operation between the student and the mother.

The influence of the parent-teacher association at the Ranger high school has not been a marked feature of the present school year, but should the association decide to "mother" the young people of the school in a whole hearted way and enter into their joys as they seek to enter into their student lives, it is safe to say that they would soon have the support of the entire student body. Would it not be better to encourage them in wholesome pleasure, students and teachers alike, and provide for them enjoyable, properly chaperoned dances and other parties, than to say "thou shalt not," and attempt to punish them for dirt. things which all young people are innocently enjoying today?

The action of the school board leaves no opportunity for the parentteacher association.

Because some do not believe in Because some do not believe in thick. dancing is no reason why they should attempt to make the world believe picks and shovels, which Canfield, Hills mansion and friends said he as they do, and a closer touch could who had turned to digging water knew the history of every one be kept on all the young people in this way with a more wholesome situation resulting than to put the clamps on as has been done, thereby creating an inclination of revolt and desire to do something "behind the scenes" which is bound to engender a feeling of suspicion both ways and a genernal unhappy state of affairs.

The young people of today are going to dance, whether they are of school age or older, and those who are wise are ready to help them to a good time in the proper place where stop. all conditions surrounding them are conducive to good morals with the hours of the dance so aranged that there shall be a proper closing hour and no staying out until the "wee sma' hours.

It might be well for the school board study this situation and not shut their eyes blindly to the spirit of the times which is certainly not that of Puritan days, nor ever will be again. Speaking of the teachers one sane mother said not long ago, "I see no reason why the teachers in our public schools should have to sign away their rights and liberties outside of school hours when they sign their contract with the board, but I do think that they should so conduct themselves at all times that they might be examples to those they are teaching."

Without doubt those same teachers would be more willing to endeavor to be examples if they felt that the anew. Doheny was then 40. While working at odd jobs, Doheny happened to pick up a book on the oil exudes of California, written by W. A. Goodyear, assistant state geo-logist of California in 1887, after Goodyear had made a careful inves-tion to state. Doheny's faith, however, never faltered, and he made the few as-sociates who stuck with him indepen-dently wealthy. He bought up all the stock in his enterprises he could afford untit he finally owned 40 per cent of Mexican Petroleum, the parent company. Goodyear had made a careful inves-tigation of oil prospects in the state. Doheny studied the volume reli-giously, read it through time and again and absorbed all the knowledge of oil possibilities in California which Goodyear had compiled, which being a writer and student, instead of a gambler, he had failed to capitalize. One day Doheny saw a dump wag-on going down the street filled with refuse. Part of the load was a thick, refuse. Part of the load was a thick, black substance, like oil. He dropped his tools and followed the wagon and then went back when it return-ed to a section of the city, then in the outskirts, for another load of Doheny Knew Art.
