SIBLEY DRILLED DEEPER HITS GUSHER PACE

Wildcat Drilled Four Inches Deeper Makes 2088 Barrels Daily

The first gusher struck since the boom days was developed late Thursday afternoon when the drill pierced the sand in the Minnie Sibley No. 1 of Mook-Texas and C. R. Starnes near Staff, four inches deeper. According to reliable information the well was making at the rate of 2.088 barrels a day flowing naturally. Sand was struck at 3,060 feet and made approximately 600 barrels and then dropped down to 250 barrels. The dropped down to 250 barrels. The bit barely touched the sand.

With the spread of the news that the gusher had been struck at Staff,

Starnes planned to make locations for offset and spud in at once.

The Minnie Sibley is what may be termed to be in wildcat territory. Like the Gholson pool area, it was passed up in the early days with por stuff that did not prove up much. There was practically no drilling in the immediate vicinity of Staff. The talent is very much excited over the well and quite a few are of the opinion that if drilled deeper will make more than 3,000 barrels a day. It may reach that yet at the present Considerable interest also is being manifested in the Watson No. 1 that has bridged. The bridge is expected be cleared away sometime today. This well is making around 300 bar-els and proved the Ramsower disrict northward a short distance.

According to later reports the Siby well bridged last night at midght and stopped flowing. Steps are ding taken today to remove the ridge that the flow may be restored.

Eastland High Easy Winner in Tennis Tournament Over Gorman. Exhibits are Classed as Excellent With More Than Twenty Schools With Exhibits in Position

With more than 1,500 in attendance from all over the county at the interscholastic meet, and everything ready, it did not take long to get everything to working smoothly and by noon the prelim-inaries in the debates and declamations were complete. It is esti-mated that at least thirty-five schools, rural and urban, have teams entered in the various ath-letic events, the preliminaries of which are being held on the Lillard field this afternoon.

This morning was given over to preliminaries in the literary division of the meet, except the tennis finals. tennis preliminaries have been held during the past several weeks be-tween the towns, with the finals nar-cowed down to Eastland and Gorman. Eastland proved an easy victor in both the boys and girls singles, and also in the boys and girls doubles.
In the tennis singles, E. Laurent was an easy winner, although at times the Gorman entry made the lad from the county seat stretch himself.

Government information indicated the public is in better condition to weather a coal strike at this time than it has been for years and there should be no suffering from fuel chortage before fall.

Prohibition On Food May Return Home Cooking

If the regime of prohibition continues to spread ,food will be the next thing banned, Edna Ferber told a Yale audience the other night. Well, maybe that's the only way we'll ever get around to home cooking again. The ban on food would just suit some of the ladies who have quit eating, anyhow. Maybe if some people had to take their soup in a speak-easy they'd their soup in a speak-easy they'd not be so boisterous about it. It is high time something were done about the men who go around overfeeding their vests. If food prohibition does come, the sheiks can forget their hip flasks and start stringing their belts with doughnuts.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

Diversified farming is paying big profits in many sections of the country, in fact it is paying well wherever it is properly employed, and there is no good reason why it should not pay handsome returns in Eastland country. Let it be said here that diversification is being practiced to a considerable extent in this county, and profitably so. The success thus far attained in this direction should be conclusive proof of its soundness and should be an incentive to a darger movement in that direction.

In the March issue of Manufacturers Record, Governor Clifford Walker of Georgia has some very pointed remarks in favor of diversified farming. He tells how its scientific practice has materially in whom as she said is "one who sate and bank indebtedness in the sections where it is properly employed.

Some sixty miles to the south is Jerusalem.

The Hill of Megiddo today is a gaunt, bare mound, thirteen acres in extent at the top, resembling somewhat a butte of the southwestern American desert. Past it have trudged some of the greatest armies of the world. It has known the overlordship of Egypt and Nineveh. From the bustling city that once marked its site Jews were carried captives to Babylon. In limestone caves at its base lived and died primitive peoples who knew no other shelter than a cave. It has known the dread Macedonian phalanx of the Great Alexander and his dream of world dominion. It has known the legions of Rome. It has known the legions of Rome. It has watched the crusaders on their way to recover the Holy Sepulchre from the infidels. Napoleon's campaign to Egypt and the East brought the "Little Corporals" armies near to it. And in 1919 the British general, Lord Allenby, defeated the Turks at Megiddo and ended German dominance in that corner of the world.

Scene of Many Battles.

