign containing church announcements and also advertisements of prominent firms.

It will stand on the corner of West Fourth and Scoury, one of the busiest corners outside the immediate business district.

The letters of the advertisements are painted with a type of aluminum paint that has high reflective powers.

This sign is one of three of its kind in West Texas. Abilene, San Angelo, each have one. It will serve a useful need in the community, not only in its constant message of spiritual uplift but in providing the town with a reliable electric clock that will give the time of day.

WHICH SHALL RULE?

Shall the Railroad Commission represent the people, or shall it be dominated by major oil companies? Shall the hundreds of thousands of dollars being spent in this race buy the office, or will Thompson—the Appointed Colonel—be repudiated as he was in the first primary?

Shall we let the big oil companies control one of Texas' most important natural resources and regulate the price of crude oil and the retail price of gasoline through the appointment of their favorite—Col. Thompson?

The common people said "No" in the July primary, and we believe the people will again take control of the Commission Aug. 27. Vote for—

Don't Be Misled!

In 1931 we spent approximately $70,000 with the Texas Electric Service Company and allied companies for power used in the manufacture of ice or refrigeration. It is difficult to realize that under such conditions we should be faced with a distribution of ambiguous and misleading information about our product by the very people who receive our money for electrical energy. Usually it is the policy of companies receiving patronage to assist their customers.

Clean, aggressive, truthful selling is needed in business today, but a constant flow of erroneous information to the public through ads, folders and sales messages is not fair to the public's interest. We wish in this connection to exonerate employees of the Texas Electric Service Company in West Texas from voluntarily taking a part in unethical practices.

We have from time to time called the attention of the company to advertising and sales messages that were erroneous and misleading. We have given the executives and their department heads an opportunity to prove such erroneous statements. Such proof, however, was not forthcoming. Instead we received promises that such practices absolutely unfair to ice refrigeration would be discontinued. (The sales manuals and training instructions of electric refrigerator manufacturers resort to unwarranted and untruthful attacks on the employees of ice companies). It has been our earnest effort to select our employees from among the good citizens of the communities which we serve and train them in our business. As a protection to our business and to the sincere efforts of our ice service men who are endeavoring to give the public correct information about refrigeration, we take this occasion to clarify some of the statements most generally made.

PURITY OF FACTORY MADE ICE:

Water used in the factory manufacture of ice is subjected to a treating and filtering process so that it can be delivered to the customers absolutely pure. Even with this treating process it is necessary for us before the block is completely frozen to withdraw some of the water in which has accumulated mineral content which if frozen into the ice would be objectionable to our customers. The water must be kept in circulation by the use of compressed air during the freezing process to produce clear, crystal ice. The water used for making ice in a mechanical refrigerator is not subjected to this careful filtering and treating. Ice made in a mechanical refrigerator is frozen in an atmosphere that contains odors given off by the foods in the cabinet. All foods breathe and give off their own peculiar odors. This can not help but be absorbed in the ice as it is frozen. Numerous laboratory tests show the bacteria content of ice cubes to be greatly in excess of manufactured ice.

DESSERTS:

All manufacturers of desserts and food stuffs exercise great care in manufacturing to see that they are not produced in the presence of produce being held under refrigeration. This is a logical and common-sense procedure, yet the manufacturers and distributors of electric refrigeration recommend the preparation of desserts in the presence of a conglomeration of foods where the transfer of odors and impurities is prevalent.

TEMPERATURES IN ICE REFRIGERATORS:

Ice furnishes the refrigeration for the ice refrigerator. The motor, compressor and coils with the chemicals furnish refrigeration for the mechanical refrigerator. It is only fair to compare the operation of these two methods of refrigeration under the same cabinet conditions. Ice and mechanical both need a well constructed cabinet, in order to produce and maintain temperatures. Under these similar conditions the statements that temperatures in an ice refrigerator vary seldom go below 60 degrees—that the average temperatures are not better than 55 degrees—are absolutely false and erroneous. Such an ice refrigerator will maintain the five different degrees of cold for each kind of food as specified by the United States Bureau of Home Economics. The range of temperatures on tests of an ice and a mechanical refrigerator made in Texas are mentioned below.
Within a 12 day period the temperatures in the mechanical refrigerator ranged from 40 degrees to 64 degrees. A greater portion of the time the temperature was above 50 degrees. This included normal use, making a few ice cubes, with only the necessary defrosting. Twenty-five pounds of ice was purchased each day to make up the deficiency of the electric unit. Test in an ice refrigerator was under the same conditions, same efficiency of the refrigerator cabinet and used by the same family as the first mentioned mechanical refrigerator. On middle shelf of food compartment temperature remained practically steady, ranging from 44 degrees to 47 degrees. On top food shelf (the least cold shelf of the refrigerator) temperatures ranged from 46 degrees to 51 degrees. Temperatures in the milk and butter compartment, immediately below the ice chamber, averaged from 40 degrees to 42 degrees. All of the above was for a nine day test under approximately the same inside and outside conditions as in the mechanical test. Full and adequate service was obtained from the ice refrigerator.

