WASHINGTON

Rebel—
Some high-up Democrats are less complacent about 1936 than they used to be. Under certain circumstances—continued unemployment and soaring expenses—they can see how the election may be a cat-and-dog fight instead of a pushover for President Roosevelt.

What worries them most is word that several anti-New Deal Democrats who carry great weight nationally will disassociate their re-election campaigns from the administration. These men have voted against almost all the so-called "experiments" and will not recant. They will run on a personal rather than a party platform.

The most eminent in the group has already mapped his campaign strategy. He won't advertise his dissatisfaction—he's a traditional party man—but if the Republicans cross-examine him, he'll speak up. He will recite the pledges he made on Mr. Roosevelt's behalf in 1932 and then point out that the President has repudiated every promise. It's not hard to imagine who the Senator is or the national effect of his attitude.

Shush—

Although the bonus bill seems headed for the Committee on Disposal of Useless Documents at this season, the men charged with putting it to sleep are still jittery over the issue. They won't even talk out loud about moves to revive it.

Brig. Gen. Frank Hines, veterans' administrator, won't let it be mentioned in official papers if he can help it. His bureau, like many others, prepared a digest of newspaper stories affecting the veterans' interests. The summary is an interdepartmental memo meant only for official eyes here and throughout the country.

Until a short time ago the headline items concerned pay and cons on the bonus. Recently Gen. Hines ordered that there must be no mention of the controversial subject. It might fall into strange hands and excite the boys of '17.

Melting—

Members of Congress are surreptitiously slipping out of town every day. Friendly colleagues don't inquire too closely into the disorder of their going but it is estimated that about 100 have disappeared. Important reasons for being somewhere else during the Capitol's prolonged heat wave. More than a score are under physicians' care.

The hegra got under way after President Roosevelt demanded a tax bill at this session. Many members make arrangements each year for leaving July 1. Their leases on homes have expired and it is too expensive for them at hotels. Some had contracted for residences elsewhere. Wives grew unhappy when their bridge partners decamped. Youngsters begged to go home.

Though House and Senate chambers are air-cooled, Congressional restaurants, corridors, committee rooms and the Capitol grounds are steam-heated. There won't be enough for a quorum if it keeps up.

Safer—

Although few sense it, Washington is being treated these days to a three-ring lobby circus. Astute observers note that the three sets of lobbyists—bankers, public utilities, army contractors—tried three different methods of influencing legislation.

The utilities bought and paid for thousands of telegrams and financed other forms of propaganda. It looks now as if they will take a licking—partial or complete. Some army contractors entertained military officials at hotel parties where liquor ran like water and, though it hasn't appeared in testimony yet, chorus girls did their night-club stuff. The bankers confined their activities to appearances before committees and interviews with Treasury, Reserve and Congressional officials.

The bankers won't get all they ask in the omnibus bill. But as Whirligig predicted weeks ago, their more conservative efforts will be proved the best in the long run. The Pecora investigation taught them a lesson which the utilities should have learned long ago.

Friendly—

Although Big Business and the administration runs their case and nimbly their speaking lines on the stage, minor actors are carrying on the show in the wings.

Business leaders and industrialists are making more intensive use of the government's various facilities than at any time since

John W. Carpenter Testifies Before Senate Committee

Says Money Was Spent For Washington Trips, Sending Telegrams, Charged To Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Expenditure of $33,777 by the Texas Power & Light Company, to oppose the administration utility holding company bill was described to the senate lobby committee Wednesday by John W. Carpenter, president.

The money was spent for trips to Washington, telegrams to congressmen and $192, he said, went to Peter Molyneux, editor of the "Texas Weekly," for speaking on the radio against the bills.

He said all money was paid out of the company's operating expenses, and thus charged against the consumers. He denied giving anything to congressmen.

He testified the company spent $3266 for telegrams to congressmen against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

He said it was suggested "to employes to talk to customers, friends and security holders, to tell them of the bad effect of the bill on the company and the state of Texas."

He denied instructing employes to pay for telegrams. He said the telegrams also had been charged against operating expenses.

Spence Tells Lions Of City Water Survey

City Manager E. V. Spence gave a report of the city's water survey Wednesday noon before the Lions club and explained why action in seeking a dam had been delayed until now.

The delay, he said, was due to economical conditions. It was felt, according to the manager, that matter of locating and constructing a dam should be deferred until conditions had improved to the extent that the city could afford to make the expenditure.

Spence explained the steps necessary in completing an adequate survey and pointed to the importance of having competent engineers on the job.

If and when a dam is built, he declared, it likely will be a dirt job because of a much lower cost. Dirt dams, when properly constructed, are about as servicable as other types of construction.

Final decision of whether a dam will be built will rest with the electorate, Spence said. An expenditure as large as a dam project will require a bond issue. If the people want to vote bonds, he said, the commission will authorize the work.

Program for the day was in charge of Dr. P. W. Malone and L. H. Hubby.

