Mussolini Is Unchanged After Eden Conference

ROME (AP)—Official sources intimated Wednesday, as Captain Anthony Eden departed for London, that the British diplomat's conversations with Premier Mussolini had not changed Mussolini's determination to make "a complete solution" of Italo-Ethiopian problem.

Informed circles were convinced Mussolini will leave the league of nations if there is any sign of condemnation of Italy's action.

FLEWELLEN WINS EXTRA INNING GAME, THREE TO TWO

Angels Best Carter Chevy

Henninger's Forces Err In Crucial Eighth Frame

By HANK HART The Mellinger Angels and Flewellen Stationmen stretched themselves more firmly in their places at the top of the softball league with close decisions over their Tuesday evening opponents on the Many diamond.

The Angels bested Carter Chevy, 2-1, in the first game, while the Operators shed out a 3-2 decision over the heavy-hitting Cooden Oilers in the second. The latter went eight innings.

"Duner" Davidson set the Angels down in order until the fourth, but the Haremen broke the ice in that inning with a run and won the game in the next when Jones tallied.

The Carter twirler limited the Angels to five hits, but the Haremen bunched them to account for both their runs.

Hart initiated the fourth with the first hit of the game, a drive into left field. He was forced at second by Freddie Townsend but the latter, taking advantage of Davidson's ball on the mound, streaked to second. Hare stepped up to belt out a looping base hit across third base and the fleet-footed Freddie came all the way home.

The Angels counted next when Jones led off in the fifth with a single and came into pay territory on hits by Graves and Townsend.

E. F. Ketter saved his team from a "whitewashing" when he clouted a home run in the seventh and accounted for one of the three hits the Mechanics recorded.

Spike Henninger and Grovelli Malone hooked up in a twirling duel in the second game by Malone held the upper hand when his mates rallied for two runs in the eighth.

Neither team counted until the sixth when Coots scored on Fitzgerald's double after he had tripled with one away.

"Mileaway" Baker kept the Oilers in the game when he coaxed a free pass out of Malone, went to third on two wild pitches by the Flewellen twirler and tallied on Popper Martin's base blow.

Woodrow Coots found Henninger for a base hit in the last of the seventh but could do no damage and the game went into extra innings.

"Chick" Greer put his matter out front in the eighth when he doubled and came home on an outfield fly by Young and Henninger, but the Stationmen returned to crack the Cooden infield wide open and win the games.

Henninger's mates erred twice and he faltered to allow a pair of hits and permitted the Taylors to score the tying and winning runs. Malone and Smith each chalked up a run in that frame.

Webber Lucky To Pin Tony Piluso

By HANK HART In the greatest exhibition of wrestling ever seen in a local ring, Vic Webber, the amazing New Yorker, came from the shadows of defeat to pin Tony Piluso, favorite of the Big Spring arena, in the third and deciding fall, but the defeat only boosted the reputation of the dark-eyed Italian.

Wrestling scientifically, both wrestlers resorted to every known trick in trying to gain the victory, but 55 minutes passed before Webber bounced off the ropes and applied a rolling body pin for the deciding fall in 9 minutes.

Webber took the first fall in 31 minutes when he worked Piluso into a fast flying airplane spin. The dark-eyed O'Leary boy returned to the ring.

PRETZEL ACT Webber and Piluso became so entangled at one time that it was necessary for Referee Herman Fuhrer to remove Piluso's shoes before the two contestants could get loose. Both had leg holds of the same kind.

ed to deal the German a lot of misery with his assortment of arm locks and body tozes, but he had to shake off a brain whirl to toss Webber with Dutch Mantell's "Flying Dutchman" but he missed his in 16 minutes.

Piluso appeared on his way to victory when he spun Webber through the air with another "Flying Dutchman", but he missed his leap at the German's shoulders and Webber bounced up and into the ropes to catch Tony with his rolling body pin.

Gene La Belle had a hard time in solving the attacks of Johnny La Rue, but managed to stay the limit in the semifinal. The Dallasite seemed to be getting the better of it, but La Belle kept enough in reserve to keep his shoulders off the mat.