MOIST AND DRY AIR:

Low temperatures alone are not sufficient to preserve foods. It is necessary that the form of refrigeration provide a washed, cleaned circulating air of the proper moisture content. It must be neither too dry nor too moist. In an efficient ice refrigerator the circulating air in the cabinet passes over the ice and leaves on the film of water (with which the block of ice is covered) the odors and bacteria that it has collected from the food in the refrigerator. The moist surface on the ice which contains the odors is taken out of the refrigerator through the drain pipe. This eliminates the carrying back into the refrigerator of the collected impurities. The air passing over the ice is washed and chilled and re-enters the food compartment refreshed. The moisture content of the air after leaving the ice through the natural functioning of ice at 32 degrees is just right—not too dry nor too moist. In a mechanical refrigerator where the low temperature refrigeration coils are inside the cabinet the air is dry. In fact mechanical refrigerator advertising, as well as their salesmen, make special mention of the dry air in a mechanical refrigerator. The accumulated frost on the coils in a mechanical refrigerator is the moisture taken from not only the air in the cabinet but from the food itself. Proof of these statements is contained in literature and sales manuals issued by the Copeland and General Electric commercial departments. The salesmen are taught that frost on refrigerating coils means moisture taken from the cabinet and the foods—that frost on coils means dehydration—that dehydration means loss of weight and flavor—dehydration means discoloration, necessitating trimmings.
This literature advocates higher temperatures with air having a high moisture content—they advocate wet plates or wet coils to absorb odors so that they can be taken out of the cabinet through a drain. However, in selling domestic units to the housewife, one of the above companies changes their sales tactics and recommends a low temperature, dry, crisp air. They state that the moisture of ice is not satisfactory for food preservation. They try to create the impression that the drain pipe in an ice refrigerator is dangerous. This is necessary to eliminate a mixture of food flavors.
IS THIS CONSISTENT? They endeavor to copy the natural automatic features of humidity and of air circulation of ice refrigeration in their commercial cabinets and turn around and belittle the same principles to the housewife in selling her a domestic mechanical refrigerator.

ADDITIONAL PROOF:

Domestic and commercial refrigerators are merely small cold storage houses. Modern cold storage engineers have found that the placing of refrigerating coils inside the room where foods are kept means a loss in weight due to dehydration which is evidenced by frost on the coils. MODERN cold storage refrigeration has taken the coils out of the room and supplied washed, purified, conditioned air for proper preservation of food-stuffs. For this reason the system of preserving food in a closed compartment where refrigeration coils are placed in the compartment is not modern food preservation.

DRAIN PIPE:

The elimination of odors from the refrigerator is very important to food preservation. Foods naturally give off odors. In order to prevent an interchange of odors the circulating air must be cleaned and the odors removed from the refrigerator. In an ice refrigerator they are taken outside the cabinet and absorbed in the melted ice. Similarly the commercial sales manual of the General Electric states that the wet plates in their commercial unit washes the air and absorbs the food odors which are carried away by the drain. This is necessary to eliminate a mixture of food flavors.
The drain pipe, as well as the balance of the ice refrigerator should be cleaned regularly. Any mechanical refrigerator must be cleaned just as regularly to be kept sanitary. Why then the tremendous stress put on the "Dirty Drain Pipe" by the mechanical refrigerator salesmen and by advertising when it takes care of one of the most important functions of food preservation? Salesmen for the same company use the drain pipe as one of their chief arguments against ice refrigeration to the domestic prospect, while in their commercial activity they have stressed the necessity of food odor elimination from the cabinet through the drain pipe, thereby agreeing with the principles of ice refrigeration.

