ONE DEAD THREE BADLY BURNED IN EXPLOSION

By United Press.

GUTHRIE, Okla., June 20.—One man is dead and three persons are in a hospital critically burned today as a result of a gasoline stove explosion in the Earl Munson home here late

In a heroic effort to save his family of small children and several visitors, Munson, 31, sacrificed his own life. Noticing flames licking the gasoline tank of the stove upon which his wife was preparing a meal Mun-son rushed into the kitchen, took up the stove and ran for the door. At the door it exploded, hurling Munson across the room and shower-ing flaming gasoline over the others.

How Do You Stand?

The Ranger Daily Times has decided to give its readers an opportunity to express their wishes regarding a very important movement -the movement for the erection of a new courthouse in Eastland county

The time is drawing near when every voter in the county will be called on to vote either for or against a $300,000 bond issue for the purpose of building and furnishing a new courthouse.

In the first paragraph below write either the word (favor) or (oppose) in the blank space.

The extended blank space is for you to state briefly your reasons for favoring or opposing the movement for a new courthouse. Let the people of the county have your views on the proposition.

From time to time the results of this straw vote will be made public.

CHAPTER LIII

As Billy stood with the yellow envelope crushed to her bosom, here eyes dilated with a lumious joy, Clay rose and came slowly toward her, his sensitive face bleak with defeat.

"You haven't answered me, Billy," that Billy wells had been her with pain, kept coming between her and her rapturous visions of Dal Romaine. But when she met the dark-eyed, dark-skinned man of mystery on Monday at six, the ghost of Clay was banished.

"You adorable child!" he whisper-It was with difficulty that she broke the spell that Dal's message had laid upon her. But when she says the block price is a like the spell that Dal's message at her with his drooping-lidded black eyes across the small table. You're prettier than ever. Now, tell me everything. I can see you are bursting to frank amusement. "And equally course I did not use my power. I had thought of exposing Nyda if she continued to make life unpleasfor you, but-I couldn't quite

"You're good, Dal!" Billy whispered. "Now tell me about yourself. Oh, I've missed you, darling!"

"And how I've missed you!" he murmured fervently. "But there's nothing to tell, dear heart. Just business—sordid business. I'll be glad when we can get away from this crass American civilization and go home—to India."

"Oh, yes, India!" Billy murmured vaguely. "You know, Dal, when I am with you I can believe in India-believe that it calls me to some strange destiny-but when you're away, I

"Then I shouldn't be away," he smiled. "I won't leave you again, dear. Well, now that Nyda's gone, who's the prime favorite with Dad-dy Curtis? Is Winnie still playing her role of adoring daughter?"

Billy looked up from her salad ber eyes wide and startled. Did Dal know about the strange contest which was to end in T. Q.'s choosing a daughter? "Why—what do you mean, Dal?"

"Why look so startled, darling?" he laughed at her. "Nyda stole the family jewels, but Winnie plays a neater game. Don't tell me you have not seen what her game is!"

"Her game?" Billy insisted blankly. No, he did not know! Of course he didn't! How would be didn't! How could he? "If you're such an adorable little nnocent as not to know, I'm not go-

Dal drove her home in the creamcolored roadster, but he refused to come in. "No, Aunt Lucia would be hurt if she knew I had seen you first. I'll telephone her tonight and get he runs tine, a very atto ask me to dinner, if you think old tractive car ... $525 T. Q. won't be too disgusingly rude to me. You know he doesn't like me." Evidently Mrs. Meadows thought that T. Q.'s likes and dislikes were of very little importance in his own house, for Dal received his invitation to family dinner and that invitation was followed by another for a real dinner party for the Monday following Dal's return to Colfax.

By placing Dal Romaine on her right at the festive table, Mrs. Meadows indicated that she considered

"Why not bring your Odyssey up to date, old man?" Ralph Truman interrupted suddenly, an ominous glint in his usually frank, friendly graveye. "Tell us how you found Los Angeles."

"Los Angeles?" Dal repeated as if puzzled. "Don't you remember being there

The other guests began to talk in pairs, with nervous vivacity, but had been so ghastly pale as she read Billy made no effort to play up to it. Bruce Kruger's overtures. She could not fight down the whispers that persisted in pushing up from her sub-conscious mind. If Namir Sadh was fake, had no mystic power, how had he known so much about her-about T. 'Billy, my dear, I wish you would play for us," T. Q. requested when coffee was being served in the draw-

"I'll be glad to play a little later," she told him. She could not explain that so long as Winnie Shelton and Dal Romaine were whispering together in a corner of the great drawing room she could not bear to leave.

It seemed like hours to her before Winnie excused herself and slipped from the room. Dal did not stroll to Billy's side, as she had prayed that he would, but stopped instead at Constance Bradley's chair. Billy wait ed for a few more minutes, then with a flashing smile that hid the

She told him the story of the robbery, of Nyda's and Banning's confessions, and of Nyda's banishment from the house of Curtis. When she had finished, Dal nodded.

"Did you know all the time that Nyda and Eddie were married?" Billy demanded, remembering with sudden vividness the scene at the country club. "Was that what you meant that night at the dance when you said that Eddie had put himself—and one other—into your power?"

"Of course!" His smile broadened to frank amusement. "And equally and the content of the suddenly tense circle of diners offered a hazard.