Ernie Arthur, the Canadian Fox, went against the crowd's boos and with a rolling airplane spin in 11 feet to defeat the up and coming minutes.

YOU CAN'T WIN.

The reckless driver, like the habitual criminal, can't win. Every newspaper carries the evidence of that, in accounts of those whose lives have been sacrificed to speed, to incompetence, and to carelessness at the wheel.

The tragic end to the great career of T. E. Shaw, the famed "Lawrence of Arabia," was headlined in the papers of the world a few weeks ago. Not yet 40, Shaw had done more service to his country to the English cause was so great as to make it almost unappreciable. He had distinguished himself as a translator of Greek classics. He was one of the most brilliant of living archaeologists. He was a military and mechanical genius of the first rank. It was certain that his period of greatest achievement still lay in the years ahead.

Shaw's "hobby" was to drive automobiles and motorcycles at incredibly high speeds on country roads. According to news accounts, his cycle was going at around 30 miles an hour when he was forced to deliberately crash to avoid striking a boy on a bicycle. A few days later he died, without regaining consciousness. His doctor said that it was best that he did not live, because of the terrible injuries his brain had sustained in the accident. Congenital recklessness had robbed the world of one of its gifted minds.

Every year in this country alone, some 25,000 people die—victims to improperly-driven motor vehicles. Among them are the famous and the obscure, the brilliant and the mediocre. Each life cost means that the nation's resources have been sapped—each death means misery and unhappiness to others.

Reckless driving is an unsteady game, at which the player always loses—and which likewise penalizes and robs the innocent.

Mrs. Parks Hostess For Club Party

Many Guests Play With Cactus Members At Contract Bridge

Mrs. Harold Parks entertained the members of the Cactus club and three tables of guests with one of the jolliest summer parties of the week Tuesday afternoon at her home on south Main street.

A pretty pink and black candy jar was awarded Mrs. Pendleton for making club high score and a green felt bridge table cover was presented Miss Northington for guest high.

Mrs. Fox of Canyon, sister of the hostess who is her house guest, assisted her with serving a delicious salad plate to guests and members.

Club members present were: Mrs. C. E. Hahn, Lester Short, Clyde Angel, M. E. Tatum, Morris Burns, W. W. Pendleton, R. E. Lee, Robert Schermerhorn, Herbert Whitney and Charlene Wear.

Guests of the afternoon were: Mrs. Emory Duff, Cecil Collins, C. L. Browning, Hugh Dubberly, Charles Worley, Jake Bishop, H. S. Howie, Fox, R. B. Reeder, and Mrs. Elizabeth Northington.

The members held a business session after the party and voted to take Mrs. C. L. Browning back into membership.

Mrs. Hahn will entertain next Tuesday.

Tatum Entertain Night

Cactus Club Members

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Tatum were host and hostess to the Cactus Night club for a party at the Statler hotel, with four tables of players officiating.

Dinner was served in the dining room after which the guests spent the evening at contract. Mr. Hahn received a carton of cigarettes for making high score for the men and Mrs. Kuykendall a boudoir set for high for the women.

Players of the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Angel, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Kuykendall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hahn, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schermerhorn, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lee; and one guest, Mrs. Craig Chumley of Menard.

WHY AMERICA PREFERS BUDWEISER...

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY DEFINES IT—and its taste tells you why

BUDWEISER must be famous indeed to be chosen from all American beers for mention in Webster's New International Dictionary, just published. You'll find it on page 349.

Here is just another distinction for the fine beer that has won medal after medal at world's fairs for more than half a century.

Bohemia, in 1903, officially adjudged BUDWEISER the finest bottled beer on Earth, better even than native brews. France, as early as 1882, conceded BUDWEISER's superiority. The following is from the Paris Gazette:

"Experts reluctantly pronounced the St. Louis beer superior to any malt liquor ever drunk upon the continent and all Paris is now seeking to quaff the American nectar."