SAVINGS DUE TO LARGE PURCHASES:

Ice in a well constructed refrigerator will maintain proper temperatures, correct humidity and a constant purified circulation of air for the preservation of foods. This is more than can be claimed for mechanical refrigeration. For this reason foods can be properly preserved longer under ice refrigeration conditions than they can under mechanical refrigeration. It is merely a matter of storage space. The large purchase argument is used by mechanical salesmen in connection with the very smallest units. A person can readily see that a three cubic foot unit can not hold the ordinary supply of food for the ordinary family for any great length of time. Still we see mentioned in ads the price of the very smallest units where the food saving argument is used. If you have a five cubic foot refrigerator using ice refrigeration you can make even more savings through the large purchases than the mechanical refrigerator owner who has a five cubic foot unit because excessive dehydration is eliminated in the ice refrigerator.

CURRENT CONSUMPTION:

Practically all of the kilowatt hour consumption quoted in advertising is based on the smaller sized units. We have seen many ads where the small consumption was quoted and the cuts of the refrigerator used in the ad were unmistakably those of the larger units that the company had for sale. The quotations of electric consumption do not take into consideration the extra heavy demand on the ice freezing capacity during the summer months. The salesman usually tells the customer that the refrigeration cost is based on the low step in the rate. An allied Company's engineer, however, stated the refrigeration cost is based on the average rate. This applied to the local conditions will make your mechanical refrigerator cost for power about on the same basis as your ice cost. This does not take into consideration any fixed charges that will be discussed in the next paragraph.

COMPARATIVE COST OF ICE AND MECHANICAL REFRIGERATION:

(Make Your Own Figures)

A mechanical refrigerator salesman endeavors to prove to the public that his form of refrigeration is less costly and will be of tremendous saving to the housewife. He can not help but admit that a mechanical refrigerator will cost from two and one half to three times as much as an ice refrigerator of the same capacity and same quality of construction and appearance. Interest in this section of the country should be figured on the original investment on the basis of at least 8%. An ice refrigerator of the same quality of construction as a mechanical unit will naturally have a longer life than others that need machinery for their operation. Therefore, depreciation should be figured on a basis of 7 1/2% on the ice refrigerator and 12 1/2% on the mechanical refrigerator. A minimum estimate for repairs is $2.00 per year during the life of the machine.
In the foregoing paragraph we made mention of the fact that under your local conditions your electric bill and ice bill should be approximately the same. In practically every mechanical proposal the public is told that mechanical refrigeration will save them from 40 to 60 dollars per year on food spoilage. In our paragraphs on proper refrigeration we have proven that ice refrigeration will preserve foods in better condition than mechanical units. Therefore this item must be eliminated.
You were told that from 30 to 40 dollars per year can be saved on account of buying in quantity at special weekly sales. Quantity buying depends upon the size of your refrigerator. With a five cubic foot ice refrigerator you can take advantage of weekly bargains to just as great an extent as a person with a five cubic foot mechanical unit. In the salesman's proposal he does not mention the fact that during the three summer months the capacity of the ice making unit will not be large enough to take care of your entire extra ice needs. If you use the proper amount of ice for garnishing and cooling drinks you will buy from five to ten dollars worth of extra ice during the summer period.
You are not advised by the salesman that on account of the dry air in a mechanical refrigerator you will be subjected to dehydration which means the loss of not only weight but the loss of some food due to discoloration.
In the sales literature of the commercial mechanical refrigerator manufacturers it is stated that meats are subjected to about 4% loss. It is only natural that other foods of a higher moisture content will lose to a great degree. This loss on the average yearly food bill represents from fifteen to thirty dollars per year per customer.

FURTHER PROOF:

The great refrigerator railroad transport companies in the United States have tried out mechanical refrigeration similar to the system used in the household electric unit. It was found that perishables could not be transported to the market and received in a salable condition because of dehydration. The over all costs were excessive and the continuance of ice refrigeration proves its technical and practical value.
Railroad companies are now using ice extensively for cooling passenger and Pullman cars. A few dining cars have been equipped with mechanical refrigeration for space cooling purposes and although there is sufficient capacity in refrigeration equipment on the cars the delightful foods which are served to passengers on these trains are refrigerated with ice. "Ice Man's Ice" is also used for table purposes. The engineers constructing these cars and the officials of railroads are highly trained refrigerating engineers and understand the necessary requisites of proper refrigeration. THOSE WHO REALLY KNOW PREFER ICE REFRIGERATION.

The above is given for your protection.

Refrigeration is vital to the home. It is a blessing to humanity, and its principles should be sold aggressively. The public should not, however, be misled as to the value of the various forms of refrigeration.

