TOWN OF BOOKER WANTS
NEWSPAPER MAN
Booker, an active little city located in a fine wheat belt just half way between Shattuck, Okla., and Spearman, Texas, is in line to welcome a newcofer in the journalistic fraternity. The town has had a paper, but is at present without a publisher, and its large and well-settled territory is casting eyes about for an editor. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has been solicited to aid Booker in obtaining a newspaper man to take charge of the proposition of the control versus Prohibition." Dr. Buck bases his talk on the addition of three words, "Except under way for details of all events, and events and more than 700 guests are expected.

In addition to the gaiety planned, an interesting program has been provided. George Pearce, general chairman cf arrangements, will ask Homer D. Wade, manager of the West Texas. Chamber of Commerce to be principal speaker of the occasion.

Liberty Theatre To Show Richard Dix In New Role

Richard Dix's latest photoplay, "Knockout Reilly" which comes to the Liberty Theatre tomorrow was taken from Albert Payson Terhune's famcus story, "The Hunch" which appeared in "The Red Book" magazine. The theme is one of deep heart interest possessing an unusual amount of good clean humor. It uses the squared circle merely as a background, for the real thrills and dramatic incidents occur prior to and after the big fieht. Dix shows his abilities as a real dramatic actor, particularly upon his return from prison when he discovers his mother has been a scrubunscovers his mother has been a scrubwoman earning her living while he was at Sing Sing. Dix is supported by the very charming Mary Brian, and the very fistic Jack Renault. The picture was directed by May St. Clair picture was directed by May St. Clair, who made "The Popular Sin" and "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

Eastland Hears Pythian Home Mandolin Club

A large, enthusiastic crowd greet-ed the Texas Pythian Home Mandolin club when it presented an enjoyable program at the city hall in Eastland Wednesday evening. The club, com-posed of 20 girls from the Pythian home at Weatherford, was brought to Eastland and other towns of this section by the various Knights of Pythias lodges of the oil belt.

Judge William Pannill, chief justice of the Eleventh court of civil appeals at Eastland, delivered an address in which he pointed out the great work being done by the Knights of Pythias lodges and especially in their work of establishing and maintaining the orphans' home at Weatherford, which is a grand lodge institution supported by a per capita tax of $1.50 for each Pythian in the state. Judge Pannill urged the Pythians to increase the usefulness of the Weatherford home by the addition of home economics and manual training

The numbers rendered by the mandolin club were enthusiastically received by the audience.

From his big department store, T. Q. Curtis selects three girls and makes them his wards for one year, because he believes they have worth while ambitions which he wants to help them further. He takes them into his home.

Billy Wells, who wants to be concert violinist, is the only one of the three that is sincere. The other two, Nyda Lomax and Winnie Shelton, lie to enjoy the old man's gen-erosity. Billy overhears Curtis say he is going to adopt one of the girls for his daughter when the year is up. She tells the other girls what she has heard so she will not have unfair advantage. The house is turned into a hell of intrigue by Nyda and Winnie, who are eager to win the old man's affections. Billy is unwillingly drawn into the battle.

He had confessed his crime to herbut how ridiculous it all was!

"But he loves me now," she told herself drowsily. "He said I was his strength and salvation—Winnie would scratch my eyes out if she knew, but she mustn't know. He's honorable. He didn't ask me to break my word with T. Q. I'd warned him that I had a conscience, that I would not break my agreement to stay the full year." She was about to drift off into sleep when she was shocked to sudden wakefulness by a sentence winging its way from her subconscious mind—"He didn't ask you to marry him!" Her body flushed hotly all over, broke into a fine dew of perspiration. Then she fought the thing down—how silly she was to expect him, as heroes do in novels, to say, before daring to kiss her, "Miss Wells. I want you to be my wife!" In real life it didn't happen that way. He'd talked of their future—what had he said? She must get used to East Indian cooking—India was call-ing them both—Of course he meant to take her there as his wife.

Mrs. 'Vells said as she stooped to kiss a quick, apologetic gesture.

"Put that money right back in your handbag!" Mrs. Wels cried indignantly. "The idea! I don't need it. The age-old impression that a woman is a woman is issued out of the Honorable Ninetylings' India and heaven.

Her mother helped her dress, her hands lingering fondly on the rich, bronze crepe of the frock Billy had hought that morning at Madame Dubois.'

"It's a mighty pretty dress, honey," Mrs. Wells told her cheerfully. "I guess it must have cost at least fifty dollars."

Full realization of her extravagance rushed in upon Billy then. How in the world was she going to the hundred and ten dollars in one morning for new clothes? What was she going to do for money the rest of the month? Thirty dollars a week to Professor Navratil—

"You look scared to death, Billy." Her mother put her arms about her "You're all rested now, and it will help you to get it off your mind."

The girl that sprang up to kiss her was hardly recognizable as the Leila Sampson she had worked with little more than a month ago. Leila had discarded her owlish, horn-rimmed spectacles, and her hazel eyes revealed an unsuspected beauty. They were clear and wide and bright now.

"Oh, I've been reducing." Leila laughed without resentment or embarrassment. "I've lost twelve pounds. It's helped my complexion a lot, if I do say it, as I shouldn't."

"But what have you done to your hair?" Billy rumpled the short, curly locks with an affectionate hand.