Jimmy Ross and his orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

Power Service Disrupted By Big Bull Snake

Power service in Big Spring, Sweetwater, San Angelo and other points was momentarily disrupted Tuesday afternoon by a large bull snake.

The reptile crawled up in the substation structure at Chalk and glided across buss bars carrying 60,000 volts current.

Instantly current west of Estota was cut off.

In less than a minute cities had their electricity restored on another line.

C. S. Blomshield, TES district manager, said it took several minutes for the snake to burn into. Current at Chalk had to be run through different transformers.

General Strike, Precipitated By Disagreement, Soon To End

TERRE HAUTE, Indiana (AP)—Street cars and busses rolled through the streets again Wednesday carrying factory workers and store employes to work.

Large Number Of Pioneers Meet Friday

Old Settlers Of Three Counties To Have Annual Reunion Near Here

The largest number to attend an old settlers reunion here in years is expected for the eleventh annual gathering of Howard, Glascock and Dawson county pioneers Friday at Cottonwood Park, one mile east of the city.

Reunion officials, J. N. Caubert, T. J. McKinney, and Mrs. Gene Crenshaw, have indicated that all is in readiness for the occasion. Donations from merchants of beans, bread and ice water have been obtained. Boy Scouts have been engaged for patrol duty.

This year the celebration has been extended from a Howard county affair to include Dawson and Glascock counties since those counties were attached to Howard for political purposes back in the days when the old settlers were conquering a wild, rugged country.

Any person who was in any of the three counties in 1905 is eligible to come and bring his family.

Features of the program are speaking in the morning, a picnic lunch, old fiddlers' contest, and dance in the evening. Those attending are expected to bring their own picnic lunches.

Judge Threatens To Jail Editors If News Printed

ANGLETON (UP)—Judge M. S. Munson Wednesday had given no inkling as to what action he intended to take against reporters covering the trial here of Clyde Thompson.

The judge announced Tuesday that if testimony was printed he would hold reporters in contempt.

HOUSTON (UP)—Editors of the three Houston newspapers passed up without comment Tuesday night the threat of District Judge M. S. Munson of Angleton to jail reporters and their editors for publishing testimony at the trial of Clyde Thompson, 23, low-headed Eastland county killer, but printed the testimony along with the judge's comments from the bench.

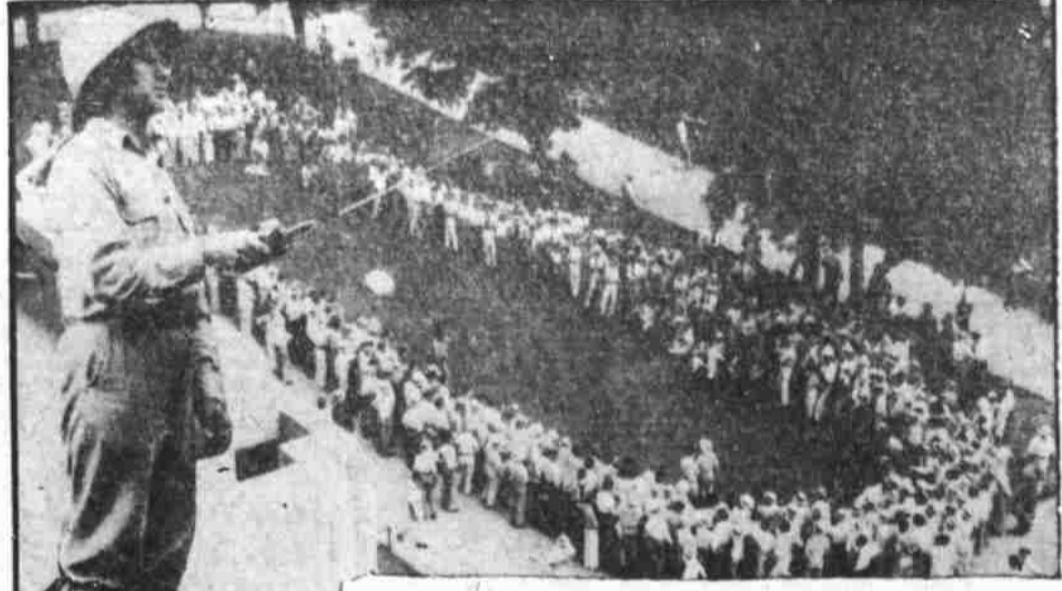

Both the Chronicle and the Press in their late afternoon editions printed parts of the testimony given by early witnesses at the murder trial, which marks Thompson's third effort to escape the electric chair in Texas. The Post, the morning paper, will print the story in full tomorrow morning. M. H. Jacobs, managing editor, said. Judge had taken no action against the newspaper men early Tuesday night but it was assumed here copies of the papers had not arrived in Angleton which is 50 miles away.