We feel the public should be protected against the inconsistency of sales messages on mechanical refrigeration. We feel that it is unfair to the public for a sales organization to tell the public that a cold, dry crisp air is the best method of food preservation, when the same company is spending thousands of dollars trying to manufacture and sell mechanical refrigeration equipment that embodies principles directly opposite to their domestic selling argument. We do not believe it is fair to the public for a sales organization to set their method of refrigeration up as modern refrigeration and refer to ice refrigeration as antique refrigeration, when the research department of their company is spending much money in an effort to imitate the automatic natural functions of ice refrigeration. We contend that ice refrigeration furnishes an ample supply of crystal clear, taste-free ice—that it furnishes ideal temperatures for food preservation—that it furnishes natural air circulation with an automatic control of humidity without machinery. This is ideal refrigeration and is brought to the customers at a less cost than other forms of refrigeration.

Dr. Ellington To Take Associate Into Office

Dr. Lee Q. Rogers of Dallas was in the city Saturday. Dr. Rogers, who is son of the Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Rogers, 708 Runnels street, was reared in Big Spring having worked in the Texas and Pacific offices here until five years ago when he decided to study dentistry. He went to S. M. U. for one year and four years to Baylor Dental College where he finished last May. He has been taking some special work in Orthodontia this summer and will be associated with Dr. E. O. Ellington in the Petroleum building after September the first. Dr. Rogers is a brother-in-law of Dr. A. L. Whited of Dallas, who was associated with Dr. Ellington for seven years, and is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hathcock of this city.

"Rebecca Of Sunnybrook Farm," Featuring Marian Nixon And Ralph Bellamy At Ritz Sunday

The amazing adventures and glorious romance of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," as vivified in the Fox production, featuring Marian Nixon and Ralph Bellamy, will occupy the screen at the Ritz Sunday. The choice of dainty, winsome, appealing Miss Nixon and tall, handsome Bellamy to enact the leading roles in this important feature picture came, it is said, as a reward for splendid work in recent successes.

Miss Nixon, it will be recalled, scored individually opposite Charles Farrell in "After Tomorrow," then repeated her success in her brilliant performance with Warner Baxter in "Amateur Daddy." Bellamy, who until now has had the up-hill struggle of establishing himself in unsympathetic, or "heavy" roles, was given the romantic part of Dr. Adam Ladd because of the capable manner in which he portrayed the German officer in "Surrender"; his important character study of the juvenile court judge in "Young America," and his depiction of the incorruptible police captain in "Disorderly Conduct."

Lavishness of production in both locale and settings is promised in the current version of the Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson masterpiece. It was filmed on a specially reconstructed Sunnybrook Farm, near Santa Cruz, California, with the reproduction of a New England blizzard in which the dramatic climax occurs.

Briefly, the film story recounts the main story of Rebecca, as immortalized in the book, revolving around her intense desire to win the regard of her spinster aunt; her interest in obtaining a wedding ring for the unwed mother of Jack-O-Lantern, and her romance with Dr. Adam Ladd. Mae Marsh, as Aunt Jane, and Louise Clooner Hale, as Aunt Miranda, portray the aged spinster aunts of Rebecca.

UNEQUAL REGULATION IN TRANSPORTATION CAUSES DISORDER AND CONFUSION

The instability, confusion and disorder which unrestrained truck transportation has brought about is responsible in large measure for much of the distress in which all business finds itself today. Texas has moved to find a remedy and all concerned in the welfare of this state and its institutions should cooperate in the effort to restore stability and order to our transportation systems.

The Texas Railroads, in these advertisements, have endeavored to place before the people of this state some of the reasons why the existing laws, regulating motor transportation, should be upheld and enforced.

1. The railroads are necessary for the successful marketing of the enormous production of this state, which is used and consumed in every other state in the union.

Uniform, published, non-discriminatory transportation service rates are essential to the orderly conduct and welfare of business.

Unregulated truck transportation inevitably results in discriminatory charges and practices, rebating, unfair and unbusinesslike competitive methods, bringing about losses and commercial insecurity.

The wholesaler, jobber, retailer and local merchant suffer from the unfair competition of truckers and peddlers who, for the most part, are non-residents, pay no taxes and contribute nothing to the community welfare.

The farmer and agricultural producer must have at his command facilities adequate to transport crops and produce which move long distances in large volume, at low cost, by rail.

2. The railroads build and maintain their own roadways, pay heavy taxes for the support of state and municipal governments and institutions, and expend millions of dollars for payrolls, materials and supplies. Railroad workers are substantial citizens, home owners, and valued members of their communities.