BEFORE the once thriving city of Megiddo were fought numerous battles. Many times its walls were assaulted. Its story is one of countless deaths, of victory and defeat; a story of pillage and destruction. But because of its strategic location, destruction, partial or complete, would be followed by rebuilding. Time would elapse. Broken mud brick walls would be washed by the rains, would collapse and become part of the Hill. Into the Hill would fall the weapons, ornaments, utensils, tombs and places of worship. Then in an interval of peace people would return. Houses would be built again on the sites of the old.

This process of decay and rebuilding went on for thousands of years, swell-

This process of decay and rebuilding went on for thousands of years, swelling the size of the original Hill of Megiddo and burying within the Hill records of antiquity which scientists now are digging out. The whole has been roughly likened to a layer cake, with cities representing successive civilizations and conquests buried layer on layer within, the last settlement on top, the others beneath in the order of their building. At the top has been found a Roman settlement. Excavations near the base reveal traces of a settlement of people who lived in what is known as the Early Bronze Age.

Vast Treasure House.

THIS swollen Hill of Megiddo, twenty of Haifa, which is toward the southeastern end of the Mediterranean Seastern end Western Asia, directed by Mr. K. S. Sandford. Several extensive researches are also in progress in Chicago itself. General administrative oversight of the different Institute projects is maintained by the secretary, Dr. T. George Allen.

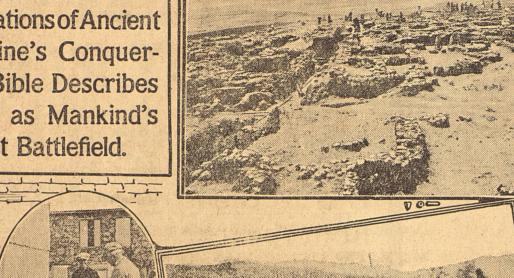

In planning the Megiddo expedition not the least of the problems to be solved was the proper housing of the members of the staff and the valuable records and objects to be taken from the Hill. Consequently, plans for what now is known as "Chicago House" were made at the Oriental Institute in Chicago. The importance of such careful planning is well attested by the fact that even with all the precautions taken, the entire staff of the expedition oversight of

THIS swollen Hill of Megiddo, twenty-two miles inland from the city of Haifa, which is toward the southeastern end of the Mediterranean Sea, is a vast treasure-house of archeological lore, and has been recognized as such for many years. Excavations on an adequate scale, however, were not begun until the autumn of 1925, when the expedition of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago started on a five-year excavation program.

organization and work of the The organization and work of the Oriental Institute is far-reaching and unique. It is a research laboratory, or, rather, a whole series of laboratories coordinated, whose general aim is to trace the processes and stages of the long development by which we moderns have become what we are. This aim involves the Institute in the task of recovering the processes and stages of the long development by which we moderns have become what we are. This aim involves the Institute in the task of recovering a whole group of lost civilizations in the Near East, where western civilization has its roots. The envisioning of this comprehensive linking up of man's beginnings with their culmination in civilized cultures is due to Dr. James H. Breasted, the director of the Oriental Institute. Doctor Breasted not only organized his vision into a practical program, but made that program so vital in its appeal that John D.

Four Other Expeditions.

Need for Fire-Protection. DESCRIBING the planning of Chicago House, Doctor Breasted says: "Certain features were easily provided. We knew we could get plenty of local stone for the walls and foundations, wood and fire-resistive roof covering for the roof, and a contractor in Haifa to provide the workmen and superintend the construction. But there was another feature not so easily provided. "The Meriddo expedition is the most

When the sheetrock arrived members of the expedition were living in tents; high winds were wearing the tents badly; the autumn rains were imminent, and it was imperative that the house be made habitable as soon as possible. "Because of its portability and the Hill a Natural Fortress.

AS HAS been said, the importance of the Hill of Megiddo from many thousands of years before the dawn of written history—which itself begins some thousands of years before Christ—up until the year 1919, when Allenby defeated the Turks there, was due to its strategic location. In a phrase, the Hill is a natural fortress. As such it was used by the primitive peoples of the Early Bronze Age, who dwelt in the limestone caves near the base, supplied with fresh water from a spring near the summit. ear the summit.

With the passing of the years more and more people emigrated to this country of Northern Palestine, where on the Plain of Megiddo they found pasturage for their flocks and soil fertile for tilling. They came presumably in tribes or family groups, driving their flocks before them and living in rude shelters of skins or in cases. ing their fields before them and living in rude shelters of skins or in caves.

And while this infiltration into Northern Palestine was going on, great empires were growing up round about, with the greatest of all, Egypt, to the southwest, and with Assyria and Babylonia on the east. In these times the people of Northern Palestine were themselves growing more civilized; for through Palestine ran the international trade route, the path on which the hoofs of camels padded as the traders took their wares by caravan from the highly cultured kingdom of Egypt to the cities of North Syria, Assyria, and Babylonia.