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Tax Message: Its Vital Defect

The President has made it very plain that his message is meant to deal broadly and fundamentally with taxation as an instrument of social control. This is evident from the fact that the message is presented separately from the budget, that it contains no estimates of revenues in relation to expenditures, that it covers so much ground. This is not an appeal to Congress for money. This is meant to be the outline of a whole philosophy of taxation, which reaches far beyond the depression and the current deficit. It professes to declare the principles by which the taxing power should in the future be exercised. By this broad criterion the message must be judged.

There are six more or less definite items—the President calls them "suggestions"—in the message. They call for: (1) Inheritance taxes designed to prevent the transmission of "vast fortunes"; (2) Income taxes designed to prevent the accumulation of "very great individual net incomes"; (3) a constitutional amendment permitting taxation of future issues of government bonds in order to prevent wealth from taking refuge in tax-exempt securities. These three suggestions belong together and make up a program to use the taxing power against the concentration of wealth in great fortunes.

The three other suggestions are aimed at the concentration of economic power in the hands of big business. Here we find, first, the proposal for a graduated corporation income tax which is intended to handicap the big corporations and to favor the smaller ones. Then there is the suggestion that "ultimately" taxes should penalize "unnecessary holding companies in all lines of business" in order to discourage the separation of the control from the ownership of corporate properties. Finally, there is the suggestion that "unwisely and unnecessarily corporate surpluses" should be taxed in order to discourage the practice by which the larger corporations are able to finance themselves, and so, in deciding whether to expand their plants, are independent of the judgment of the capital market.

This second group of suggestions, aimed at the concentration of economic power, is a reversal of the underlying philosophy of N.R.A. It would deliberately favor the smaller business enterprises and would deliberately penalize the larger enterprises. It is intended to promote competition whereas N.R.A. intended to promote combination. As an abandonment of the ideal of a planned economy and of the tendency toward a highly integrated, regimented and regulated state capitalism, it is, therefore, more convincing and goes further than did the decision of the Supreme Court in the N.R.A. case. For the kind of economic order which these taxes are intended to promote cannot be planned by centralized direction.

The really serious defect of the program, considered as a formulation of general principles, lies, it seems to me, not in what the President has proposed but in what he has failed to propose. That the concentration of wealth in great fortunes and the concentration of economic power in relatively small groups is undesirable and dangerous, almost no one would deny who reads the lessons of history. In a democracy wealth and power should not be so unequally distributed that there is no relation between a man's contribution to society on the one hand, his wealth and his power on the other. Indeed, a very great inheritance can be justified only if it is treated, as Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for example, treats his: as a trust to be administered for the public benefit. Nor is there any real doubt that taxation is by far the best instrument for preventing morbid accumulations of wealth and power.

But while the President has seen clearly the danger of concentrated wealth and power, he has not seen, I believe, the equally great danger of irresponsible mass voting. Yet the lessons of history are no less clear about that. That is why a thoroughly statesmanlike program would have contained, as an essential principle, a proposal to tax small incomes, however lightly, along with the proposal to tax big fortunes very heavily.

The American income tax system has become increasingly vulnerable and un sound since the war. In 1923 income tax returns were made by more than 7-1/2 million individuals. By 1929 nearly half of these individuals had been exempted. In 1934 there were fifteen states, represented by nearly a third of the Senate, in which less than a million dollars in income taxes were paid by individuals in each state. On the other hand, ten states, represented by twenty senators, paid about three-quarters of the individual income taxes. Thus we have travelled far along the path where the political power to tax incomes is exercised by a great mass of voters who are immune to the taxes they impose. In respect to visible and conscious tax burdens we are moving rapidly toward representation without taxation.

A sound program of taxation would have as its ideal the payment of some income tax by every voter so that every new expenditure would be reflected in the tax bill of every voter. It is not feasible to achieve this ideal completely. But it is possible to aim at it. Now need it mean that citizens of small means would pay more than they now pay. The important thing is that they should pay direct taxes and should be conscious that they are paying taxes, and this could be done by lowering the exemption and substituting for the nuisance taxes a tax on small incomes.

Had such a proposal been included, the President's message would not have pleased Senator Long so much, but it would have translated the whole program from the plane of expediency to the plane of principle. The President would have shown that he was aware not only of the dangers of concentrated wealth but of the equally great danger of massed irresponsibility.