Judge Munson, experiencing some trouble in obtaining a jury to hear the case, quietly told reporters the jury was completed Tuesday that they could take all the notes they desired but he would jail them if any of the testimony appeared in print before Thompson's and two companion cases, scheduled to be tried next, were disposed of. Thompson and two other convicts are charged with killing Everett Melvin. Retrieve prison farm inmate who was stabbed to death on May 29 in a prison barracks brawl.

Testimony at the Angleton trial Tuesday indicated that Melvin was stabbed by Thompson while another convict pinioned Melvin's arms from behind.

HAPPY-GO-LUCKY FISHERMAN IN TOWN "TO DO HIS STUFF"

Well, folks, that happy-go-lucky fisherman, Jack Lamb is in town, and ready to do his stuff this evening for the edification, and education of all local Wainwrights who would like to learn more about the piscatorial art.

Jack is a guy who lives to fish. When he is not waiting his flies over some mirrored pool or crawling along the creek bank trying to sneak up on the crafty bass, he is soaking in his Fort Worth office thinking up some excuse to get away for a few days.

He has spent his entire life roaming the rivers and lakes of the south. He began fishing with artificial bait in 1910 and since that time has caught and released more than 42,000 black bass. In earlier years he ate a bass every day, but finally burned out on them and has not feasted on any of these finny denizens in seven years.

Jack says that after a man fishes for the bass awhile he becomes more and more appreciative of their gameness, and builds up admiration for them to the point where he dislikes to see them taken from the water. Fishing, according to Lamb, is the only sport in existence where a man can have his cake and eat it too. He says a sportsman hunt game and kill it, that is the end. Both for the thrill and for the game, but when a bass is caught it can be released and another thrill enjoyed by snaring it again at some later date.

Jack fishes purely for the sport and not for the game. He has been known to catch 340 bass in one day, and often more than 50 in a single hour. He says the only regret of his life is that he has to work for a living and cannot fish all the time. He never gets enough of it. For the past 17 years he has been connected with the Gulf Refining company in their natural gas division in Fort Worth, but you can bet that when the bell sounds for quitting time he is soon on his way to some of the nearby streams. Jack says that his wife also has a title all her own—she is champion bass widow of America. He is the champion bass fisherman of the world.

Lamb has spoken over WPAW for the past four years and has written more than 1,200 articles for newspapers on the subject of bass fishing. He is an amateur photographer whose nature pictures have gained almost as much recognition as his fishing. He admits that picture-taking is only an adjunct to fishing, as the swaying rod and the flashing fish will always be his first love.

He can tell at a glance whether bass inhabit water, and after years of experimenting and observation he can point out infallible signs where the angler can determine if fish are going to strike. When fish strike—or refuse to strike—Jack sets out to determine the reason for it. He does not go out like most people and consider it a matter of luck if the fish are biting. He gets the low-down on Mr. Bass fishing. He is an amateur photographer whose nature pictures have gained almost as much recognition as his fishing. He admits that picture-taking is only an adjunct to fishing, as the swaying rod and the flashing fish will always be his first love.

Tamaulipas Uprising In Full Swing

BROWNSVILLE, (UP)—Leaders of peaceful besieging Matamoros said Wednesday armed Agrarians will march on the Matamoros city hall and take forcible possession if the city administration does not vacate by 4 p. m.

Roberto Garcia, former mayor of Matamoros, chosen as representative by the peasants, said he sent "a final ultimatum" to Mayor Rafael Mangula.

He said people living in the vicinity of city hall were advised to vacate houses in anticipation of firing if the peasants march in.

BROWNSVILLE, (UP)—Rebel Agrarians spent a peaceful night encamped about Matamoros, Mexican city across the border, but Wednesday had not yielded to demands to have Major Rafael Mangula and subordinates ousted as part of a general uprising in the state of Tamaulipas against Governor Rafael Cullarreal.

General Gabriel Ververa, commander of a small detachment of federal soldiers in Matamoros said, "the situation is peaceful."

Leading citizens of Matamoros were endeavoring to form a compromise slate of city officials to pacify both sides.

MEXICO CITY, (UP)—A popular agrarian uprising forced Governor Manuel Lastra to resign Tuesday and threatened the position of the governor of Tamaulipas, Dr. Rafael Villarreal.

The resignation of Governor Lastra, lieutenant of the Tobacco dictator, Tomas Al, and the uprising against Villarreal were seen in political circles as a move toward a general cleaning out of governors to rid the country of the last traces of power of General Plutarco Elias Calles, strong man of Mexico for eight years until he lost a political duel to President Lazaro Cardenas a month ago.

President Takes Action
Lastra and other officials were forced out of office in Tobacco by action of the federal congress which, at the instruction of President Cardenas, declared, Lastra had violated the constitution, failed to maintain order and was guided by "outside influence."

This was regarded as a reference to Tomas Carrido Canabal, dictator and anti-Catholic leader of the "radical" movement in Mexico and was taken in some quarters as a sign that Carrido might be forced to leave the country.