And on the main trade route lay Megiddo.

"Will not horse come behind horse," they asked, "and man behind man, likewise? Shall our advance guard be fighting while our rear guard is yet standing in Aruna?" These objections showed a good military understanding of the dangers of the pass; but Thutmose swore a round oath that he would move against his enemies by the most direct route, and they might follow or not as they pleased."

Thutmose Wins Victory,

A ND move against them he did. Fortune favored him in that the generals commanding the army opposed to him were incompetent or of dissenting opinions. Perhaps they believed he would come around by one of the less direct routes and had prepared to receive him at some place other than before the Pass of Megiddo. At any rate they let him get his army safely out of the pass and drawn up on the plain before the city. In the resulting engagement Thutmose was completely successful.

This battle of Megiddo is the first of which history has a detailed account, Inscribed on the great temple of Amon at Karnak, Egypt, is an elaborate record of it, which has been deciphered by Doctor Breasted and included in his "History of Egypt."

From the Bible we learn that in the days of the Judges the neighborhood of Megiddo witnessed the defeat of the Canaanite general, Sisera, by Deborah and Barak. Later the city was fortified by Solomon. At Jezreel, near by the usurper Jehu slew King Joram of Israel and King Ahaziah of Judah and Ahaziah, wounded, fled to and died at Megiddo. WILL REBUILD OHIO'S FIRST FRONTIER TOWN AS MEMORIAL

State Legislature Provides Funds Through Appropriation for Purchase of Property And Restoration of Village

By JACK V. SCOUTT (United Press Staff Correspondent) COLUMBUS, O .- Schoenbrun, the first town to be established in the Northwestern Territory and the most successful Indian mission established in America during the 18th century, is to rise from its ashes.

On April 19, 1777, the inhabitants of the little frontier town, gathered behind its stockade for their last church service, razed the little church to prevent its destruction by barbarous hands and fled before advances of an Indian uprising.

On April 19, 1927, the sesquicentennal date of the last meeting of its pilgrim populace, the Rev. J. E.

Weinland, pastor of the Moravian church at Dover, will see his hopes and dreams ,take active form. Schoenbrun, or 'Beautiful Spring,' is to be painstakingly reproduced. Log for log, its stockade will be re-

A bill before the 97th Ohio legislature will provide a $25,000 appropriation for the restoration of the lit-

The 85th general assembly appropriated $10,000 which enabled tile Tuscarawas county Historical society to purchase the bulk of the property on which the town once stood. his flock, and an unusual personage in the northwest territory. History relates that the zealous settler's oral courage quelled an armed uprising of the savage tribes of the region, and prevented an armed descent of the aborigines upon the border states.

He established friendly relations with the neighboring tribes and for 5 years the little mission lived and grew. But in 1777, the war cries again sounded in the forests, and this time with an ominous note. The mission populace fled and the village was destroyed.

The plan of restoration is now de

A STATEMENT TO THE CITIZENS OF RANGER

It is being rumored that I'm going to leave Ranger and many have come to me to verify this.

In fairness to all I state here and now that it is my intention to make Ranger my home and if possible to keep my business interest here.

It would not be fair to ask the voters to elect me to the city commission knowing that I would not be here, hence this statement.

Announcing

Change in Ownership

We have bought the store, stock and fixtures of the Shipp Grocery & Market on Strawn Road, and will continue to operate it along the same lines through which the Shipps have won the favor and confidence of hundreds of customers.

We expect to build our business on the basis of providing our trade with high class proceries at reasonable prices, ever treating our patrons with courtesy and politeness and giving the very best of service.

Our stock of Meats and Groceries is fresh and clean and we have modern and sanitary methods of keeping our stock of perishables.

Sig Faircloth will be in charge, and we invite his many friends to visit us and patronize us and solicit the new trade and old trade to give us a trial.

We appreciate your business.

Indiana Senate Acquits Judge On All Charges

The Postal Telegraph company of Ranger is the banner office for the fourth district of the southern division of the Postal Cable company, having shown the greatest increase in business from March 1, 1926, to March 1, 1927.

Towns included in the district which have been competitors with the Ranger office for the 1926-27 banner are Sweetwater. Pine Bluff, Ark., Lake Charles, La., Alexandria, La., Sherman, Port Arthur, Helena, Ark., Temple, Abilene and Paris.

This record is considered very remarkable inasmuch as the Ranger office is a comparatively new one as it only opened up here in 1924.