3. Rail transportation is the most efficient and economical in existence for the movement of traffic in volume by land.

4. Texas highways belong to the people and are built and maintained at heavy cost. Their use for commercial purposes is a privilege, not a right. They should be kept safe for general use and not prematurely destroyed by heavy trucks.

5. The stability, security and orderly conduct of business require reasonable control and regulation of all transportation agencies.

for LOVE or MONEY

H.W. CORLEY
BY THE AUTHOR OF
"THE SILENT PARTNER"

CHAPTER XXII

Mona gazed at the closed door in amazement. She stood very still, the color receding from her lovely face.

Barry Townsend wished to marry her! He had given her a year after that marriage to decide whether she wished to divorce him or whether she had been able to fall in love with him.

But she was in love with Barry now! She had been in love with him ever since she had first seen him. How could she fail to have understood? Why had he kept silent when he had the opportunity to speak to her at Twilands? What about Miss Dower? Yes, there was still Miss Dower to be reckoned with. And why should he make all this known to her through Mr. Garretson's uncle's lawyer? Barry was ill, of course, but if that were the cause it seemed to Mona that the matter could have waited.

But what did all this matter if she was really to have Barry? The part, so clearly explained by Mr. Garretson, about the money, was unimportant. She would have married Barry without a cent! She would have been glad to go to the tropics with him, even to dig in the mines. Anything to be with him.

As Mona returned to her desk her eyes fell on the check still folded in her hand. That would take care of her father. Reindorsing it, she scribbled a note to Dr. Dean and placed it in an envelope. As she walked to the mail chute this business of Dad's care off her mind, she felt freer to deal with her own affairs.

How she wished that she could see Steve! For some inexplicable reason she felt vaguely disturbed. Reaching for the telephone she was assured by central that Steve's number gave no answer.

Well, this was something she must decide for herself. Briefly she spoke over the telephone again, this time to Mr. Garretson. She had considered the matter, she said and was ready to accept.

"Excellent!" he replied promptly. "I can assure you that you will regret it. You have some gill friends, I suppose, who would go with you? The ceremony is to be performed at Twilands. I'll send the car for you at about 10 tomorrow morning. You can make your arrangements and drive out together. I'll meet you there. Is that satisfactory?"

Mona gave him Lottie's address. She had decided that she would spend the night with Lottie instead of going home. For some reason Mona felt it unwise to tell her mother of the approaching marriage. If it all seemed strange to Mona, what would Mrs. M say?

"Then Mr. Townsend expects me tomorrow?" asked Mona timidly. Her employer laughed reassuringly. "He hardly dares expect you, but he will be very pleased when I tell him the news and by the way, you'll want to buy a few things. I'm sending Miss Drury out with an envelope."

The envelope with which Miss Drury presently appeared contained several bills. In Mr. Garretson's precise handwriting it was further explained that Mona and her friend might use the car the next morning and that they would be expected at Twilands at about one o'clock. The ceremony was to be extremely simple because Mr. Townsend was not at all well.

Once more Mona lifted the telephone to apprise Lottie that she wished to spend the night with her. The excitement in her voice aroused Lottie's curiosity immediately.

"Is it anything particular?" she asked hopefully.

"Wait until you hear!" Mona returned. "I'm going to be married tomorrow!"

Lottie was parading the tiny living room when Mona rang. "The blushing bride!" she exclaimed. "When in the world did all this happen? Who's the lucky man?"

Her hat flung aside, Mona sank to the couch and told Lottie briefly of her interview with Mr. Garretson. As she talked she ran slender fingers through the usually unruffled smoothness of her carefully groomed hair.

"You're nervous as a witch!" Lottie declared. "Here—let me get this straight! You got the money from the firm and sent it to the doctor that means your Dad's all set. You don't have to go on the marriage block to lift the mortgage?"

She sank to the floor at Mona's feet. "Now then, old Garretson said that one of his clients wanted to marry right away and had picked you. Who is this romantic bird anyhow? Why didn't he put an ad in the paper?"

Mona laughed nervously in spite of herself. "That's what I don't understand, Lottie," she said. "You see the man is Barry."

Mona nodded miserably. "That's why it's all so queer. Of course I know Barry is ill but he and his uncle aren't on good terms, you know. Why should his uncle want him to marry me, just a working girl?"

"Say—he can count himself darned lucky!" Lottie began hotly. Mona slept but Lottie lay awake, her brows knitted in the dark. Later Mona awoke to find Lottie still thinking, sitting up in bed, arms tightly pressed about her knees, her head bent.