Carrido is reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in Mexico and is known to have extensive properties in Louisiana and Argentina.

Peasants Demand Resignation
At the office of the president, who is out of the city, it was stated that Carrido is the permanent commander, but that an "important statement" regarding his plans was expected.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
A Contrast

It may be that those who take a narrow view of political questions are the noble citizens, and that those who disagree with us are disagreeable ruffians. We all like to think this, and when excitement seizes us we are under almost irresistible compulsion to believe it. This is the mentality of war, but it crops out and influences the otherwise prosaic course of public affairs. Two Congressional committees will now spend time and money investigating whether the motives and the tactics of those who were for and those who were against the "death sentence" were as impure as each side says the other sides' motives and tactics were. The Administration forces will proceed to show that opponents of the death sentence were corrupted and bamboozled by the unholly Power Trust, the opposition will proceed to prove that supporters of the death sentence were corrupted and bamboozled by patronage, pork, and the wiles of the magician in the White House. The result will be profoundly convincing to those who have already made up their minds.

Our capacity to ascribe the highest motives to those who are on our side and the worst motives to those who are not has been fully employed in recent times. Take, for example, the Congress of the United States, first on the bonus and then in the utility bill. When Congress voted for the bonus it was denounced by the opponents of the bonus as a collection of supine politicians terrified by the veterans lobby. When the President vetoed the bonus and dominated Congress, he was acclaimed as a courageous leader. The veterans, on the other hand, thought Congress was the friend of the people and the President a tool of Wall Street. However, when the House voted against the death sentence the supine politicians became independent men of good judgment in the eyes of those opposed to the death sentence. In the eyes of those favoring it Congress bowed to the Power Lobby. When the President tried to dominate Congress on this question he was a dictator to those who disagreed with him and a tribune of the people to those who agreed with him. It would be simpler and more candid to remember that virtue and vice, wisdom and folly, are fairly evenly distributed in this democracy, and that there is small likelihood that any one has a monopoly of either. And when any public man shows signs of thinking he has a corner in righteousness that is the time to look out.

After listening to the impeccably righteous men who have been fighting about the utilities, the men who have been working on the banking bill seem like ordinary mortals. Here was a very important bill proposing extremely important changes in the field of monetary control. Though there was a little hysterical denunciation of the purposes of the bill and a

Became the goal of a crusade. By an unusual combination of circumstances the bill fell into the hands of unflinching men—Governor Eccles, Senator Carter Glass, and the special committee of the American Bankers Association. They were all more interested in a sound banking system than they were in a hot political fight. None of them felt called upon to go forth and make a brawl of it. They were able to see where they differed and why they differed and to give and take. The result is a bill which is fundamentally stronger than the first draft, a bill which is not a victory or a defeat for any one, but is simply the outcome of a useful discussion by honest and reasonable and modest men. It might easily have been otherwise. The money question is full of explosives. Had the banking bill been treated with as little perspective and wisdom as was displayed in the utility fight the country could easily have been subjected to a very dangerous and protracted struggle. That has been averted, not by meaningless compromise, but by cool and intelligent argument.

If the utility bill is a shining example of how not to go about a reform, the banking bill is an excellent example of how to go about it. If the President will study the two as case histories, he will see the difference between an empty uproar and a real achievement. The essential difference lies in the fact that the banking bill was in the hands of moderate men looking for results, whereas the utility bill was in the hands of fanatics looking for a fight.

SOFT LINE, SUBTLE COLOR
FOR SUMMER DESSERTS

White cobweb lace over white crepe makes one of the flimsy new Paris negligees. The low V-neckline is accented by the long drooping sleeves, while the grille is marked by a black enamel flower outlined in silver. Design by Maggy E.uff.

By ADELAIDE KERR
PARIS (24) — Negligees are "going in for" allure.

No more pajama lounging suits. No more tailored house coats. In-lace, soft lines, low necklines and trailing skirts.

Lace, chiffon, soft crepe and taffeta are back in the boudoir and with them such subtle colors as grey green, pearly blue and coral and such accents as turquoise and violet. The idea is to look both feminine and worldly.

Some of the new negligees are sufficiently formal in effect to be worn as hostess gowns or for informal dinners at home.

Models Colorful
Ardanne makes some of the most colorful negligees seen this season. One is a grey green taffeta affair with short puffed sleeves split down the front so that the rose taffeta slip underneath may be seen.

Sheer chiffon coats with big sleeves and trailing skirts worn over satin slips of a contrasting color are Madame Yrlande's contribution to the negligee market of 1935. She cuts them on the bias so that the skirts swoop backward with an air as regal as the robe of a queen. Blue violet goes over white, green over pale blue, cherry over grey blue, wine red over flesh and brown over salmon.

To Look Like Frocks
Chiffon negligees made over heavy cream lace slips are another negligee note which spells allure. Some of these are made of soft pastel colors so that the lace pattern will show underneath.