British Tommies See Action in Shanghai

Your "Tommy this and Tommy that" has come into his own again at Shanghai. The British troops shown above led by two colonials bearing the insigna of British power, are the Gloucesters and the Durhams, who were the first foreign troops to see real action in the rioting which followed capture of Shanghai by the Cantonese. They are pictured as they marched along Nanking road in Shankhai a short time before the Cantonese attack.

Hoover Appears Big Favorite To Succeed Kellogg

w. Wadsworth, erstwhile senator from New York, will not be diminished. Wadsworth, young enough and of sufficient personality still to have a political career ahead of him, is very popular with the Senate—even with many Democrats.

Ex-Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin is not so popular, but he played close to Coolidge and Kellogg during the last Congress and he is not to be dismissed as a possibility.

President Coolidge, however, is credited with a tendency toward abandoning the old habit of appointing "lame ducks" to important jobs and the general opposition to the practice might well dissuade him from resuming it.

Dwight Morrow, member of the House of Morgan and Amherst classmate and close personal friend of the president, is one of the most interesting possibilities, but there is bound to be certain opposition to the installation of a Morgan partner in such a high place.

Wolves Prey On Livestock Over Eastland County

WASHINGTON.—Gossip in the cabinet on these spring afternoons is said to run toward a general feeling that Secretary of Commerce Hoover will succeed Frank B. Klelologg as secretary of state.

This is not a new suggestion, but the quarters from which it now emanates may lend it added weight.

Hoover is said to have cherished a desire to occupy the State Department job. It might be considered likely to afford him a chance to further his presidential ambitions and might indicate that President Coolidge looked kindly on those ambitions.

On the other hand, Hoover will have plenty to say about whether he will cuceed Kellogg. It may be that he now considers the post a thankless job and holding prespect of nothing but grief. Hoover is extremely sensitive to criticism and he has observed perforce the bitter criticism to which Mr. Kellogg has been subjected in recent months. The mere possibility of a senatorial investigation of the State Department might cause him to think twice, for Hoover's most distinguished enemies are to be found in the Senate.

If the widespread talk of a Senate investigation should take more definite form, the chances of James W. Wadsworth, erstwhile senator from New York, will not be diminished. These Views Tell th Unmistakable Story of the San Angelo Territory's Unusual Growth, Prosperity and Stability

There's Prosperity In Texas!

YES, there is prosperity in Texas. And in the 15 counties that compose the Edwards Plateau section, the great undeveloped area that comprises the major part of San Angelo's trade territory, prosperity is unprecedented in its bounty. For two years, month after month, this area has been a consistent bright spot on the Bradstreet Business Map.

This section, larger in area than the states of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Delaware combined, with the Canary Islands and Porto Rica thrown in for good measure, is the last great empire within the bounds of the Stars and Stripes to be developed. Its resources are practically untouched. Its frontiers are still to be pushed back. Its development is to be the outstanding achievement of this decade in Texas.

Once the stamping ground of the cattle barons and the mighty flock masters, it is rapidly changing to an agricultural section—not to a one-crop country—but to a diversified area where many different agricultural pursuits keep a crop on the market all the time. The many rivers, the rolling hills and fertile valleys give the San Angelo territory a natural diversification program that is permanent.

The United States Census report gives this area the honor of being the richest per capita agricultural area in the nation. The average value of the farms of the United States in 1920 (a good agricultural year) was $10,514, while the average value of the farms in the fifteen counties in San Angelo's trade territory was $31,929. The average farm building investment for the nation was $1,773 per farm. For this section it was $3,283.

Not only has nature diversified our agricultural interests, but the subsurface has felt the magic touch of her bounty as well. Seven counties-located north, south, east and west of San Angelo, are producing an average of 80,000 barrels of oil a day. Not one pool-not one oil field-but literally a score of distinct pools-all miles apart, and all in their infancy, have made this the headquarters for what appears to be the greatest oil development in history.

And with the oil has been found another substance potash more valuable perhaps than the "liquid gold." The Department of Agriculture has declared this to be the greatest potash deposit in America and perhaps equal to the combined deposits of Germany and Spain.

San Angelo has kept pace with the development in this territory. Whatever the activity in this section, San Angelo has been the headquarters. In the days of the Comanches, Ft. Concho at San Angelo, furnished the protection. Buffalo hunters made this their rendezvous. Cow men and herdsmen have called it their town. For years it has been the largest primary wool concentration point in America. Wool houses in this territory handle more than 10 million of Texas, 18 million pound clip.

As a distributing and banking center, San Angelo has occupied a pivotal position for years. Its 72 wholesale houses and four strong banks, with deposits close to 10 million dollars, have given it a firm position in the business world and a footing upon which a big city is being built.