A measure which attacks the great fortunes at the top without at the same time broadening the base of all taxes is a measure to diminish the evils of plutocracy by encouraging the evils of demagoguery. The immunity of great wealth and the irresponsibility of great masses are the two fatal diseases of republics. By this test the President's program is inadequate and shortsighted. It has spurs but no bridle. It offers incentives to spend but lacks restraints upon spending.

The President rests his case on "the broad principle that if a government is to be prudent its taxes must produce ample revenue without discouraging enterprise; and if it is to be just it must distribute

ADVANCE—NOT RETREAT

QUESTION ON AUG. 24

To The Dallas News: On Aug. 24 the people of Texas will determine by their votes, whether or not State prohibition of the liquor traffic will be repealed.

Were it not for the intense suffering which would occur, with the reinstatement of the liquor traffic, I would not oppose the repeal of State prohibition at this time; for I am sure the reign of terror which the traffic would inaugurate would cause the people very soon to abolish same overwhelmingly, and for all time. But I know if the liquor traffic is reinstated in this great State of ours it will destroy homes, deprive children of food and clothing and prevent them from receiving an education; the highways will be strewn with wrecked automobiles, trucks and bodies of dead and wounded people; therefore, I am forced to enlist in the battle against the repeal of State prohibition, and for the preservation of life and property. I am sure when I enlist in this warfare I will be fighting side by side with citizens who know it is their duty to protect childhood, womanhood and manhood from death and our property from being destroyed.

Do I favor the protection of life and property and conditions which will be safe for my family to travel the highways of the country, or will I vote to create a condition which will scatter along the highways wrecks of automobiles and

This situation starts the swift unfolding of the exciting story of "The Man Who Knew Too Much," directed by Alfred Hitchcock from the story by Charles Bennett and D. H. Further Reduction In Interest Rates By Farm Loan Ass'n

Further reduction in interest rates on new loans made on or after June 24 by the Federal Land Bank of Houston through National Farm Loan associations was announced by A. C. Williams, president of the Federal Land Bank of Houston. This new interest cut completes a series of reductions which have lowered the interest cost of farm mortgage loans a full one per cent in the last three months.

April 1 the bank lowered the rate on new loans from 5 to 4 1/2 per cent; and April 10 reduced the rate from 4 1/2 to 4 1/4 per cent. The latest reduction of 1/4 of 1 per cent completes the one per cent cut in three months. Thus loans will be available at the lowest interest rates ever offered, favored by the Federal land banks or by any large lending agency. "This is not an emergency rate," Mr. Williams said. "On June 24 the bank will begin to make loans which will bear four per cent interest during their entire life, with the exception of an emergency rate of 3 1/2 per cent for interest payable in the one-year period beginning July 1, 1935. This new, one-four per cent rate is a direct reflection of the lower rate of interest borne by Federal farm loan bonds sold by the Federal land banks. It is in keeping with the policy of the Farm Credit administration to adjust the interest rates on new loans as the rates on their new bond issues vary."

"The interest rate on Land Bank commissioner loans will not be affected by the cut and will remain at five per cent," Mr. Williams said.

Drive far—drive fast — without a worry!

With Conoco Germ Processed Oil in your crankcase, you KNOW the strain won't hurt your motor!

Tests prove this new alloyed oil has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than plain mineral oils and resists heat better!

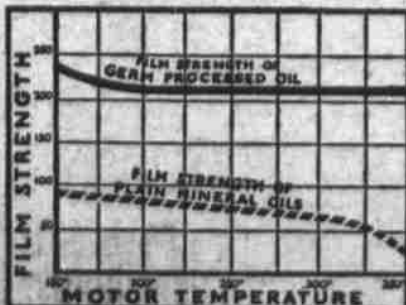

On July 4th or week-end and vacation trips, you'll want to drive far and get there in a hurry. And you don't want that nagging worry of "I wonder if this speed and heat will hurt anything in my motor."

You can't always be sure when you use plain mineral oils, for they have little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing processes have even less. Moreover, as motor heat goes up, these oils rapidly lose film strength.