Negligees which look like frocks are being designed for some of the smartest Parisians. They are fashioned with short puffed sleeves, high necklines and full bias skirts. Some are of pink shadow print chiffon with the figure stamped in the same color; others of pale blue mousseline sprinkled with deeper blue bachelor's buttons.

Breathless Beauty
In 'The Informer'

In making "The Informer" for RKO-Radio director John Ford conducted an experiment which might have resulted disastrously but which has proved to be startlingly effective.

The entire picture, featuring Victor McLaglen, Heather Angel, Preston Foster and Margot Grahame, was photographed in fog. Proceeding against the advice of his assistants and cameramen, who felt that the experiment would give the picture a drab atmosphere or one of low visibility, Ford has secured a remarkably clear piece of photography.

Through skillful use of high-lighting, all the scenes of the picture are made to stand out with a subdued brilliance that marks perhaps the most effective photographic tour de force ever achieved.

However, the medium of presentation is not permitted to overshadow the story, for as the play unfolds, the beauty of the photography is forgotten and attention is focused upon the drama. The art of "The Informer" is one which conceals itself, and that is the only true art. At the Lyric Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Schermerhorn are in Dallas for a few days.

Mrs. R. E. Blount and children have returned from a month spent in Corpus Christi, Irene and Fort Worth.

DENISON—Through the kindness of Will Rogers, four Denison boys will be present at the Washington Boy Scout jamboree in August.

Mrs. Carlos Johanning, Denison clubwoman, asked to select the boys as Rogers' guests, named Jack Heimburger, Fred Parrott, Murray Marshall and Douglas Johanning. In her efforts to secure attendance for as many Denison boys as possible, Mrs. Johanning, who knew Mr. Rogers personally, had asked him last winter to come to Denison as a guest artist for a benefit. Unable to book a date here, Rogers later sent Mrs. Johanning $400 with the request that she use it for the purpose stated.

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

Chapter 14 SHOCK FOR WANDA

Wanda continued:
"Ferdie left me all his money. We can do everything we like. We can forget everything about the past; we can go all round the world. All I want is to make you happy, to be happy with you."

"I have my job," Rex said.
"Nonsense! I couldn't bear to think of you flying again!"
She was in a way like himself; she was pulsating with strength, with energy; the wine of life ran in her veins. And she was a woman stirred of love, and she had found the man she desired more than anything on this earth.

"She was looking at him with burning eyes."
"You have forgotten because you want to," she said bitterly. "And all this time I've been thinking of you and longing to find you. Ferdie thought you must be dead, because you never let us hear from you. But, somehow, I always knew you were alive."

"I am sorry," His voice was grave. "But I have my life to live. I have my work. I have my chance again. It's seldom a man gets such a chance twice over. My life is my job. I will pay you back all that I owe you in money. I can't bear to be in your debt. Ever since I came back, I've thought of nothing else. But beyond that—it's impossible."

"How dare you insult me like that?" Her eyes glowed red with the fury of barked passion. "You are a miserable coward. No, I don't mean that, Rex!"

Her voice changed, became abrupt. "I'll wait. I know how you must feel coming back to your job. I won't stand in your way. You shall do all you want to. You shall show the world that you are the finest man in it. Everything I have shall go to help you. But say you haven't forgotten. Only say you'll love me as I love you! That's all I care about."

He shook his head.
"You mean you want me to marry you, Wanda?"
"Of course."

"I can't do that."
"Why? Because I am rich? Don't be a fool! You owe me so much already."

"I know. I will pay it back."
"You can't, Rex. You can't have forgotten what you said when we sat out those nights in the garden, and you were so dear, so sweet to me? I told you I couldn't live without you, and you said—oh, so many things, but always that fate had been unkind to us, we had met too late, and—"

He interrupted her harshly.
"Please don't! I didn't mean—I don't know what I said."
And indeed, he did not know. In Here are the winners of the four outstanding events in the early competition of the women's national A. A. U. swimming meet in New York. him up in their yacht when he had crashed and looked after him in California while he was blind. Gradually, Laurie got the hang of the situation, and was able to take notice. And the first thing she saw was that Mrs. Steele was in love with Rex Moore.

The wonderful-looking lady was cordially itself to Laurie. On leaving, she said with an almost affectionate note in her high-pitched drawing voice:
"You must let me be your friend, too, my dear. I'm sure you don't mind, but I feel that a tiny bit of Rex really does belong to me, although he has treated me so shabbily, the bad boy! Now, positively, you must both come and dine with me tomorrow."

She would take no refusal, although Rex tried hard to make an excuse.
"I shall expect you at eight," were her last words. "Rex, I suppose I must forgive you for not telling me that you had such a charming little wife!"
When he came back from seeing her down to her car, he said to Laurie gruffly:
"I owe everything to Mrs. Steele and her husband, my eyesight as well as my life."
"She is wonderful," Laurie replied enthusiastically. "One of those women one reads about in the illustrated papers—just perfect in every way. She must be enormously rich. Is her husband nice?"