"So you're going to live in that brownstone Townsend house, Min," she said. "Well, here's power to you. I walked past it just the other day."

"You won't do that again, Lottie," Mona answered drowsily. "Why not?"

"You won't walk past with me living there. You'll come in!" Lottie squeezed her friend's hand affectionately. "You're a good kid, Min. I wish you lots of happiness." And Mona's wedding day dawned to find both of them fast asleep.

Mona interrupted to say, "I've tried to reach Steve to ask him about it but he doesn't answer his telephone."

"I'll try again," the other girl offered.

But there was no answer to the call. Lottie announced that they might as well eat and ordered sandwiches sent from a restaurant across the street.

"Well, we can't figure out the rest of it," she said, filling the percolator with coffee. "But at least we can plan what you're to wear. Let's see—your blue suit. No, wait a minute! Wear mine. It's newer. I brought a hat home tonight and you can have that. It will be swell with the suit. We'll get a lace blouse. Let's see—about shoes—"

Mona's shoes did not quite pass muster and it was decided to purchase new ones.

"We could buy a complete outfit, Lottie," Mona insisted. "I have the money—"

"Yet, but time is scarce. It took me 10 days to decide on that suit. It will be okay on you but it's just for tomorrow, though. I'll lend it to you for luck and then you can send it back."

They planned practically and swiftly. The shopping list included a new blouse, gloves, shoes and hose. Flowers were considered but vetoed.

"Maybe the bridegroom gets the flowers still even if he does propose through his lawyer," Lottie said.

A rapid tossing through her dressing table brought forth a collection of lingerie for the wedding day.

Lottie upheld Mona in her decision not to telephone her mother until the ceremony had been performed. "You can still change your mind or he can change his," Lottie pointed out as at last the girls prepared for bed.

Yes, and Barry's uncle can change his, which is more to the point," Mona agreed. The whole thing seemed so strange to her—so

Jacob Walters was given a verbal speaking by Davis and branded as a former brewer and liquor lobbyist. He shamed and poked fun at Tom Lova for supporting the governor, and for urging a bolt in the general election.

"One woman said in that Sterling meeting that they had to enlighten the rural people. Why that crowd trying to enlighten the rural people is like a jack ass trying to teach a Sunday School class," declared Davis, and the crowd responded with a roar.

Defense of Ferguson for participation in the Langhorne case was made by the speaker. In the first place, he said, Mrs. Ferguson did not pardon but commuted a death sentence to life imprisonment for the Langhorne boy. A petition was presented to Mrs. Ferguson, he went on, but he charged "they" stole it out of the secretary of state's office the minute she went out of office. Jake Walters was linked by the speaker with the case as a petitioner for commutation.

Ferguson's lien on Langhorne land was for attorney's fees, Davis sought to explain.

"I believed those Langhorne case lies until July 21, then I began working for Pa and Ma as fast as I could," he confessed. Fayette county, scene of the murder, gave Mrs. Ferguson a 4-1 lead, and Washington county, vitally interested in the case, returned a Ferguson 2-1 lead, he said. Relatives of the murdered girl supported the Ferguson, he declared.

Then Davis tore into the Ben Richards score. He alleged these things: Richards was pardoned by Sterling because he was the "fastest worker" in Tarrant county; any convict could get a pardon from Sterling if he could swing enough votes; Richards tampered with ballot boxes in Tarrant county; Richards resigned when Davis signed a complaint; Sterling, while pardoning less than a score, had paroled well over three thousand.

"Jim Ferguson went into the office with pardoning power in his hand and milk of human kindness in his heart," explained Davis. "It is written that ninety and nine guilty had better go free than one innocent suffer. That's Christian religion. That's Fergusonism."

"Christ said, 'Go thy way and sin no more.' That's what Ferguson said. Sterling says, 'Come out of prison you convict and get votes for me and sell stock in my friend's concern,'" he said dramatically.

Davis flayed Sterling supporters for use of slander, saying we have no slander sheets; we tell no lies—we let the opposition tell all the lies.

As far as Davis was concerned Ferguson had no lobby record. He denied Ferguson lobbied for the American Tobacco company against the cigarette tax, and branded the tax as just another means by which Sterling could make ends meet instead of reducing government expenditures. If Jim was a lobbyist, he held him to have the people as clients.

"Proxy government?" he asked. "We got it now. Dan Moody is running the state and big oil companies are paying him to do it. Sterling has said that big oil companies favored Ma. If there is a God in Heaven he will hold him accountable for that lie," he said with classical gesture.