Film strength is the load-carrying ability of an oil, the quality that keeps bearings and cylinders from wearing out. Lack of film strength results in costly damage.

You can drive without a worry when you use Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil! It has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil. Heat does not lessen this advantage. (See chart at left.)

Supervised road tests—over good and bad roads, at low and high speeds, in all kinds of weather—give practical proof that Germ Processed Oil protects motors better. In every test, gravimetric measurement of motor bearings showed that Germ Processed Oil prevented wear far better than plain mineral oils. Tested in a fleet of cars equipped with the new alloy-metal bearings used in many 1935 cars, a high-quality plain mineral oil permitted 45% more wear on connecting rod bearings than did Germ Processed Oil. Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil is the first alloyed oil—alloyed, much as metals are, by adding concentrated oil essence to highly refined oil. It is the only oil made by the Germ Process. It is the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away! Say "O. K.—Drain"—fill with Germ Processed Oil. Drive far—drive fast—without a worry!

HERE'S THE PROOF...

CONOCO GERM PROCESSED MOTOR OIL
PLAIN MINERAL OILS

Note that as heat increases, the plain mineral oils continue to lose film strength, but that above 225° (Minimum Summer crankcase temperature) Germ Processed Oil's film strength is not affected by heat. Tests made with Timken machine.

ENEMY'S KISS

Chapter 25 DEFEAT

"You must be mad!" Daphne's mouth forced itself into a smile; her heavy, darkened eyelids fell hooding the eyes beneath.

"I wouldn't have said anything," Allison could not keep her voice steady, "only—well, it seemed so unfair to father."

"You've told this story to your father?" It was an incredulous gasp.

"No, Not yet." She made herself bring that out bravely.

"Let's get this straight," Daphne leaned forward, both hands gripping each other tightly on her knees. "You say you saw me kissing Mr. Gomez?"

"Yes!" Desperate now, Allison did not hesitate.

"My dear child, you're quite cracked!" Daphne was almost tolerant. "I haven't even seen Gomez for two years!"

"But—but I saw you!"

Allison had a sense of complete bewilderment. Daphne's tone had been so calm, so utterly certain! Surely she couldn't have made a mistake?

"I don't know what or whom you saw, but it wasn't me," Daphne stated it with flat conviction.

"It was only a few yards off. On the piazza, I could see right in!"

"Listen, Allison," Daphne's voice was low and level now, but there was menace in it. "I don't know what you think you're playing. You've made it pretty clear that you don't like me, that you're jealous of me and that you'd like to make your father break it all. But if you think you can do that by making up those malicious, quite impossible stories—well, you're mistaken!"

"It was you! You were wearing that navy dress with red on it!"

"Boistering one tale with another doesn't help." There was grave respect now in Daphne's flexible voice. "If you think you're going to your father with this story, you're not. I'm going to tell him myself."

"You kissed that man. And you're in love with him. I saw you looking at him just now. She was clinging to the one fact in this sea of words."

Know that I spent the entire afternoon the day before yesterday at my dressmaker's and that I had a friend with me there who can vouch for the fact!"

Allison shrugged her shoulders but she did not answer. Daphne, breathing hard, said bitterly, "Don't you think you might apologize?"

"Apologize for what?" Robert had come into the box behind them and was looking from one angry

HIS HORSE WON AMERICAN DERBY

his ultimatum, he let his sizzling indignation burst. "What else? Haven't you said enough?"

"It's nothing to do with that," Allison was careful not to look at Daphne. "It's just this, I'm not coming with you to Spain."

Daphne leaned far back against the mantelpiece, her head tipped back and leaning on the clock; she did not speak, yet her half-closed eyes were on Robert, gazing at him almost as if she was examining him by will.

But Robert needed no compulsion. "You're not? My good child, you'll do exactly what you're told! You seem to imagine that because you've left school you're at liberty to be as thoroughly objectionable and disobedient as you choose! Well, you're wrong! And it's high time that you learnt to behave yourself! You leave Victoria with us at two o'clock tomorrow and that's that!"