"He is dead."
"Oh! Laurie did not know why she gave him such a bright smile. "She is in love with you, of course!"
"Don't be absurd!"
"Anybody could see it. And you're not blind any longer!"
It sounded unkind. She could not understand why she felt unkind. It must have been the surprise.
He gave her a furious stare.
"You little cat!"
"I didn't mean that—it was horrid of me!" she said impulsively; then hurried out of the room.
She came back in a few minutes later.
"Mrs. Budd says Mr. Albery has sent in some lovely trout—and would you like them for dinner?"
"I don't want any dinner," he answered roughly. "I'm going out for a walk."

When she was alone, Laurie gave way to a few painful sobs. Her nerves were going to pieces. How she hated him! Why couldn't she make him pay, as he was making her pay?

Rex tries to borrow some money, tomorrow.

pected shortly. This was believed to be his announcement that he is retiring into exile.
Meanwhile Governor Villarreal, whose resignation is demanded by thousands of peasants throughout Tamaulipal, told the Associated Press by telephone that he was confident he could "dominate the situation."
But the dispatches from various parts of the state reported the Agrarian movement was gaining strength, and that outbreaks were feared.

Twenty-two municipal councils loyal to Villarreal have already been forced to resign.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT NO. 7
Free Textbooks For Private And Parochial Schools

The Texas Constitution at the present time provides that the state is without authority to furnish free text books to other than public schools. Proposed amendment number seven on the ballot for the August 24th election would permit the state to supply free textbooks to all schools, private and parochial. Such textbooks, it is presumed, to be the same as used in the public schools.
Advocates of this amendment state that this would entail no additional expense because the state now purchases more books than are necessary. However, this point is merely one of the claims made and has not been substantiated by the secretary of state. Advocates point out that they pay taxes to support public schools but if they choose to send their children to private or parochial schools the least the state can do is to supply the textbooks free.
Probably the most important and less publicized provision of this amendment is the fact that it proposes to rewrite Section 5 of Article seven of the constitution so as to permit the apportionment of school funds on some other basis than scholastic population.
For many years there has been considerable agitation in certain quarters to abolish the "school census" or scholastic population system of apportioning school funds and substitute in lieu thereof the "average attendance" basis or some other basis. The legislature would determine just how this was to be done, if this amendment is adopted.
If adopted this proposed amendment number seven would mean, in effect: (1) that the state would furnish free textbooks to pupils in all the schools of Texas; and (2) that a new basis for apportioning school funds other than the scholastic census basis, could be set up.

Two Ordinances Passed Tuesday By Commission

City commissioners Tuesday passed an ordinance prohibiting the sweeping, dumping, or depositing of trash and refuse on city streets. Maximum fine of $25 was prescribed for violation of the ordinance.
Fire limits were extended to include the east half of blocks 23, 10 and 7 upon a demand from the state insurance commissioner. The ordinance providing for this extension was given its first reading and will be finally approved the second meeting hence.
The commission took under advisement a petition signed by 80 people, almost all of whom were farmers or stockmen, asking that the city ordinance requiring inspection of meat be enforced.

Another petition signed by merchants had been presented on a previous occasion and asked enforcement of the ordinance. Commissioners are attempting to ascertain if the consuming public favors the inspection requirement.

Domestic Team Renews Battle In Laugh Film

Domestic life in the raw is the theme of the new Paramount comedy, "People Will Talk," which comes Thursday to the Ritz Theatre, and those two most noted exponents of the subject, Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, play the starring roles in the production.

"People Will Talk" marks the ninth cooperative effort of the Ruggles-Boland combination—a combination which has gained ever greater popularity with movie audiences after such hits as "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Pursuit of Happiness" and others of the same classification.
Once again they stage a boulevard battle royal—this time, however, as a prearranged bout to show their daughter and her husband, who are on the point of a divorce, just how silly it is for married people to quarrel.

All goes well until Miss Boland forgets it's all in fun and begins to resent her husband's realistic efforts. Even worse—the funnier—are the results when gossip, neighbors misinterpret Ruggles' perfectly innocent friendship with another woman.

By the time the daughter and her husband are reunited, Miss Boland and Ruggles are ready for a divorce.
How their troubles are settled is portrayed in one of the most hilarious climaxes filmed in many months.

WHAT would modern navigation do without the channel buoys—those floating markers that keep ships off the shoals? In a very real sense, the advertisements in this paper are channel buoys, placed for your protection—for the safeguarding of the family expenditures.

These advertisements are the signed statements of reputable firms who seek your patronage on the single basis of giving value for every dollar spent. They are honest statements, the only kind an advertiser can use and remain an advertiser.