Davis believed that Mrs. Ferguson will win by the largest majority in twenty years "unless ballot boxes are tampered with."

He admitted he was after electing Mrs. Ferguson "but I want Jim in there, and I don't mean maybe," he snarled.

Opening the banking case, he recounted allegations that Sterling was forced to borrow money from the Humble Oil company to prevent his bank in Houston from closing.

Federal highway aid was not withdrawn during the Ferguson administration, he emphatically stated. Such was done, he declared, during the opening days of Moody's governorship. Davis accused the governor of now tearing up good roads to put men to work in order to gain support. He accused the administration of neglecting Ferguson built roads and favoring Sterling constructed highways. He complained that the new highway built from Iatan flat through Mitchell, Nolan and Taylor counties was the "worst for the money in any state."

Seeking to make truth and Fergusonism synonymous, he predicted a Ferguson majority in Howard county.

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

We are writing this, as Arthur Brisbane begins, on the morning after the official press convention dance. And not even Brisbane could offer a more adequate explanation.

The average reader no doubt is not acquainted with R. C. Hankins of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, and that, we readily assure you, is the average reader's misfortune. Mr. Hankins is interested in each and every form of sport and in several phases of life that cannot be connected with athletics in any way such as brunettes, blondes, red-heads. He does, however, consent to speak about football between intermissions, and the gist of his remarks lead one to believe that it will be a very unprofitable autumn for the Midland Bulldogs.

The Barrymen, to begin with, have lost Nead McCall and Lloyd Burris, the mainstay of a team that was the third best in the district last year. We are quoting Hankins, you must remember, and Hankins admits that Midland could have never beaten Big Spring so it must be San Angelo he is referring to as having a poorer club than Midland. The statement is of course in open argument but it is not for us to defend San Angelo.

There is no one who appears likely to replace Captain Burris in the backfield and certainly no one apt to develop into as good an end as was line-captain McCall. It is as suspected. Nor are any good players apt to move into Midland. We might add any good people at all, football players or not, but then that may be carrying it too far since some good people have funny ideas.

Coshoma's baseball "revolution" saw its first battle Friday and the Reids and Walkers won out 4 to 0. Nathan Walker hurled a two hit game, and his mates scored off of Hutto and Devaney in the first four innings to account for their quartet of tallies.

Incidentally we are informed by responsible parties that this youth,

Devaney, still in his teens, is the best second baseman in the county and is a better infielder than Les Walker.

The Stanton Buffaloes, with Rufus Hyde again at the helm, are planning their third straight championship this fall, but are perhaps too optimistic since such stalwarts as Woodrow Wilson, Bill Kelly, and etc. are missing from the eligibility list. Hyde's best backfield bet is probably a youth named Ely who saw quite a bit of service last season but who was not a regular.

A half-dozen lettermen are expected back from last year's team, among them Pud O'Conner, John Hawkins, Artie Eubanks, J. P. Ruggles, and Lindley Metcalfe. Hawkins and Metcalfe are the co-captains.

The Forsan Oilers, who if it weren't for importations and roster mixups, would not be apt to lose a game, have announced their desire to play the Big Spring White Collars at an early date. Manager Lex James has not been reached by this department but we are sure the date can be arranged. After Cosden the Jamesmen can stand anything.

"Hub" Rutherford's career as manager of the Mexican Tigers, who can be readily suspected of being temperamental at times, is at present just mediocre. The Felinas have beaten the Jones Valley Sluggers 3 to 2 and have lost to Coshoma 6 to 3. However, the latter defeat is not to the Tigers' discredit, since this chap Brown is apt to beat anyone.

Excuse us while we go get several drinks of water.

DEMOS CONFIDENT

DALLAS, (UP)—Democratic leaders of the nation are confident the party already has won the national campaign. Jed C. Adams, national committeeman from Texas, said Friday on his return from two weeks visiting in the east.

"I contacted many democrats from all parts of the country and the feeling of certain victory was universal. Speaker John Garner made a splendid impression on the east," Adams said.

WALKER MOTION DENIED

STATE CAPITOL, Albany, N. Y. (UP)—Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, Friday lost his fight for dismissal of the 15 charges of misconduct filed against him with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt by Samuel Seabury, counsel for the Hofstadter investigating committee.

The governor, after hearing two days of argument by John J. Curtin, the mayor's counsel, that the charges were "worthless and without foundation" denied a motion to dismiss the accusations.