"You can't make me!" Allison's hands clenched but she did not raise her voice.

"Can't I? What do you propose to live on?" Robert snapped back heatedly. "Do you imagine you can earn your own living? Don't be such a little fool!"

"I'm not being a fool." She was very quiet now. "I don't want to hurt you and I don't want to be teased, but I mean it—I'd rather work as a servant than go with her to Spain!"

Daphne moved suddenly. Her arms dropped and she moved forward. She said negligently, "I know, Bob, I'm afraid that I was right. I'm going now, but I really do advise you to think over my suggestion. Such things do happen and well, it's not normal, it is."

"You mean?" He looked so startled that Allison could barely restrain herself from breaking in and asking what they meant. Miss turned to the girl with an expression of extreme anxiety and alarm.

"Yes," Daphne picked up her bag and coat. "I can give you the name of a very good maid."

Mystified, Allison looked from one to the other; they were grave, almost solemn.

"Allison, my dear," her father was very gentle now. "My dear little thing, you mustn't let your imagination run wild like this. I think, perhaps, Daphne is right. A complete rest—an absolute rest—the mountain air'll do you good. We'll have a word with the doctor before we leave tomorrow."

Allison was staring at him with wide, horrified eyes.

"You—you mean you think I'm mad?" she gasped.

"No, no!" he cried, shocked. "Of course I don't. But girls of your age—well, there's apt to get worked up and excitable. We'll have three weeks—a month, if necessary, of real holiday. Daphne'll get hold of a maid for you, and you shall do nothing, just rest and then we'll all be as happy as can be."

Old Fiddlers' Contest To Be Held At Stamford Cowboy Show

STAMFORD—Aged musicians who fiddled for frontier dances in the early days of the west will compete for cash prizes in the old fiddlers' contest which will be one of the free entertainment features of the Sixth Annual Texas Cowboy Reunion in Stamford July 2, 3 and 4.

The contest this year will be held on July 4, the last day of the reunion, instead of the second day as in past years. The change was made to avoid conflict with the grand parade on the second day.

To be eligible for the contest, fiddlers must be no less than 50 years of age and professionals are barred. Each contestant is allowed to select the two tunes he plays but only "break-down" tunes are permitted.

First prize is $15, second $10, third $5 and fourth $2.50. No entry fee is required of contestants and there is no charge for admission to the hall. Crowds every year have packed the auditorium, which seats 1,500 persons.

Two of the champion fiddlers of past years have died within the past few months. They are P. R. Wilkerson, 75, of Hamlin, winner of the 1934 contest, and P. R. McCray, 92, of Anson, who won first prize in 1933.

Agents Conduct Farm Meetings County Agent O. P. Griffin and his assistant, M. Weaver, were still engaged Wednesday in holding agricultural adjustment meetings.

Griffin was to be at Moore Wednesday afternoon, having conducted meetings previously at Elbow, Lomax, and Hartwell.

Cards Of 1931 Shuffled Into Minor League

ST. LOUIS (UP)—World Series heroes are soon forgotten. Dizzy Dean may not think so, but a glance down the roster of another World Champion Cardinals team, that of 1931, is all the proof needed.

The recent shift that sent Earl "Sparky" Adams, former star third-sacker with the Cardinals, to Columbus of the American Association aroused wonder as to what has become of Cardinal stars of other years.

Adams, named to the National League's Hall of Fame in 1931, had a fielding record that year of .983 and batted .293. He developed a serious knee injury in 1932 and quit the game for a time.

Other members of that team today in the minor leagues are Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Bloomington, Ill. team; Tony Kauffman, Rochester; Jim Lindsey, Atlanta; Flint Rhem, Syracuse; John Hene, Charleston, S. C.; Eddie Delker, Columbus; DeArcy Flowers, Rochester; Andy High, manager, Hazleton, Pa.; Ray Blades, manager, Columbus; Gabby Street, manager, San Francisco; Missions, who led the Cardinals in the 1931 series.

High, utility infielder for the club that year, led all third basemen in fielding with a 1,000 percentage in 23 games. He handled 39 chances without a miscue, at the far corner.