People who get the most for their dollar in the market-places are those who keep an eye on the channel buoys. Day by day, they follow the advertisements to learn what and where to buy to the best advantage. Make this a habit. Study the advertisements, in the interest of shrewder buying.

lating recovery.
Georgia—
Lucky is the peacemaker if he isn't wallowed by both sides. Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, congratulates himself upon his escape after bringing Gov. Talmadge to the White House. Howell hoped to bridge the chasm that separates Talmadge from Roosevelt—but the split yawned wider before his very eyes.
It purports to be a quarrel over relief funds, but that's only on the surface. Talmadge is capitalizing the anti-Roosevelt feeling in the south. Howell wants harmony—although he is outspoken against some of the New Deal. The Georgia delegation at the next convention will oppose Roosevelt, from present prospects. But Roosevelt has a strong hold on Georgians, and Jim Farley says "The people will make the politicians take Roosevelt."

Notes—
Legal friends of FDR are exploring the possibilities of the "general welfare clause" of the constitution... Social functions are called off in Washington—hot weather... Maryland communities are scrapping over the route of the new Washington-Gettysburg boulevard... A monument to first settlers of Washington is to be set up near the White House—and somebody suggests a gigantic thermometer... Another batch of 1,000 NRA clerks has been let out.

HOLLYWOOD TROUBLES

NEW YORK
By JAME McMULLIN
Double—
New York sharps are puzzled by the zest with which both New Dealers and their opponents hail the idea of supreme court showdowns on such key New Deal issues as the AAA, TVA, Wagner Act, hold-ers of gold, etc. They figure of course that Mr. Roosevelt and his aides hope to line up popular support for a constitutional amendment broadening federal powers if the court gives their program the bum's rush. But conservatives are just as confident that judicial nullification of the New Deal would be grapes in their basket. They are firmly convinced that the public would turn down a leader whose policies were emphatically repudiated by the respected nine who traditionally stand above politics.
One or the other camp must be wrong—but which? Keen observers believe this will depend on how the decisions are rendered. They hope it that a series of court defeats by a split vote would work to the president's advantage. He could bolster his case by citing the dissenting opinions of a "liberal minority."
But if all decisions go against the New Deal by a unanimous vote, the right wingers are expected to benefit—on the theory that all nine learned justices can't be wrong. If the rulings are mixed—some pro-New Deal and some against, some unanimous and some split—the impression will be confused and neither side will get much politically. So the supreme court is likely to play a role of double importance in next year's election drama. Party tactics may depend alike on the manner of its rulings and on

The investment appetite for bonds is so apparently insatiable that financial chaps prophesy it won't be long before some new industrial preferred stock issues peep timidly around the corner. If they are well taken even bitter-enders will concede the depression over in financial circles.

Finished—
New York experts say that Italy's position leaves plenty to be desired as hostilities with Ethiopia approach. She lacks three important ingredients of military success—coal, oil and credit. Mussolini has been angling desperately for a loan in England as well as the United States—but he can't get a nibble. He has even offered concessions on Abyssinian resources—when, as and if captured—and not a single banker rises to the bait. That shows what they think of his chances and of Ethiopia's vaunted natural wealth.
As a matter of fact, several American concerns have been invited at various times before now to take over Abyssinian concessions. In every case they have declined the opportunity after surveying the prospects. So maybe Il Duce is kidding himself about the pot of gold at the end of the Ethiopian rainbow.
Two of the best posted financial sources in the world—one American and one British—have privately predicted to New York friends (without consulting each other) that win, loss or draw his war—Mussolini is finished.
History—
Informed sources predict that Premier Laval's effort to solve France's financial woes by aggressive deflation will only hasten the fall of his government and an open and probably bloody clash between French fascists and left wingers. Italy's experience shows that a program of heavy taxes and wage cuts is certain to foster acute discontent. So far it has been kept under cover in Italy—but even the mighty Mussolini was forced to arrange the Abyssinian diversion to keep the country's thoughts off its troubles and the young men busy. The French aren't likely to be as patient as their neighbors and when they explode they aren't polite about it. The fascists are watching for an opening and the leftists are equally alert to head them off at all costs.

It is a 5 to 1 bet that internal developments in France will make sensational history within a year.

Sidelights—
Halle Selassie is one up on Il Duce in the matter of credit. He gets arms from Japan on the cuff while his opponent can hardly buy a bayonet that way... The woolen industry is planning to stage a joint collective promotional campaign... New York banks will help float an 18-month $15,000,000 note issue for the state of Pennsylvania—purpose unemployment relief—at less than one percent interest... Pennsylvania's credit is still ace high despite conservative irritation at Governor Earle.

TEXAS TOPICS
By Raymond Brooks

The Texas government is going ahead to perfect its application for federal works funds to finance a state-profit natural gas pipeline from the Panhandle field to St. Louis and Detroit.
It is likely tentative allotments of recovery funds may be committed before the legislature meets in summer special session.
Lacking any official confirmation, it appeared extremely possible that the plan may be set up under existing franchise powers without awaiting or calling for any legislative action whatever.