In 1926 San Angelo was eighth in the state in building permits, having $3,065,354. Many cities throughout the United States with 100,000 population did not have such a substantial building activity as was shown in this fast growing city.

As a hotel center, San Angelo has set the pace in West Texas with three fireproof hotels, one 8 stories with 225 rooms, another 6 stories with 125 rooms and a third, 4 stories with 75 rooms. It has eight, seven and five story office buildings.

"Oh, well, I don't suppose it matters. I don't believe I know much about detective work. And, anyway, I don't believe Mr. Sears killed Mr.

"I shouldn't think so, ma'am," and with that they were in sight of the Majusaca and Angel scurried off to

As Robin Sears and Riggs entered the auction room, it was Robin who ook the lead. Demanding the proprietor, in a tone which brought him a warning nudge from Riggs, he asked for a private interview. On learning who he was, this was readily granted, and Mr. Giddings, who represented the absent Mr. Barchester, took them into a private of fice.

"I'd like to know," Robin began,
"if you'd be good enough to tell me f all the knives or daggers my father

"I can tell you of most of them," was the reply, "but some small items are sold in bundles, as we call them, and so are not recorded individually." should think an antique dagger of sufficient importance to be re-corded," Robin said, and, as the fire in his eye was growing brighter under the irritation of the other's suavity, Riggs took a hand.

"Never mind the value or impor-nce of the sale," he suggested, ust tell us what your records arge to Mr. Croydon Sears." The list was interesting, though not long, and the net result of infor-hought, in all, six daggers of antique Oriental workmanship. Robin was amazed, for he knew of ly the two that were acknowledged But he preserved a quiet sternness new; indeed, the young face grew more composed as the situation seemed to acquire seriousness.

"The police have interviewed you as to all this?" he asked of Mr. Giddings.

"Many times, especially in the last 24 hours." "Why so much questioning?" put

Because they want to be sure We Receive Fresh Candy Daily that it was Mr. Sears who bought the dagger that killed Mr. Folsom," Giddings replied, straight-forwardly "Of course, that needn't mean that Mr. Sears used it," he added quickly as he noted Robin's face.

"No, it needn't," said that young man with quiet simplicity.

"We can't be positive," Giddings returned. "When Mr. Sears came the second time that evening he was not so much interested, for the sales were of small lots or single pieces of small value. But he did pick up two or three numbers, one of which contained an old pichaq."

"Then why isn't that positive?"
broke in Robin quickly.

"Because there was another bundle or lot sold, which also contained an old pichaq, and no one can say which was the weapon later exhibited at the inquest."

"I see," said Robin, thoughtfully
"And who bought the other bundle?" "That we can't say. It was a

"Then he's your murderer!" cried Robin. "Of course, he'd give a fictitious name, and, on the other hand, do you suppose my father would be such a fool as to buy a dagger here where he is well known and then go out and kill somebody with it?"

Mr. Giddings only murmured polite words that sounded well but meant nothing, and the sounded well but meant nothing, and the sounded well but meant nothing, and the sounded well but more sounded well well well well as the many sounded well w body, that would not prove him a fool, because whoever did that killing depended on the sea to hide forever the weapon of his guilt, not realizing meant nothing, and away and walked slowly toward away and walked slowly toward home.

"You see," began Robin eagerly, but the other stopped him.

"Listen here, boy," Riggs said.
"Say all you like to me, or to your father, or to your sweetheart, but don't air your views on detection in public."
"No, I should have thought myself, father, or to your sweetheart, but don't air your views on detection in public."
"Next, Riggs, old man," Robin, said, his jaws set like a fighter, "we go straight to Croydon Rochester Sears with this tale."
"Just for one reason: that they are invariably wrong. For instance, the Sears with this tale."
"It means the tale finished, Croydon Sears at a full five minutes thinking."
Then, reaching out his hand for a yelliaw pad of telegram forms which was in a pigeon note of the desk, he wrote cut a message.
"Take it down to the desk, Robin boy, and sent it off, Leave Tite lever. Read the thing as you go down."
Robin did as bidden, and was more than slightly mystified to find the message was to his father's private with this tale."

They all sat down and now and then prompted or corrected by Tite Riggs, gave his father a strict and full account of the interview with the reasons, strong reasons, why I want the murderer found, the mystery solved."

Implicitly confident as Robin was of his father's innocence, it was a satisfaction to note how the elder man had looked as he grasped the To be sure, he had waited a few moments to consider; to be sure, he had sent a hurry call for a great and famous detective, but his fine, clear cyes had shown no hint of fear or shame and his face, though grave, was calm and serene as he looked at his son.

"I've sent for Stone," Croydon
Sears told Riggs.