GARNER BACK AT WORK UVALDE, (UP)—Speaker John Garner reached his home here shortly before noon Friday, lunched and immediately waded into a mass of correspondence accumulated during his trip to New York to see Governor Roosevelt, his running mate in the presidential election.

Although up most of the night, Garner was in a good mood and seemed none the worse for the journey.

WASHINGTON (UP)—Department of justice officials expressed the belief Friday that it would be difficult to prove the indictment charges returned by a federal grand jury against Senator James J. Davis, Republican, Pennsylvania, and six others for alleged operation of fraternal lodges.

What Is a Guarantee? IS THE SAFETY IT INSURES WORTH CONSIDERATION; OR IS ITS VALUE OVERRATED?

Millions of dollars are spent annually to acquaint the public with the stability of institutions, the dependability of their products and the protection afforded the public or investor when it purchases merchandise or services. This publicity has made many slogans, signs, emblems, etc., public by-words. Has this been worth while? If so, to whom; the institutions or the public? Those in a position to know, state that the public has been saved billions of dollars by being educated to expect and demand service of a dependable character. Most banks are safe banks, but the ones displaying the tiny emblem "Member of the Federal Reserve Bank System" are KNOWN beyond the shadow of a doubt to be absolutely reliable.

So it is with the letters M. D. which only physicians who are fully qualified are permitted to display after their names. M. D. represents to you the same character of dependability that the bankers' sign guarantees. It tells you that the physician has devoted about eighteen years to the preparatory study, work and experience that are essential to enable one to intelligently diagnose and treat disease.

Certainly no service is more important than that you expect when your health and perhaps life itself is endangered. There is no occasion when the character of service should have more careful consideration than when you need medical attention. To refuse to accept a substitute in merchandise or other service and not heed the emblem of responsibility when in need of medical service is not only inconsistent but many times dangerous.

M. D.—These two letters offer you protection, knowledge, experience and dependability. Will you say that you or your family are entitled to less?

Richard Dix Stars In 'Roar Of The Dragon' Billed At Ritz Tues.

Richard Dix, star of "Cimarron," "Secret Service" and other recent new kind of role in "Roar of the Dragon," the dramatic story of turbulent Manchuria, coming to the Ritz Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

In contrast to the rollicking light-hearted character he usually portrays, Dix is seen as a cynical, disillusioned skipper of the Chinese river service, with little faith in men and none at all in women.

His boat disabled by Chinese bandits, Dix and his varied group of passengers take refuge in a small interior village where they convert a former Mandarin's palace into a stockade.

Here, under fire from the bandits and threatened by plague, Dix meets and falls in love with a beautiful Russian woman of mystery. Her calm courage, her willingness to risk the meanest privation to remain with him, rejuvenate Dix and he changes from a selfish sluggard to a daring leader of the beleaguered refugees.

The romance has as a stirring background the terrible life of a Chinese village, torn by civil strife and ruthless bandit raids. A graphic picture is presented of the chaotic conditions of the Orient today.

Supporting Dix is Gwilt Andre, young Danish actress who created a sensation in Hollywood even before the release of her first picture. Tall, slender, and with a striking blonde beauty, Miss Andre is a perfect foil for Dix in this spirited film.

Edward Everett Horton, ZaSu Pitts, Arline Judge and Dudley Digges have important roles in this RKO Radio picture directed by Wesley Ruggles.

"Vanishing Frontier," Old California Story Ritz Feature Friday

"Vanishing Frontier," a story of Old California, starring Johnny Mack Brown and featuring Evelyn Knapp, ZaSu Pitts, Raymond Hatton and J. Farrell MacDonald, opens Friday at the Ritz theatre.

The story is set in the period immediately following California's annexation to the United States, but before the territorial government had been set up.

Under command of an unimaginative officer, the United States cavalry enforces martial law.

Brown has the role of a Spaniard-American who shows his resentment against the military rule by organizing a band of guerrillas to fight the wrongs committed by the soldiers.

Like some 18th century Robin Hood, he steals back from the cavalry the money they have taken from the natives, and then restores it to the former owners.

Into the picture comes Miss Knapp, daughter of a general Brown, deeply in love with her, risks his life to see her. Soon she loves him, too. But there is much thrilling action before the two are finally united.

That occurs only after the military government has been replaced by a civil one.

The picture is filled with stirring and breathless incidents. Battles between the guerrillas and the military, escapes from a convict ship, midnight rides through precipitous canyons, and many other such sequences contribute to the suspense.