There is nothing to prevent the state now from creating a corporation or agency to sponsor the construction of the federally-financed pipeline project and to assume responsibility for paying off the loan out of revenues. That would be the only way the legislature would provide for repayment of federal funds anyway.
If such an agency were created, the remaining question would be for some future legislature to provide a means that its profits, when they accrued after paying off the loan, could be contributed to the state treasury.

The Texas legislature tentatively was offered a $6,000,000 outright grant and $13,000,000 loan, repayable only out of revenues, to create a market for Panhandle gas and let the state get much more than its meager tax returns so far, in addition to creating the biggest work program in state history. Half a dozen members of the legislature attacked the plan as possibly encroaching on private business enterprises, and as "visionary." Gov. Allred strongly urged its adoption, but the legislature let the big work project die unacted upon.
Since then State Tax Commr. R. E. Anderson, who supplemented Gov. Allred's personal efforts in Washington in originating the project, has been to Detroit where he negotiated with city officials concerning a purchase contract for wholesale gas supply.

RYDER SQUAD VICTORY SURE
By GAYLE TALBOT
LONDON, (AP)—Charles Whitcombe, 33-year-old captain of the British Ryder cup squad, is pleased with the group of young fairway grandslamers he will lead against the Americans at Ridgeway, N. J., late in September.
He is so thoroughly well pleased, in fact, that he's already making victory speeches.
"Great Britain will win," he declared, without the sign of a qualification. "Our new team is definitely stronger than the 1933 side, which won at Southport. I do not think a mistake has been made in the selection."
"We know Hagen, Sarazen, Picard, Wood, Horton Smith and Olin Dutra, and despite the unknown quantity represented by Ky Laffoon and the others I think we shall be too good for them."

"W. J. Cox of Addington is still an assistant, but he is ripe for full international rank and will fight to the last putt. Burton and Jarman chose themselves on this season's form, and Brusson, as I have good reason to remember, is a fine match player. He beat me last September in the 'News of the World' final."
"Perry, Padgham and Allis, of course, are comparatively old stagers and were on our Southport team."
Whitcombe, who has played on all four previous British Ryder cup teams, is banking a lot on the salubrious New Jersey climate to pull his lads through.
"The intense heat of Seloto (Columbus, O.), was fatal to our chances in 1931, when I was captain," he explained. "It was impossible for us to play to form. This time, fortunately, we are more likely to get rain and snow than a heat wave."

Whitcombe indicated he doesn't intend to take his captaincy too seriously. He isn't going to lay down any strict training rules, he said, and if a player wants to drink a few mugs of beer, all right.
"I have always considered it inadvisable to lay down rigid rules for training and diet in the case of a golf team. It's different from boxer and athletes. Each man should use his own judgment. If a man has become a good tournament golfer he has come to know enough about his own requirement not to need any help from me."

The telephone goal of Europe is JUST A GOOD JOB here

The fast, clear, far-reaching telephone service of America has never been equalled by European nations. Differences in equipment, methods and policies have barred the way to such service among the many countries there.

In America, your telephone service has over-leaped state and regional lines. Here there are no telephone boundaries.

Your telephone is "first cousin" to each of 13 million other Bell telephones here. It is designed and manufactured to meet uniform operating standards.

Team-work
Every Bell telephone line, local and long distance, is built to conform to uniform tests of clarity and volume in carrying your voice.

Every Bell telephone operator, whether in New York, in San Francisco, or in the thousands of towns and cities between, is trained to use the same methods... the same team-work in operating the vast national communications network.

Organization
That these things are true is due largely to the Bell System form of organization.

American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the parent company, studies and standardizes better and more economical methods, apparatus and materials for the 24 operating companies of the System. Bell Laboratories carries on the research work. Western Electric manufactures, purchases and distributes.

Without this organization behind them, the Southwestern Bell men and women here who give your telephone service could not do their job so well. For many years it has materially helped us, as one of the group of operating companies, in holding the cost of good telephone service low to the user.

CITY OF BIG SPRING

You may be cool enough but your motor is hotter than Death Valley!

Protect your motor with Germ Processed Oil!

2 to 4 times greater film strength than plain mineral oil—even at motor heats of 225 to 425 degrees

BREEZES may cool you off as you drive, but your motor runs at terrific heats—from 225° in the crankcase to 425° in the cylinders. To protect your motor, your oil must have extra film strength and maintain it at these high temperatures. Otherwise, the lubricating film ruptures and the bearings and cylinders suffer damaging wear.

Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oils over-refined by the new cleansing methods have even less. Moreover, these oils rapidly lose film strength as motor heat goes up.

You can protect your motor far better with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, for tests on the Timken Machine prove that at high motor temperatures it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil!

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

Say "O. K.—Drain"—fill with Germ Processed Oil. Drive far—drive fast—without a worry!