Four Quilt Baseball Four members of that 1931 team have retired. They are infielders Joel Hunt and Lee Cunningham, and outfielders Taylor, Douthit and Walie Roettger. Roettger is coaching baseball at the University of Illinois and Douthit is selling real estate in Oakland, Cal., his home town.

Seven Cardinals of that year are still wearing the Red Bird on their shirts. They are Jess Haines and "Wild Bill" Hallahan, pitchers, Jim "Tip" Collins, Charles Gelbert and Frankie Frisch, now manager.

also cracked the whip at the big-gun backstage organizers of the group of 24 Democratic Senators under the leadership of Byrd of Virginia and Clark of Missouri who have done such a sweet job of sabotaging the New Deal by messing up FDR's measures. Small wonder so little has been heard from Republican Senators of late! Why should they get hot and bothered when these Democrats are doing all their work for them?

The group of 24—utility inspired and banker supported—has a subtle sabotage technique. They never appear openly as a bloc. They back FDR on unimportant issues to give the impression of party loyalty—but when something vital comes up they hamstring with skill. Sample: Bennett Clark's amendment to the social security bill exempting companies with private pension systems. It may well be—as alleged—that this addition makes the whole bill unconstitutional. If so, that was the idea. The bloc's origin traces back to the pre-Chicago stop-Roosevelt movement in 1932—headed chiefly by Albert Ritchie and Newton Baker. The objective is unchanged. These Senators—and these supporters behind the scenes—propose to prevent Roosevelt's re-nomination in 1936. Failing that, they propose to beat him for reelection.

Curiously, Carter Glass is not one of the 24. He wasn't needed—and he wanted to concentrate on the money and banking angle. Naturally the bloc is backing him warmly in his fight to squelch government domination of the banking system.

Glasses— Railroad borrowing from the RFC was down to $10,000,000 in the first five months of the year. This is the lowest figure over a comparable period since the RFC was set up in 1932.

This sounds like grand progress for the rails—all you inspect the reasons closely. One is Jesse Jones' recently adopted policy of extending loans as they come due instead of arranging new ones.

Another factor was the series of defaults by Western Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Denver & Rio Grande—defaults which the RFC had previously staved off but decided to do so no longer. So don't put on rose-colored glasses yet when you look at the rails.

Name Chief Causes Of Auto Accidents

CHICAGO—No one can say exactly how many motor vehicle accidents in the United States are due to particular causes, according to Accident Facts, just published by the National Safety Council, because few accidents are investigated carefully enough to determine exactly what was the cause and because most accidents have not one a combination of several causes.

In those states where data are available, the principal causes are: (1) Exceeding the speed limit or driving too fast for existing conditions, (2) Violating the right of way, (3) Driving on the wrong side of the road, (4) Improper passing, (5) Failure to signal, and (6) Driving off the roadway.

Different states vary widely, however, in the proportions of accidents charged to any single driving act. When one state shows twelve per cent of its accidents due to speed, and its next-door neighbor shows 36 per cent, it is reasonable to believe that the real difference is between the official methods of classification rather than between the motorists' habits of driving.

"Since most of the states still do not collect and summarize motor vehicle accident reports," says Accident Facts, "and since those which do vary so widely in their analyses, it is impossible to say with accuracy that throughout the nation a certain percentage or a certain number of accidents result from any particular kind of unsafe driving."

"After all, it is not so important that we cannot determine exactly what percentage of accidents is due to any one of many complex causes. We are interested in eliminating the accidents, and these causes tell us how to proceed. First, we must improve our highways and keep our vehicles in good condition. Second, and much more important, we must teach drivers and pedestrians to realize the accident possibilities of their actions on our streets and highways."

VISION IN BUSINESS JUST AS LONG AS WE

CONTINUE to sacrifice ten men's ability to make a decent living so some cheap operation may make a temporary showing in business, that long we will have unemployment and poor markets generally.

Fair profits furnish profitable employment. Employed people must support profitable business operation generally if they would continue in employment.

You really get more for your money when your spent dollars continue to work for you—as at
